A Delphic sword. (Δελφικὴ μάχαιρα.)
ARISTOTLE, Politica. Ch. i, sec. 2. A two-edged sword, in reference to the ambiguities of the Delphic oracles.

Thou shalt go thou shalt return never in battle shalt thou perish. (Ibis redibis non morieris in bello.)

An example of Delphic ambiguity, where the meaning depends wholly upon the punctuation, which the oracle did not supply.

A shallow brain behind a serious mask,
An oracle within an empty cask.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 297.

The Oracles are dumb,
No voice or hideous hum
Runs through the arched roof in words deceiving.

Apollo from his shrine

Can no more divine,

With hollow shriek the steep of Delphos leaving.

Like golden lamps in a green night.

ANDREW MARVELL, Bermudas.

<sup>6</sup> If I were yonder orange-tree
And thou the blossom blooming there,

I would not yield a breath of thee
To scent the most imploring air!

THOMAS MOORE, If I Were Yonder Wave.

<sup>7</sup> Orange-trees
Whose fruit and blossoms in the breeze
Were wantoning together free,
Like age at play with infancy.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri.

<sup>8</sup> Civil as an orange, and something of that jealous complexion.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 305.

<sup>9</sup> And every day when I've been good,
I get an orange after food.

R. L. STEVENSON, System.

with an Utuncque [howsoever].

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 23 Jan., 1661.

Very good orators, when they are out, they will spit.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 75.

1 He mouths a sentence as curs mouth a bone.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 322.

Nay, an thou 'lt mouth,

I'll rant as well as thou.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 306.

2 Let arms give place to the robe, and the laurel wreath [of the soldier] yield to the tongue [of the orator]. (Cedant arma togæ, concedat laurea linguæ.)

CICERO, De Officiis. This is the line as usually quoted, but Cicero really wrote laudi, not linguæ.

The good orator is despised, the rude soldier loved. (Spernitur orator bonus, horridus miles amatur.)

ENNIUS. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. xx, ch. 10, sec. 4.)

3 Loud-bawling orators are driven by their weakness to noise, as lame men to take horse.

CICERO. (PLUTARCH, Roman Apothegms.)

Fire in each eye, and papers in each hand,
They rave, recite, and madden round the land.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 5.

4 You'd scarce expect one of my age
To speak in public on the stage;

And if I chance to fall below

Demosthenes or Cicero,

Don't view me with a critic's eye,

But pass my imperfections by.

17 Whose words all ears took captive.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act v, sc. 3, l. 17.

18 List his discourse of war, and you shall hear
A fearful battle render'd you in music:

Turn him to any cause of policy,

The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,

Familiar as his garter: that, when he speaks,

The air, a charter'd libertine, is still,

And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears,

To steal his sweet and honey'd sentences.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act i, sc. 1, l. 43.

19 I am no orator, as Brutus is;

But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man, . . .

For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,
Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,
To stir men's blood: I only speak right on.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 221.

So on the tip of his subduing tongue,
All kinds of arguments and question deep,
All replication prompt, and reason strong,
For his advantage still did wake and sleep:
To make the weeper laugh, the laughter weep,
He had the dialect and different skill.

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 120.

Aged ears play truant at his tales
And younger hearings are quite ravished;
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 74.

A man in all the world's new fashion planted,
That hath a mint of phrases in his brain.

The Chadband style of oratory is widely received and much admired.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 19.

Action! Action! Action!

DEMOSTHENES, when asked what three things made the perfect orator. See under ACT.

"Eloquence," replied the ancient orator, "is action, still action, and ever action." Action! what does that signify? Did he mean gesture? voice?
attitude? bearing? delivery? movement of ideas?
the vivacity of the images? . . . Yes, all this at once.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.
Pt. ii, No. 30.

I asked of my dear friend Orator Prig:

"What's the first part of oratory?" He said, "A great wig."

"And what is the second?" Then, dancing a jig
And bowing profoundly, he said, "A great wig."
"And what is the third?" Then he snored like a pig,

And puffing his cheeks out, he replied, "A great wig."

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Orator Prig.

Ye could waltz to it.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, referring to Senator
Beveridge's oratory.

Some, for fear their orations should giggle,
will not let them smile.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State, p. 169.

He needs to acquire the art of seeming to pluck, as he goes along in the progress of his speech, as by the wayside, some flower of rhetoric.

BENJAMIN HARRISON, Speech, at banquet of the New England Society of Pennsylvania,
22 Dec., 1893.

He lays aside bombast and many-syllabled words if he wishes to touch the heart of his hearer. (Proicit ampullas et sesquipedalia verba, Si curat cor spectantis tetigisse que-rella.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 97.

Amplification is the vice of the modern orator. . . . Speeches measured by the hour die with the hour.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvi, p. 30.

Oratory is the power of beating down your adversary's arguments, and putting better in their place.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1781.)

What is so furious and Bethlem-like as a vain sound of chosen and excellent words?

BEN JONSON, Works. Vol. ii, p. 394.

1 Hot air has thawed out many a cold reception.
F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book.

2 Begin low, speak slow;
Take fire, rise higher;
When most impressed
Be self-possessed;
At the end wax warm,
And sit down in a storm.

REV. JOHN LEITCH, Lines on Public Speaking.

3 The object of oratory alone is not truth, but persuasion.

Poured thick and fast the burning words which tyrants quake to hear.

MACAULAY, Virginia, l. 92.

4 Rhetoric, or the art of speaking, is an enchantment of the soul. (ῥητορικὴ ψυχῆς ἐνchantment.)

PLATO, Phædrus. Sec. 271.

Her chiefest business is a careful study of the affections and passions, which are, so to speak, strings and stops of the soul, requiring a very judicious fingering and striking.

PERICLES. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Pericles. Ch. 15, sec. 4.) After quoting Plato's phrase, given above.

There is a Truth and Beauty in Rhetoric; but it oftener serves ill turns than good ones.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

Rhetoric is either very good or stark naught. . . . If I am not fully persuaded, I laugh at the orator.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk, p. 109.

5 Far more effective [than books] is the spoken word. There is something in the voice, the countenance, the bearing, and the gesture of the speaker, that concur in fixing an impression upon the mind, deeper than can even vigorous writings.

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 3.

6 It is a thing of no great difficulty to raise objections against another man's oration,—nay, it is a very easy matter: but to produce a better in its place is a work extremely troublesome.

PLUTARCH, Of Hearing. Sec. 6.

7 Few speeches which have produced an electrical effect on an audience can bear the colorless photography of a printed record.

LORD ROSEBERY, Life of Pitt. Ch. 13.

8 Nephew, what means this passionate discourse,

This peroration with such circumstance?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 104.

9 With mild heat of holy oratory.

TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 867.

ORDER

10 Chaos often breeds life, when order breeds habit.

HENRY ADAMS, Education of, p. 249.

11 . . . Order means light and peace, inward liberty and free command over oneself; order is power. . . . Order is man's greatest need, and his true well-being.

AMIEL, Journal, 15 Dec., 1859.

12 Order is a lovely thing;
On disarray it lays its wing,
Teaching simplicity to sing.
It has a meek and lowly grace,
Quiet as a nun's face.

ANNA HEMPSTEAD BRANCH, The Monk in the Kitchen.

13 Good order is the foundation of all good things.

15 Let all things be done decently and in order.
New Testament: I Corinthians, xiv, 40.

Set thine house in order.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxxviii, 1.

16 For the world was built in order
And the atoms march in tune;
Rhyme the pipe, and Time the warder,
The sun obeys them, and the moon.
EMERSON, Monadnock. St. 12.

17 Confusion heard his voice, and wild uproar
Stood rul'd, stood vast infinitude confin'd;
Till at his second bidding darkness fled,
Light shone, and order from disorder sprung.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 710.

18 Order is Heav'n's first law; and, this confest,
Some are and must be greater than the rest,
More rich, more wise: but who infers from hence

That such are happier, shocks all common sense.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 49.

Not chaos-like together crush'd and bruis'd,
But, as the world, harmoniously confused:
Where order in variety we see,
And where, tho' all things differ, all agree.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 13.

19 The letters which I receive from Poland announce that order reigns in Warsaw. (Les lettres que je reçois de Pologne m'annoncent que la tranquillité regne à Varsovie.)

GENERAL FRANÇOIS SEBASTIANI, in Chamber of Deputies, 16 Sept., 1831, while Minister of Foreign Affairs, announcing the fall of Poland. (DUMAS, Mémoires. Ser. ii, vol. iv, ch. 3.)

1 Order gave each thing view.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 1, l. 44.

2 The heavens themselves, the planets and this centre

Observe degree, priority, and place,
Insisture, course, proportion, season, form,
Office and custom, in all line of order.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc. 3, l. 85.

3 A place for everything and everything in its place.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 66.

4 Method is good in all things. Order governs the world. The Devil is the author of confusion.

SWIFT, Letters: To Stella, 26 Oct., 1710.

5 Large elements in order brought,
And tracts of calm from tempest made,
And world-wide fluctuation sway'd,
In vassal tides that follow'd thought.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cxii, st. 4.

6 As order is heavenly, where quiet is had,
So error is hell, or a mischief as bad.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Points of Huswifery: Huswifery Admonitions.

ORIGINALITY

17 The Roman senate, when within
The city walls an owl was seen,
Did cause their clergy, with lustrations . . .
The round-fac'd prodigy t' avert,
From doing town or country hurt.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto iii, l. 709.

18 What owl sings out of that ivy bush?

JOHN DAY, Ile of Gulls. Act v. (1606)

Like an owl in an ivy bush.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

When your hair's finely dress'd, I plainly do see,
You look like an owl in an ivy-tree.

UNKNOWN, Poems on Costume, 245.

19 An owl is the king of the night.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, 69. (1633)

20 Just then, with a wink and a sly normal lurch,
The owl very gravely got down from his perch, . . .

"I'm an owl; you're another. Sir Critic, good-day!"

And the barber kept on shaving.

OYSTER

<sup>6</sup> Nor brighter was his eye, nor moister
Than a too-long opened oyster.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Pied Piper. Sec. 4.

<sup>7</sup> There are only two creatures I would envy—a horse in his wild state traversing the forests of Asia, and an oyster on some of the desert shores of Europe. The one has not a wish without enjoyment; the other has neither wish nor fear.

ROBERT BURNS. (R. W. CROMEK, Reliques of Robert Burns.)

<sup>8</sup> The oyster is unseasonable and unwholesome in all months that have not the letter R in their name.

SIR WILLIAM BUTTS, Dyets Dry Dinner. Sig N 1. (1599)

Oysters must not be eaten in those months, which in pronouncing want the letter R.

WILLIAM VAUGHAN, Directions for Health, p. 22. (1600)

A month without an R in it has nae richt being in the year.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianæ. No. 16.

<sup>9</sup> But four young Oysters hurried up,

All eager for the treat:

Their coats were brushed, their faces washed,

Their shoes were clean and neat—

And this was odd, because, you know,

They hadn't any feet.

LEWIS CARROLL, Through the Looking-Glass. Ch. 4.

<sup>10</sup> Ah, hapless wretch! condemn'd to dwell

For ever in my native shell;

Ordain'd to move when others please,

Not for my own content or ease;

But toss'd and buffeted about,

Now in the water and now out.

'Twere better to be born a stone,

Of ruder shape, and feeling none,

Than with a tenderness like mine,

And sensibilities so fine!

COWPER, The Poet, the Oyster and Sensitive Plant, l. 5.

<sup>11</sup> Secret and self-contained, and solitary as an oyster.

said Sam, "that poverty and oysters always

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 23.

<sup>14</sup> He was a bold man who first swallowed an oyster.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND.

He was a bold man that first eat an oyster.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial ii.

<sup>15</sup> I will not be sworn but love may transform me to an oyster; but I'll take my oath on it, till he have made an oyster of me, he shall never make me such a fool.

<sup>16</sup> It is the sick oyster which possesses the pearl.

<sup>17</sup> An oyster may be crossed in love!

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act iii, sc. 1.

"An oyster may be crossed in love,"—and why?

Because he mopeth idly in his shell,

And heaves a lonely subterraqueous sigh.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 81.

Then love was the pearl of his oyster,

And Venus rose red out of wine.

SWINBURNE, Dolores. St. 39.

1 There's really no end in natur to the eatin' of oysters.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianæ. No. 17. Oct., 1828.

He had often eaten oysters, but had never had enough.

W. S. GILBERT, Bab Ballads: Etiquette.

2 The oyster is a gentle thing
And will not come unless you sing.

UNKNOWN. (HAZLITT, English Proverbs, 381.)

3 Oysters are ungodly, because they are eaten without grace; uncharitable, because they leave nought but shells; and unprofitable, because they swim in wine.

UNKNOWN, Tarltons Jests, p. 6. (1611)

They say oysters are a cruel meat, because we eat them alive; then they are an uncharitable meat, for we leave nothing to the poor; and they are an ungodly meat, because we never say grace.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

I—Painting: Definitions

<sup>17</sup> Painting is the intermediate somewhat between a thought and a thing.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk. 30 Aug., 1827.

So, if a great painter with questions you push,
"What's the first part of painting?" he'll say, "A paint-brush."

"And what is the second?" with most modest blush,

He'll smile like a cherub, and say, "A paint-brush."

"And what is the third?" he'll bow with a rush,
With a leer in his eye, he'll reply, "A paint-brush."

Perhaps this is all a painter can want:

But, look yonder—that house is the house of Rembrandt.

Is the best picture.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. ii, sec. 4.

2 Painting with all its technicalities, difficulties, and peculiar ends, is nothing but a noble and expressive language, invaluable as the vehicle of thought, but by itself nothing.

RUSKIN, True and Beautiful: Painting: Introduction.

3 Painting is silent poetry, and poetry is painting with the gift of speech.

9 Paint any one, and count it crime
To let a truth slip.

ROBERT BROWNING, Fra Lippo Lippi.

10 Paint me as I am. If you leave out the scars and wrinkles, I will not pay you a shilling.

OLIVER CROMWELL, Remark, to the young painter, Peter Lely, who was about to paint his portrait. This is the best known version, but what Cromwell really said was, "I desire you would use all your skill to paint my picture truly like me; but remark all these roughnesses, pimples, warts, and everything as you see me, otherwise I will never pay a farthing for it." (WALPOLE, Anecdotes of Painting, p. 444. Dict. of National Biog.)

"Paint me as I am," said Cromwell,
"Rough with age and gashed with wars;
Show my visage as you find it,
Less than truth my soul abhors."

JAMES T. FIELDS, On a Portrait of Cromwell.

The trouble is, the more it resembles me, the worse it looks.

III—Painting: Praise

I can look for a whole day with delight upon a handsome picture, though it be but of an horse.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 10.

No record of her high descent
There needs, nor memory of her name;
Enough that Raphael's colors blent
To give her features deathless fame.

WILLIAM ALLEN BUTLER, Incognita of Raphael.

Such are thy pieces, imitating life
So near, they almost conquer'd in the strife.

DRYDEN, To Sir Godfrey Kneller, l. 18.

A flattering painter who made it his care
To draw men as they ought to be, not as they are.

GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 63. Of Sir Joshua Reynolds.

His pencil was striking, resistless, and grand;
His manners were gentle, complying, and bland;
Still born to improve us in every part,
His pencil our faces, his manners our heart.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 139. Of Sir Joshua Reynolds.

The canvas glow'd beyond ev'n Nature warm,
The pregnant quarry teem'd with human form.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 137.

He displays in a painting the countenance and also the mind. (Suspendit picta vultum mentemque tabella.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 97.

By portraits I do not mean the outlines and the colouring of the human figure, but the inside of the heart and mind of man.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 2 Oct., 1747.

No painter could give me a more living likeness. (Non potuit pictor rectius describere ejus formam.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 402. (Act ii, sc. 3.)

The sleepy eye, that spoke the melting soul.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 149.

This is her picture as she was:

It seems a thing to wonder on,

As though mine image in the glass
Should tarry when myself am gone.

D. G. ROSSETTI, The Portrait.

That's my last Duchess painted on the wall,
Looking as if she were alive. I call
That piece a wonder, now: Frà Pandolf's hands
Worked busily a day, and there she stands.

ROBERT BROWNING, My Last Duchess.

What demi-god Hath come so near creation?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 116.

It tutors nature: artificial strife

Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 1, l. 37.

The painting is almost the natural man;
For since dishonour traffics with man's nature,
He is but outside: these pencill'd figures are Even such as they give out.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 1, l. 157.

Wrought he not well that painted it?

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 1, l. 200.

IV—Painting: Criticism

What has reasoning to do with the art of painting? . . . To generalize is to be an idiot.

WILLIAM BLAKE. (GILCHRIST, Life, i, 310.)

Orbaneja, the painter of Ubeda, being asked what he had painted, answered, "As it may hit;" and if he chanced to draw a cock, he wrote under it, "This is a cock."

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 3.

There are only two styles of portrait painting, the serious and the smirk.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 10.

How strongly I have felt of pictures that when you have seen one well, you must take your leave of it; you shall never see it again.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

One picture in ten thousand, perhaps, ought to live in the applause of mankind, from generation to generation until the colors fade and blacken out of sight or the canvas rot entirely away.

HAWTHORNE, The Marble Faun. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

1 Landscape painting is the obvious resource of misanthropy.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Criticisms on Art, ii, 233.

Indifferent pictures, like dull people, must absolutely be moral.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Criticisms on Art, i, 16.

2 Well, something must be done for May,
The time is drawing nigh—
To figure in the Catalogue,
And woo the public eye.

Something I must invent and paint;
But oh, my wit is not
Like one of those kind substantives
That answer Who and What?
THOMAS HOOD, The Painter Puzzled.

3 I had rather see the portrait of a dog that I know than all the allegorical paintings . . . in the world.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, i, 364.)

4 I have seen, and heard, much of cockney impudence before now; but never expected to hear a coxcomb ask two hundred guineas for flinging a pot of paint in the public's face.

JOHN RUSKIN, in Fors Clavigera, 2 July, 1877, referring to Whistler's "Nocturne in Black and Gold," representing the fireworks at Cremorne. Whistler sued Ruskin for libel, asking £1000 damages, and won the verdict, with damages of a farthing. See under PAINTING: DEFINITIONS.

A tortoise-shell cat having a fit in a platter of tomatoes.

MARK TWAIN. His description of Turner's "The Slave Ship."

5 No picture can be good which deceives by its imitation, for the very reason that nothing can be beautiful which is not true.

RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Pt. i, sec. i, ch. 5, sec. 6.

6 Painters and poets have leave to lie.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. See also POETRY: POETIC LICENSE.

7 They are good furniture pictures, unworthy of praise, and undeserving of blame.

RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Pt. i, sec. v, ch. 5, sec. 20.

PALM

8 As the palm-tree standeth so straight and so tall,
The more the hail beats, and the more the rains fall.

SIMON DACH, Annie of Tharaw, l. 11. (Longfellow, tr.)

9 Through the laburnam's dropping gold
Rose the light shaft of Orient mould,

And Europe's violets, faintly sweet,
Purpled the mossbeds at its feet.

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, The Palm-Tree.

10 On friend and foe breathe soft and calm,
As ship with ship in battle meets;
And while the sea-gods watch the fleets,
Let him who merits, bear the palm.
(Et nobis faciles parcite et hostibus;
Concurrant paribus cum ratibus rates,
Spectant numina ponti, et Palmam qui meruit, ferat.)

JOHN JORTIN, Lusus Poetici: Ad Ventos. St.

4. (W. M. F. King, tr.) "Palmam qui meruit, ferat" was the motto of Lord Nelson, and of the British Royal Naval School.

Ye gods, it doth amaze me
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the majestic world,
And bear the palm alone.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 128.

You shall see him a palm in Athens again.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act v, sc. 1, l. 12.

Let all be present and expect the palm, the prize of victory. (Cuncti adsint, meritæque expectent præmia palmæ.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. v, l. 70.

11 First the high palm-trees, with branches fair,

Out of the lowly valleys did arise,
And high shoot up their heads into the skies.

SPENSER, Virgil's Gnat, l. 190.

12 I love the Palm,
With his leaves of beauty, his fruit of balm.
BAYARD TAYLOR, The Arab to the Palm.

13 Of threads of palm was the carpet spun
Whereon he kneels when the day is done,
And the foreheads of Islam are bowed as one!

To him the palm is a gift divine,
Wherein all uses of man combine,—
House, and raiment, and food, and wine!

And, in the hour of his great release,
His need of the palm shall only cease
With the shroud wherein he lieth in peace.

"Allah il Allah!" he sings his psalm,
On the Indian Sea, by the isles of balm;
"Thanks to Allah, who gives the palm!"

WHITTIER, The Palm-Tree.

PAN

14 And that dismal cry rose slowly
And sank slowly through the air,
Full of spirit's melancholy
And eternity's despair!
And they heard the words it said—
"Pan is dead!—Great Pan is dead—Pan, Pan is dead."

E. B. BROWNING, The Dead Pan. St. 26.

By the love, He stood alone in,
His sole Godhead rose complete,
And the false gods fell down moaning
Each from off his golden seat;
All the false gods with a cry
Rendered up their deity—

Pan, Pan was dead.

E. B. BROWNING, The Dead Pan. St. 28.

And when, at length, "Great Pan is dead!" uprose the loud and dolorous cry,
A glamour wither'd on the ground, a splendour faded in the sky.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. iv, st. 24.

Pan of the garden, the fold,
Pan of the bird and the beast,
Kindly, he lives as of old,
He isn't dead in the least!

PATRICK CHALMERS, Pan Pipes.

1 Yet half a beast is the great god Pan,
To laugh as he sits by the river.

E. B. BROWNING, A Musical Instrument.

2 Of Pan we sing, the best of leaders Pan,
That leads the Naiads and the Dryads
forth;
And to their dances more than Hermes can,
Hear, O you groves, and hills resound his worth.

BEN JONSON, Pan's Anniversary Hymn.

Pan himself,

The simple shepherd's awe-inspiring god!

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 886.

3 Great Pan is dead. (Πάν ὁ μέγας τέθνηκε.)

PLUTARCH, De Defectu Oraculorum. Sec. xvii.

Plutarch is relating the legend that at the hour of the Saviour's agony, a cry of "Great Pan is dead!" swept across the waves in the hearing of certain mariners, and the oracles were silent.

A ship laden with passengers drove with the tide near the Isles of Paxi, when a loud voice was heard calling unto one Thanus. The voice then said aloud to him, "When you are arrived at Palados, take care to make it known that the great god Pan is dead."

PLUTARCH, Isis and Osiris.

Suddenly there came gasping towards them a pale Jew dripping with blood, a crown of thorns on his head, bearing a great cross of wood on his shoulder, and he cast the cross on the high table of the gods, so that the golden goblets trembled and fell, and the gods grew dumb and pale, and ever paler, till they melted in utter mist.

HEINE, Reisebilder: City of Lucca. Ch. 6.

PANSY

4 Of all the bonny buds that blow
In bright or cloudy weather,
Of all the flowers that come and go
The whole twelve months together,

This little purple pansy brings
Thoughts of the sweetest, saddest things.

MARY E. BRADLEY, Heartsease.

5 Pansies for ladies all—(I wis
That none who wear such brooches miss
A jewel in the mirror).

E. B. BROWNING, A Flower in a Letter.

6 Cornelia: I pray, what flowers are these?

Gazetta: The pansy this.

Cornelia: Oh, that's for lovers' thoughts.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act ii, sc. 1,
l. 248.

Pray, love, remember: and there is pansies, that's for thoughts.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 176.

7 The delicate thought, that cannot find expression,

For ruder speech too fair,

That, like thy petals, trembles in possession,
And scatters on the air.

BRET HARTE, The Mountain Heart's-Ease.

8 Heart's ease! one could look for half a day
Upon this flower, and shape in fancy out
Full twenty different tales of love and sorrow,
That gave this gentle name.

MARY HOWITT, Heart's Ease.

9 There is a flower I wish to wear,
But not until first worn by you. . . .

Heart's ease . . . of all earth's flowers most rare;

Bring it; and bring enough for two.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Heart's-Ease.

10 The pansy freak'd with jet.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 144.

I send thee pansies while the year is young,
Yellow as sunshine, purple as the night;

Flowers of remembrance, ever fondly sung

By all the chiefest of the Sons of Light;

And if in recollection lives regret

For wasted days and dreams that were not true,

I tell thee that the "pansy freak'd with jet"
Is still the heart's ease that the poets knew.

Take the sweetness of a gift unsought,

And for the pansies send me back a thought.

SARAH DOUDNEY, Pansies.

11 The beauteous pansies rise

In purple, gold, and blue,

With tints of rainbow hue

Mocking the sunset skies.

THOMAS J. OUSELEY, Angel of the Flowers.

12 Heart's ease or pansy, pleasure or thought,
Which would the picture give us of these?

Surely the heart that conceived it sought

Heart's ease.

SWINBURNE, A Flower Piece by Fantin.

18 Nor did they think that they might long draw breath

In such an earthly Paradise as this.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason.
Bk. vi, l. 508.

The young men well nigh wept, and e'en the wise

Thought they had reached the gate of Paradise.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason.
Bk. xiii, l. 51.

For, oh! if there be an Elysium on earth,
It is this, it is this.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Light of the Haram.

19 With dreamful eyes
My spirit lies

Under the walls of Paradise.

THOMAS BUCHANAN READ, Drifting.

Around this lovely valley rise
The purple hills of Paradise.

J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Midsummer.

20 The loves that meet in Paradise shall cast out fear,
And Paradise hath room for you and me and all.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Saints and Angels.

21 There must have been a charming climate in Paradise. The temperature was perfect; and connubial bliss, I allot, was real jam up.

SAM SLICK, Human Nature, p. 273.

<sup>1</sup> Shiftless and shy, gentle and kind and frail,
 Poor wanderer, bewildered into vice,
 You are freed at last from seas you could not sail,

A wreck upon the shores of Paradise.

<sup>4</sup> Reverence for parents—this standeth written third among the statutes of Justice, to whom supreme honor is due. (Τὸ γὰρ τεκόντων σέβας τρίτον τόδ' ἐν θεσμοῖς Δίκας γέγραπται μεγίστον.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Suppliants, l. 707. Referring to the three great laws ascribed to Triptolemus by Plutarch: to honor parents, to worship the gods with the fruit of the earth, and to hurt no living creature.

Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

Old Testament: Exodus, xx, 12. The fifth Commandment.

Honor the gods, reverence parents. (Θεοὺς τίμα, γονέας αἰδοῦ.)

SOLON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Bk. i,
 sec. 60.)

To love our parents is the first law of nature.
 (Diligere parentes prima naturæ lex est.)

 v, ch. 4, sec. 7.

<sup>5</sup> Lovers grow cold, men learn to hate their wives,

And only parents' love can last our lives.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes.

<sup>6</sup> The childless cherubs well might envy thee
 The pleasures of a parent.

BYRON, Cain. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 171.

<sup>7</sup> Conduct thyself towards thy parents as thou wouldst wish thy children to conduct themselves towards thee.

ISOCRATES, Ad Demonium, iv. 14.

<sup>8</sup> In general those parents have the most reverence who deserve it; for he that lives well cannot be despised.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 26.

The notion that parents are entitled to respect simply because they are parents is preposterous.
 The stream of obligation runs strongly the other way. A child owes its parents no gratitude whatever for bringing him into the world (as Swift sardonically said, while they were thinking of something else).

JOHN MACY, About Women, p. 116.

<sup>9</sup> The virtue of parents is a great dowry. (Dost est magna parentium Virtus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 24, l. 21.

<sup>10</sup> Whence do you derive the power and privilege of a parent, when you, though an old man, do worse things than your child?

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 56.

Few parents act in such a manner as much to enforce their maxims by the credit of their lives.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, xi, 72.

If parents want honest children they should be honest themselves.

R. G. INGERSOLL, How to Reform Mankind.

<sup>11</sup> One moment makes a father, but a mother
 Is made by endless moments, load on load.

JOHN G. NEIHARDT, Eight Hundred Rubles.

<sup>12</sup> My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother.

Old Testament: Proverbs, i, 8.

Hearken unto thy father that begat thee, and despise not thy mother when she is old.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 22.

The eye that mocketh at his father, and despiseth to obey his mother, the ravens of the valley shall pick it out, and the young eagles shall eat it.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxx, 17.

What heavy guilt upon him lies!

How cursed is his name!

The ravens shall pick out his eyes,

And eagles eat the same.

ISAAC WATTS, Obedience.

<sup>13</sup> Everything is dear to its parent. (Τῷ τεκόντι πᾶν φθλον.)

SOPHOCLES, Ædipus Coloneus, l. 1108.

No fathers or mothers think their children ugly.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote.

So both the Raven and the Ape think their own young the fairest.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Utopia.

The parent who could see his boy as he really is, would shake his head and say; "Willie is no good: I'll sell him."

STEPHEN B. LEACOCK, The Lot of the Schoolmaster.

PARIS

<sup>14</sup> Good Americans, when they die, go to Paris.

THOMAS GOLD APPLETON. Perpetuated by

Oliver Wendell Holmes, in the Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table, ch. 6, as a saying of one of the "Seven Wise Men of Boston."

Mrs. Allonby: They say, Lady Hunstanton, that when good Americans die they go to Paris.

Lady Hunstanton: Indeed? And when bad Americans die, where do they go to?

Lord Illingworth: Oh, they go to America.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act i.

1 Fair, fantastic Paris.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. vi, l. 81.

2 At Paris it was, at the Opera there;—

And she looked like a queen in a book that night,

With the wreath of pearl in her raven hair,

And the brooch on her breast, so bright.

BULWER-LYTTON, Aux Italiens.

3 Paris is the place in the world where, if you please, you may best unite the utile and the dulce.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 30 April, 1750.

4 Paris is terribly derisive of all absurd pretensions but its own.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk.

5 Beautiful carriages from Champs Elysees
Filled with fair maidens on cushions easy.

GEORGINA FARRER. Quoted by Edith Sitwell, Collected Poems, as "the worst poetry ever written."

6 Paris is well worth a Mass. (Paris vaut bien une Messe.)

HENRY IV, referring to his conversion to Catholicism in order to gain Paris and the crown of France. Fournier doubts if Henry was so undiplomatic as to have said this.

7 Paris is nothing but an immense hospitality.

VICTOR HUGO, Appeal to German Army to Spare Paris, 1870.

The café of Europe.

ABBÉ GALLIANT, Epigram.

What's Paris but a circus, fair,

To tempt this west world's open purse

With tawdry trinkets, toys bizarre?

Ah, would that she were nothing worse!

JOAQUIN MILLER, A Song of Creation. Sec. 24.

8 Every fresh day's research into the city brings increasing disappointment. . . . Everything is planed, smoothed, and set to an oppressive regularity . . . in short, Paris is the plainest city in Europe.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, The Plainest City in Europe.

9 All Paris goes to see it. (Tout Paris va voir.)

MOLÈRE, L'Impromptu de Versailles. Sc. 5, l. 75.

10 Secrets travel fast in Paris.

NAPOLEON I, Sayings of Napoleon.

11 Paris is the middle-aged woman's paradise.

PINERO, The Princess and the Butterfly. Act i.

I think every wife has a right to insist upon seeing Paris.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letters: To Countess Grey, 11 Sept., 1835.

12 You who have ever been to Paris, know;

And you who have not been to Paris—go!

JOHN RUSKIN, A Tour Through France. St. 12.

13 A street there is in Paris famous,

For which no rhyme our language yields,

Rue Neuve des Petits Champs its name is—
The New Street of the Little Fields.

THACKERAY, The Ballad of Bouillabaisse.

14 Prince, give praise to our French ladies

For the sweet sound their speaking carries;

'Twixt Rome and Cadiz many a maid is,

But no good girl's lip out of Paris.

FRANÇOIS VILLON, Ballade des Femmes de Paris. (Swinburne, tr.)

Good talkers are only found in Paris.

FRANÇOIS VILLON, Ballade des Femmes de Paris.

PARK

15 Public money is scarcely ever so well employed as in securing bits of waste ground and keeping them as open spaces.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. i, ch. 10.

16 The proud park takes away the dwellings from the poor. (Abstulerat miseris tecta superbus ager.)

MARTIAL, De Spectaculis, ii, 8.

What had been the delights of the lord are now the delights of the people. (Deliciæ populi, quæ fuerant domini.)

MARTIAL, De Spectaculis, ii, 12. Of land given to public use.

17 The lungs of London.

WILLIAM WINDHAM, Debate, House of Commons. 30 June, 1808.

If the Parks be "the lungs of London," we wonder what Greenwich Fair is—a periodical breaking out, we suppose—a sort of spring rash.

DICKENS, Sketches by Boz: Greenwich Fair.

PARTING

See also Farewell; Meeting and Parting

18 Some weep because they part,

And languish broken-hearted,

And others—O my heart!—

Because they never parted.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, The Difference.

Good-night! I have to say good-night
 To such a host of peerless things!
 Good-night unto the slender hand
 All queenly with its weight of rings;
 Good-night to fond uplifted eyes,
 Good-night to chestnut braids of hair,
 Good-night unto the perfect mouth,
 And all the sweetness nestled there—
 The snowy hand detains me; then
 I have to say, Good-night again.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Palabras Carinosas.

Good-night! good-night! as we so oft have said
 Beneath this roof at midnight, in the days
 That are no more, and shall no more return.
 Thou hast but taken thy lamp and gone to bed;
 I stay a little longer, as one stays
 To cover up the embers that still burn.

LONGFELLOW, Three Friends of Mine. Pt. iv.

Now in the summit of love's topmost peak
 Kiss and we part; no farther can we go.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Sonnet: Love's Wisdom.

To meet, to know, to love—and then to part,
 Is the sad tale of many a human heart.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Couplet Written in a Volume of Poems.

Since there's no help, come, let us kiss and part;
 Nay, I have done, you get no more of me;
 And I am glad, yea, glad with all my heart,
 That thus so cleanly I myself can free.
 Shake hands for ever, cancel all our vows,
 And when we meet at any time again,
 Be it not seen in either of our brows
 That we one jot of former love retain.
 Now at the last gasp of Love's latest breath,
 When, his pulse failing, Passion speechless lies,
 When Faith is kneeling by his bed of death,
 And Innocence is closing up his eyes:
 Now, if thou wouldst, when all have given him over,
 From death to life thou might'st him yet recover.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Idea. Sonnet lxi.

And must we part?

Well—if we must, we must—and in that case
 The less said the better.

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act ii, sc. 2.

Heart to heart
 And lips to lips! Yet once more, ere we part,
 Clasp me and make me thine, as mine thou art!

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Gondola.

We meet to part; yet asks my sprite, Part we to meet? Ah! is it so?

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. i, st. 12.

When we two parted In silence and tears,
 Half broken-hearted To sever for years.

BYRON, When We Two Parted.

Such partings break the heart they fondly hope to heal.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 10.

Good-bye, Dolly, I must leave you,
 Though it breaks my heart to go;
 Something tells me I am needed
 At the front to fight the foe.

WILL D. COBB, Good-Bye, Dolly Gray. (1900)

Kathleen Mavourneen, the grey dawn is breaking,

The horn of the hunter is heard on the hill;
 The lark from her light wing the bright dew is shaking—

Kathleen Mavourneen! what, slumbering
 still?

Oh, hast thou forgotten how soon we must sever?

Oh, hast thou forgotten this day we must part?

It may be for years, and it may be for ever!
 Oh, why art thou silent, thou voice of my heart?

LOUISA MACARTNEY CRAWFORD, Kathleen Mavourneen.

Parting is all we know of heaven,
 And all we need of hell.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 96.

One kind kiss before we part,
 Drop a tear and bid adieu:

Though we sever, my fond heart
 Till we meet shall pant for you.

ROBERT DODSLEY, The Parting Kiss.

Only in the agony of parting do we look into the depths of love.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt. Ch. 44.

In every parting there is an image of death.

GEORGE ELIOT, Scenes of Clerical Life: Amos Barton. Ch. 10. A variation of the French proverb, "To part is to die a little." (Partir c'est mourir un peu.)

Excuse me, then! you know my heart;
 But dearest friends, alas! must part.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, fab. 51.

But fate ordains that dearest friends must part.
 YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 232.

"Adieu," she cried, and waved her lily hand.

JOHN GAY, Sweet William's Farewell.

So sweetly she bade me adieu,
 I thought that she bade me return.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, A Pastoral Ballad. Pt. i.

I now bid you a welcome adoo.

ARTEMUS WARD, The Shakers.

The day goes by like a shadow o'er the heart,
 With sorrow where all was delight:

The time has come when the darkies have to
 part,

Then my old Kentucky Home, good-night!

STEPHEN COLLINS FOSTER, My Old Kentucky Home.

<sup>1</sup>
The day is gone, and all its sweets are gone!
Sweet voice, sweet lips, soft hand, and softer breast.

KEATS, Sonnet: The Day is Gone.

<sup>2</sup>
Say "au revoir" but not "good-bye,"
Though past is dead, Love cannot die.

HARRY KENNEDY, Say "Au Revoir" but Not "Good-Bye." (1893)

<sup>3</sup>
Thou art gone from my gaze like a beautiful dream.

GEORGE LINLEY, Thou Art Gone.

<sup>4</sup>
They who go
Feel not the pain of parting; it is they
Who stay behind that suffer.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo: Pt. i, Prologue.

The one who goes is happier
Than those he leaves behind.

EDWARD POLLOCK, The Parting Hour.

The shore he was never to see again. (Litora numquam Ad visus reditura suos.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iii, l. 5.

Now a' is done that men can do,
And a' is done in vain;

My love and native land, farewell,
For I maun cross the main,
BURNS, The Farewell.

And soon, too soon, we part with pain,
To sail o'er silent seas again.

THOMAS MOORE, The Meeting of the Ships.

<sup>6</sup>
Honey Boy, I hate to see you leaving;
Honey Boy, you know my heart is grieving.

JACK NORWORTH, Honey Boy. (1907)

If we must part forever,
Give me but one kind word to think upon,
And please myself with, while my heart's breaking.

THOMAS OTWAY, The Orphan. Act iii, sc. 1.

<sup>8</sup>
Some jealousy of someone's heir,
Some hopes of dying broken-hearted,
A miniature, a lock of hair,
The usual vows—and then we parted.

W. M. PRAED, The Belle of the Ball. St. 12.

<sup>9</sup>
In vain you tell your parting lover
You wish fair winds may waft him over.
Alas! what winds can happy prove,
That bear me far from what I love?

MATTHEW PRIOR, A Song.

<sup>10</sup>
He that parts us shall bring a brand from heaven,

And fire us hence like foxes.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 22.

'Tis almost morning; I would have thee gone:
And yet no further than a wanton's bird;
Who lets it hop a little from her hand,

Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,
And with a silk thread plucks it back again,
So loving-jealous of his liberty.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc.
2, l. 177.

Good night, good night! parting is such sweet sorrow,

That I shall say good night till it be morrow.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc.
2, l. 185.

Eyes, look your last!

Arms, take your last embrace!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc.
3, l. 112.

<sup>12</sup>
I remember the way we parted,
The day and the way we met;
You hoped we were both broken-hearted,

For one heat, all know, doth drive out another,
One passion doth expel another still.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Monsieur D'Olive. Act v, l. 1.

7 It is a harder lot to be a slave to one's passions than to tyrants.

PYTHAGORAS. (STOBÆUS, Florilegium. Pt. vi, l. 47.)

8 Passions are likened best to floods and streams:

The shallow murmur, but the deep are dumb.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Silent Lover. (Altissima quæque flumina minimo sono labuntur.—Quintus Curtius Rufus.) For attribution to Raleigh, see CAYLEY, Life of Raleigh, i, 3.

9 Her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i, sc. 2, l. 151.

10 Give me that man

That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 76.

11 What to ourselves in passion we propose,
The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 204.

I never heard a passion so confused,
So strange, outrageous, and so variable.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 12.

12 You are eaten up with passion.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 391.

O well-painted passion!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 268.

13 A man in passion rides a horse that runs away with him.

C. H. SPURGEON, Ploughman's Pictures, 143.

In wayward passions lost and vain pursuits.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1801.

14 True quietness of heart is won by resisting our passions, not by obeying them.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. iii, ch. 25.

15 Don't be in a passion, Tam, for passion is the most unbecoming thing in the World.

VANBRUGH, The Relapse. Act iii, sc. 1.

16 Does his own fatal passion become to each man his God? (Sua cuique deus fit dira cupido?)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ix, l. 185.

17 All the passions are extinguished with old age.
(Toutes les passions s'éteignant avec l'âge.)

18 The seas are quiet when the winds give o'er;
So calm are we when passions are no more.

EDMUND WALLER, On the Last Verses in the Book.

The sea's my mind, which calm would be
Were it from winds (my passions) free;
But out, alas! no sea I find

Is troubled like a lover's mind.
Within it rocks and shallows be:
Despair and fond credulity.
SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Love's World.

1 Passion and prejudice govern the world; only under the name of reason.

JOHN WESLEY, Letter to Joseph Benson, 5
Oct., 1770.

2 She parried Time's malicious dart,
And kept the years at bay,
Till passion entered in her heart
And aged her in a day!
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, The Destroyer.

II—Past: The Irrevocable Past

16 This only is denied even to God: the power to undo the past. (Μόνον γὰρ αὐτοῦ καὶ θεὸς στερίσκεται, ἀγένητα ποιεῖν ἅσθ' ἂν ἡ πεπραγμένα.)

AGATHON. (ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics.
Bk. vi, ch. 2, sec. 6.)

Even Time, the father of all, cannot undo the past, whether right or wrong. (Τῶν δὲ πεπραγμένων ἐν δίκᾳ τε καὶ παρὰ δίκαν, ἀπολήγον οὐδ' ἂν χρόνος
ὁ πάντων πατὴρ δύναιτο θέμεν ἔργων τέλος.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode ii, l. 16.

Virtue's achievement, Folly's crime,
Whate'er of guilt or good the past has known,
Not e'en the Sire of all things, mighty Time,
Hath power to change, or make the deed undone.

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode ii, l. 16.

17 Odin . . . of all powers the mightiest far art thou,
Lord over men on Earth, and Gods in Heaven;
Yet even from thee thyself hath been withheld
One thing: to undo what thou thyself hast rul'd.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Balder Dead: Funeral, l.
254.

18 Thou unrelenting past.
BRYANT, To the Past.

19 Yet will the Father not render vain whatever now is past, nor will he alter and undo what once the fleeting hour has brought. (Non tamen irritum, Quodcumque retro est, efficiet, neque Diffinget infectumque reddet, Quod fugiens semel hora vexit.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 29, l. 45.

Not heaven itself upon the past has power.

DRYDEN, Imitation of Horace. Bk. iii, ode 29, l. 71.

Nor deem the irrevocable Past

As wholly wasted, wholly vain,

If, rising on its wrecks, at last

To something nobler we attain.

LONGFELLOW, The Ladder of St. Augustine.

But past who can recall, or done undo?

Not God Omnipotent.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 926.

Neither can the wave that has passed be called back; nor can the hour which has gone by return. (Nec quæ præterit, iterum revocabitur unda, Nec quæ præterit, hora redire potest.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 63.

O that Jupiter would give back to me the years that are past! (O mihi præteritos referat si Jupiter annos.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. viii, l. 560.

Nothing can bring back the hour

Of splendour in the grass, of glory in the flower.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality, l. 181.

III—Past: Its Memory

Ah, the Past, the pearl-gift thrown

To hogs, time's opportunity we made

So light of, only recognized when flown!

ROBERT BROWNING, Jocoseria: Jochanan Hakadosh.

The past is in its grave,

Though its ghost haunts us.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pauline.

But how carve way i' the life that lies before,

If bent on groaning ever for the past?

ROBERT BROWNING, Balaustion's Adventure.

See also under REMORSE.

All lost things are in the angels' keeping, Love;
No past is dead for us, but only sleeping, Love.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, At Last.

This is the place. Stand still, my steed,

Let me review the scene,

And summon from the shadowy Past

The forms that once have been.

LONGFELLOW, A Gleam of Sunshine.

Dead and gone, the days we had together,
Shadow-stricken all the lights that shone
Round them, flown as flies the blown-foam's feather,

Dead and gone.

SWINBURNE, Past Days.

But the tender grace of a day that is dead
Will never come back to me.

TENNYSON, Break, Break, Break.

So sad, so strange, the days that are no more.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iv, l. 35.

O Death in Life, the days that are no more.

TENNYSON, The Princess: Pt. iv, l. 40.

Old, unhappy, far-off things,
And battles long ago.

WORDSWORTH, The Solitary Reaper.

'Tis greatly wise to talk with our past hours,
And ask them what report they bore to heaven.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 376.

IV—Past and Present

A sensible man judges of present by past events. ("Εννοῦς τὰ καὶ τὰ τοῖς πάλαι τεκμαίρεται.")

SOPHOCLES, Œdipus Tyrannus, l. 916.

We read the past by the light of the present, and the forms vary as the shadows fall, or as the point of vision alters.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Society in Italy in the Last Days of the Roman Republic.

See also under EXPERIENCE.

The Present is the living sum-total of the whole Past.

CARLYLE, Essays: Characteristics.

The present contains nothing more than the past, and what is found in the effect was already in the cause.

HENRI BERGSON, Creative Evolution. Ch. 1.

Underneath the surface of Today,
Lies Yesterday, and what we call the Past,
The only thing which never can decay.

EUGENE LEE-HAMILTON, Roman Baths.

Things bygone are the only things that last:
The present is mere grass, quick-mown away;
The Past is stone, and stands forever fast.

EUGENE LEE-HAMILTON, Roman Baths.

The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Second Annual Message to Congress, 1862.

Consult the dead upon things that were,
But the living only on things that are.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. i.

O there are Voices of the Past,
Links of a broken chain,
Wings that can bear me back to Times
Which cannot come again;

Yet God forbid that I should lose

The echoes that remain!

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Voices of the Past.

Why is it that the meed of changeless fame

Is grudged the present, granted to the past?
JAMES EDWIN ROGERS, To George Waring.

1 Past and to come, seems best; things present, worst.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 108.

2 Thou who stealest fire
From the fountains of the past,
To glorify the present.

TENNYSON, Ode to Memory.

3 He praises all thing that is gone;
Of present thing he praises none.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 3577. (c. 1375)

He praised the present and abused the past,
Reversing the good custom of old days.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 79.

V—Past and Future

4 Making all futures fruits of all the pasts.

EDWIN ARNOLD, Light of Asia. Bk. v, l. 432.

5 You can never plan the future by the past.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to a Member of the National Assembly.

The best prophet of the future is the past.

BYRON, Letter, 28 Jan., 1821.

6 I watch the wheels of Nature's mazy plan,
And learn the future by the past of man.

CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 319.

Study the past, if you would divine the future.

CONFUCIUS, Analects.

The best way to suppose what may come is to remember what is past.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 249.

I know of no way of judging the future but by the past.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, in Virginia Convention, March, 1775.

7 Indemnity for the past and security for the future.

CHARLES JAMES FOX, Letter to Hon. T. Maitland. (RUSSELL, Memorials of Fox. Vol. iii, p. 345.)

8 The Past is like a funeral gone by,
The Future comes like an unwelcome guest.

EDMUND GOSSE, Sonnet: May-Day.

9 She knew the future, for the past she knew.

JOHN LANGHORNE, The Country Justice, l. 214.

10 Look not mournfully into the Past. It comes not back again. Wisely improve the Present.
It is thine. Go forth to meet the shadowy Future, without fear, and with a manly heart.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion: Bk. i, Motto.

11 For hope shall brighten days to come,
And memory gild the past!

THOMAS MOORE, Song.

12 The future is only the past again, entered through another gate.

PINERO, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Act iv.

13 We will not anticipate the past; so mind, young people,—our retrospection will be all to the future.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iv, sc. 2.

14 Man hath a weary pilgrimage
As through the world he wends,
On every stage, from youth to age,
Still discontent attends;

With heaviness he casts his eye
Upon the road before,

And still remembers with a sigh
The days that are no more.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Remembrance.

15 The past unsighed for, and the future sure.

WORDSWORTH, Laodamia, l. 100.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 2, l. 33.

6 There is between my will and all offences A guard of patience.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 2, l. 53.

I will not be myself, nor have cognition Of what I feel: I am all patience.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 2, l. 63.

7 She pined in thought,
And with a green and yellow melancholy,
She sat like patience on a monument,
Smiling at grief.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 115.

Like Patience gazing on kings' graves, and smiling

Extremity out of act.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act v, sc. 1, l. 139.

Dame Patience sitting there I found,
With face pale, upon a hill of sand.

CHAUCER, Parlement of Foules, l. 242.

That Patience-on-a-Monument kind of look.

HENLEY AND STEVENSON, Beau Austin. Act i, sc. 2.

8 Strike, but hear. (Πάταξον μὲν, ἀκούσον δέ.)

THEMISTOCLES, to Eurybiades, when the latter, during an argument, raised his staff to strike him. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Ch. 11, sec. 3.) The Latin form is: Verbera, sed audi.

That ancient and patient request, "Verbera, sed audi."

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

9 All men commend patience, although few be willing to practise it.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. iii, ch. 12.

'Tis all men's office to speak patience
To those that wring under the load of sorrow,
But no man's virtue nor sufficiency
To be so moral when he shall endure
The like himself.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 1, l. 27.

See also MISFORTUNE OF OTHERS.

10 At the least bear patiently, if thou canst not joyfully.

virtue. It was long ago.
CHARLOTTE PERKINS GILMAN, The Forerunner.
- 24
Patience with poverty is all a poor man's remedy.
JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 15.

Patience, virtue of the poor.

RICHARD FLECKNOE, Diarium, 6.

Patience, the beggar's virtue.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A New Way to Pay Old Debts. Act v, sc. 1.

Patience is the virtue of an ass,
That trots beneath his burden, and is quiet.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Heroic Love. Act i.

Patience is sottish, and impatience does
Become a dog that's mad.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 15, l. 79.

PATRICK, SAINT

Oh! St. Patrick was a gentleman
Who came of decent people;
He built a church in Dublin town,
And on it put a steeple.

HENRY BENNETT, Saint Patrick.

So, success attend St. Patrick's fist,
For he's a saint so clever;

Oh! he gave the snakes and toads a twist,
And bothered them forever!

HENRY BENNETT, Saint Patrick.

Oh, thou tormenting Irish lay!
I've got thee buzzing in my brain,
And cannot turn thee out again.

ELIZA COOK, St. Patrick's Day.

On the eighth day of March it was, some people say,
That Saint Pathrick at midnight he first saw
the day,
While others declare 'twas the ninth he was born . . .
Till Father Mulcahy, who showed them their sins,
Said, "No one could have two birthdays, but a twins."
Says he, "Boys, don't be fightin' for eight or for nine,
Don't be always dividin', but sometimes combine;
Combine eight and nine, and seventeen is the mark,
So let that be his birthday." "Amen!" says the clerk.

SAMUEL LOVER, The Birth of St. Patrick.

I—Patriotism: Definitions

4
Patriotism is a lively sense of collective responsibility. Nationalism is a silly cock crowing on its own dunghill.

RICHARD ALDINGTON, Colonel's Daughter, p. 49.

Patriotism has its roots deep in the instincts and the affections. Love of country is the expansion of filial love.

D. D. FIELD, Speeches: A Memorial Address.

There is no limit to the noble aspirations which the words "my country" may evoke.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 154.)

Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel.

7
Patriotism is a kind of religion; it is the egg from which wars are hatched.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT, My Uncle Sosthenes.

Patriotism is often an arbitrary veneration of real estate above principles.

G. J. NATHAN, Testament of a Critic, p. 16.

True patriotism is of no party.

SMOLLETT, The Adventures of Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 9. See also POLITICS AND PARTY.

10
There are no points of the compass on the chart of true patriotism.

ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Letter to Boston Commercial Club. 12 June, 1879.

Patriotism knows neither latitude nor longitude. It is not climatic.

E. A. STORRS, Political Oratory. Ch. 2.

II—Patriotism: Apothegms

11
To make us love our country, our country ought to be lovely.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

He loves his country best who strives to make it best.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Decoration Day Oration, 1882.

Best they honour thee

Who honour in thee only what is best.

WILLIAM WATSON, The True Patriotism.

12
He who loves not his country, can love nothing.

BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act iii, sc. 1.

He, with liberal and enlarged mind,
Who loves his country, cannot hate mankind.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Farwell, l. 300.

I am French, I am Chauvin. (J'suis Français, j'suis Chauvin.)

THÉODORE AND HIPPOLYTE COGNIARD, La Cocarde Tricolore. Produced in Paris, 19 March, 1831. In the play, Chauvin is a young recruit, who is always singing couplets with the above refrain. Said to have been drawn from Nicholas Chauvin, a sergeant in Napoleon's army, and an extravagant patriot.

Since your marriage you have entered into chauvinism.

BAYARD AND DUMANOIR, Les Aides-de-Camp. (1842)

1 How can a man be said to have a country when he has no right to a square inch of soil?

HENRY GEORGE, Social Problems. Ch. 2.

2 Nothing is more shameful than ignorance of one's Fatherland. (Nihil magis pudendum quam ignarum esse suæ Patriæ.)

GABRIEL HARVEY, Note, written in Humphrey Lloyd's Breviary of Britain.

3 We don't want to fight,

But, by Jingo, if we do,

We've got the ships, we've got the men,
We've got the money too.

G. W. HUNT, We Don't Want to Fight. An English music hall song of 1878, when the country was on the verge of intervening in the Russo-Turkish war on behalf of the Turks. The Russophobes became known as Jingoos, and the term came to be applied generally to super-patriots, itching to go to war on the slightest provocation.

By the living Jingo.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 10.

4 Indeed, I tremble for my country when I reflect that God is just.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Notes on Virginia: Manners.

5 That man is little to be envied, whose patriotism would not gain force upon the plain of Marathon, or whose piety would not grow warmer among the ruins of Iona.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, A Journey to the Western Islands: Inch Kenneth.

6 Why should patriotism and pessimism be identical? Hope is the mainspring of patriotism.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, Speech, House of Commons, Oct., 1919.

7 And thus we see on either hand

We name our blessings whence they've sprung;

We call our country Father Land,

We call our language Mother Tongue.

SAMUEL LOVER, Father Land and Mother Tongue.

8 We find them cracking up the country they belong to.

JAMES PAYN, By Proxy. Ch. 1.

9 I am already married to my country.

WILLIAM PITT, EARL OF CHATHAM, when Horace Walpole tried to arrange a marriage between him and Mademoiselle Necker, afterwards Madame de Staël. (CROKER, Memoirs, ii, 340.)

He married public virtue in his early days, but seemed forever afterwards to be quarreling with his wife.

ROBERT HALL, of Bishop Watson. (GREGORY, Life.)

10 Man was not born for himself alone, but for his country.

PLATO, Epistles: No. ix, To Archytas. Quoted by Cicero (De Finibus, ii, 14, 45): Non sibi se soli natum meminerit sed patriæ.

11 Who dare to love their country, and be poor.

POPE, On His Grotto at Twickenham.

12 Don't spread patriotism too thin.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT. (Metropolitan Magazine, July, 1918.)

13 It is glorious to serve one's country by deeds; even to serve her by words is a thing not to be despised. (Pulchrum est bene facere rei publicæ, etiam bene dicere haud absurdum est.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Sec. 3.

14 For country, children, hearth, and home. (Pro patria, pro liberis, pro aris atque focis.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Sec. 59.

Strike—till the last armed foe expires!

Strike—for your altars and your fires!

Strike—for the green graves of your sires!

God—and your native land!

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, Marco Bozzaris.

15 A fatherland focuses a people.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL, Children of the Ghetto. Bk. ii, ch. 15.

III—Patriotism: My Country

16 The die was now cast; I had passed the Rubicon. Swim or sink, live or die, survive or perish with my country was my unalterable determination.

JOHN ADAMS, Works. Vol. iv, p. 8. In a conversation with Jonathan Sewell, in 1774. Quoted by Webster in his Supposed Speech of John Adams.

Live or die, sink or swim.

GEORGE PEELE, Edward I. (c. 1586)

17 To that loved land, where'er he goes,

His tenderest thoughts are cast;

And dearer still, through absence, grows

The memory of the past.

JAMES DRUMMOND BURNS, The Exile.

18 Because all earth, except his native land,
To him is one wide prison, and each breath
Of foreign air he draws seems a slow poison,
Consuming but not killing.

BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act i, sc. 1.

The more I saw of foreign countries, the more I loved my own. (Plus je vis l'étranger, plus j'aimai ma patrie.)

LAURENT DE BELLOY, Siège de Calais.

The more I see of other countries the more I love my own.

MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne.

1 O Heaven! he cried, my bleeding country save!

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 359.

2 Dear are our parents, dear are our children, neighbors, companions; but all the affections of all men are bound up in one native land.
(Cari sunt parentes, cari liberi, propinqui, familiares; sed omnes omnium caritates patria una complexa est.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 17, sec. 57.

Our country is the common parent of all. (Patria est communis omnium parens.)

CICERO, In Catilinam. No. i, sec. 7.

Dear, sweet and pleasing to us all is the soil of our native land. (Solum patriæ omnibus est carum, dulce, atque jucundum.)

CICERO, In Catilinam. No. iv, sec. 8.

3 But more, my country's love demands the lays;

My country's be the profit; mine the praise.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 21.

4 They love their land because it is their own,
And scorn to give aught other reason why.

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, Connecticut.

5 He serves me most, who serves his country best.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. x, l. 201. (Pope, tr.)

Our country's welfare is our first concern,
And who promotes that best, best proves his duty.

WILLIAM HAVARD, Regulus.

6 God gave all men all earth to love,
But since our hearts are small,
Ordn'd for each one spot should prove Belovèd over all.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Sussex.

7 Opposed to these, a hovering band
Contended for their father-land;
Peasants, whose new-found strength had broke
From manly necks th' ignoble yoke,
And beat their fetters into swords,
On equal terms to fight their lords.

MONTGOMERY, The Patriot's Pass-Word.

Marshall'd once more, at freedom's call
They came to conquer or to fall.

MONTGOMERY, The Patriot's Pass-Word.

8 What bosom beats not in his country's cause?
POPE, Prologue to Addison's Cato, l. 24.

9 Duty's claim and country's call
Shall be conscience for us all!

J. L. RENTOUL, Australia's Battle Hymn.

10 Breathes there a man, with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land?

Whose heart hath ne'er within him burn'd
As home his footsteps he hath turn'd

From wandering on a foreign strand?

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto vi, st. 1.

Land of my sires! What mortal hand
Can e'er untie the filial band

That knits me to thy rugged strand!

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto vi, st. 2.

Where's the coward that would not dare

To fight for such a land?

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto iv, st. 30.

11

I do love

My country's good with a respect more tender,
More holy and profound, than mine own life.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 112.

This day is call'd the feast of Crispian:

He that outlives this day, and comes safe
home,

Will stand a tip-toe when this day is named,
And rouse him at the name of Crispian.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 40.

13

One drop of blood drawn from thy country's bosom,

Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 54.

14

Who is here so vile that will not love his country?

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 35.

15

The arm that drives its unbought blows

With all a patriot's scorn,

Might brain a tyrant with a rose,

Or stab him with a thorn.

HENRY TIMROD, A Cry to Arms.

Our country is that spot to which our heart is bound. (La patrie est aux lieux où l'âme est enchainée.)

VOLTAIRE, Le Fanatisme, i, 2.

17

I would not change my native land

For rich Peru with all her gold.

ISAAC WATTS, Praise for Birth.

Let our object be, our country, our whole country, and nothing but our country.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Address, at the laying of the corner-stone of the Bunker Hill Monument, 17 June, 1825.

The land we from our fathers had in trust,
And to our children will transmit, or die:

This is our maxim, this our piety.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. ii, No. 11.

Our land is the dearer for our sacrifices. The blood of our martyrs sanctifies and enriches it.
Their spirit passes into thousands of hearts.
How costly is the progress of the race. It is only by the giving of life that we can have life.

REV. E. J. YOUNG, Lesson of the Hour.
(Monthly Religious Mag., May, 1865.)

1 What pity is it
That we can die but once to serve our country!
ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4.

I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country.

NATHAN HALE, Last Words, 22 Sept., 1776.
(STEWART, Life of Nathan Hale. Ch. 7.)

2 For body-killing tyrants cannot kill
The public soul—the hereditary will
That, downward as from sire to son it goes,
By shifting bosoms more intensely glows:
Its heirloom is the heart, and slaughtered men
Fight fiercer in their orphans o'er again.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Lines on Poland, l. 146.

3 Glory to them that die in this great cause!
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Stanzas to the Memory of the Spanish Patriots, l. 37.

The patriot's blood's the seed of Freedom's tree.

There is a victory in dying well
For Freedom,—and ye have not died in vain.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Stanzas to the Memory of the Spanish Patriots, l. 3.

4 Happy the death of him who pays the debt of nature for his country's sake. (O fortunata mors, quæ naturæ debita pro patria est potissimum reddit!)
CICERO, Philippicæ. No. iv, ch. 12, sec. 31.

Can a few days of life equal the happiness of dying for one's country?
NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon.

5 No one would ever have exposed himself to death for his country without the hope of immortality. (Nemo unquam sine magna spe immortalitatis se pro patria offeret ad mortem.)
CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i,
ch. 15, sec. 33.

6 And they who for their country die
Shall fill an honored grave,
For glory lights the soldier's tomb,
And beauty weeps the brave.

JOSEPH RODMAN DRAKE, To the Defenders of New Orleans.

7 I gave my life for freedom—This I know;
For those who bade me fight had told me so.
W. N. EWER, Five Souls.

8 A glorious death is his

Than facing fearful odds,
For the ashes of his fathers
And the temples of his gods?
MACAULAY, Horatius. St. 27.

12 'Twere sweet to sink in death for Truth and Freedom!

Yes, who would hesitate, for who could bear
The living degradation we may know

If we do dread death for a sacred cause?
TERENCE MCSWINEY, Lines written when a boy. (Nation, 3 Nov., 1920.) McSwiney was Lord Mayor of Cork in 1920, was arrested by the British for treason in August of that year and died after a long hunger strike.

13 Far dearer, the grave or the prison,
Illumed by one patriot name,
Than the trophies of all who have risen
On Liberty's ruins to fame.
THOMAS MOORE, Forget Not the Field.

14 A man who is good enough to shed his blood for his country is good enough to be given a square deal afterwards.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Life of Benton.

15 Had I a dozen sons, each in my love alike and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius, I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country than one voluptuously surfeit out of action.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act i, sc. 3, l. 24.

16 If it be the pleasure of heaven that my country shall require the poor offering of my life, the victim shall be ready at the appointed hour of sacrifice, come when that hour may.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Supposed Speech of John Adams.

17 They went where duty seemed to call,
They scarcely asked the reason why;
They only knew they could but die,

And death was not the worst of all!

J. G. WHITTIER, Lexington.

1 There is one certain means by which I can be sure never to see my country's ruin: I will die in the last ditch.

WILLIAM III, PRINCE OF ORANGE. (HUME, History of England. Ch. 65.)

2 And shall Trelawney die, and shall Trelawney die?

Then thirty thousand Cornish boys will know the reason why.

UNKNOWN. Old ballad popular throughout Cornwall, referring to the imprisonment of the seven Bishops by James II, in 1688, Trelawney being Bishop of Bristol. (MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 8.)

And have they fixed the where, and when? And shall Trelawney die?

Here's thirty thousand Cornish men Will know the reason why!

ROBERT STEPHEN HAWKER, Song of the Western Men. Mr. Hawker wrote this song in 1825, taking the refrain from the old ballad referred to above. Davies Gilbert, President of the Royal Society, reprinted it as an old one, and Sir Walter Scott was deceived into thinking it "the solitary people's song of the seventeenth century."

V—Patriotism: Its Faults

3 Patriotism is not enough. I must have no hatred or bitterness towards anyone.

EDITH CAVELL, Conversation with the Rev. Mr. Gahan, 11 Oct., 1915, the night before her execution at Brussels by the Germans.

Such is the patriot's boast, where'er we roam, His first, best country, ever is at home. And yet, perhaps, if countries we compare, And estimate the blessings which they share, Though patriots flatter, still shall wisdom find An equal portion dealt to all mankind.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 73.

4 Never was patriot yet, but was a fool.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 968.

A patriot is a fool in ev'ry age.

POPE, Epilogue to the Satires. Dial. i, l. 41.

5 When a nation is filled with strife then do patriots flourish.

LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way. No. 18.

6 You'll never have a quiet world till you knock the patriotism out of the human race.

BERNARD SHAW, O'Flaherty V. C.

7 It would therefore seem obvious that patriotism as a feeling is a bad and harmful feeling, and as a doctrine is a stupid doctrine. For it is clear that if each people and each State considers itself the best of peoples and States, they all dwell in a gross and harmful delusion.

TOLSTOY, Patriotism and Government.

8 A great and lasting war can never be supported on this principle [patriotism] alone. It must be aided by a prospect of interest, or some reward.

WASHINGTON, Letter to John Banister, Valley Forge, 21 April, 1778.

9 Patriotism has become a mere national self assertion, a sentimentality of flag-cheering with no constructive duties.

H. G. WELLS, The Future in America.

VI—Patriotism: Patriots

10 From distant climes, o'er wide-spread seas we come,

Though not with much éclat or beat of drum; True patriots all; for be it understood

We left our country for our country's good.

GEORGE BARRINGTON, Prologue for the Opening of the Playhouse at Sydney, New South Wales, 16 Jan., 1796. Barrington was a convict, and he and his fellow convicts acted in a production of Edward Young's tragedy, The Revenge. Barrington wrote a prologue which opened as above. His real name was Waldron, the name Barrington having been assumed when he joined a company of strolling actors. He was transported to Botany Bay for theft in 1790, released in 1792, and became superintendent of convicts and high constable of Parametta.

And bold and hard adventures t' undertake, Leaving his country for his country's sake.

HENRY FITZGERFREY, Life and Death of Sir Francis Drake. St. 213. (1600)

'Twas for the good of my country that I should be abroad. Anything for the good of one's country—I'm a Roman for that.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 89. (1706)

11 These gentry are invariably saying all they can in dispraise of their native land; and it is my opinion, grounded upon experience, that an individual who is capable of such baseness would not hesitate at the perpetration of any villainy, for next to the love of God, the love of country is the best preventive of crime.

GEORGE BORROW, The Bible in Spain. Ch. 4.

12 For what were all these country patriots born? To hunt, and vote, and raise the price of corn?

BYRON, The Age of Bronze. St. 14.

13 A steady patriot of the world alone, The friend of every country—but his own.

GEORGE CANNING, The New Morality.

14 Patriots are grown too shrewd to be sincere,

And we too wise to trust them.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 495.

For when was public virtue to be found
When private was not? Can he love the whole
Who loves no part? He be a nation's friend
Who is, in truth, the friend of no man there?

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 502.

<sup>1</sup> Patriots have toil'd, and in their country's cause

Bled nobly; and their deeds, as they deserve,
Receive proud recompense.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 704.

<sup>2</sup> Patriots in peace, assert the people's right;
With noble stubbornness resisting might.

DRYDEN, Epistles: To John Dryden of Chester- ton, l. 184.

Then, seiz'd with fear, yet still affecting fame,
Usurped a patriot's all-atoning name.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 178.

<sup>3</sup> The flaming patriot, who so lately scorched us in the meridian, sinks temperately to the west, and is hardly felt as he descends.

JUNIUS, Letters. Letter 54, 15 Aug., 1771.

<sup>4</sup> Brave men and worthy patriots, dear to God,
and famous to all ages.

MILTON, Tractate of Education.

<sup>5</sup> Who stabs at this my heart, stabs at a kingdom;

These veins are rivers, and these arteries
Are very roads; this body is your country.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Herod. Act ii.

<sup>6</sup> I never was a good son or a good brother or a good patriot in the sense of thinking that my mother and my sister and my native country were better than other people's, because I happened to belong to them.

BERNARD SHAW, The Irrational Knot. Ch. 6.

<sup>7</sup> None loves his king and country better,
Yet none was ever less their debtor.

SWIFT, A Pastoral Dialogue.

<sup>8</sup> The ever lustrous name of patriot
To no man be denied because he saw
Wherein his country's wholeness lay the flaw,
Where, on her whiteness, the unseemly blot.

WILLIAM WATSON, Sonnet.

<sup>9</sup> If I ever love another country, damn ME!

<sup>10</sup> "O dear Mother Outline! of wisdom most sage,

What's the first part of painting?" She said:
"Patronage,"

"And what is the second, to please and engage?"

She frowned like a fury, and said: "Patronage."

"And what is the third?" She put off old age,
And smil'd like a siren, and said: "Patronage."

WILLIAM BLAKE, On Art and Artists. Pt. iv.

<sup>11</sup> The mud of English patronage
Grows round his feet, and keeps him down.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Edward Crowhurst.

<sup>12</sup> But now for a Patron, whose name and whose glory

At once may illustrate and honour my story.

<sup>14</sup> Is not a Patron, my Lord, one who looks with unconcern on a man struggling for life in the water, and, when he has reached ground, encumbers him with help?

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to the Earl of Chesterfield, 7 Feb., 1755. (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.) Johnson's explanation to Boswell of the letter was: "Sir, after making great professions, he had, for many years, taken no notice of me; but when my Dictionary was coming out, he fell a scribbling in The World about it. Upon which, I wrote him a letter expressed in civil terms, but such as might shew him that I did not mind what he said or wrote, and that I had done with him."

Patron: Commonly a wretch who supports with insolence, and is paid with flattery.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary of the English
Language.

<sup>15</sup> Mæcenas, sprung from royal stock, my bulwark and my glory dearly cherished. (Mæcenas atavis edite regibus, O et præsidium et dulce decus meum.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 1, l. 1.

Let there be Mæcenas, Flaccus, and there will not be wanting Vergils. (Sint Mæcenates non derunt, Flacce, Marones.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, ep. 56.

<sup>16</sup> We should seek support from merit, not from patrons; he has sufficient patrons who does rightly. (Virtute ambire oportet, non favitoribus; Sat habet favorum semper, qui recte facit.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo: Prologue, l. 78.

It matters not a featherweight whether patron or client is the better man. (Pluma haud interest, patronus an cliens probior siet.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 408. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

1 No man's talents, however brilliant, can raise him from obscurity, unless they find scope, opportunity, and also a patron to commend them. (Neque enim cuiquam tam clarum statim ingenium, ut possit emergere, nisi illi materia, occasio, fautor etiam commendatorque contingat.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. vi, epis. 23.

2 My soul's earth's god, and body's fostering patron.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 222.

3 Getting Patronage is the whole art of life. A man cannot have a career without it.

BERNARD SHAW, Captain Brassbound's Conversion. Act iii.

4 Refuse to endure the haughty insolence [of patrons]. (Mitte superba pati fastidia.)

UNKNOWN. An adaptation of Vergil's "superba pati fastidia." (Eclogues, ii, 15.)

PAYMENT

5 Alas! how deeply painful is all payment! . . . They hate a murderer much less than a claimant. . . .

Kill a man's family, and he may brook it—But keep your hands out of his breeches' pocket.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 79.

While punctual beaux reward the grateful notes, And pay for poems—when they pay for coats.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 797.

6 What you will have, quote God, pay for it and take it.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation. Quoted as a proverb.

7 He that payeth aforehand hath never his work well done.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, Fo. 39.

Pay beforehand and your work will be behind-hand.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Pay-before-hand's never well served.

SCOTT, The Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 3.

8 Glad that he . . . had paid her his debt in her own coin.

ROBERT GREENE, Works. Vol. vii, p. 133. (1589)

I would pay him in his own coin.

APHRA BEHN, Lucky Chance. Act i, sc. 2.

She pays him in his own coin.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii.

I am accustomed to pay men back in their own coin. (Ich bin gewohnt in der Münze wiederzahlen in der man mich bezahlt.)

BISMARCK, Speech, to the Ultramontanes, 1870

9 A good payer is master of another man's purse.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

10 If I can't pay, why I can owe.

JOHN HEXWOOD, Be Merry, Friends.

11 Light is the dance, and doubly sweet the lays, When, for the dear delight, another pays.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. i, l. 205. (Pope, tr.)

He thought I was to pay the piper.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 5.

I am not at all in the humor to pay the fiddlers for others to dance. (Je ne suis point d'humeur à payer les violons pour faire danser les autres.)

MOLIÈRE, La Comtesse d'Escarbagnas. Sc. 8.

Always those that dance must pay the music.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Taylor's Feast, p. 98. (1638)

He who pays the piper can call the tune.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

12 He loveth well to be at good fare, but he will pay no shot.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria. Fo. 165. (1519)

I will pay for my shot.

JOHN BOURCHIER, LORD BERNERS, Huon of Burdeux, 704. (c. 1534)

Have paid scot and lot there any time this eighteen years.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act iii, sc. 3.

Every man must pay his scot.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth.

13 He that pays last payeth but once.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 4. (1659)

He that pays last never pays twice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2246.

14 The time for payment comes, early or late, No earthly debtor but accounts to Fate.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street.

15 Till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 26; Luke xii, 59.

Pay me that thou owest.

New Testament: Matthew, xviii, 28.

16 Pay and pray too.

DANIEL ROGERS, Matrimonial Honour, 53.

He that cannot pay, let him pray.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6362.

To pray and pay too is the devil.

DANIEL DEFOE, Everybody's Business.

17 Base is the slave that pays.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 100.

18 He is well paid that is well satisfied.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 415.

- 1 Now nothing but pay, pay,
With, laugh and lay down,
Borough, city, and town.
JOHN SKELTON, Works, ii, 55. (1520)
- Pass the hat for your credit's sake, and pay, pay, pay!
KIPLING, The Absent-Minded Beggar.
- 2 Pay what you owe, and what you're worth you'll know.
C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 12.
- He [Sir Pitt Crawley] had an almost invincible repugnance to paying anybody, and could only be brought by force to discharge his debts.
THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Bk. i, ch. 9.
- Tho' I owe much, I hope long trust is given,
And truly mean to pay all bills in Heaven.
UNKNOWN. Epitaph, Barnwell Churchyard, near Cambridge, England.
- 3 Who quick be to borrow, and slow be to pay,
Their credit is naught, go they never so gay.
THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry: January's Abstract.
- 4 You could not well expect to go in without paying, but you may pay without going in.
ARTEMUS WARD, Notice at the Door of the Tent.
- 5 Who cannot pay with money, must pay with his body. (Luat in corpore, qui non habet in aere.)
UNKNOWN. A law maxim.

PEACE

See also War and Peace

I—Peace: Definitions

- 6 Peace is liberty in tranquillity.
CICERO, Philippicæ. No. ii, sec. 44.
- 7 Those Christians best deserve the name
Who studiously make peace their aim;
Peace, both the duty and the prize
Of him that creeps and him that flies.
COWPER, The Nightingale and Glow-Worm.
- 8 The first and fundamental law of Nature,
which is, to seek peace and follow it.
THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. i, ch. 14.
- 9 Peace is the nurse of Ceres; Ceres is the foster-child of Peace. (Pax Cererem nutrit; pacis alumna Ceres.)
OVID, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 704.
- Peace,
Dear nurse of arts, plenties and joyful births.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 34.
- 10 People are always expecting to get peace in heaven: but you know whatever peace they get there will be ready-made. Whatever making of peace they can be blest for, must be on the earth here.

RUSKIN, The Eagle's Nest. Lecture ix.

You may either win your peace or buy it: win it, by resistance to evil; buy it, by compromise with evil.

JOHN RUSKIN, The Two Paths. Lecture v.

11 A peace is of the nature of a conquest;
For then both parties nobly are subdued,
And neither party loser.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 89.

12 Peace is the healing and elevating influence of the world.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, Philadelphia, 10
May, 1915.

II—Peace: Apothegms

13 To plunder, to slaughter, to steal, these things they misname empire; and where they make a desert, they call it peace. (Atqui ubi solitudinem faciunt, pacem appellunt.)

CALGACUS, addressing the Britons at the battle of the Grampians, referring to the Romans.
(TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 30.)

Yet there we follow but the bent assign'd
By fatal Nature to man's warring kind:
Mark! where his carnage and his conquests cease!

He makes a solitude, and calls it—peace!

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto ii, l. 428.

14 Go in peace. ("Εἰρε χαίρων.)

CALLIMACHUS, Epitaph for a Priestess. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 728.)

Go in peace. (Vade in pace.)

Vulgate: Exodus, iv, 18.

15 Thank God for peace! Thank God for peace, when the great gray ships come in!

GUY WETMORE CARRYL, When the Great Gray Ships Come In.

16 Nor is heaven always at peace. (Nec sidera pacem Semper habent.)

CLAUDIAN, De Bello Gothico, l. 62.

Where there is peace, God is.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

17 Peace rules the day, where reason rules the mind.

WILLIAM COLLINS, Hassan, l. 68.

18 Though peace be made, yet it is interest that keeps peace.

OLIVER CROMWELL, Speech, in Parliament, 4
Sept., 1654. He refers to it as "a maxim not to be despised."

19 The god of Victory is said to be one-handed, but Peace gives victory to both sides.

EMERSON, Journal, 1867.

1 Let us have peace!

U. S. GRANT, Letter Accepting the Nomination to the Presidency, 29 May, 1868.

2 How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace.

Old Testament: Isaiah, lii, 7.

3 Peace, peace; when there is no peace.

Old Testament: Jeremiah, vi, 14; viii, 11.

4 Peace courts his hand, but spreads her charms in vain;

"Think nothing gain'd," he cries, "till nought remain."

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 199.

5 The days of peace and slumberous calm are fled.

KEATS, Hyperion. Bk. ii, l. 335.

6 Peace at any price. (Paix à tout prix.)

LAMARTINE. (ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, Letters and Remains, p. 105.)

The Ministry of peace at any price. (Le Ministère de la Paix à tout prix.)

ARMAND CARREL, referring to the Périer ministry. (National, 13 March, 1831.)

We love peace, as we abhor pusillanimity; but not peace at any price. There is a peace more destructive of the manhood of living man than war is destructive of his material body. Chains are worse than bayonets.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Specimens of Jerrold's Wit: Peace.

Though not a "peace-at-any-price" man, I am not ashamed to say that I am a peace-at-almost-any-price man.

SIR JOHN LUBBOCK, The Use of Life. Ch. 11. Lord Palmerston sneered at John Bright as a "peace-at-any-price man."

Professional pacifists, the peace-at-any-price, non-resistance, universal arbitration people, are seeking to Chinify this country.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, San Francisco. If I must choose between peace and righteousness, I choose righteousness.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Unwise Peace Treaties.

There is a price which is too great to pay for peace, and that price can be put in one word. One cannot pay the price of self-respect.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Des Moines, 1 Feb., 1916.

7 Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

New Testament: Luke, ii, 14.

Peace be to this house.

New Testament: Luke, x, 5. (Pax huic domui.—Vulgate.)

Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxii, 7.

That peace which made thy prosperous reign to shine,

That peace thou leavest to thy imperial line,

That peace, oh, happy shade, be ever thine.

DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis. St. 9.

8 Blessed are the peace-makers.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 9. (Beati pacifici.—Vulgate.)

Your "if" is the only peace-maker; much virtue in "if."

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 4, l. 107.

I hate your ifs.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. i, ch. 12.

9 Agree with thine adversary quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 25.

If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men.

New Testament: Romans, xii, 18.

10 Fair peace is becoming to men; fierce anger belongs to beasts. (Candida pax homines, trux decet ira feras.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 502.

11 An equal doom clipp'd Time's blest wings of peace.

PETRARCH, To Laura in Death. Sonnet xlviii.

12 Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace.

Old Testament: Proverbs, iii, 17.

13 Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace, To silence envious tongues.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 445.

Enrich the time to come with smooth-faced peace,

With smiling plenty and fair prosperous days!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 5, l. 33.

14 No more shall . . . Peace

Pipe on her pastoral hillock a languid note,

And watch her harvest ripen.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. ii, sec. 6, st. 2.

15 Peace is always beautiful.

WALT WHITMAN, The Sleepers.

16 Who gives a nation peace, gives tranquillity to all.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Sir Horace Mann, 3 Oct., 1762.

17 It must be a peace without victory.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, to U. S. Senate, 22 Jan., 1917.

Open covenants of peace openly arrived at. . . . Absolute freedom of navigation upon the seas outside territorial waters alike in peace and in war. . . . The removal, so far as possible, of all economic barriers and the establishment of an equality of trade conditions among all nations. . . Adequate guarantees given and taken that national armaments will be reduced to the lowest point consistent with domestic safety.

WOODROW WILSON. First four of Fourteen Points.

III—Peace with Honor

<sup>1</sup> Lord Salisbury and myself have brought you back peace—but a peace, I hope, with honour.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, after Berlin Congress, 16 July, 1878.

<sup>2</sup> With peace and honour I am willing to spare anything so as to keep all ends together.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 25 May, 1663.

<sup>3</sup> If peace cannot be maintained with honour, it is no longer peace.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL, Speech, at Greenock, Sept., 1853.

<sup>4</sup> That it shall hold companionship in peace With honour, as in war.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 49.

We have made peace

With no less honour to the Antiates Than shame to the Romans.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act v, sc. 6, l. 79.

<sup>5</sup> Not thus doth Peace return!
A blessed visitant she comes;
Honour in his right hand
Doth lead her like a bride.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Carmen Aulica. Sec. 5.

THEOBALD, COUNT OF CHAMPAGNE, Letter to Louis the Great. c. 1125. (WALTER MAP, De Nugis Curialium, p. 220); SIR KENELM DIGBY, Letter to Lord Bristol, 27 May, 1625.

He had rather spend £10,000 on Embassies to keep or procure peace with dishonour, than £10,000 on an army that would have forced peace with honour.

SIR ANTHONY WELDON, The Court and Character of King James, p. 185. (1650)

IV—Peace: World Peace

<sup>7</sup> To make peace in Europe possible, the last representative of the pre-war generation must die and take his pre-war mentality into the grave with him.

EDUARD BENES, Interview, Dec., 1929.

<sup>8</sup> As I read this to-day what a change! The world convulsed by war as never before. Men slaying each other like wild beasts.

ANDREW CARNEGIE, Autobiography. The abrupt close of the manuscript.

<sup>9</sup> War will never yield but to the principles of universal justice and love, and these have no sure root but in the religion of Jesus Christ.

' WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, Lecture on War.

Peace cannot be kept by force. It can only be achieved by understanding.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, Notes on Pacifism.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, advocating disarmament, 1862. See also under PREPAREDNESS.

<sup>11</sup> Instead of by battles and Œcumenical Councils, the rival portions of humanity will one day dispute each other's excellence in the manufacture of little cakes.

FOURIER. (EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: The Man of Letters.)

<sup>12</sup> The only foes that threaten America are the enemies at home, and these are ignorance, superstition and incompetence.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xx, p. 36.

<sup>13</sup> The closeness of their [the nations'] intercourse will assuredly render war as absurd and impossible by-and-by, as it would be for Manchester to fight with Birmingham, or Holborn Hill with the Strand.

LEIGH HUNT, Poems: Preface.

Old Testament: Isaiah, ii, 4; Joel, iii, 10; Micah, iv, 3.

The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xi, 6.

<sup>15</sup> An association of men who will not quarrel with one another is a thing which never yet existed, from the greatest confederacy of nations down to a town-meeting or a vestry.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Taylor, 1798.

You have not been mistaken in supposing my views and feeling to be in favor of the abolition of war. . . I hope it is practicable, by improving the mind and morals of society, to lessen the disposition to war; but of its abolition I despair.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xviii, p. 298.

<sup>16</sup> An angel with a trumpet said,
"Forevermore, forevermore,

The reign of violence is o'er!"

LONGFELLOW, The Occultation of Orion. St. 6.

Were half the power that fills the world with terror,

Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts,

Given to redeem the human mind from error,

There were no need of arsenals and forts.
H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Arsenal at Springfield.

Peace! and no longer from its brazen portals
The blast of War's great organ shakes the skies!

But beautiful as songs of the immortals,
The holy melodies of love arise.
LONGFELLOW, The Arsenal at Springfield.

Buried was the bloody hatchet;
Buried was the dreadful war-club;
Buried were all warlike weapons,
And the war-cry was forgotten.
Then was peace among the nations.
LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha. Pt. xiii, l. 7.

War in men's eyes shall be
A monster of iniquity
In the good time coming.
Nations shall not quarrel then,
To prove which is the stronger;
Nor slaughter men for glory's sake;—
Wait a little longer.
CHARLES MACKAY, The Good Time Coming.

No war, or battle's sound
Was heard the world around;
The idle spear and shield were high up hung.
MILTON, *Hymn on the Morning of Christ's
Nativity*, l. 53.

4
To discover a system for the avoidance of war is a vital need of our civilization; but no such system has a chance while men are so unhappy that mutual extermination seems to them less dreadful than continued endurance of the light of day.
BERTRAND RUSSELL, The Conquest of Happiness, p. 15.

For lo! the days are hastening on,
By prophet-bards foretold,
When with the ever-circling years,
Comes round the age of gold;
When Peace shall over all the earth
Its ancient splendors fling
And the whole world send back the song
Which now the angels sing.
EDMUND HAMILTON SEARS, The Angels' Song.
See also under CHRISTMAS.

The time of universal peace is near:
Prove this a prosperous day, the three-nook'd
world
Shall bear the olive freely.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 6, l. 4.

7
Let the bugles sound the Truce of God to the whole world forever.
CHARLES SUMNER, Oration: The True Grandeur of Nations.

8
The battlefield as a place of settlement of disputes is gradually yielding to arbitral courts of justice.

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT, *Dawn of World
Peace*. (U. S. Bureau of Education Bulletin.
No. 8.)

Ah! when shall all men's good
Be each man's rule, and universal Peace
Lie like a shaft of light across the land,
And like a lane of beams athwart the sea?
TENNYSON, The Golden Year, l. 47.

Till the war-drum throb'd no longer, and the battle-flags were fur'd
In the Parliament of man, the Federation of the world.

ALFRED TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 127.

10
Who can fancy warless men?
Warless? war will die out late then. Will it ever? late or soon?
Can it, till this outworn earth be dead as yon dead world the moon?
TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, l.
173.

11
The League of Nations is a declaration of love without the promise of marriage.
ADMIRAL VON TIRPITZ. (So Say the Wise, p.
167.)

'Tis startin' a polis foorce to prevint war. . .
How'll they be ar-rmed? What a foolish question. They'll be ar-rmed with love, if coorse.
FINLEY PETER DUNNE, On Making a Will.
Referring to W. J. Bryan's speech on League of Nations, 1920.

Beautiful that war and all its deeds of carnage, must in time be utterly lost;
That the hands of the sisters Death and Night incessantly softly wash again and ever again, this soiled world.
WALT WHITMAN, Drum-Taps: Reconciliation.

13
When Earth, as if on evil dreams,
Looks back upon her wars,
And the white light of Christ outstreams
From the red disk of Mars,

His fame who led the stormy van
Of battle well may cease;
But never that which crowns the man
Whose victory was Peace.
WHITTIER, William Francis Bartlett.

God for His service needeth not proud work-
of human skill;
They please Him best who labour most in peace to do His will.
WORDSWORTH, The Poet's Dream, l. 65.

15
The High Contracting Parties solemnly declare in the names of their respective peoples that they condemn recourse to war for the solution of international controversies, and renounce it as an instrument of national policy in their relations with one another. The High Contracting Parties agree that the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts of whatever nature or of whatever origin they may be, which may arise among them, shall never be sought except by pacific means.

Articles I and II of the Pact of Paris.

V—Peace: Its Faults

1 And Peace it self is War in Masquerade.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 752; pt. ii, l. 269.

2 My argument is that War makes rattling good history; but Peace is poor reading.

THOMAS HARDY, The Dynasts. Act ii, sc. 5.

3 It is mutual cowardice that keeps us in peace. Were one-half of mankind brave, and one-half cowards, the brave would be always beating the cowards. Were all brave, they would lead a very uneasy life; all would be continually fighting: but being all cowards, we go on very well.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 28 April, 1778.)

4 Now we suffer the ills of a long peace; luxury, more cruel than warfare, has overshadowed us. (Nunc patimur longæ pacis mala; sævior armis Luxuria incubuit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 292.

The cankers of a calm world and a long peace.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 33.

5 The inglorious arts of peace.

ANDREW MARVELL, An Horatian Ode Upon Cromwell's Return from Ireland.

6 Nor is this peace, the nurse of drones and cowards,
Our health, but a disease.

MASSINGER, The Maid of Honour. Act i, sc. 1.

7 The brazen throat of war had ceased to roar:
All now was turn'd to jollity and game,
To luxury and riot, feast and dance.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 709.

Peace to corrupt no less than war to waste.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 780.

8 No more to watch at night's eternal shore,
With England's chivalry at dawn to ride;
No more defeat, faith, victory,—O! no more
A cause on earth for which we might have died.

HENRY NEWBOLT, Peace.

9 For peace do not hope; to be just you must break it.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, Rules of the Road.

10 War its thousands slays, Peace its ten thousands.

BEILBY PORTEUS, Death, l. 178.

11 Plenty and peace breeds cowards: hardness ever

Of hardness is mother.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 21.

12 In this weak piping time of peace.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 1, l. 24.

13 Beware of the man who does not return your blow.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

There are pacifists in pleasure as well as pacifists in war. The latter are called cowards. The former are called leading moral citizens.

G. J. NATHAN, The World in Falseface.

14 Even war is better than a miserable peace. (Miseram pacem vel bello bene mutari.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 44.

Down with a patched-up peace, sow seeds of wicked war! (Disice compositam pacem, sere crimina belli.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vii, l. 339.

15 Why do they prate of the blessings of peace? we have made them a curse,

Pickpockets, each hand lusting for all that is not its own;

And lust of gain, in the spirit of Cain, is it better or worse

Than the heart of the citizen hissing in war on his own hearthstone?

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 1, st. 6.

When a Mammonite mother kills her babe for a burial-fee,

And Timour-Mammon grins on a pile of children's bones,

Is it peace or war? better, war! loud war by land and by sea,

War with a thousand battles, and shaking a hundred thrones!

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 1, st. 12.

16 Verily I do think
War is as hateful almost, and well-nigh
As ghastly, as this terrible Peace, whereby
We halt forever on the crater's brink,
And feed the wind with phrases.

WILLIAM WATSON, Ver Tenebrosum.

VI—Peace of Mind

17 Peace, peace is what I seek, and public calm:
Endless extinction of unhappy hates.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Merope, l. 101.

18 Thou hast touched me and I have been translated into thy peace. (Tetigisti me et exarsi in pacem tuam.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. x, ch. 27, sec. 38.

That peace which the world cannot give.

Book of Common Prayer: 2nd Collect: Evening Prayer.

Nothing can bring you peace but yourself.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Of Self-Reliance.

After dreams of horror, comes again

The welcome morning with its rays of peace.

BRYANT, Mutation, l. 5.

The Pilgrim they laid in a large upper chamber, whose window opened toward the sun-rising; the name of the chamber was Peace, where he slept till break of day, and then he awoke and sang.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i.

In his will is our peace. (In la sua voluntade è nostra pace.)

DANTE, Paradiso. Bk. iii, l. 85.

Peace be to you.

Old Testament: Genesis, xliii, 23, etc. (Pax vobiscum.—Vulgate.)

The peace of God which passeth all understanding.

New Testament: Philippians, iv, 7.

When a man finds no peace within himself it is useless to seek it elsewhere. (Quand on ne trouve pas son repos en soi-même, il est inutile de le chercher ailleurs.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No. 571.

I shall not hold my little peace; for me
There is no peace but one.

ALICE MEYNELL, The Poet to the Birds.

I knew by the smoke, that so gracefully curl'd Above the green elms, that a cottage was near,

And I said, "If there's peace to be found in
the world,
A heart that was humble might hope for
it here!"

THOMAS MOORE, Ballad Stanzas.

Joy is like restless day; but peace divine
Like quiet night;

Lead me, O Lord, till perfect day shall shine
Through Peace to Light.

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Per Pacem ad Lucem.

But sometimes, through the Soul of Man,
Slow moving o'er his pain,
The moonlight of a perfect peace
Floods heart and brain.

WILLIAM SHARP, The White Peace.

10

That peace

Which follows painful duty well perform'd.
ROBERT SOUTHEY, Roderick. Pt. vii, l. 185.

11

We should have much peace if we would not busy ourselves with the sayings and doings of others.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. i, ch. 11.

Thy peace shall be in much patience.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. iii, ch. 25.

To be glad of life because it gives you the chance to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars, to be satisfied with your possessions but not contented with yourself until you have made the best of them, to despise nothing in the world except falsehood and meanness and to fear nothing except cowardice, to be governed by your admirations rather than by your disgusts, to covet nothing that is your neighbor's except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manners, to think seldom of your enemies, often of your friends, and every day of Christ, and to spend as much time as you can, with body and with spirit, in God's out-of-doors, these are little guide-posts on the footpath
to peace.

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Footpath to Peace.

13

Peace begins just where ambition ends.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 940.

PEACH

14

And the soft gold-down on her silken chin
Is like the under side of a ripe peach.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Polypheme's Passion.

A little peach in an orchard grew,—
A little peach of emerald hue;
Warmed by the sun and wet by the dew,
It grew.

EUGENE FIELD, The Little Peach.

Hard trials for them two,
Johnny Jones and his sister Sue,
And the peach of emerald hue,
That grew:

Listen to my tale of woe.

EUGENE FIELD, The Little Peach.

The peach will have wine, and the fig water.
JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis. (1577)

An apple is an excellent thing—until you have tried a peach!

GEORGE DU MAURIER, Trilby, p. 256.

18

Give me women as soft, and as delicate, and as velvet as my peaches! . . . with peaches and women, it's only the side next the sun that's tempting.

OUIDA, Strathmore.

1 As touching peaches in general, the very name in Latin, whereby they are called Persica, doth evidently show that they were brought out of Persia first.

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xv, sec. 13.

2 Peel a peach for your enemy, a fig for your friend.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. From the Italian, "All' inimico mondagli il persico, all' amico il fico."

3 The ripest peach is highest on the tree.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, The Ripest Peach.

4 Oh, Persica, Persica, pale and fair,
With a ripe blush on your cheek,
How pretty—how very pretty you are,
Until you begin to speak!

As for a heart and soul, my dear,
You have not enough to sin;
Outside so fair, like a peach you are,
With a stone for a heart within.
W. W. STORY, Persica.

PEACOCK

5 Like an imperial peacock stalk abroad
(That royal bird, whose tail's a diadem).

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vii, st. 74.

6 And stately peacocks with their splendid eyes.
THOMAS HOOD, The Plea of the Midsummer Fairies.

Like a peacock whose eyes are inclin'd to his tail.
THOMAS HOOD, A Parthian Glance.

7 To Paradise, the Arabs say,
Satan could never find the way
Until the peacock led him in.
CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, The Peacock.

8 And like a peacock sweep along his tail.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 6.

Why, he stalks up and down like a peacock,— a stride and a stand.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 251.

9 Proud as peacocks.
SHERLOCKE, Hatcher of Heresies. (1565)

The pride of the peacock is the glory of God.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

"Fly pride," says the peacock.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 81.

And there they placed a peacock in his pride.
TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 829.

10 She is a peacock in everything but beauty.

PEARL

11 If that a pearl may in a toad's head dwell,

And may be found too in an oyster shell.
JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology for His Book, l. 89.

Has a pearl less whiteness
Because of its birth?
THOMAS MOORE, Desmond's Song.

12 They [the Russians] came to the court balls dropping pearls and vermin.
MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 23.

13 Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 6.

And the precious pearls ye strowen to hogs.
WRIGHT, Political Poems, vol. ii, p. 110. (1401)

Men should not put pearles white
To-fore rude swine.
JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 188.

Introducing a fine woman to you is casting pearls before swine.
BERNARD SHAW, How He Lied to Her Husband.

And the precious pearls ye strew to hogs.
UNKNOWN. (WRIGHT, Political Poems, ii, 110.
1401)

See also under SWINE.

14 When he had found one pearl of great price.
New Testament: Matthew, xiii, 46.

15 This treasure of an oyster.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i,
sc. 5, l. 44.

16 One whose hand
Like the base Indian, threw a pearl away
Richer than all his tribe.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 346.

PEDANTRY

17 Pedantry consists in the use of words unsuitable to the time, place, and company.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 10.

18 He who is in some measure a pedant, though he may be wise, cannot be a very happy man.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Round Table. Vol. ii, p. 28.

19 A profound man, who has become hollow.

VICTOR HUGO, Ninety-Three. Bk. i, pt. iii, ch. 5. He was speaking of Sieyès, and echoing Talleyrand's epigram, also of Sieyès: Profond, hem! vous voulez dire, peut-être, creux: Perhaps you mean hollow. Jean d'Alembert has already said of French philosophers: They believe themselves profound, while they are merely hollow.

20 Pedantry is the dotage of knowledge.

HOLBROOK JACKSON, Anatomy of Bibliomania, p. 150.

1 An artist may visit a museum, but only a pedant can live there.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Life of Reason, iv, 129.

2 Bold in thy applause,
The Bard shall scorn pedantic laws.
SCOTT, Marmion: Canto v, Introduction.

3 The vacant skull of a pedant generally furnishes out a throne and a temple for vanity.
WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Books and Writers.

4 Figures pedantical.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 408.

How fiery and forward our pedant is!
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 48.

5 A reasoning, self-sufficing thing,
An intellectual All-in-all.
WORDSWORTH, A Poet's Epitaph. St. 8.

PELICAN

6 What, wouldst thou have me turn pelican, and feed thee out of my own vitals?
CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 1.

7 By them there sat the loving pelican,
Whose young ones, poison'd by the serpent's sting,
With her own blood to life again doth bring.
MICHAEL DRAYTON, Noah's Flood.

8 Like the kind, life-retiring pelican,
Repast them with my blood.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 146.

That blood already, like the pelican,
Hast thou tapp'd out and drunkenly caroused.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 126.

9 A wondrous bird is the pelican;
His mouth holds more than his bellican;
He takes in his beak
Enough food for a week,
But I'm damned if I see how the hellican.
UNKNOWN, The Pelican. One of Woodrow Wilson's favorite limericks.

PEN

See also Press, Writing

10 Art thou a pen, whose task shall be
To drown in ink What writers think?
Oh, wisely write, That pages white
Be not the worse for ink and thee!
ETHEL LYNN BEERS, The Gold Nugget.

11 Whose noble praise
Deserves a quill plucked from an angel's wing.
DOROTHY BERRY, Sonnet. (Preface to Diana Primrose's Chain of Pearls, 1699.)
The pen wherewith thou dost so heavenly sing

Made of a quill from an angel's wing.
HENRY CONSTABLE, Sonnet. (Note to Todd's Milton. Vol. v, p. 454.)

For what made that in glory shine so long
But poets' Pens, plucked from Archangels' wings?
SIR JOHN DAVIES, Bien Venu.

The sacred Dove a quill did lend
From her high-soaring wing.
FRANCIS NETHERSOLE, Preface to Giles Fletcher's Christ's Victory.

The feather, whence the pen
Was shaped that traced the lives of these good men, Dropped from an Angel's wing.
WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets: Pt. iii, No. 5, Walton's Book of Lives.

12 I had rather stand in the shock of a basilisk, than in the fury of a merciless pen.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 4.

13 Oh! nature's noblest gift, my grey goose-quill!
Slave of my thoughts, obedient to my will,
Torn from thy parent-bird to form a pen,
That mighty instrument of little men!
BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 7.

14 Break, my boy, your pens, and forsake the useless muses. (Frange, puer, calamos, et inanes desere Musas.)
CALPURNIUS, Eclogues. No. iv, l. 23.

15 The pen is the tongue of the mind. (La pluma es lengua del alma.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Bk. v, ch. 16.

16 Pen and ink is wit's plough.
JOHN CLARKE, Paramiologia, 35. (1639)
How strange that men,
Who guide the plough, should fail to guide the pen.
GEORGE CRABBE, The Parish Register: Pt. ii.

17 I dip my pen in the blackest ink, because
I am not afraid of falling into my inkpot.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

18 Goose, bee and calf govern the world. (Answer, apie, vitellus, populus et regna gubernant.)
JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. ii, letter 2. Quoted. Meaning pen, wax and parchment.

19 The pen became a clarion.
LONGFELLOW, Monte Cassino. St. 13.

20 One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 63.

21 Let there be gall enough in thy ink, though thou write with a goose-pen, no matter.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 52.

No gall has ever poisoned my pen. (Aucun fiel n'a jamais empoisonné ma plume.)

CRÉBILLON, Discours de Réception.

1 Ask my pen,—it governs me,—I govern not it.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. vi, ch. 6.

2 There's no wound deeper than a pen can give,

It makes men living dead, and dead men live.

JOHN TAYLOR, A Kicksey-Winsey. Pt. 7.

II—Pen and Sword

3 Beneath the rule of men entirely great,
The pen is mightier than the sword.

BULWER-LYTTON, Richelieu. Act ii, sc. 2.

4 From this it appears how much more cruel the pen may be than the sword. (Hinc quam sic calamus sævior ense, patet.)

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 4.

5 A sword less hurt does, than a pen.

WILLIAM KING, The Eagle and Robin, l. 82.

6 So much had the pen, under the king, the advantage over the sword. (Tant la plume a eu sous le roi d'avantage sur l'épée.)

SAINT-SIMON, Mémoires. Vol. iii, p. 517. (1702)

7 Thou canst hurt no man's fame with thy ill word;

Thy pen is full as harmless as thy sword.

SIR CARR SCROPE, On the Earl of Rochester.

8 Many wearing rapiers are afraid of goosequills.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 359.

9 Pens are most dangerous tools, more sharp
by odds

Than swords, and cut more keen than whips or rods.

JOHN TAYLOR, News from Hell, Hull, and Halifax: Three Satirical Lashes, l. 1.

10 Cæsar had perished from the world of men,
Had not his sword been rescued by his pen.

HENRY VAUGHAN, On Sir Thomas Bodley's Library.

PEOPLE, THE

I—People: Apothegms

11 To worship the people is to be worshipped.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum.
Pt. i, bk. 6, ch. 30, Popularitas.

12 All the rabble of the ship, hag, tag, and rag.

JOHN BALE, Vocacyon. (Harl. Miscel., vi, 459.
1553)

For all were there, tag and ragge, cut and long-tail.

SAMUEL HARNETT, *Declaration of Egregious
Popish Impostures*, 50. (1603)

Tag and rag, cut and long tail, everyone that can eat an egg.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 236. (1639)

That rabble rout, tag rag and bobtail.

UNKNOWN, Just Defence of John Bastwick,
16. (1645)

The tag-rag people.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 263.

13 The public is poor.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1780. Often quoted, "The state is always poor."

14 Man has set man against man, Washed against Unwashed.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. ii, bk. 2,
ch. 4.

The great unwashed.

This phrase has been attributed to Henry
Peter Brougham and to Edmund Burke.
Sir Walter Scott is said to have applied it to the laboring class.

We begin to understand what is meant by the lowest classes, the great unwashed.

SYDNEY WATSON, Wops the Waif. Ch. 3.

15 The safety of the people shall be the highest law. (Salus populi suprema lex esto.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, ch. 3, sec. 8.

The safety of the State is the highest law. (Salus populi suprema lex.)

JUSTINIAN, Twelve Tables.

The noblest motive is the public good.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 200.

That grounded maxim,
So rife and celebrated in the mouths
Of wisest men, that to the public good
Private respects must yield.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 865.

There is not a thing in the world more abused than this sentence, Salus populi suprema lex esto.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: People.

16 The dregs of the people. (Fæx populi.)

CICERO, Epistulæ ad Quintum Fratrem. Bk. ii, epis. 9, sec. 5.

17 Public wrongs are but popular rights in embryo.

CHARLES JOHN DARLING, Scintillæ Juris.

18 Those three most intractable beasts, the owl, the serpent, and the people. (Γλαυκι καὶ δράκοντι καὶ ὄφει.)

DEMOSTHENES, referring to the Athenians.
(PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes. Sec. 26.)

19 I was told that the Privileged and the People formed Two Nations.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. iv, ch. 8.

DRYDEN, Essay on Dramatic Poetry.

The many; the multitude. (Oi πολλοί.)
UNKNOWN. A proverbial Greek phrase.

<sup>2</sup> He who serves the public is a poor animal. (Wer dem Publicum dient, ist ein armes Thier.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Reimen, iii.

10 The public be damned.

WILLIAM H. VANDERBILT, Retort, to Clarence Dresser, a reporter for the Chicago Tribune, in 1883, when asked whether the public had been consulted about the proposed discontinuance of a fast mail train to Chicago over the New York Central Railroad.

Vanderbilt had explained that the train didn't pay. "Are you working for the public or for your stockholders?" the reporter asked. "The public be damned! I'm working for my stockholders," was Vanderbilt's reply. Henry Clews is the authority for this version of the incident. (See letters in N. Y. Times, 25 Aug., 1918; N. Y. Herald, 1 Oct., 1918; 28 Oct., 1918.)

11 The base rabble are enraged; now brands and stones fly. (Sævitique animus ignobile vulgus, Iamque faces et saxa volant.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 149.

12 Our Lords on high,

Who call the underworld of man

An assish, mulish, packhorse clan.

JOHN WOLCOT, Liberty's Last Squeak.

13 The poor taxpaying people. (Misera contribuens plebs.)

UNKNOWN, Law, adopted by the Hungarian Diet, 1751. Art. 37.

II—People: Vox Populi, Vox Dei

14 A people's voice is a mighty power. (Φήμη γε μέντοι δημόθρους μέγα σθένει.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 938.

15 The voice of the people is the voice of God. (Vox populi, vox dei.)

ALCUIN, Epistle to Charlemagne. c. 800. (Admonitio ad Carolum Magnum: Works. Epis. 127.) The context is: "We would not listen to those who were wont to say the voice of the people is the voice of God, for the voice of the mob is near akin to madness." (Nec audiendi sunt qui solent dicere vox populi, vox dei; cum tumultus vulgi semper insanix proxima est.) Walter Reynolds, Archbishop of Canterbury, took "Vox Populi, Vox Dei" as the text of his sermon when Edward III ascended the throne, 1 Feb., 1327. Referred to as a proverb as early as 920 by William of Malmesbury (De Gestis Pontif. fo. 114.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 764. (c. 735 B. C.)

The voice of the people has about it something divine. (Vox populi habet aliquid divinum.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. 6, ch. 9.

Do not wonder if the common people speak more truly than those of higher rank; for they speak with more safety.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. 6, ch. 9.

17 People's voice is God's voice, men say.

THOMAS HOCCLEVE, De Regimine Principum, 104. (1412)

<sup>1</sup> Surely the voice of the public, when it calls so loudly, and only for mercy, ought to be heard.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Boswell, 1777.

<sup>2</sup> The People's voice is odd;
It is, and it is not, the voice of God.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 89.

SENECA, Rhetor. Controv., i, l. 10. So quoted by Büchmann (Geflügelte Worte), but the correct reading is now generally held to be, "Sacra populi digna est."

POPE SYLVESTER II, Epistles. Possibly a misreading of Isaiah, lxvi, 6: "A voice from the temple, a voice of God."

<sup>5</sup> It is the folly of too many to mistake the echo of a London coffee-house for the voice of the kingdom.

SWIFT, The Conduct of the Allies.

III—People: Their Virtues

<sup>6</sup> The conscience of a people is their power.

DRYDEN, The Duke of Guise. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>7</sup> March without the people, and you march into night: their instincts are a finger-pointing of Providence, always turned toward real benefit.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power. Quoted as having been said by "a French deputy from the tribune."

When I see how much each virtuous and gifted person, whom all men consider, lives affectionately with scores of excellent people who are not known far from home, and perhaps with great reason reckons these people his superiors in virtue and in the symmetry and force of their qualities,—I see what cubic values America has, and in these a better certificate of civilization than great cities or enormous wealth.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

<sup>8</sup> About things on which the public thinks long, it commonly attains to think right.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. iii, p. 90.

<sup>9</sup> For as we come and as we go (and deadlily soon go we!)

The people, Lord, Thy people, are good enough for me!

RUDYARD KIPLING, A Pilgrim's Way.

And, Amorite or Eremite, or General Averagee,
The people, Lord, Thy people, are good enough for me!

RUDYARD KIPLING, A Pilgrim's Way.

<sup>10</sup> Why should there not be a patient confidence in the ultimate justice of the people? Is there any better or equal hope in the world?

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, First Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1861.

<sup>11</sup> The common crowd is wiser because it is just as wise as it need be. (Plus sapit vulgus quia tantum, quantum opus est, sapit.)

LACTANTIUS, Divinarum Institutionum. Bk. iii, sec. 5.

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 314.

<sup>13</sup> For the crowd, the incredible has sometimes more power and is more credible than truth.

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 622.

<sup>14</sup> Great lords have pleasures, the people have joy. (Les grands seigneurs ont des plaisirs, le peuple a de la joie.)

MONTESQUIEU.

<sup>15</sup> The supremacy of the people tends to liberty. (Populi imperium juxta libertatem.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 42.

<sup>16</sup> The mind of the people is like mud,
From which arise strange and beautiful things.
W. J. TURNER, Talking with Soldiers.

IV—People: Their Faults

<sup>17</sup> Nothing moderate is pleasing to the crowd.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. 6.

It is not given to the world to be moderate.

GOETHE, Conversations with Eckermann.

<sup>19</sup> The public! why, the public's nothing better than a great baby.

THOMAS CHALMERS, Letter.

The public is just a great baby.

JOHN RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies. Sec. i, 40. Paraphrasing Chalmers.

<sup>20</sup> The public! How many fools does it take to make a public? (Le public! Combien faut-il de sots pour faire un public?)

SEBASTIEN CHAMFORT, Maximes.

Why then, I say, the Public is a fool.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 94.

<sup>21</sup> The herd of mankind can hardly be said to think; their notions are almost all adoptive; and, in general, I believe it is better that it should be so, as such common prejudices contribute more to order and quiet than their own separate reasonings would do, uncultivated and unimproved as they are.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 7 Feb., 1749.

CICERO, Pro Roscio Comædo. Sec. 10.

<sup>2</sup> If it has to choose who is to be crucified, the crowd will always save Barabbas.

JEAN COCTEAU, Le Rappel à l'Ordre, p. 31.

<sup>3</sup> Nor is the people's judgment always true: The most may err as grossly as the few.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 781.

Yet be not blindly guided by the throng;

The multitude is always in the wrong.

WENTWORTH DILLON, Essay on Translated Verse, l. 183.

The public is a bad guesser.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Essays: Protestantism.

<sup>4</sup> So void of pity is th' ignoble crowd,
When others' ruin may increase their store!

DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis. St. 250.

<sup>5</sup> Leave this hypocritical prating about the masses. Masses are rude, lame, unmade, pernicious in their demands and influence, and need not to be flattered, but to be schooled. . . . The mass are animal, in pupilage, and near chimpanzee. But the units, whereof the mass is composed, are neuters, every one of which may be grown to a queen-bee.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

The people are to be taken in very small doses. If solitude is proud, so is society vulgar.

EMERSON, Essays: Society and Solitude.

<sup>6</sup> The public have neither shame nor gratitude.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 85.

There is not a more mean, dastardly, stupid, pitiful, spiteful, envious, ungrateful animal than the public. It is the greatest of cowards, for it is afraid of itself.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics.

The public pays with ingratitude.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful, were to make a monster of the multitude.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 9.

<sup>7</sup> Reason stands aghast at the sight of an "unprincipled, immoral, incorrigible" public; and the word of God abounds in such threats and denunciations, as must strike terror into the heart of every believer.

RICHARD HURD, Sermon. (Vol. iv, 1.)

There was not that variety of beasts in the ark, as is of beastly natures in the multitude.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Vulgi Mores.

<sup>8</sup> And what the people but a herd confus'd,
A miscellaneous rabble, who extol
Things vulgar?

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iii, l. 49.

<sup>9</sup> Let a man proclaim a new principle. Public sentiment will surely be on the other side.

THOMAS B. REED. (W. A. ROBINSON, Life.)

<sup>10</sup> Who that is pleased by virtue can please the mob? It takes trickery to win the mob's approval. (Quis enim placere populo potest, cui placet virtus? Malis artibus popularis favor quæritur.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xxix, 11.

'Faith there have been many great men that have flattered the people, who ne'er loved them.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 8.

I will not choose what many men desire,
Because I will not jump with common spirits,
And rank me with the barbarous multitudes.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 9, l. 31.

<sup>11</sup> But when the Crier cried, "O Yes!" the people cried, "O No!"

R. H. BARHAM, Aunt Fanny.

<sup>12</sup> O stormy people, unsad and ever untrue,
And undiscreet, and changing as a vane,
Delighting ever in rumble that is new,
For like the moon ay waxe ye and wane!

CHAUCER, The Clerkes Tale, l. 939. Unsad: i. e., unstable. Rumble: i. e., rumor.

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 65.

<sup>14</sup> Nothing is more uncertain than a dependence upon public bodies. They are moved like the wind, but rather more uncertain.

ABRAHAM CLARK, Letter to James Caldwell, 7 March, 1777.

<sup>15</sup> The fickle mob ever changes along with the prince. (Mobile mutantur semper cum principe vulgus.)

CLAUDIAN, Panegyricus de Quarto Consulatu Honorii Augusti, l. 302.

<sup>16</sup> I have never wished to cater to the crowd; for what I know they do not approve, and what they approve I do not know. (Numquam volui populo placere. Nam quæ ego

Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 89.

7 Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro as this multitude?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 8, l. 57.

Look, as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded always by the greater gust;
Such is the lightness of you common men.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 84.

8 The wavering mob is torn by opposite opinions. (Scinditur incertum studia in contraria volgus.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 39.

VI—People: Their Tyranny

9 The tyranny of a multitude is a multiplied tyranny.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to Thomas Mercer,
26 Feb., 1790.

The people are the masters.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons,
11 Feb., 1780.

10 I think I hear a little bird, who sings
The people by and by will be the stronger.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto viii, st. 50.

The people will come to their own at last,—
God is not mocked forever.

JOHN HAY, The Sphynx of the Tuileries.

11 The people's right remains; let those who

<sup>4</sup> Well, if a King's a lion, at the least
The people are a many-headed beast.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 120.

<sup>5</sup> Who o'er the herd would wish to reign,
Fantastic, fickle, fierce, and vain?
Vain as the leaf upon the stream,
And fickle as a changeful dream;
Fantastic as a woman's mood,
And fierce as Frenzy's fevered blood.
Thou many-headed monster-thing,
O who would wish to be thy king?

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto v, st. 30.

<sup>6</sup> The beast With many heads butts me away.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 1.

VIII—People: The Mob's Insanity

<sup>7</sup> Every numerous assembly is mob, let the individuals who compose it be what they will.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 18 March, 1751.

<sup>8</sup> A mob is a society of bodies voluntarily be-reaving themselves of reason. . . . A mob is man voluntarily descending to the nature of the beast.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

Enclosed and safe within its central heart,
Nestles the seed Perfection.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Universal. Pt. i.
Inscribed beneath his bust in the Hall of Fame.

7 Let other bards of angels sing,
Bright suns without a spot;
But thou art no such perfect thing:
Rejoice that thou art not!

WORDSWORTH, To —.

Where imperfection ceaseth, heaven begins.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Wood and Water.

8 Counsels of perfection.
UNKNOWN. A theological term of great antiquity applied to works of supererogation.

II—Perfection: The Broken Mould

9 There never was such beauty in another man.
Nature made him, and then broke the mould.
(Non e si bello in tante altre persone, Natura il fece, e poi roppa la stampa.)

ARIOSTO, Orlando Furioso. Canto x, st. 84.

One can say without exaggeration that nature, after she had made him, broke the mould. (L'on peut dire sans hyperbole, que la nature, que la après l'avoir fait en cassa la moule.)

ANGELO CONSTANTINI, La Vie de Scaramouche, l. 107.

The mould is lost wherein was made
This a per se of all.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, The Cherrie and the Slae. (1597)

10 Nature's richest, sweetest store,

She made an Hoyland, and can make no more.
THOMAS CHATTERTON, To Miss Hoyland.

11 Man breaks not the medal when God cuts the die.

O. W. HOLMES, Brother Jonathan's Lament for Sister Caroline.

12 No autumn, nor no age ever approach
This heavenly piece, which nature having wrought

She lost her needle, and did then despair
Ever to work so lively and so fair.

MASSINGER AND FIELD, The Fatal Dowry.

For Nature had but little clay
Like that of which she moulded him.

T. L. PEACOCK, Headlong Hall. Ch. 5.

The gods—a kindness I with thanks must pay—
Have form'd me of a coarser kind of clay.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 1065.

13 Crack nature's moulds, all germens spill at once

That make ingrateful man!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 9.

14 I think Nature hath lost the mould
Where she her shape did take;

Or else I doubt if Nature could
So fair a creature make.

UNKNOWN, A Praise of his Lady. (Tottel's Miscellany, 1557.)

15 The idea that Nature lost the perfect mould has been a favourite one with all song-writers and poets, and is found in the literature of all European nations.

UNKNOWN, Book of English Songs, p. 28.

PERFUME

16 Gentle and noble are their tempers framed,
That can be quickened with perfumes and sounds.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Ovid's Banquet of Sense.

17 Does it not betray itself by its odor? (Non olet?)

CICERO, Orator. Sec. 45.

18 I cannot talk with civet in the room,
A fine puss-gentleman that's all perfume;
The sight's enough—no need to smell a beau.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 283.

And all your courtly civet-cats can vent,
Perfume to you, to me is excrement.

POPE, Epilogue to the Satires. Dial. ii, l. 183.

19 The sweetest essences are always confined in the smallest glasses.

Perfume for a lady's chamber.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 225.

<sup>11</sup> Let me have them very well perfumed:
For she is sweeter than perfume itself
To whom they go to.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 2, l. 152.

II—Perfume: No Scent the Best Scent

with scents! Neither to smell rank nor to smell sweet pleases me. (Salgama non noc sunt, quod balsama: cedite odores. Nec male olere mihi, nec bene olere placet.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. 84.

<sup>13</sup> Still to be neat, still to be drest,
As you were going to a feast;
Still to be powder'd, still perfumed:

Lady, it is to be presumed,
Though art's hid causes are not found,
All is not sweet, all is not sound.

BEN JONSON, Epicene: Song. Act i.

<sup>14</sup> He does not smell well who always has a nice scent upon him. (Non bene olet, qui bene semper olet.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ii, epig. 12, l. 4.

'Tis doubt, my Postumus, he that doth smell
So sweetly always, smells not very well.

MARTIAL, Epigrams, ii, 12. (Fletcher, tr.)

<sup>15</sup> I prefer rather than to smell well not to smell of anything at all. (Malo, quam bene olere, nil olere.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 55.

You laugh at us that we of nothing savour;
Rather smell so than sweeter (by your favour).

MARTIAL, Epigrams, vi, 55. (Florio, tr.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. No. 24.

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 273. (Act i, sc. 3.)

Then smells a woman purely well,
When she of nothing else doth smell.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 55.

As women do smell well, which smell of nothing.

FRANCIS MERES, Palladis, 32. (1598)

<sup>18</sup> The best scent for the person is no scent at all. (Optimus odor in corpore est nullus.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. cviii, 16.

12 My Lady Bountiful.

FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act i, sc. 1.

13 Respect us, human, and relieve us, poor.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. ix, l. 318. (Pope, tr.)

It never was our guise

To slight the poor, or aught humane despise.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xiv, l. 65. (Pope, tr.)

14 I was a father to the poor.

Old Testament: Job, xxix, 16.

Blessed is he that considereth the poor.

Old Testament: Psalms, xli, 1.

I am the friend of the unfriended poor.

SHELLEY, To Cambria.

The poor must be wisely visited and liberally cared for, so that mendicity shall not be tempted into mendacity, nor want exasperated into crime.

ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Yorktown Oration, 1881.

15 I was a stranger, and ye took me in.

New Testament: Matthew, xxv, 35.

16 Benevolence is the distinguishing characteristic of man. As embodied in man's conduct, it is called the path of duty.

MENCIUS, Works. Bk. vii, pt. ii, ch. 16.

17 What is done for another is done for oneself. (Quod jessu alterius solvitur pro eo est quasi ipsi solutum esset.)

PAULUS, Digest. Bk. i, l. 17. Afterwards rendered by Boniface VIII: "Qui facit per alium facit per se." (Maxim. Sexti. Corp. Jur., v, 12.)

18 For this relief, much thanks: 'tis bitter cold,
And I am sick at heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. i, l. 8.

19 To a man of honour (said I) the unfortunate need no introduction.

SMOLLETT, Adventures of Ferdinand Count Fathom. Ch. 62.

20 Feel for others—in your pocket.

1 To think without confusion, clearly,
To love his fellow-men sincerely.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Four Things.

2 Never to blend our pleasure or our pride
With sorrow of the meanest thing that feels.
WORDSWORTH, Hart-leap Well. Pt. ii, l. 179.

II—Philanthropy: Do It Now

3 Often have I heard it said, What good thing you do, do not defer it. (Semper audiui dici, Quod bene potes facere noli differe.)

ALBERTANO OF BRESCIA, Liber Consolationis et Consilii. (1246)

4 "There is an old proverb," quoth she [Dame Prudence], "sayeth: that 'the goodness that thou mayst do this day, do it, and abide not nor delay it not till tomorrow.'"

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 71. (c. 1373)

5 However, while I crawl upon this planet I think myself obliged to do what good I can in my narrow domestic sphere, to all my fellowcreatures, and to wish them all the good I cannot do.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letter to the Bishop of Waterford, 22 Jan., 1780.

6 I expect to pass through this world but once.
Any good therefore that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any fellow creature, let me do it now. Let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again.

Attributed to STEPHEN GRELLET, an American Quaker of French birth (1773-1855), but not found in his writings. This quotation shares with the "mouse-trap" quotation the honor of being the best known and the most mysterious as to authorship. It has been credited to Emerson; to Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devon, owing to a slight resemblance to his epitaph (see under Gifts: Giving and Receiving); to John Wesley, William Penn, Thomas Carlyle, and many others. It is probable that Grellet was the author. The sentiment is, of course, a very old one.

The old Quaker was right: I expect to pass through life but once. If there is any kindness, or any good thing I can do to my fellow beings,
let me do it now. I shall pass this way but once.

WILLIAM C. GANNETT, Blessed be Drudgery.

7 Having lately had a loud call from God to arise and go hence, I am convinced that if I attempt anything of this kind at all I must not delay any longer.

New Testament: Preface*. (1754)

III—Philanthropy: Its Virtues

8 Now there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called Dorcas: this woman was full of good works and almsdeeds which she did.

New Testament: Acts, ix, 36.

9 A little common sense, goodwill, and a tiny dose of unselfishness could make this goodly earth into an earthly paradise.

RICHARD ALDINGTON, Colonel's Daughter, 51.

10 We praise those who love their fellow-men.
("Ὅθεν τοὺς φιλανθρώπους ἐπαινοῦμεν.")

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. viii, ch. 1,
sec. 3.

11 There are, while human miseries abound,
A thousand ways to waste superfluous wealth,
Without one fool or flatterer at your board,
Without one hour of sickness or disgust.

ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health. Bk. ii,
l. 195.

12 What does Man see or feel or apprehend Here, there, and everywhere, but faults to mend,

Omissions to supply,—one wide disease
Of things that are, which Man at once would ease,

Had will but power and knowledge?

ROBERT BROWNING, Francis Furini. Sec. 9.

13 He who bestows his goods upon the poor,
Shall have as much again, and ten times more.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii.

14 To rest the weary and to soothe the sad, Doth lesson happier men, and shames at least the bad.

The drying up a single tear has more
Of honest fame, than shedding seas of gore.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto viii, st. 3.

15 In nothing do men more nearly approach the gods than in doing good to their fellow-men. (Homines ad deos nulla re propius accedunt quam salutem hominibus dando.)

CICERO, Pro Ligario. Ch. 12, sec. 38.

16 Youth, beauty, graceful action seldom fail:
But common interest always will prevail;
And pity never ceases to be shown

To him who makes the people's wrongs his own.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 723.

17 There is no beautifier of complexion, or form, or behavior, like the wish to scatter joy and not pain around us.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

18 Who kindly sets a wanderer on his way
Does e'en as if he lit another's lamp by his:

No less shines his, when he his friend's hath lit.

W'en you see a man in woe,
Walk right up and say "hullo."
Say "hullo" and "how d'ye do,"
"How's the world a-usin' you?" . . .

W'en you travel through the strange
Country t'other side the range,
Then the souls you've cheered will know
Who you be, an' say "hullo."

IV—Philanthropy: Its Faults

10
The most melancholy of human reflections, perhaps, is that, on the whole, it is a question whether the benevolence of mankind does most harm or good.

V—Philanthropists

19
He has put to hazard his ease, his security,

his interest, his power, even his darling popularity, for the benefit of a people whom he has never seen.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, on Mr. Fox's East-India Bill. House of Commons, 1 Dec., 1783.

1 The friend of man, to vice alone a foe.

BURNS, Epitaph on His Father.

Friend to the friendless, to the sick man health,
With generous joy he viewed his modest wealth.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Lines Written at the King's Arms, Ross.

He treads unemulous of fame or wealth,
Profuse of toil, and prodigal of health.

ERASMUS DARWIN, Philanthropy of Mr. Howard.

2 I love my country better than my family,
but I love human nature better than my country.

FÉNELON, Télémaque.

3 Their chat on various subjects ran,
But most what each had done for man.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. ii, fab. 13.

4 A kind and gentle heart he had,
To comfort friends and foes;

The naked every day he clad,
When he put on his clothes.

GOLDSMITH, Elegy on the Death of a Mad Dog.

5 Large was his bounty, and his soul sincere,
Heav'n did a recompense as largely send:

He gave to Mis'ry all he had, a tear,
He gain'd from Heav'n ('twas all he wish'd) a friend.

No farther seek his merits to disclose,
Or draw his frailties from their dread abode,

(There they alike in trembling hope repose,
The bosom of his Father and his God.

6 You hear that boy laughing?—You think he's all fun;

But the angels laugh, too, at the good he has done;

The children laugh loud as they troop at his call,

And the poor man that knows him laughs loudest of all!

O. W. HOLMES, The Boys.

7 He held his seat; a friend to human race.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 18. (Pope, tr.)

8 A man rich in substance, and beloved of all men; for he dwelt in a house by the high-road and was wont to give entertainment to all.

(Ἀφνειὸς βίῳτοιο, φίλος δ' ἦν ἀνθρώποισι· πάντας γὰρ φιλέεσκεν ὁδῶ ἐπὶ οἰκίᾳ ναίων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 14.

Depart from the highway and transplant thyself in some enclosed ground, for it is hard for a tree which stands by the wayside to keep her fruit till it be prime.

ST. JOHN CHRYSOSTOM.

There are hermit souls that live withdrawn
In the peace of their self-content;

There are souls like stars that dwell apart,
In a fellowless firmament;

There are pioneer souls that blaze their paths
Where highways never ran,—

But let me live by the side of the road,
And be a friend to man.

SAM WALTER FOSS, The House by the Side of the Road.

Ah me, why did they build my house by the road to the market town?

RABINDRANATH TAGORE, The Gardener. No. 4.

9 In ev'ry sorrowing soul I pour'd delight,
And Poverty stood smiling in my sight.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 505. (Pope, tr.)

10 Abou Ben Adhem (may his tribe increase!)
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace,
And saw, within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich, and like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold:—

Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold,
And to the presence in the room he said,
"What writest thou?"—The Vision rais'd its head,

And, with a look made all of sweet accord, Answer'd, "The names of those who love the Lord."

"And is mine one?" said Abou. "Nay, not so,"

Replied the angel. Abou spoke more low,
But cheerly still; and said, "I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow men."

The angel wrote, and vanish'd. The next night

It came again with a great wakening light,
And show'd the names whom love of God
had blest,

And lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest.

LEIGH HUNT, Abou Ben Adhem.

11 He is one of those wise philanthropists who in a time of famine would vote for nothing but a supply of toothpicks.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Douglas Jerrold's Wit.

The milk of human kindness ran
In rich abundance in his breast,
It left thin grease stains on the tan
Of his asbestos vest.

5
For his bounty
There was no winter in 't; an autumn 'twas
That grew the more by reaping.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v, sc. 2, l. 87.

6
He saw the goodness, not the taint,
In many a poor, do-nothing creature,
And gave to sinner and to saint,
But kept his faith in human nature.
E. C. STEDMAN, Horace Greeley.

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 630.

8
His love was like the liberal air,—
Embracing all, to cheer and bless;
And every grief that mortals share
Found pity in his tenderness.
WILLIAM WINTER, I. H. Bromley.

For thou wert still the poor man's stay,
The poor man's heart, the poor man's hand;
And all the oppressed, who wanted strength,
Had thine at their command.
WORDSWORTH, Rob Roy's Grave, l. 109.

PHILISTIA

10
The people who believe most that our greatness and welfare are proved by our being very rich, and who most give their lives and thoughts to becoming rich, are just the very people whom we call the Philistines.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Culture and Anarchy. (1869)

Taking that terrible modern weapon, the pen, in his hand, he passed the remainder of his life [from 1830] in one fierce battle. What was that battle? the reader will ask. It was a life and death battle with Philistinism.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism: Heine. (1865)

It was in this essay that Arnold introduced into England from Germany the term "philistine." This word was his chief contribution to the process of disintegrating Victorianism.

HUGH KINGSMILL, Matthew Arnold, p. 256.

Philistine must have originally meant, in the mind of those who invented the nickname, a strong, dogged, unenlightened opponent of the children of the light.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism: Heine.

Arnold defines a Philistine as a "strong, dogged, unenlightened opponent of the chosen people," a definition which, when one reflects what the chosen people were like, raises a doubt about the justice of using Philistine as a synonym for an enemy of art and culture.

HUGH KINGSMILL, Matthew Arnold, p. 257.

Philistine, as a term applied to the ill-behaved and ignorant, or to persons of low and materialistic ideas, is said to have originated from a sermon preached from this text at Jena in 1693 at the funeral of a student killed in a "town and gown" quarrel. Ever afterwards the students at German universities called the townsmen "Philisters." Matthew Arnold probably heard it there.

13
Of all the places on the map,
Some queer and others queerer,
Arcadia is dear to me,
Philistia is dearer.

They never puzzle me with Greek,
Nor drive me mad with Ibsen;
Yet over forms as fair as Eve's
They wear the gowns of Gibson.
BLISS CARMAN, In Philistia.

14
The Philistines be upon thee, Samson.
Old Testament: Judges, xvi, 9.

The Philistines have invaded the land.
Old Testament: I Samuel, xxiii, 27.

15
Philistia, triumph thou because of me.
Old Testament: Psalms, lx, 8. A plain in southwestern Palestine, the land of commonplace.

16
Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Ascalon, lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice.

Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 20.

Bid Fame be dumb, and tremble to proclaim
In heathen Gath, or Ascalon, our shame,
Lest proud Philistia, lest our haughty foe,
With impious scorn insult our solemn woe.
W. C. SOMERVILLE, The Lamentation of David over Saul and Jonathan.

philistine—a term of contempt applied by riffs to the rest of their species.

LESLIE STEPHEN.

PHILOSOPHY

I—Philosophy: Definitions

1 All good and moral philosophy, as was said, s but a handmaid to religion.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

A little philosophy inclineth man's mind to atheism; but depth in philosophy bringeth men's minds about to religion.

BACON, Essays: Atheism.

A little skill in antiquity inclines a man to Popery; but depth in that study brings him about again to our religion.

THOMAS FULLER, *The Holy State: The True
Church Antiquary*.

3 Metaphysics is the finding of bad reasons for what we believe on instinct.

F. H. BRADLEY, Appearance and Reality. Ch. 14.

Metaphysics I detested. The science appeared to me an elaborate, diabolical invention for mystifying what was clear, and confounding what was intelligible.

W. E. AYTON, Norman Sinclair.

4 Philosophy is common-sense in a dress suit.

OLIVER S. BRASTON, Philosophy.

5 Before Philosophy can teach by Experience, the Philosophy has to be in readiness, the Experience must be gathered and intelligibly recorded.

CARLYLE, Essays: On History.

6 Philosophy, the mother of all the arts. (Philosophia vero, omnium mater artium.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i,
ch. 26, sec. 64.

That great mother of the sciences.

Pt. ii, bk. 1, aphor. 80. Referring to natural philosophy.

7 The true medicine of the mind is philosophy.
(Est profecto animi medicina, philosophia.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii,
ch. 3, sec. 6.

I look to philosophy to provide an antidote to sorrow.

CICERO, Academicarum Quæstionum. Bk. i, ch.
3, sec. 11.

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 3,
l. 55.

8 The science of sciences. (Scientia scientiarum.)

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 12.
Referring to philosophy.

9 Philosophy—the thoughts of men about human thinking, reasoning and imagining, and the real values in human existence.

CHARLES W. ELIOT, Inscription, Public Library,
Warren, Pa.

10 Philosophy is the account which the mind gives to itself of the constitution of the world.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.

11 The beginning of philosophy . . . is a consciousness of a man's own weakness and impotence with reference to the things of real importance in life.

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 11, sec. 1.

Behold the beginning of philosophy!—a recognition of the conflict between the opinions of men.

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 11, sec. 13.

12 What is the first business of one who practises philosophy? To part with self-conceit.
For it is impossible for any one to begin to learn what he thinks he already knows.

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 17, sec. 1.

What is philosophy? Does it not mean preparation to face the things which may come upon us?

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. 10, sec. 5.

13 Philosophy goes no further than probabili-ties, and every assertion keeps a doubt in reserve.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Calvinism.

14 A modest confession of ignorance is the rip-est and last attainment of philosophy.

R. D. HITCHCOCK, *Eternal Atonement: Secret
Things of God*.

15 Philosophy is doubt. (Philosopher c'est doubter.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

The first step towards philosophy is incredulity.

DENIS DIDEROT, Remark, during his last conversation.

16 Philosophy is the highest music. (Φιλοσοφία μὲν οὐσῆς μεγίστης μουσικῆς.)

PLATO, Phædo. Sec. 61.

17 Philosophy is nothing but Discretion.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Philosophy.

18 Philosophy calls for plain living, but not for penance. (Frugalitatem exigit philosophia, non poenam.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. v, sec. 5.

Philosophy does the going, and wisdom is the goal. (Illa venit, ad hanc venitur.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. 89, sec. 7.

19 The philosopher is Nature's pilot. And there you have our difference: to be in hell is to drift: to be in heaven is to steer.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii.

<sup>1</sup> To be a philosopher is not merely to have subtle thoughts, nor even to found a school, but so to love wisdom as to live according to its dictates, a life of simplicity, independence, magnanimity, and trust.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

How can a man be a philosopher and not maintain his vital heat by better methods than other men?

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

II—Philosophy: Apothegms

<sup>2</sup> Those that study particular sciences and neglect philosophy are like Penelope's wooers, who made love to the waiting-women.

ARISTIPPUS. (BACON, Apothegms. No. 189.)

<sup>3</sup> A deep occult philosopher.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 537.

<sup>4</sup> I won't philosophise, and will be read.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 28.

<sup>5</sup> But all be that he was a philosopher,
Yet had he but little gold in coffer.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 297.

<sup>6</sup> The Arabians say that Abul Khain, the mystic, and Abu Ali Seena, the philosopher, conferred together; and, on parting, the philosopher said, "All that he sees I know"; and the mystic said, "All that he knows I see."

EMERSON, Representative Men: Swedenborg.

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. No. 30.

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 3.

Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd?

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 22.

<sup>9</sup> Be a philosopher; but, amidst all your philosophy, be still a man.

DAVID HUME, Essays. No. 39.

<sup>10</sup> The philosophic climate of our time inevitably forces its own clothing on us.

BEN JONSON, The Magnetic Lady. Act i, sc. 1.

It is neither possible nor necessary for all men, nor for many, to be philosophers.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 12.

<sup>12</sup> There are philosophies which are unendurable not because men are cowards, but because they are men.

LUDWIG LEWISOHN, Modern Drama, p. 222.

<sup>13</sup> [They] fetch their precepts from the Cynic tub.

Philosophers in vain so long have sought.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 600.

<sup>15</sup> Philosophy drips gently from his tongue
Who hath three meals a day in guarantee.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, So This Is Arden.

<sup>16</sup> The whole life of the philosopher is a preparation for death. (Τὸ μελέτημα αὐτὸ ἐστὶ τῶν φιλοσόφων, λύσις καὶ χωρισμὸς ψυχῆς ἀπὸ σώματος.)

PLATO, Phædo. Sec. 67D. Cicero, (Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 30, sec. 74) gives it: Tota philosophorum vita commentatio mortis est.

<sup>17</sup> I am safe, he is now philosophizing. (Salvus sum, jam philosophatur.)

<sup>18</sup> There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,

Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 166.

Of your philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 145.

<sup>19</sup> Clearness marks the sincerity of philosophers. (La clarté est la bonne foi des philosophes.)

VAUVENARGUES, Pensées Diverses. No. 365.

<sup>20</sup> Books bear him up awhile, and make him try
To swim with bladders of philosophy.

JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF ROCHESTER, A Satire Against Mankind, l. 20.

<sup>21</sup> In years that bring the philosophic mind.

WORDSWORTH, Ode on the Intimations of Immortality. St. 10.

The bosom-weight, your stubborn gift,
That no philosophy can lift.

WORDSWORTH, Presentiments, l. 25.

III—Philosophy: Its Virtues

<sup>22</sup> The calm lights of mild philosophy.

ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 1, l. 14.

<sup>23</sup> What I have gained from philosophy is the ability to feel at ease in any society.

ARISTIPPUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristippus. Bk. ii, sec. 68.)

I have gained this by philosophy: that I do without being ordered what others do only from fear of the law.

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Bk. v, sec. 20.)

I have gained at least this from philosophy: to be prepared for every fortune.

DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Sec. 63.)

1 Natural philosophy, next to the word of God, is the surest medicine for superstition.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. ii, bk. 1, aphor. 89.

2 To take things as they be—
That's my philosophy.

No use to holler, mope, or cuss—

If they was changed they might be wuss.

JOHN KENDRICK BANGS, A Philosopher.

To take what passes in good part
And keep the hiccups from the heart.

JOHN BYROM, Careless Content.

3 Sublime Philosophy!
Thou art the patriarch's ladder, reaching
heaven;

And bright with beckoning angels.

BULWER-LYTTON, Richelieu. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 4.

4 Philosophy can never be praised as much as she deserves, since she enables every man who obeys her precepts to pass every season of his life free from worry. (Numquam igitur laudari satis digne philosophia poterit, cui qui pareat omne tempus ætatis sine molestia possit degere.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. i, sec. 2.

Divine philosophy! by whose pure light
We first distinguish, then pursue the right.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 254. (Gifford, tr.)

O philosophy, life's guide! O searcher-out of virtue and expeller of vice! What would we and every age of men have been without thee?

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 2, sec. 5.

5 Philosophy! the great and only heir
Of all the human knowledge which has been Unforfeited by man's rebellious sin.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, To the Royal Society.

6 If you would enjoy real freedom, you must be the slave of philosophy. (Philosophiæ servas oportet, ut tibi contingat vera libertas.)

EPICURUS, Fragments. No. 199. (SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. viii, sec. 7.)

7 But above all 'tis pleasantest to get
The top of high philosophy, and sit
On the calm, peaceful, flourishing head of it.

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. ii, l. 6. (Creech, tr.)

8 How charming is divine Philosophy!

Not harsh, and crabbed as dull fools suppose,
But musical as is Apollo's lute,
And a perpetual feast of nectar'd sweets,
Where no crude surfeit reigns.

MILTON, Comus, l. 476.

9 The first thing which philosophy attempts to give is fellow-feeling with all men. (Hoc primum philosophia promittit, sensum communem.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. v, sec. 4.

If there is any good in philosophy, it is this—that it never looks into pedigrees. (Si quid est aliud in philosophia boni, hoc est, quod stemma non inspicit.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xlv, sec. 1.

10 Without philosophy the mind is sickly, and the body, too, though it may be very powerful, is strong only as that of a madman is strong.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xv, sec. 2.

Life is the gift of the immortal gods, but living well is the gift of philosophy. (Deorum immortalium munus sit quod vivimus, philosophiæ quod bene vivimus.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xc, sec. 1.

11 To suck the sweets of sweet philosophy.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 1, l. 28.

IV—Philosophy: Its Faults

12 As for the philosophers, they make imaginary laws for imaginary commonwealths; and their discourses are as the stars, which give little light, because they are so high.

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning: Civil Knowledge.

13 Beside, he was a shrewd philosopher,
And had read ev'ry text and gloss over;
Whate'er the crabbed'st author hath,
He understood b' implicit faith.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 127.

There was an ancient sage philosopher,
That had read Alexander Ross over,
And swore the world, as he could prove,
Was made of fighting and of love.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 1.

14 No statement is too absurd for some philosophers to make. (Nihil tam absurde dici potest quod non dicatur ab aliquo philosophorum.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 58, sec. 119.

15 I hate the philosopher who is not wise for himself. (Μισῶ σοφιστὴν, ὅστις οὐχ αὐτῷ σοφός.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 273.

Many talk like philosophers and live like fools.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>2</sup> This same philosophy is a good horse in the stable, but an arrant jade on a journey.
GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act i.

<sup>3</sup> Do not all charms fly
At the mere touch of cold philosophy?
KEATS, Lamia. Pt. ii, l. 229.

Philosophy will clip an Angel's wings,
Conquer all mysteries by rule and line,
Empty the haunted air, the gnomed mine—
Unweave a rainbow.

KEATS, Lamia. Pt. ii, l. 234.

<sup>4</sup> Undoubtedly the study of the more abstruse regions of philosophy . . . always seems to have included an element not very much removed from a sort of insanity.

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry. No. 34.

<sup>5</sup> Philosophy triumphs easily over past and future evils, but present evils triumph over it. (La philosophie triomphe aisément des maux passés et des maux à venir, mais les maux présents triomphent d'elle.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 22.

For there was never yet philosopher
That could endure the toothache patiently.

PIETY

<sup>15</sup> One's piety is best displayed in his pursuits.

<sup>16</sup> The weaker sex, to piety more prone.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, EARL OF STIRLING,
Doomsday: The Fifth Hour. St. 55.

Piety is sweet to infant minds.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 799.

<sup>17</sup> One day lived after the perfect rule of piety, is to be preferred before sinning immortality.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, To a Friend. Sec. 29.

<sup>18</sup> Religious persecution may shield itself under the guise of a mistaken and overzealous piety.

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings, 17 Feb., 1788.

<sup>19</sup> There's nothing so absurd or vain,
Or barbarous, or inhumane,

But if it lay the least pretence
To piety and godliness,
Or tender-hearted conscience,

And zeal for gospel-truths profess,
Does sacred instantly commence.

SAMUEL BUTLER, On a Hypocritical Nonconformist. St. 1.

<sup>20</sup> Piety and holiness of life will win the favor of the gods. (Deos placetis pietas efficit et sanctitas.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 3, sec. 11.

Piety is the foundation of all virtues. (Pietas fundamentum est omnium virtutum.)

CICERO, Pro Cnæo Plancio. Sec. 12.

<sup>21</sup> No solemn, sanctimonious face I pull,
Nor think I'm pious when I'm only bilious.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 43.

"Rogue that I am," he whispers to himself,
"I lie—I cheat—do anything for pelf,
But who on earth can say I am not pious?"

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 186.

1 No piety delays the wrinkles. (Nec pietas moram Rugis.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 14, l. 1.

2 Piety is the tinfoil of pretense.

3 There is no piety but amongst the poor.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, On the Content He Enjoys in the Muses.

4 Glistening semblances of piety.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 117.

Thou villain, thou art full of piety.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 81.

O cruel, irreligious piety!

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 130.

5 From Piety, whose soul sincere

Fears God and knows no other fear.

WILLIAM SMYTH, Ode for the Installation of the Duke of Gloucester as Chancellor of Cambridge.

6 Volumes might be written upon the impiety of the pious.

PILGRIM FATHERS

See also Puritans

7 Wild was the day; the wintry sea
Moaned sadly on New England's strand,

When first the thoughtful and the free,
Our fathers, trod the desert land.

BRYANT, The Twenty-Second of December.

8 They fell upon an ungenial climate . . . that called out the best energies of the men, and of the women too, to get a mere subsistence out of the soil. In their efforts to do that, they cultivated industry and frugality at the same time—which is the real foundation of the greatness of the Pilgrims.

ULYSSES S. GRANT, Speech, New England Society Dinner, 22 Dec., 1880.

9 What sought they thus afar?
Bright jewels of the mine?

The wealth of seas, the spoils of war?
—They sought a faith's pure shrine!

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, The Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers.

Ay, call it holy ground,
The soil where first they trod!

They have left unstained what there they found—

Freedom to worship God!

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, The Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers.

10 O Exile of the wrath of kings!
O Pilgrim Ark of Liberty!

The refuge of divinest things,
Their record must abide in thee!

JULIA WARD HOWE, Our Country.

11 Down to the Plymouth Rock, that had been to their feet as a doorstep

Into a world unknown,—the corner-stone of a nation!

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish. Pt. v, st. 2.

12 Our Pilgrim stock wuz pithed with hardihood.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 6.

They talk about their Pilgrim blood,
Their birthright high and holy!

A mountain-stream that ends in mud
Methinks is melancholy.

J. R. LOWELL, Interview with Miles Standish.

13 Answer—thou refuge of the freeman's need—
Thou for whose destinies no kings looked out,

Nor sages to resolve some mighty doubt—
Thou simple Mayflower of the salt-sea mead!

RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, Columbus and the Mayflower.

14 Give it only the fulcrum of Plymouth Rock, an idea will upheave the continent.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, New York, 21 Jan., 1863.

Neither do I acknowledge the right of Plymouth to the whole rock. No, the rock underlies all America: it only crops out here.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, dinner of the Pilgrim Society at Plymouth, 21 Dec., 1855.

15 The Pilgrim spirit has not fled:
It walks in noon's broad light;

And it watches the bed of the glorious dead,
With the holy stars by night.

JOHN PIERPONT, The Pilgrim Fathers.

16 The Pilgrims rose, at this, God's word,
And sailed the wintry seas:

With their own flesh nor blood conferred,
Nor thought of wealth or ease.

They left the towers of Leyden town,
They left the Zuyder Zee;

And where they cast their anchor down,
Rose Freedom's realm to be.

JEREMIAH EAMES RANKIN, The Word of God to Leyden Came.

PINE

17 Desert-loving pine, whose emerald scalp
Nods to the storm.

BYRON, Prophecy of Dante. Canto ii, l. 63.

18 Risest from forth thy silent sea of pines.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Hymn before Sunrise in the Vale of Chamouni.

<sup>1</sup> 'Twas on the inner bark, stripped from the pine,

Our father pencilled this epistle rare.

THOMAS D'URFEY, What-Cheer. Canto ii.

<sup>2</sup> As sunbeams stream through liberal space
And nothing jostle or displace,
So waved the pine-tree through my thought
And fanned the dreams it never brought.

EMERSON, Woodnotes. Pt. ii.

Who liveth by the rugged pine
Foundeth a heroic line;
Who liveth in the palace hall
Waneth fast and spendeth all.

EMERSON, Woodnotes. Pt. ii.

<sup>3</sup> The pine wishes herself a shrub when the axe is at her root.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4705.

<sup>4</sup> Like two cathedral towers these stately pines Uplift their fretted summits tipped with cones;

The arch beneath them is not built with stones,

Not Art but Nature traced these lovely lines,
And carved this graceful arabesque of vines;
No organ but the wind here sighs and moans,
No sepulchre conceals a martyr's bones,
No marble bishop on his tomb reclines.

Enter! the pavement, carpeted with leaves,
Gives back a softened echo to thy tread!
Listen! the choir is singing; all the birds,
In leafy galleries beneath the eaves,
Are singing! listen, ere the sound be fled,
And learn there may be worship without words.

LONGFELLOW, My Cathedral.

Yes, the pine is the mother of legends; what food
For their grim roots is left when the thousand-year-old wood,

The dim-aisled cathedral, whose tall arches
spring

Light, sinewy, graceful.

J. R. LOWELL, The Growth of the Legend.

Under the yaller pines I house,
When sunshine makes 'em all sweet-scented,
An' hear among their furry boughs

The baskin' west-wind purr contented.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 10.

<sup>5</sup> The archèd walks of twilight groves,
And shadows brown that Sylvan loves,
Of pine.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 133.

<sup>6</sup> Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge,
Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle,
Under whose shade the ramping lion slept,
Whose top-branch overpeer'd Jove's spreading tree,

And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 2, l. 11.

Ay me! the bark peel'd from the lofty pine,
His leaves will wither and his sap decay.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1167.

<sup>7</sup> And wind, that grand old harper, smote
His thunder-harp of pines.

ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life Drama.

<sup>8</sup> Here also grew the rougher rinded pine,
The great Argoan ship's brave ornament,
Whom golden fleece did make an heavenly sign;

Which coveting, with his high top's extent,
To make the mountains touch the stars divine,
Decks all the forest with embellishment.

EDMUND SPENSER, Virgils Gnat, l. 209.

The sailing pine.

SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto i,
st. 8.

<sup>9</sup> Ancient Pines,
Ye bear no record of the years of man.
Spring is your sole historian.

BAYARD TAYLOR, The Pine Forest of Monterey.

PIONEER

<sup>10</sup> Pioneering does not pay.

ANDREW CARNEGIE, (Hendrick, Life.)

<sup>11</sup> There are pioneer souls' that blaze their paths
Where highways never ran.

SAM WALTER FOSS, The House by the Side of the Road.

<sup>12</sup> O willing hearts turned quick to clay,
Glad lovers holding death in scorn,
Out of the lives ye cast away
The coming race is born.

LAURENCE HOUSMAN, The Settlers.

<sup>13</sup> There, till the vision he foresaw,
Splendid and whole arise,
And unimagined Empires draw
To council 'neath his skies,
The immense and brooding Spirit still Shall quicken and control.

Living he was the land, and dead,
His soul shall be her soul.

RUDYARD KIPLING, C. J. Rhodes. Read at his burial, 10 April, 1902.

The gull shall whistle in his wake, the blind wave break in fire.

He shall fulfil God's utmost will, unknowing His desire.

And he shall see old planets change and alien stars arise,

And give the gale his seaworn sail in shadow of new skies.

Strong lust of gear shall drive him forth and hunger arm his hand,

To win his food from the desert rude, his pitance from the sand.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Voortrekker.

1 Shall I tell you who he is, this key figure in the arch of our enterprise? That slender, dauntless, plodding, modest figure is the American pioneer. . . . His is this one glory—he found the way.

FRANKLIN K. LANE, The American Pioneer.

2 His echoing axe the settler swung
Amid the sea-like solitude,
And, rushing, thundering, down were flung
The Titans of the wood. . . .
Humble the lot, yet his the race,
When Liberty sent forth her cry,
Who thronged in conflict's deadliest place,
To fight—to bleed—to die!

ALFRED B. STREET, The Settler.

3 Their fame shrinks not to names and dates
On votive stone, the prey of time;—
Behold where monumental States
Immortalize their lives sublime.
W. H. VENABLE, The Founders of Ohio.

4 Conquering, holding, daring, venturing as we go the unknown ways,
Pioneers! O pioneers!
WALT WHITMAN, Pioneers! O Pioneers.

O Pioneers!
WILLA CATHER. Title of novel.

5 The paths to the house I seek to make,
But leave to those to come the house itself.

MILTON, Sonnets: To a Virtuous Lady.

24 I have no longing for things great and fair, Beauty and strength and grace of word or deed;
For all sweet things my soul has ceased to care;
Infinite pity—that is all its need.
J. B. B. NICHOLS, During Music.

1 I warn you beforehand so to have pity on others that others may not have to take pity on you. (Præmonstro tibi Ut ita te aliorum miserescat, ne tui alios misereat.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 61.

2 She knows as well as anyone
That Pity, having played, soon tires.

E. A. ROBINSON, The Poor Relation.

3 'Tis true: 'tis pity; And pity 'tis 'tis true.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 97.

'Twas strange, 'twas passing strange.

'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 160.

But yet the pity of it, Iago! O Iago, the pity of it, Iago!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 206.

4 My pity hath been balm to heal their wounds.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 8, l. 41.

5 And pluck commiseration of his state
From brassy bosoms and rough hearts of flint.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 30.

6 Soft pity enters at an iron gate.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 595.

No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 2, l. 71.

My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 270.

Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 66.

7 If I die, no soul shall pity me:

Nay, wherefore should they, since that I myself

Find in myself no pity to myself.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 201.

Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,

That sees into the bottom of my grief?

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 198.

8 Men must learn now with pity to dispense;
For policy sits above conscience.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 93.

Pity is the virtue of the law,
And none but tyrants use it cruelly.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 8.

9 Nothing but the Infinite pity is sufficient for the infinite pathos of human life.

10 Wide and sweet and glorious as compassion.

SWINBURNE, Dunwich. Pt. i, st. 8.

11 So left alone, the passions of her mind,

As winds from all the compass shift and blow,

Made war upon each other for an hour,

Till pity won.

TENNYSON, Godiva, l. 32.

12 O brother man! fold to thy heart thy brother.

Where pity dwells, the peace of God is there.

J. G. WHITTIER, Worship. St. 13.

PLACE

13 It is not the places that grace men, but men the places.

AGESILAÛS, Remark, as he accepted an inferior seat. (PLUTARCH, Laconic Apothegms.)

No post the man Ennobles;—man the post!

BULWER-LYTON, King Arthur. Bk. xii.

The place does not make the man, nor the sceptre the king. Greatness is from within.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Voltaire.

Where Macgregor sits, there is the head of the table.

SIR WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Quoted by Emerson, The American Scholar, as "Macdonald."

14 Nothing is more annoying than a low man raised to a high position. (Asperius nihil est humili cum surgit in altum.)

CLAUDIAN, In Eutropium. Bk. i, l. 181.

15 The prerogative of place.

GROBIANUS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 4.

16 He who thinks his place below him will certainly be below his place.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 182.

17 When baseness is exalted, do not bate
The place its Honour, for the person's sake.
The shrine is that which thou dost venerate;
And not the beast, that bears it on his back.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 45.

18 All things have their place, knew we how to place them.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

A place for everything, and everything in its place.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 66.

19 Each man has his own place. (Est lucus uni Cuique suus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 9, l. 50.

20 Let each keep to the place properly allotted to it. (Singula quæque locum teneant sortita decentem.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 92.

Accept the place the divine providence has found for you.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

Sit in your place, and none can make you rise.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

1 God attributes to place
No sanctity, if none be thither brought
By men who there frequent.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 832.

2 There is no greater immorality than to occupy a place you cannot fill.
NAPOLEON I, to his brother Joseph, King of Spain. (BERCOVICI, in Liberty, 6 Dec., 1930.)

3 From lowest place when virtuous things proceed,
The place is dignified by the doer's deed.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 3, l. 132.

There's place and means for every man alive.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
iv, sc. 3, l. 375.

4 Towering in her pride of place.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 12.

5 O place, O form,
How often dost thou with thy case, thy habit,
Wrench awe from fools!
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii,
sc. 4, l. 12.

O place and greatness! millions of false eyes
Are stuck upon thee.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 60.

6 It is a maxim, that those to whom everybody allows the second place have an undoubted title to the first.
SWIFT, Tale of a Tub: Dedication.

I—Plagiarism: Condemnation

7 They lard their lean books with the fat of others' works.
ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy:
Democritus to the Reader.

8 Who, to patch up his fame—or fill his purse—
Still pilfers wretched plans, and makes them
worse;
Like gypsies, lest the stolen brat be known,
Defacing first, then claiming for his own.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 232.

Steal!—to be sure they may; and egad, serve your best thoughts as gypsies do stolen children, disfigure them to make 'em pass for their own.
SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act i, sc. 1.

[Witches] steal young children out of their cradles, ministerium dæmonum, and put deformed in their rooms, which we call changelings.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. ii, mem. 1, subs. 3.

9 To copy beauties, forfeits all pretence
To fame—to copy faults, is want of sense.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 457.

10 Because they commonly make use of treasure found in books, as of other treasure belonging to the dead and hidden underground; for they dispose of both with great secrecy, de-facing the shape and image of the one as much as of the other.

SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Gondibert: Preface.

The Plagiarism of orators is the art, or an ingenious and easy mode, which some adroitly employ, to change, or disguise, all sorts of speeches of their own composition, or that of other authors, for their pleasure, or their utility; in such a manner that it becomes impossible even for the author himself to recognise his own work, his own genius, and his own style, so skilfully shall the whole be disguised.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature:
Professors of Plagiarism. Quoted.

11 They steal my thunder!
JOHN DENNIS.

Our author, for the advantage of this play [Appius and Virginia], had invented a new species of thunder, . . . the very sort that at present is used in the theatre. The tragedy itself was coldly received, notwithstanding such assistance, and was acted but a short time.
Some nights after, Mr. Dennis, being in the pit at the representation of Macbeth, heard his own thunder made use of; upon which he rose in a violent passion, and exclaimed, with an oath, that it was his thunder. "See how the rascals use me!" said he. "They will not let my play run, and yet they steal my thunder!"
Biographia Britannica. Vol. v, p. 103.

12 He that readeth good writers and picks out their flowers for his own nose, is like a fool.
STEPHEN GOSSON, *The School of Abuse: Loiter-

13 Nothing is stolen: my Muse, though mean,
Draws from the spring she finds within.
MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 13.

14 My books need no title or judge to prove them; your page stares you in the face and says, "You are a thief!" (Indice non opus dicitque tibi tua pagina "Fur es.")

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 53.

Why, simpleton, do you mix your verses with mine? What have you to do, foolish man, with writings that convict you of theft? Why do you attempt to associate foxes with lions, and make owls pass for eagles? Though you had one of Ladas's legs, you would not be able, blockhead,
to run with the other leg of wood.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, ep. 100.

15 Every generation has the privilege of standing on the shoulders of the generation that went before; but it has no right to pick the pockets of the first-comer.

BRANDER MATTHEWS, Recreations of an Anthologist, p. 20.

1 For such kind of borrowing as this, if it be not bettered by the borrower, among good authors is accounted plagiarism.

MOLIERE, taking possession of and using several times in his Les Fourberies de Scapin, the famous phrase, "What the devil was he doing in that galley?" (Que diable allait-il faire dans cette galère?), which he claimed Cyrano de Bergerac had stolen from him and used in his Pédant Joué (Act ii, sc. 4). Emerson (Letters and Social Aims) attributed the mot to Marmontel.

3 He liked those literary cooks
Who skim the cream of others' books;
And ruin half an author's graces
By plucking bon-mots from their places.

HANNAH MORE, Florio, the Bas-Bleu.

4 It brings praise to me that you and those like you, copy my words into your books. (Mihi parta laus est, quod tu, quod similes tui, Vestras in chartas verba transfertis mea.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis: Bk. i, Dedication. Sec. 22.

6 Next o'er his books his eyes began to roll,
In pleasing memory of all he stole;
How here he sipp'd, how there he plunder'd
snug,

And suck'd all o'er like an industrious bug.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 127.

Little would be left you, I'm afraid,
If all your debts to Greece and Rome were paid.

POPE, Prologue, Designed for Mr. D'Urfey's Last Play, l. 13.

7 Most writers steal a good thing when they can,

And when 'tis safely got 'tis worth the winning.

The worst of 't is we now and then detect 'em,

Before they ever dream that we suspect 'em.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, Diego de Montillo.

8 Libertas et natale solum:

Fine words! I wonder where you stole 'em.

SWIFT, Verses Occasioned by Whitshed's Motto on His Coach, 1724. Whitshed was the Chief-Justice who twice prosecuted the "Drapier." The motto is mentioned repeatedly in the Drapier Letters.

9 I wrote these lines, another wears the bays:
Thus you for others build your nests, O birds:
Thus you for others bear your fleece, O sheep:
Thus you for others honey make, O bees:
Thus you for others drag the plough, O kine!
(Hos ego versiculos feci, tulit alter honores:
Sic vos non vobis nidificatis aves:

Sic vos non vobis vellera fertis oves:

Sic vos non vobis mellificatis apes:

Sic vos non vobis fertis arata boves.)

VERGIL, Epigram. (CLAUDIUS DONATUS, Life of Vergil, p. 17.) The story is that a versifier named Bathyllus had stolen a distich of Vergil's in honor of Augustus, and, in the presence of the Emperor, Vergil wrote beneath the distich four lines beginning, "Sic vos non vobis," and challenged Bathyllus to complete them. He was unable to do so, and Vergil did it as above.

The seed ye sow, another reaps;
The wealth ye find, another keeps;
The robe ye weave, another wears;
The arms ye forge, another bears.

SHELLEY, Song to the Men of England.

10 Read my little fable:

He that runs may read.

Most can raise the flowers now,
For all have got the seed.

GEORGE WITHER, The Shepherd's Hunting.

11 Who borrow much, then fairly make it known,
And damn it with improvements of their own.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. iii, l. 23.

II—Plagiarism: Excuse

12 We can say nothing but what has been said.
. . . Our poets steal from Homer. . . Our storydressers do as much; he that comes last is commonly best.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

When 'Omer smote 'is bloomin' lyre,
He'd 'eard men sing by land an' sea;
An' what he thought 'e might require,
'E went an' took—the same as me!

RUDYARD KIPLING, Barrack-Room Ballads: Introduction.

Thus the artless songs I sing
Do not deal with anything
New or never said before.

RUDYARD KIPLING, A General Summary.

That's of no consequence; all that can be said is, that two people happened to hit on the same thought—and Shakespeare made use of it first, that's all.

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act iii, sc. 1.

1 Then why should those who pick and choose
The best of all the best compose,
And join it by Mosaic art,
In graceful order, part to part,
To make the whole in beauty suit,
Not merit as complete repute
As those who with less art and pains
Can do it with their native brains?

SAMUEL BUTLER, Satire upon Plagiarists, l. 109.

2 It is as difficult to appropriate the thoughts of others as it is to invent.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

3 It has come to be practically a sort of rule in literature, that a man, having once shown himself capable of original writing, is entitled thenceforth to steal from the writings of others at discretion. Thought is the property of him who can entertain it, and of him who can adequately place it.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Shakespeare.

Every man is a borrower and a mimic, life is theatrical and literature a quotation.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success.

Take the whole range of imaginative literature, and we are all wholesale borrowers. In every matter that relates to invention, to use, or beauty or form, we are borrowers.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Lecture: The Lost Arts.

4 You have a memory that would convict any author of plagiarism in any court of literature in the world.

JOHN HAWKESWORTH, Remark, to Dr. Johnson. (KEARSLEY, Johnsoniana, 600.)

5 Though old the thought and oft exprest,
'Tis his at last who says it best.

J. R. LOWELL, For an Autograph. St. 1.

6 The bees pillage the flowers here and there but they make honey of them which is all their own; it is no longer thyme or marjo-

his own.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 25.

Amongst so many borrowed things, I am glad

12 All the makers of dictionaries, all compilers who do nothing else than repeat backwards and forwards the opinions, the errors, the impostures, and the truths already printed,
we may term plagiarists; but honest plagiarists, who arrogate not the merit of invention.

PLATITUDE

13 I am not fond of uttering platitudes
In stained-glass attitudes.

Who, when he bestrides the crupper
Of Pegasus, gets the upper Hand of poets more renowned; . . .
Suited to all times and latitudes,

By the everlasting platitudes.

RICHARD HENRY STODDARD, Proverbial Philosophy.

<sup>1</sup> In modern life nothing produces such an effect as a good platitude. It makes the whole world kin.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act i.

PLATO

<sup>2</sup> And as when Plato did in the cradle thrive,
Bees to his lips brought honey from their hive.

WILLIAM BROWNE, Britannia's Pastorals. Pt. ii.

<sup>3</sup> Oh, Plato! Plato! you have paved the way,
With your confounded fantasies, to more
Immoral conduct by the fancied sway
Your system feigns o'er the controlless core
Of human hearts, than all the long array
Of poets and romancers.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 116.

An attachment à la Plato for a bashful young potato, or a not-too-French French bean.

W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act i.

<sup>4</sup> From a wedding-banquet he has passed to that city which he had founded for himself and planted in the sky.

DIODEGENES LAERTIUS, Epitaph on Plato. (Bk. iii, sec. 45.) Plato is said to have died at a wedding-banquet.

<sup>5</sup> Out of Plato come all things that are still written and debated among men of thought.
Great havoc makes he among our originalities.
. . . Plato is philosophy and philosophy
Plato,—at once the glory and the shame of mankind, since neither Saxon nor Roman have availed to add any idea to his categories.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.

Plato has no external biography. If he had lover, wife, or children, we hear nothing of them. He ground them all into paint.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.

<sup>10</sup> The great pleasure in life is doing what people say you cannot do.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Literary Studies. Vol. i, p. 171.

<sup>11</sup> Pleasure may perfect us as truly as prayer.

W. E. CHANNING, Note-Book: Joy.

<sup>12</sup> Nor do I call pleasures idleness, or time lost, provided they are the pleasures of a rational being.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 30 Oct., 1747.

Distinguish carefully between the pleasures of a man of fashion, and the vices of a scoundrel; pursue the former, and abhor the latter, like a man of sense.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 25 Jan., 1750.

Pleasure must not, nay, cannot, be the business of a man of sense and character; but it may be,
and is, his relief, his reward.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 8 May, 1750.

<sup>13</sup> The pleasure of life is according to the man that lives it, and not according to the work or place.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

<sup>14</sup> Wherefore we call pleasure the alpha and omega of a blessed life. Pleasure is our first and kindred good. ("Ὅταν δὲ μὴ ἀλγῶμεν, οὐκέτι

EPICURUS, Letter to Menæceus. (DIODEGENES
LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 128.)

When we say, then, that pleasure is the end and aim of life, we do not mean the pleasures of the prodigal or the pleasures of sensuality. . .
By pleasure we mean the absence of pain in the body and of trouble in the soul.

EPICURUS, Letter to Menæceus. (DIODEGENES
LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 131.)

Some sages have defin'd

Pleasure the sov'reign bliss of humankind.

POPE, January and May, l. 440.

I was (as the poet says) as pleased as Punch.

THOMAS MOORE, Letter to Lady Donegal.

13 It is the part of the wise man to resist pleasures, but of a foolish one to be a slave to them.

EPICETETUS, Fragments. No. 111.

14 Follow pleasure, and then will pleasure flee; Flee pleasure, and pleasure will follow thee.

HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10.

Thus pleasure oft eludes our grasp,
Just when we think to grip her;
And hunting after Happiness
We only hunt a slipper.

THOMAS HOOD, The Epping Hunt: Moral.

Pleasure is very seldom found where it is sought.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 58.

In life there is nothing more unexpected and surprising than the arrivals and departures of pleasure. If we find it in one place to-day, it is vain to seek it there to-morrow. You can not lay a trap for it.

ALEXANDER SMITH, City Poem: A Boy's Dream.

Pleasure-seekers never find theirs.

What is the pulse of this so busy world?
The love of pleasure: that, thro' ev'ry vein,

Throws motion, warmth, and shuts out death from life.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 533.

The love of pleasure is man's eldest-born,
Born in his cradle, living to his tomb;
Wisdom, her younger sister, tho' more grave,
Was meant to minister, and not to mar,
Imperial pleasure, queen of human hearts.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 595.

IV—Pleasure: Its Sting

1 No more deadly curse has been given by nature to man than carnal pleasure. From it come treason and overthrow of states. There is no criminal purpose and no evil deed which the lust for pleasure will not drive men to undertake. Since nature—or some god, perhaps—has given to man nothing more excellent than his intellect, therefore this divine gift has no deadlier foe than pleasure; for where lust holds despotic sway self-control has no place, and in pleasure's realm there is not a single spot where virtue can put her foot.

ARCHYTAS OF TARENTUM. (CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xii, sec. 39.)

There is nothing so hateful and so pernicious as pleasure, since, if indulged in too much and too long, it turns the light of the soul into utter darkness. (Quocirca nihil esse tam detestabile tamque pestiferum quam voluptatem, si quidem ea, cum major esset longior, omne animi lumen exstingueret.)

ARCHYTAS OF TARENTUM. (CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xii, sec. 41.)

Carnal pleasure hinders deliberation, is at war with reason, blindfolds the eyes of the mind, so to speak, and has no fellowship with virtue. (Impedit consilium voluptas, rationi inimica est, mentis ut ita dicam præstringit oculos, nec habet ullum cum virtute commercium.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xii, sec. 42.

2 Punish not thyself with pleasure; glut not thy sense with palative delights.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. ii, sec. 1.

3 Pleasure (whene'er she sings, at least)'s a siren,

That lures, to flay alive, the young beginner.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 36.

Though sages may pour out their wisdom's treasure,

There is no sterner moralist than Pleasure.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 65.

4 Pleasure is the rock which most young people split upon: they launch out with crowded sails in quest of it, but without a compass to direct their course, or reason sufficient to steer the vessel.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 March, 1747.

Every virtue, they say, has its kindred vice; every pleasure, I am sure, has its neighbouring disgrace.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 Feb., 1750.

5 In everything satiety closely follows the greatest pleasures. (Omnibus in rebus voluptatibus maximis fastidium finitimum est.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. iii, sec. 25.

But not even pleasure to excess is good:
What most elates then sinks the soul as low.

THOMSON, Castle of Indolence. Canto i, st. 63.

6 And pleasure brings as surely in her train
Remorse, and Sorrow, and vindictive Pain.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 43.

Pleasure admitted in undue degree
Enslaves the will, nor leaves the judgment free.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 269.

Pleasure is labour too, and tires as much.

COWPER, Hope, l. 20.

Pleasure, . . .

That reeling goddess with the zoneless waist
And wand'ring eyes, still leaning on the arm
Of Novelty, her fickle frail support.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 51.

7 No pleasure is in itself evil, but the things which produce certain pleasures entail annoyance many times greater than the pleasures themselves.

EPICURUS, Souvan Maxims. No. 8.

8 Fly that present joy,
Which in time will breed annoy.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, 99. (1591)

Fell all present pleasure that gives the future pain.

WODROEPHE, Spared Hours, 277. (1623)

Fly the pleasure that bites tomorrow.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

9 In war, hunting, and love,
Men for one pleasure a thousand griefs prove.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

A life of pleasure is therefore the most unpleasing life in the world.

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. No. 44.

10 From the midst of the fountains of pleasures there rises something of bitterness which torments us amid the very flowers. (Medio de fonte leporum Surgit amari aliquid, quod in ipsis floribus angat.)

4 Sure as night follows day,
Death treads in pleasure's footsteps round the world,
When pleasure treads the paths which reason shuns.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 863.

V—Pleasure: Its Transitoriness

5 The race of delight is short, and pleasures have mutable faces.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. ii, sec. 1.

6 But pleasures are like poppies spread:
You seize the flow'r, its bloom is shed;
Or like the snow falls in the river,
A moment white—then melts for ever.

BURNS, Tam o' Shanter, l. 59.

7 Where is delight? and what are pleasures now?—

Moths that a garment fret.

MARY E. COLERIDGE, Mandragora.

8 'Tis a sight to engage me, if anything can,

To muse on the perishing pleasures of man;
Though his life be a dream, his enjoyments,
I see,

Have a being less durable even than he.

WILLIAM COWPER, The Poplar-Field.

Some pleasures live a month and some a year,
But short the date of all we gather here.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 459.

9 The shortest pleasures are the sweetest.

FARQUHAR, The Twin Rivals. Act iii, sc. 3.

10 Play the man.

Look not on pleasures as they come, but go.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 72.

11 The roses of pleasure seldom last long enough to adorn the brow of him who plucks them; for they are the only roses which do not retain their sweetness after they have lost their beauty.

HANNAH MORE, Essays: On Dissipation.

16 Pleasure comes, but not to stay;
Even this shall pass away.

THEODORE TILTON, All Things Shall Pass Away.

17 Pleasure that most enchants us
Seems the soonest done;
What is life with all it grants us,
But a hunting run?

G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, A Lay of the Ranston Bloodhounds.

VI—Pleasure: The Art of Pleasing

18 He more had pleased us had he pleased us less.

ADDISON, English Poets. Referring to Cowley.

19 I would rather please one good man than many bad. (Bono probari malo quam multis malis.)

PITTACUS. (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententiæ, l. 9.)

20 He pleases every one but can not please himself. (Il plaît à tout le monde et ne saurait se plaire.)

BOILEAU, Satires, ii. Referring to Molière.

1 Most arts require long study and application; but the most useful of all, that of pleasing, only the desire.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 8 May, 1750.

He makes people pleased with him by first making them pleased with themselves.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 18 Jan., 1750.

Pleasure is necessarily reciprocal; no one feels, who does not at the same time give it. To be pleased one must please.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 July, 1750.

The art of pleasing consists in being pleased.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Round Table, i, 115.

For we that live to please must please to live.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Prologue on the Opening of the Drury Lane Theatre.

Men seldom give pleasure where they are not pleased themselves.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 74.

They who are pleased themselves must always please.

THOMSON, Castle of Indolence. Canto i, st. 15.

2 Too much desire to please pleasure divorces.

5 Thus always teasing others, always teas'd,
His only pleasure is—to be displeas'd.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 345.

6 Whate'er he did was done with so much ease,
In him alone, 'twas natural to please.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 27.

Whoever would be pleased and please,
Must do what others do with ease.

R. C. NUGENT, Epistle to a Lady.

7 He must rise early, yea, not at all go to bed,
who will have every one's good word.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy War. Bk. iv, ch. 14. (1639)

He had need rise betimes that would please everybody.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 132. (1670) The French form is, "Qui veut plaire à tout le monde doit se lever de bonne heure."

He that all men will please shall never find ease.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 282. (1639)

He that would please all and himself too,
Undertakes what he cannot do.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 5. (1670)

Who seeks to please all men each way,
And not himself offend,
He may begin his work to-day,
But God knows where he'll end.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, Epigrams.

8 He is very foolish who aims at pleasing all the world and his father. (Est bien fou du cerveau qui pretend contenter tout le monde et son père.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 1.

9 He pleased you by not studying to please.

GEORGE LYTTTELTON, Progress of Love. Pt. iii.

10 The man who gives pleasure is as charitable as he who relieves suffering.

14 In great affairs, it is difficult to please all. (Ἐν μεγάλοις πᾶσιν ἀδύνατον χαλεπόν.)

SOLON. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 25.)

15 For not even Jove can please all, whether he rains or does not rain. (Οὐδὲ γὰρ ὁ Ζεὺς οὐθ' ὕων οὐθ' ἀνέχων πάντας ἀνδάνει.)

THEOGNIS, Elegies. No. 26.

VII—Pleasure: The Man of Pleasure

16 A man of pleasure, in the vulgar acceptation of that phrase, means only a beastly drunkard, an abandoned whoremaster, and a profligate swearer and curser.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 March, 1747.

The true pleasures of a gentleman are those of the table, but within the bound of moderation; good company, that is to say, people of merit; moderate play, which amuses, without any interested views; and sprightly gallant conversations with women of fashion and sense.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 24 Feb., 1747.

No man takes pleasures truly who does not earn them by previous business; and few people do business well who do nothing else.

CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 7 Aug., 1749.

I know a great many men, who call themselves men of pleasure, but who, in truth, have none.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 Feb., 1750.

No blinder bigot, I maintain it still,
Than he who must have pleasure, come what will.

COWPER, Hope, l. 594.

Who cannot live on twenty pound a year,
Cannot on forty: he's a man of pleasure,
A kind of thing that's for itself too dear.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 30.

A life of pleasure requires an aristocratic setting to make it interesting or really conceivable.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Life of Reason. Vol. ii, p. 135.

A man devoted to pleasure. (Homo voluptati obsequens.)

TERENCE, Hecyra, l. 459. (Act iii, sc. 5.)

POE, EDGAR ALLAN

Ah, much he suffered in his day:
He knelt with Virtue, kissed with Sin—
Wild Passion's child, and Sorrow's twin,
A meteor that had lost its way!
He walked with goblins, ghouls, and things
Unightly,—terrors and despairs;
And ever in the starry airs
A dismal raven flapped its wings!

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, A Poet's Grave.

I've an idea that if Poe had been an exemplary, conventional, tax-oppressed citizen, like Longfellow, his few poems, as striking as they are, would not have made so great a stir.

ALDRICH, Letter to Stedman, 15 Nov., 1900.

Proud, mad, but not defiant,
He touched at heaven and hell.
Fate found a rare soul pliant
And rung her changes well.

Alternately his lyre,
Stranded with strings of fire,
Led earth's most happy choir,
Or flashed with Israfel.

JOHN HENRY BONER, Poe's Cottage at Ford-ham.

You mean the jingle-man!

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, referring to Edgar Allan Poe. (HOWELLS, Literary Friends and Acquaintances, p. 63.)

There comes Poe, with his raven, like Barnaby Rudge,

Three fifths of him genius and two fifths sheer fudge.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 1297.

O raven death that shrouds your luminous head!

Not you, but your biographers are dead.

JOHN MACY, Couplets in Criticism: Poe.

Weird wraiths companioned him, but none the less,

Amid the forms of ghoul and ghost and gnome,

Figures were wont to roam

Of light and loveliness.

CLINTON SCOLLARD, At the Grave of Poe.

He walked with shadows, and yet who shall say
We are not all as shadows, we who fare

Toward one dim bourn along life's fateful way,
Sharing the griefs and joys once his to share.

CLINTON SCOLLARD, At the Grave of Poe.

If Poe from Pike The Raven stole,
As his accusers say,

Then to embody Adam's soul,

God plagiarized the clay.

JOHN B. TABB, Plagiarism.

A certain tyrant, to disgrace
The more a rebel's resting place,
Compelled the people every one
To hurl, in passing there, a stone,
Which done, behold, the pile became
A monument to keep the name.
And thus it is with Edgar Poe;
Each passing critic has his throw,
Nor sees, defeating his intent,
How lofty grows the monument.

JOHN B. TABB, Poe's Critics.

POETRY

I—Poetry: Definitions

Poetry is simply the most beautiful, impressive, and widely effective mode of saying things, and hence its importance.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism: Heine.

The eternal objects of poetry, among all nations, and at all times, are actions; human actions; possessing an inherent interest in themselves, and which are to be communicated in an interesting manner by the art of the poet.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Sohrab and Rustum: Preface.

Poetry is devil's wine. (Poesis est vinum dæmonum.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. i.

Did not one of the fathers in great indignation call poesy, vinum dæmonum?

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

<sup>1</sup> It [poetry] was ever thought to have some participation of divineness, because it doth raise and erect the mind.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

Poetry is itself a thing of God;
He made His prophets poets; and the more
We feel of poesie do we become Like God in love and power.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Proëm, l. 5.

God Himself is the best Poet,
And the Real is His song.

E. B. BROWNING, The Dead Pan. St. 36.

Poetry, the language of the gods.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy.

<sup>2</sup> Poetry, not finding the actual world exactly conformed to its idea of good and fair, seeks to accommodate the shows of things to the desires of the mind, and to create an ideal world better than the world of experience.

FRANCIS BACON, paraphrasing Aristotle. (EMERSON, Natural History of Intellect: Milton.)

<sup>3</sup> Poetry should be vital—either stirring our blood by its divine movements, or snatching our breath by its divine perfection. To do both is supreme glory, to do either is enduring fame.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Obiter Dicta: Ser. i, Browning's Poetry.

<sup>4</sup> Poetry and religion are a product of the smaller intestines.

DR. CABANIS. (CARLYLE, Signs of the Times.)

<sup>5</sup> There is no heroic poem in the world but is at bottom a biography, the life of a man; also it may be said, there is no life of a man, faithfully recorded, but is a heroic poem of its sort, rhymed or unrhymed.

CARLYLE, Essays: Memoirs of Scott.

The finest poetry was first experience.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Shakespeare.

<sup>6</sup> Poetry which has been defined as the harmonious union of man with nature.

CARLYLE, Essays: Early German Literature.

Poetry, therefore, we will call musical Thought. The Poet is he who thinks in that manner.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Poet.

Giving a name, indeed, is a poetic art; all poetry, if we go to that with it, is but a giving of names.

CARLYLE, Journal, 18 May, 1832.

<sup>7</sup> Poetry, the eldest sister of all art, and parent of most.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World: Dedication.

Poetry, the queen of arts.

THOMAS SPRAT, Ode upon the Poems of Abraham Cowley.

Poetry is an art, and chief of the fine arts: the easiest to dabble in, the hardest in which to reach true excellence.

E. C. STEDMAN, Victorian Poets. Ch. 5.

<sup>8</sup> Poems come like boats
With sails for wings;
Crossing the sky swiftly
They slip under tall bridges
Of cloud.

HILDA CONKLING, Poems.

<sup>9</sup> Good poetry could not have been otherwise written than it is. The first time you hear it, it sounds rather as if copied out of some invisible tablet in the Eternal mind, than as if arbitrarily composed by the poet. The feeling of all great poets has accorded with this. They found the verse, not made it. The muse brought it to them.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Art.

<sup>10</sup> It does not need that a poem should be long. Every word was once a poem.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

Every poem should be made up of lines that are poems.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. vii, p. 523.

Finally, most of us [imagist poets] believe that concentration is the very essence of poetry.

AMY LOWELL, Imagist Poetry.

<sup>11</sup> Only that is poetry which cleanses and mans me.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Inspiration.

Poetry is faith. To the poet the world is virgin soil; all is practicable; the men are ready for virtue; it is always time to do right. . . The test of the poet is the power to take the passing day and hold it up to a divine reason. . . Poetry is the consolation of mortal men.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

Poetry is the only verity—the expression of a sound mind speaking after the ideal, not after the apparent.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

Poetry must be as new as foam and as old as the rock.

EMERSON, Journals.

<sup>12</sup> Words are rather the drowsy part of poetry; imagination the life of it.

OWEN FELLTHAM, Resolves: Poets and Poetry.

<sup>13</sup> Poems, the hop-grounds of the brain.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 506.

<sup>14</sup> Poetry is to philosophy what the Sabbath is to the rest of the week.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

Science sees signs; Poetry the thing signified.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

1 I am the reality of things that seem;
The great transmuter, melting loss to gain.
ELLA HEATH, Poetry.

2 It is not enough for poems to have beauty;
they must have charm, and lead the hearer's soul where they will. (Non satis est pulchra esse poemata; dulcio sumto Et quocumque volent animum auditoris agunto.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 99.

A poem is like a picture: one strikes your fancy more, the nearer you stand; another, the farther away. . . . This pleased but once; that, though ten times called for, will always please.
(Ut pictura poesis: erit quæ, si propius stes, Te capiat magis, et quædam, si longius abstes.
. . . Hæc placuit semel, hæc deciens repetita placebit.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 361.

3 The question is whether a noble song is produced by nature or by art. I neither believe in mere labor being of avail without a rich vein of talent, nor in natural cleverness which is not educated. (Natura fieret laudabile carmen an arte, Quæsitum est: ego nec studium sine divite vena, Nec rude quid prosit video ingenium.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 408.

'Tis not sufficient to combine
Well-chosen words in a well-ordered line.
(Non satis est puris versum perscribere verbis.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 54.

4 Poetry is the bill and coo of sex.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

5 The essence of poetry is invention; such invention as, by producing something unexpected, surprises and delights.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, English Poets: Waller.

6 All good verses are like impromptus made at leisure. (Tous les vers excellents sont comme des impromptus faits à loisir.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 291.

7 A drainless shower
Of light is Poesy: 'tis the supreme of power;
'Tis might half slumb'ring on its own right arm.

KEATS, Sleep and Poetry, l. 237.

Poetry should surprise by a fine excess, and not by singularity.

KEATS, Letter to John Taylor, 27 Feb., 1818.

8 Poetry, native and true poetry, is nothing else than each poet's innermost feeling issuing in rhythmic language.

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry. No. 22.

The true poem is the poet's mind.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Of History.

9 The essence of all poetry is to be found, not in high-wrought subtlety of thought, nor in pointed cleverness of phrase, but in the depths of the heart and the most sacred feelings of the men who write.

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry. No. 28.

Let us therefore deem the glorious art of Poetry
a kind of medicine divinely bestowed upon man.

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry: Dedication.

10 A poem should not mean But be.

ARCHIBALD MCLEISH, Ars Poetica.

11 Poetry is a comforting piece of fiction set to more or less lascivious music.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 150.

12 The pearl Is a disease of the oyster.

A poem Is a disease of the spirit

Caused by the irritation

Of a granule of Truth

Fallen into that soft gray bivalve

We call the mind.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Bivalves.

13 I would define, in brief, the Poetry of words as the Rhythmical Creation of Beauty. Its sole arbiter is Taste.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Poetic Principle.

14 Poetry is a language that tells us, through a more or less emotional reaction, something that cannot be said.

EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON, Newspaper Interview.

15 I should define poetry as the exquisite expression of exquisite impressions.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.
Pt. i, No. 3.

Poetry is truth in its Sunday clothes.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.
Pt. i, No. 76.

16 Poetry is the journal of a sea animal living on land, wanting to fly in the air. Poetry is a search for syllables to shoot at the barriers of the unknown and the unknowable. Poetry is a phantom script telling how rainbows are made and why they go away.

CARL SANDBURG, Poetry Considered. (Atlantic Monthly, March, 1923.)

Poetry is the achievement of the synthesis of hyacinths and biscuits.

17 Poetry is the record of the best and happiest moments of the happiest and best minds.

SHELLEY, A Defense of Poetry.

A poem is the very image of life expressed in its eternal truth.

SHELLEY, A Defense of Poetry.

1 Poetry is the companion of camps.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Apologie for Poetrie. Pt. ii.

2 Poetry is the natural language of all worship.
MADAME DE STAËL, Germany. Pt. ii, ch. 10.

3 Poetry implies the whole truth, philosophy expresses a particle of it.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 26 June, 1852.

Poetry is nothing but healthy speech.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 4 Sept., 1841.

4 Whatever may have been the case in years gone by, the true use for the imaginative faculty of modern times is to give ultimate vivification to facts, to science, and to common lives, endowing them with the glows and glories and final illustriousness which belongs to every real thing and to real things only. Without that ultimate vivification—which the poet or other artist alone can give—reality would seem incomplete, and science, democracy, and life itself, finally in vain.

WALT WHITMAN, A Backward Glance O'er Travel'd Roads.

The messages of great poems to each man and woman are, Come to us on equal terms, only then can you understand us. We are no better than you, what we inclose you inclose, what we enjoy you may enjoy.

WALT WHITMAN, Leaves of Grass: Preface.

5 Poetry is the spontaneous overflow of powerful feelings: it takes its origin from emotion recollected in tranquillity.

WORDSWORTH, Lyrical Ballads: Preface.

II—Poetry: Apothegms

6 I would be the Lyric ever on the lip,
Rather than the Epic memory lets slip.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Lyrics and Epics.

In Nature's open book

An epic is the sea,

A lyric is the brook:—

Lyrics for me!

FRANK DEMPSTER SHERMAN, Lyrics.

7 Poetry fettered fetters the human race.

9 Why then we should drop into poetry.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. i, ch. 5.

Poetry's unnat'ral; no man ever talked poetry 'cept a beadle on boxin' day, or Warren's blackin' or Rowland's oil, or some o' them low fellows.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 33.

10 There are great arts now, but no poetry celebrates them.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

11 Amateurs and women have but the feeblest ideas of poetry.

GOETHE, Conversations with Eckermann.

12 A verse may find him who a sermon flies,
And turn delight into a sacrifice.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 1.

13 As civilization advances, poetry almost necessarily declines.

MACAULAY, Essays: Mitford's History of Greece.

14 A prize poem is like a prize sheep. . . . In general, prize sheep are good for nothing but to make tallow candles, and prize poems are good for nothing but to light them.

MACAULAY, On the Royal Society of Literature. Par. 8.

15 Those who have souls meet their fellows there.
GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways, ch. 1.

16 Fit to give weight to smoke. (Dare pondus idonea fumo.)

19 You cannot hear the planet-like music of poetry.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Apologie for Poetrie. Pt. ii. See also MUSIC OF THE SPHERES.

20 I would rather have written that poem, gentlemen, than take Quebec to-morrow.

MAJOR-GENERAL JAMES WOLFE, the night before he was killed on the Plains of Abraham (13 Sept., 1759), referring to Gray's Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard. (HUME, History of England, ch. 30.)

21 Verses are children of the lyre;
They should be sung, not read.
(Les vers sont enfants de la lyre;
Il faut les chanter, non les lire.)

UNKNOWN, Les Vers.

III—Poetry: Rhyme and Reason

1 Still may syllables jar with time,
Still may reason war with rhyme,
Resting never!

BEN JONSON, Fit of Rhyme Against Rhyme.

Here is rhyme, not empty of reason.

BEN JONSON, Volpone: Prologue.

2 Yea, marry, now it is somewhat, for now it is rhyme, whereas before it was neither rhyme nor reason.

SIR THOMAS MORE, to a friend who had versified an indifferent book. (FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 287.)

3 Rosalind: But are you so much in love as your rhymes speak?

Orlando: Neither rhyme nor reason can express how much.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l.
418. Also Comedy of Errors, ii, 2; Merry Wives of Windsor, v, 5. Used frequently thereafter by other writers.

4 This rhyme is out of reason.

JOHN SKELTON, Works. Vol. i, p. 123. (c.
1520)

5 I was promised on a time
To have reason for my rhyme;
From that time unto this season,
I received not rhyme nor reason.

EDMUND SPENSER, Lines on His Promised Pension. An apocryphal story relates that in 1590 Queen Elizabeth ordered Lord Burghley, the Lord Treasurer, to pay Spenser a hundred pounds, and when he objected to the amount, she said, "Then give him what is reason." Whereupon Burghley let the matter rest altogether, until the poet, by a rhymed appeal to his sovereign, secured the hundred pounds. It is certain that, in February, 1591, he did secure a pension of fifty pounds.

IV—Poetry: Its Power and Beauty

6 Gold, glory, greed! I loved you not for long;
Wine, women, war! seductive, but not strong;
One passion lasts—the deathless lust of Song.

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, From the Book of Extenuations: David.

7 And the shamed listeners knew the spell
That still enchants the years,
When the world's commonplaces fell
In music on their ears.

JOHN DAVIDSON, A Ballad of a Poet Born.

8 To ransom one lost moment with a rhyme,
Or, if fate cries and grudging gods demur,
To clutch Life's hair, and thrust one naked phrase

Like a lean knife between the ribs of Time.

ALFRED BRUCE DOUGLAS, The City of the Soul.

9 Olympian bards who sung
Divine ideas below,
Which always find us young,
And always keep us so.
RALPH WALDO EMERSON, The Poet.

Blake, Homer, Job, and you,
Have made old wine-skins new.
Your energies have wrought
Stout continents of thought.

MARIANNE MOORE, *That Harp You Play So
Well*.

10 God sent his Singers upon earth
With songs of sadness and of mirth,
That they might touch the hearts of men,
And bring them back to heaven again.

LONGFELLOW, The Singers.

11 Never did Poesy appear
So full of heaven to me, as when I saw how it would pierce through pride and fear

To the lives of coarsest men.

LOWELL, Incident in a Railroad Car. St. 18.

Gently touching with the charm of poetry.
(Musæo contigens cuncta lepore.)

LUCRETIVUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, sec. 9.

12 We hold that the most wonderful and splendid proof of genius is a great poem produced in a civilized age.

MACAULAY, Essays: On Milton.

13 Let the crowd delight in worthless things;
for me may golden-haired Apollo minister full cups from the Castalian spring.
(Vilia miretur vulgus; mihi flavus Apollo Pocula Castalia plena ministret aqua.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 15, l. 35. This couplet was used as the motto on the title page of Shakespeare's Venus and Adonis.

Great poets need no gentle reader; they hold him captive, however unwilling or hard to please.
(Non opus est magnis placido tectore poetis;
Quamlibet invitum difficilemque tenent.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 4, l. 9.

Thanks, Muse, to thee; for thou dost lend me comfort, thou dost come as rest, as balm, to my sorrow. Thou art guide and comrade both.

(Gratia, Musa, tibi: nam tu solacia præbes
Tu curæ requies, tu medicina venis.
Tu dux et comes est.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iv, eleg. 10, l. 117.

14 Drive my dead thoughts over the universe,
Like withered leaves, to quicken a new birth;
And, by the incarnation of this verse,
Scatter, as from an unextinguished hearth
Ashes and sparks, my words among mankind!
Be through my lips to unawakened Earth
The trumpet of a prophecy!

SHELLEY, Ode to the West Wind. Sec. 5.

1 A poem round and perfect as a star.
ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life Drama. Sc. 2.

2 Yea, is not even Apollo, with hair and harp-string of gold,
A bitter God to follow, a beautiful God to behold?

SWINBURNE, Hymn to Proserpine, l. 7.

3 Your lay, heavenly bard, is to me even as sleep on the grass to the weary, as in summer heat the slaking of thirst in a dancing rill of sweet water.

(Tale tuum carmen nobis, divine poeta,
Quale sopor fessis in gramine, quale per æstum
Dulcis aquæ saliente sitim restinguere rivo.)
VERGIL, Eclogues. No. v, l. 45.

V—Poetry and Immortality

4 No slightest golden rhyme he wrote
That held not something men must quote;
Thus by design or chance did he
Drop anchors to posterity.

T. B. ALDRICH, A Hint from Herrick.

Only write a dozen lines, and rest on your oars forever.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. vii, p. 539.

I would rather risk for future fame upon one lyric than upon ten volumes.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

One simile that solitary shines
In the dry Desert of a thousand lines,
Or lengthen'd thought, that gleams thro' many a page,

Has sanctified whole poems for an age.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii,
epis. i, l. 111.

5 Sappho survives, because we sing her songs;
And Æschylus, because we read his plays!

ROBERT BROWNING, Cleon.

6 Poets alone are sure of immortality; they are the truest diviners of nature.

BULWER-LYTTON, Caxtoniana. Essay 27.

7 Like him I strive in hope my rhymes
May keep my name a little while,—
O child, who knows how many times
We two have made the angels smile!

WILLIAM CANTON, A New Poet.

8 Poets by Death are conquer'd but the wit
Of poets triumphs over it.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Praise of Poetry. Ode i, l. 13.

9 Even the gods must go;
Only the lofty Rhyme
Not countless years o'erthrow,—
Not long array of time.
AUSTIN DOBSON, Ars Victrix.

10 His instant thought the poet spoke,
And filled the age his fame;
An inch of ground the lightning strook
But lit the sky with flame.

EMERSON, The Poet.

11 Let no one honor me with tears, nor bury me with lamentation. Why? Because I fly from lip to lip, living in the mouths of men.
(Nemo me lacrymis decoret nec funera fletu Faxit. Cur? volito vivus per ora virum.)

ENNIUS. Said to be part of his epitaph.
(CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk.
i, ch. 15, sec. 34.)

I have reared a monument more enduring than bronze and loftier than the royal pyramids, one that no wasting rain, no unavailing north wind can destroy; no, not even the unending years nor the flight of time itself. I shall not wholly die. The greater part of me shall escape oblivion.
(Exegi monumentum ære perennius Regalique situ pyramidum altius; Quod non imber edax, non Aquilo impotens Possit diruere aut innumerabilis Annorum series et fuga temporum. Non omnis moriar, multaque pars mei Vitabit Libitinam.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 30, l. 1.

I've reared a monument alone
More durable than brass or stone;
Whose cloudy summit is more hid
Than regal height of pyramid.

HORACE, Odes, iii, 30, l. (Coles, tr.)

Now have I finished a work which neither the wrath of Jove, nor fire, nor steel, nor all-consuming time can destroy. Welcome the day which can destroy only my body in ending my uncertain life. In my better part I shall be raised to immortality above the lofty stars, and my name shall never die.

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 871.

Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rhyme.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lv.

12 Homer's harp is broken and Horace's lyre is unstrung, and the voices of the great singers are hushed; but their songs—their songs are immortal. O friend! what moots it to them or to us who gave this epic or that lyric to immortality? The singer belongs to a year, his song to all time.

EUGENE FIELD, Love Affairs of a Bibliomaniac,
p. 99.

What difference does it make who spoke the words? They were uttered for the world. (Quid interest quis dixerit? Omnibus dixit.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xiv, 18.

13 Singing and rejoicing,
As aye since time began,
The dying earth's last poet
Shall be the earth's last man.

ANASTASIOS GRÜN, The Last Poet.

1
Thou shalt not all die; for while Love's fire shines

Upon his altar, men shall read thy lines.

ROBERT HERRICK, Upon Himself.

2
In his own verse the poet still we find,
In his own page his memory lives enshrined,
As in their amber sweets the smothered bees,—

As the fair cedar, fallen before the breeze,
Lies self-embalmed amidst the mouldering
trees.

O. W. HOLMES, Bryant's Seventieth Birthday.

3
Where go the poet's lines?—
Answer, ye evening tapers!

Ye auburn locks, ye golden curls,
Speak from your folded papers!

O. W. HOLMES, The Poet's Lot.

4
Still breathes the love, still glows the ardor imparted to the lyre by the Æolian girl.
(Spirat adhuc amor, Vivuntque commissi calores Æoliæ fidibus puellæ.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, l. 10. Referring to Sappho.

The poet remains, dismember him as you will.
(Invenias etiam disjecta membra poetæ.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 62.

5
Little snatch of ancient song,
What has made thee live so long?
Flying on thy wings of rhyme
Lightly down the depths of time.

W. E. H. LECKY, On an Old Song.

All things perish, and the strongest
Often do not last the longest;
The stately ship is seen no more,
The fragile skiff attains the shore;
And while the great and wise decay,
And all their trophies pass away,
Some sudden thought, some careless rhyme,
Still floats above the wrecks of Time.

W. E. H. LECKY, On an Old Song.

The bards sublime,
Whose distant footsteps echo
Through the corridors of Time.

LONGFELLOW, The Day Is Done.

6
Doth it not thrill thee, Poet,
Dead and dust though thou art,
To feel how I press thy singing
Close to my heart?

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, *The Passionate Reader
to His Poet*.

Like the river, swift and clear,
Flows his song through many a heart.

LONGFELLOW, Oliver Basselin. St. 11.

7
O ye dead Poets, who are living still Immortal in your verse, though life be fled,
And ye, O living Poets, who are dead
Though ye are living, if neglect can kill,

Tell me if in the darkest hours of ill,
With drops of anguish falling fast and red
From the sharp crown of thorns upon your
head,

Ye were not glad your errand to fulfil?

LONGFELLOW, The Poets.

8
The Poet is the only potentate;
His sceptre reaches o'er remotest zones;
His thought remembered and his golden tones
Shall, in the ears of nations uncreate,
Roll on for ages and reverberate
When Kings are dust beside forgotten thrones.

LYOYD MIFFLIN, The Sovereigns.

9
Lap me in soft Lydian airs,
Married to immortal verse.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 136.

Wisdom married to immortal verse.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vii, l. 536.

10
Remember me a little then, I pray,
The idle singer of an empty day.

WILLIAM MORRIS, *The Earthly Paradise:
Apology*.

11
Gowns will be rent to rags and gems and gold broken to fragments, but the fame which song brings lasts for ever. (Scindentur vester, gemma frangentur et aurum; Carmina quam tribuent, fama perennis erit.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 10, l. 61.

Yea, though hard rocks and though the tooth of the enduring ploughshare perish with passing time, song is untouched by death. (Ergo, cum silices, cum dens patientis aratri Depereant ævo, carmina morte carent.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 15, l. 31.

The poet's work endures. (Durat opus vatium.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 9, l. 29.

12
'Twas he that ranged the words at random flung,

Pierced the fair pearls and them together
strung.

PILPAY, Anvar-i Suhaili. (Eastwick, tr.)

Go boldly forth, my simple lay,
Whose accents flow with artless ease,
Like orient pearls at random strung.

HAFIZ, Song. (Sir William Jones, tr.)

These pearls of thought in Persian gulfs were bred,

Each softly lucent as a rounded moon;
The diver Omar plucked them from their bed,
FitzGerald strung them on an English thread.

J. R. LOWELL, In a Copy of Omar Khayyám.

Jewels five-words-long
That on the stretch'd forefinger of all Time
Sparkle for ever.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 355.

It came to him in rainbow dreams,
Blent with the wisdom of the sages,
Of spirit and of passion born;

In words as lucent as the morn
He prisoned it, and now it gleams
A jewel shining through the ages.

L. M. MONTGOMERY, The Poet's Thought.

1
Call it not vain:—they do not err
Who say that when the poet dies
Mute Nature mourns her worshipper,
And celebrates his obsequies.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto v, st. 1.

2
Or bard sublime, if bard may e'er be so,
As Milton, Shakespeare, names that ne'er shall die!

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Schoolmistress, l. 245.

3
How best to build the imperishable lay.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Carmen Nuptiale: Proem.

He knew
Himself to sing, and build the lofty rhyme.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 10.

4
To have the deep Poetic heart
Is more than all poetic fame.

TENNYSON, The New Timon.

5
Empires dissolve and peoples disappear:
Song passes not away.
Captains and conquerors leave a little dust,
And kings a dubious legend of their reign;
The swords of Cæsars, they are less than rust:

The poet doth remain.

WILLIAM WATSON, Lacrimæ Musarum.

VI—Poetry and Fame

6
How many, most famous while they lived,
are utterly forgotten for want of writers!
(Quam multos clarissimos suis temporibus viros scriptorum inops deleuit obliuio!)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiæ Consolationis. Bk. ii, prosa 7.

7
Verse, like the laurel, its immortal meed,
Should be the guerdon of a noble deed.

COWPER, Charity, l. 292.

Ofttimes with unseemly verse poets debase noble deeds. (Fere scriptores carmine fædo Splendida facta linunt.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 236.

8
Their name, their years, spelt by th' unletter'd Muse.

THOMAS GRAY, *Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard*. St. 20.

9
'Tis the Muse forbids the hero worthy of renown to perish; she enthrones him in the heavens. (Dignum laude virum Musa vetat mori: Cælo Musa beata.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 8, l. 28.

Song forbids victorious deeds to die.

SCHILLER, The Artists.

10
Many heroes lived before Agamemnon; but all are overwhelmed in unending night, unwept, unknown, because they lacked a sacred bard.

(Vixere fortes ante Agamemnona

Multi; sed omnes inlacrimabiles

Urgentur ignotique longa

Nocte, carent quia vate sacro.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, st. 7.

Before Atrides men were brave:

But ah! oblivion dark and long
Has locked them in a tearless grave,
For lack of consecrating song.

HORACE, Odes, iv, 9. (Conington, tr.)

Many valiant chiefs of old

Greatly lived and died before

Agamemnon, Grecian bold,

Waged the ten years' famous war.

But their names, unsung, unwept,

Unrecorded, lost and gone,

Long in endless night have slept,

And shall now no more be known.

HORACE, Odes, iv, 9. (Swift, tr.)

Brave men were living before Agamemnon

And since, exceeding valorous and sage,

A good deal like him too, but quite the same none;

But then they shone not on the poet's page.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 5.

Vain was the Chief's, the Sage's pride!

They had no Poet, and they died.

In vain they schemed, in vain they bled!

They had no Poet, and are dead.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, l. 13.

They built with bronze and gold and brawn,
The inner Vision still denied;

Their conquests . . . Ask oblivion! . . .

"They had no poet, and they died."

DON MARQUIS, They Had No Poet.

11
Past ruined Ilion Helen lives,

Alcestis rises from the shades;

Verse calls them forth; 'tis verse that gives
Immortal youth to mortal maids.

Soon shall Oblivion's deepening veil

Hide all the peopled hills you see,

The gay, the proud, while lovers hail

These many summers you and me.

W. S. LANDOR, Past Ruined Ilion.

12
How mighty, how sacred is the poet's task!
He snatches all things from destruction and gives immortality to mortal men.

(O Sacer et magnus vatum labor! omnia fato Eripis et populis donas mortalibus ævum.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ix, l. 980.

13
Song makes great deeds immortal, cheats the tomb,

And hands down fame to ages yet to come.

(Carmine fit vivax virtus: expersque sepulcri, Notitiam seræ posteritatis habet.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 8, l. 47.

I'll make thee glorious by my pen
And famous by my sword.

MARQUIS OF MONTROSE, My Dear and Only Love.

I'll make thee famous by my pen
And glorious by my sword.

SCOTT, Legend of Montrose. Ch. 15. An incorrect quotation of Montrose's lines.

'Tis meet for the great to be hymned in fairest song, for every noble deed dieth if suppressed in silence. (Πρέπει δ' ἑσλοῖσιν ὑμνεῖσθαι . . .
καλλίσταις δόδοις . . . θνάσκει δὲ σιγαθὲν καλὸν ἔργον.)

PINDAR, Alexandro Amynta. Frag. 85.

Ascendant Phœbus watch'd that hour with
care,

Averted half your parents' simple prayer,
And gave you beauty, but denied the pelf
That buys your sex a tyrant o'er itself. . . .
Kept dross for Duchesses, the world shall know it,

To you gave Sense, Good-humour, and a Poet.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 285.

When falls the soldier brave,
Dead at the feet of wrong,
The poet sings and guards his grave
With sentinels of song.

ABRAM J. RYAN, Sentinel Songs.

Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read,
And tongues to be your being shall rehearse
When all the breathers of this world are dead;
You still shall live—such virtue hath my
pen—

Where breath most breathes, even in the mouths of men.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lxxxii.

Thy lord shall never die, the whiles this verse
Shall live, and surely it shall live for ever:
For ever it shall live, and shall rehearse
His worthy praise, and virtues dying never,
Though death his soul do from his body
sever:

And thou thyself herein shalt also live:
Such grace the heavens do to my verses give.

SPENSER, The Ruines of Time, l. 253.

How many great ones may remembered be
Which in their days most famously did flourish,
Of whom no word we hear nor sign we see
But as things wiped out with a sponge do perish

Because they living cared not to cherish
No gentle wits, thro' pride or covetize,
Which might their name forever memorize.

SPENSER, The Ruines of Time, l. 358.

How strange a paradox is true,
That men who lived and died without a name,
Are the chief heroes in the sacred lists of fame.
SWIFT, Ode to the Athenian Society.

Illustrious acts high raptures do infuse,
And every conqueror creates a muse.
EDMUND WALLER, Panegyric on Cromwell.

Yet what he sung in his immortal strain,
Though unsuccessful, was not sung in vain; . . .
Like Phœbus thus, acquiring unsought praise,
He caught at love and filled his arm with bays.

EDMUND WALLER, The Story of Phœbus and Daphne Applied.

A great deal, my dear liege, depends
On having clever bards for friends.
What had Achilles been without his Homer?
A tailor, woollen-draper, or a comber!

JOHN WOLCOT, A Moral Reflection: To George III.

Small thought was his, in after-time
E'er to be hitched into a rhyme.

SCOTT, Marmion: Canto vi, Introduction.

Shall poesy, like law, turn wrong to right,
And dedications wash an Æthiop white?

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 27.

VII—Poetry and Love

There's many a would-be poet at this hour
Rhymes of a love that he hath never wooed,
And o'er his lamplit desk in solitude
Deems that he sitteth in the Muses' bower.

ROBERT BRIDGES, The Growth of Love. St. 11.

Young men, ay and maids,
Too often sow their wild oats in tame verse.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 948.

Verse and nothing else have I to give you.
Other heights in other lives, God willing:
All the gifts from all the heights, your own,
Love!

ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. Sec. 12.

Love thou, and if thy love be deep as mine,
Thou wilt not laugh at poets.

BULWER-LYTTON, Richelieu. Act i, sc. 1, l. 177.

When amatory poets sing their loves
In liquid lines mellifluously bland,
And pair their rhymes as Venus yokes her doves.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 1.

Ovid's a rake, as half his verses show him,
Anacreon's morals are a still worse sample,
Catullus scarcely has a decent poem,
I don't think Sappho's Ode a good example,
Although Longinus tells us there is no hymn
Where the sublime soars forth on wings more ample;

But Virgil's songs are pure, except that horrid one

Beginning with "Formosum Pastor Corydon."

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 42.

1 A Poet without Love were a physical and metaphysical impossibility.

CARLYLE, Essays: Burns.

A poet not in love is out at sea;

He must have a lay-figure.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.

Test of the poet is knowledge of love,

For Eros is older than Saturn or Jove.

EMERSON, Quatrains: Casella.

2 Oh love will make a dog howl in rhyme.

FLETCHER, Queen of Corinth. Act iv, sc. 1.

3 Poetry has not often been worse employed than in dignifying the amorous fury of a raving girl.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. iv, p. 15.

His namby-pamby madrigals of love.

WILLIAM GIFFORD, The Baviad.

4 Touchstone: Truly, I would the gods had made thee poetical.

Audrey: I do not know what "poetical" is: is it honest in deed and word? is it a true thing?

Touchstone: No, truly; for the truest poetry is the most feigning; and lovers are given to poetry.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 3, 15.

Never durst poet touch a pen to write

Until his ink were temper'd with Love's sighs.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 346.

5 But since he died, and poets better prove, Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his love.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxxii.

6 Song, made in lieu of many ornaments

With which my love should duly have been deck'd.

EDMUND SPENSER, Epithalamion, l. 427.

7 Had his fingers been able to toy with her hair

Would they then have written the verses fair?

JAMES THOMSON, Art. St. 3.

8 If Thought and Love desert us, from that day Let us break off all commerce with the Muse.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Suggested During a Tour. No. 48.

VIII—Poetry and Poverty

9 A man should live in a garret aloof,
And have few friends, and go poorly clad,
With an old hat stopping the chink in the roof,
To keep the Goddess constant and glad.

T. B. ALDRICH, The Flight of the Goddess.

For who sings commonly so merry a note

As he that cannot chop or change a groat?

RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Shepherd's Content. St. 29.

10 Poets evermore are scant of gold.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. v, l. 1199.

11 Poverty is the Muse's patrimony.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. 2, mem. 3, subs. 15.

12 It is not poetry that makes men poor,
For few do write that were not so before,
And those that have writ best, had they been rich,

Had ne'er been clapp'd with a poetic itch.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 440.

13 Let such forego the poet's sacred name,
Who rack their brains for lucre, not for fame.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 177.

No Muse is proof against a golden shower.

SAMUEL GARTH, Claremont, l. 14.

14 The man who weds the sacred Muse
Disdains all mercenary views.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iii, l. 919.

15 Feel you the barren flattery of a rhyme?
Can poets soothe you, when you pine for bread,

By winding myrtle round your ruin'd shed?

GEORGE CRABBE, The Village. Bk. i.

16 If I'd as much money as I could tell,
I never would cry my songs to sell.

ADELAIDE CRAPSEY, Vendor's Song.

17 The poet is never the poorer for his song.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

18 A Cure for Poetry:—Seven wealthy towns contend for Homer dead,
Through which the living Homer begged his bread.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1739.

My father discouraged me [from becoming a poet] by ridiculing my performances, and telling me verse-makers were generally beggars.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.

19 And thou, sweet Poetry, thou loveliest maid,
Still first to fly where sensual joys invade; . . .
Thou source of all my bliss and all my woe,
That found'st me poor at first, and keep'st me so.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 407.

Could a man live by it, it were not unpleasant employment to be a poet.

GOLDSMITH, Letter to Henry Goldsmith, Feb., 1759.

20 Poets, Being poor,
Must use words with economy.

WILLIAM GRIFFITH, Laconic.

1 Poets, henceforth for pensions need not care,
Who call you beggars, you may call them
liars,

Verses are grown such merchantable ware,
That now for Sonnets, sellers are, and buyers.
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, A Comfort for Poor
Poets. 1633. (Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 41.)

In rhyme, fine tinkling rhyme and flow and verse,
With now and then some sense; and he was paid
for it,
Regarded and rewarded; which few poets are nowadays.

BEN JONSON, Masque of the Fortunate Isles.
Vol. vi, p. 192. Alluding to Henry Scogan, tutor to the sons of Henry IV.

2 Barefaced poverty drove me to writing verses.
(Paupertas impulit audax Ut versus facerem.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 51.

Indignation leads to the making of poetry.
(Facit indignatio versum.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 79.

And poets by their sufferings grow,—
As if there were no more to do,
To make a poet excellent,
But only want and discontent.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts. l.
437.

Most wretched men
Are cradled into poetry by wrong;
They learn in suffering what they teach in song.
SHELLEY, Julian and Maddalo, l. 544.

3 Dreaming on nought but idle poetry,
That fruitless and unprofitable art,
Good unto none; but least to the professors.
BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act
i, sc. 1.

4 You who compose sublime poetry in a cramped attic, that you may come forth worthy of an ivy wreath and an ugly statue.
Beyond this, you have no hope of anything.
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 27.

Let such as have not got a passport from nature be content with happiness, and leave to the poet
the unrivalled possession of his misery, his garret, and his fame.

GOLDSMITH, The Poet. (Critical Review, 1759.)

5 Poverty! thou source of human art,
Thou great inspirer of the poet's song!
EDWARD MOORE, Hymn to Poverty.

Necessity may be the mother of lucrative invention, but it is the death of poetical.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Writing and Books, 63.

6 I am the poet of the poor. (Pauperibus vates ego sum.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 165.

7 Poets were once the care of chieftains and of kings. (Cura ducum fuerant olim regumque poetæ.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 405.

In a foolish world
The poet would be king.

WILLIAM GRIFFITH, Demos.

8 The bard whom pilfer'd pastorals renown,
Who turns a Persian tale for half-a-crown,
Just writes to make his barrenness appear,
And strains from hard-bound brains eight lines a year.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 179.

9 For ne'er
Was flattery lost on Poet's ear;
A simple race! they waste their toil
For the vain tribute of a smile.
SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto iv, st.
35.

Friendship, esteem, and fair regard,
And praise, the poet's best reward!
SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto i, st. 27.

10 Princess, inscribe beneath my name,
"He never begged, he never sighed,
He took his medicine as it came";
For this the poets lived—and died.
J. C. SQUIRE, Ballade of the Poetic Life.

11 And mighty Poets in their misery dead.
WORDSWORTH, Resolution and Independence.
St. 17.

I thought of Chatterton, the marvellous Boy,
The sleepless Soul that perished in his pride;
Of Him who walked in glory and in joy
Following his plough, along the mountain-side:
By our own spirits are we defied:
We Poets in our youth begin in gladness;
But thereof come in the end despondency and madness.

WORDSWORTH, Resolution and Independence.
St. 7.

Poetry has never brought in enough to buy shoestrings.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Remark.

12 On earth what hath the poet? An alien breath.
THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, In a Graveyard.

13 Great thoughts in crude, unshapely verse set forth

Lose half their preciousness and ever must.
Unless the diamond with its own rich dust
Be cut and polished, it seems little worth.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, On Reading. Probably referring to Whitman.

14 I think it will be found that the grand style arises in poetry when a noble nature, poeti-cally gifted, treats with simplicity or with severity a serious subject.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Controversy with Professor Newman on the Right Method of Translating Homer.

1 Yet Truth sometimes will lend her noblest fires,

And decorate the verse herself inspires:
This fact, in Virtue's name, let Crabbe attest,—

Though Nature's sternest painter, yet the best.

With honest anguish and an aching head,
And drop at last, but in unwilling ears,
This saving counsel, "Keep you piece nine years."
"Nine years!" cries he, who, high in Drury Lane,
Lull'd by soft zephyrs thro' the broken pane,
Rhymes ere he wakes, and prints before Term ends,

Obliged by hunger and request of friends.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 37.

9 Wheresoe'er I turn my view,
All is strange, yet nothing new:
Endless labour all along,
Endless labour to be wrong:
Phrase that Time has flung away,
Uncouth words in disarray,
Trick'd in antique ruff and bonnet,
Ode, and elegy, and sonnet.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lines in Imitation of a Well-Known Author. (BOSWELL, Life, 18 Sept., 1777. Croker's note.) A parody of Thomas Warton.

10 They write a verse as smooth, as soft as cream;
In which there is no torrent, nor scarce stream.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Ingeniorum.

X—Poetry: Rhyme

11
Rhyme the rudder is of verses,
With which, like ships, they steer their courses.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 463.

12 Rhyme is the rock on which thou art to nament of Poem or good Verse, in longer Works especially, but the Invention of a barbarous Age, to set off wretched matter and lame Meter.

MILTON, Paradise Lost: Preface.

15
So I told them in rhyme,

For of rhymes I had store.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Cataract of Lodore.

Thick calf, fat foot, and slim knee,
Mounted on roof and chimney.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Rejected Addresses.

This couplet was introduced "by way of bravado, in answer to one who alleged that the English language contained no rhyme to chimney."

XI—Poetry: Metre

1 And the rolling anapæstic

Curled like vapour over shrines!

E. B. BROWNING, Wine of Cyprus. St. 10.

2 The fatal facility of the octosyllabic verse.

BYRON, The Corsair: Preface.

3 Trochæe trips from long to short;
From long to long in solemn sort

Slow Spōndee stalks; strong foot! yet ill able Ever to come up with dactyl trisyllable.

Iambics march from short to long;—

With a leap and a bound the swift Anapæsts throng;

One syllable long, with one short at each side,
Amphibrachys hastes with a stately stride;—

First and last being long, middle short, Amphimacer

Strikes his thundering hoofs like a proud high-bred Racer.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Metrical Feet.

4 In the hexameter rises the fountain's silvery column:

In the pentameter aye falling in melody back.
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ovidian Elegiac Metre.

Strongly it bears us along in swelling and limitless billows;

Nothing before and nothing behind but the sky and the ocean.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Homeric Hexameter.

So the Hexameter, rising and singing, with cadence sonorous,

Falls; and in refluent rhythm back the Pen-tameter flows.

LONGFELLOW, Elegiac Verse.

5 A long syllable following a short is called an Iambus. (Syllaba longa brevi subjecta vocatur Iambus.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 251.

The bitter but wholesome iambic.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Apologie for Poetrie. Pt. ii.

6 These equal syllables alone require,
Tho' oft the ear the open vowels tire,
While expletives their feeble aid do join,

And ten low words oft creep in one dull line.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 144.

XII—Poetry: Poetic Licence

7 Poets and painters, as all artists know,
May shoot a little with a lengthened bow.

BYRON, Hints from Horace, l. 15.

8 The freer utterances of the poet's licence.
(Poetarum licentia liberiora.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. iii, ch. 38, sec. 153.

9 A man may be an admirable poet without being an exact chronologer.

DRYDEN, Æneid: Dedication.

Some force whole regions, in despite
O' geography, to change their site;
Make former times shake hands with latter,
And that which was before come after.
But those that write in rhyme still make
The one verse for the other's sake;
For one for sense, and one for rhyme,
I think 's sufficient at one time.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 23.

10 According to that old verse . . . Astronomers, painters and poets may lie by authority.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Apologie of Poetry. Par.
3. (1591)

Besides, we Poets lie by good authority.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Epigrams. Bk. ii, No.
184.

Poets and painters by authority
As well as travelers we say may lie.

ROBERT HEATH, Epigrams, 35.

11 Painters and poets have always had an equal licence to dare anything. (Pictoribus atque poetis Quidlibet audendi semper fuit æqua potestas.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 9.

This the just right of poets ever was,
And will be still, to coin what words they please.

JOHN OLDHAM, Horace's Art of Poetry Imitated.

12 Measureless pours forth the creative licence of poets, nor trammels its utterance with history's truth. (Exit in immensum fecunda li-centia vatum, Obligat historica nec sua verba fide.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 12, l. 41.

Good-bye to the fictions of the poets. (Valeant mendacia vatum.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. vi, l. 253.

13 Using, as his habit is, a poet's licence. (Usus Poetæ, ut moris est, licentia.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 25, l. 8.

14 Fiction is the privilege of poets. (Tamen poetis mentiri licet.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. vi, epis. 21.

Odds life! must one swear to the truth of a song?
MATTHEW PRIOR, A Better Answer.

In poetry there is always fallacy, and sometimes fiction.

SCOTT, The Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 21.

1 And thought a lie in verse or prose the same;
That not in fancy's maze he wander'd long,
But stoop'd to truth, and moraliz'd his song.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 339.

Fierce wars and faithful loves shall moralize my song.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene: Introduction. St. 1.

2 Poetic licence. (Licentia poetica.)

SENECA, Naturales Quæstiones, xliv, 1.

3 Unjustly poets we asperse:
Truth shines the brighter clad in verse,
And all the fictions they pursue
Do but insinuate what is true.

SWIFT, To Stella.

XIII—Poetry and Verse

4 I little read those poets who have made
A noble art a pessimistic trade,
And trained their Pegasus to draw a hearse
Through endless avenues of drooping verse.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Pessimistic Poets.

What though, like a lady's waist,
All his lines are overlaced?

UNKNOWN, To Thomas Bailey Aldrich. (Daily Tatler, November, 1896.)

5 Our witty Boston Autocrat, Oliver Wendell Holmes, once playfully declared that Mr. Smith and Mrs. Brown were the two most popular poets in the United States. He had in mind the Reverend Samuel F. Smith, to whom we are indebted for "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and Mrs. Phoebe Hinsdale Brown, who wrote the famous hymn which begins, "I love to steal away awhile from every slumbering care."

C. A. BROWNE, The Story of Our National Ballads.

6 One fine day,
Says Mister Mucklewraith to me, says he,
"So! you've a poet in your house," and smiled.
"A poet? God forbid," I cried; and then
It all came out: how Andrew slyly sent Verse to the paper; how they printed it
In Poet's Corner.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Poet Andrew, l. 161.

7 A quaint farrago of absurd conceits,
Out-babying Wordsworth and out-glittering Keats.

BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. i.

8 I too can hunt a poetaster down.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 1064.

9 Swans sing before they die—'twere no bad thing

Did certain persons die before they sing.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Epigram.

Sir, I admit your general rule,
That every poet is a fool,
But you yourself may serve to show it,
That every fool is not a poet.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Epigram.

Your poem must eternal be,
Dear Sir! it cannot fail!

For 'tis incomprehensible,
And without head or tail.

S. T. COLERIDGE, To the Author of the Ancient Mariner.

10 Made poetry a mere mechanic art.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 654.

11 Doeg, though without knowing how or why,
Made still a blund'ring kind of melody;
Spurr'd boldly on, and dash'd through thick and thin,

Through sense and nonsense, never out nor in;

Free from all meaning, whether good or bad,
And in one word, heroically mad.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 412. "Doeg": Elkanah Settle.

O gracious God! How far have we Profan'd thy Heav'nly gift of Poesy!
Made prostitute and profligate the Muse,
Debas'd to each obscene and impious use,
Whose Harmony was first ordain'd Above,
For Tongues of Angels and for Hymns of Love!

DRYDEN, To the Pious Memory of Mrs. Anne Killigrew. St. 4.

12 Oh, hapless land of mine! whose country-presses

Labour with poets and with poetesses;
Where Helicon is quaffed like beer at table,
And Pegasus is "hitched" in every stable.

A. J. H. DUGANNE, Parnassus in Pillory.

Their scallop-shells so many bring
The fabled founts of song to try,
They've drained, for aught I know, the spring
Of Aganippe dry.

WHITTIER, My Namesake. St. 3.

13 Thy trivial harp will never please
Or fill my craving ear;
Its chords should ring as blows the breeze,
Free, peremptory, clear. . . .
The kingly bard

Must smite the chords rudely and hard,
As with hammer or with mace.

EMERSON, Merlin.

14 Modern poets mix too much water with their ink. (Neuere Poeten thun viel Wasser in die Tinte.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa, iii. Quoting Sterne.

15 Verses void of thought, sonorous trifles.
(Versus inopes rerum nugæque canoræ.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 322.

His verses run with a halting foot. (Incompositio pede currere versus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 9.

The line, too, labours, and the words move slow.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 171.

This is the very false gallop of verses.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 119.

Great noble wits, be good unto yourselves,
And make a difference 'twixt poetic elves
And poets: all that dabble in the ink
And defile quills are not those few can think.
BEN JONSON, The Staple of News: Prologue.

They sway'd about upon a rocking-horse.
And thought it Pegasus.

JOHN KEATS, Sleep and Poetry, l. 186.

Some ladies now make pretty songs,
And some make pretty nurses:
Some men are good for righting wrongs;
And some for writing verses.
F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, The Jester's Plea.

The zeal of fools offends at any time,
But most of all the zeal of fools in rhyme.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 406.

And that would set my teeth nothing on edge
Nothing so much as mincing poetry:
'Tis like the forced gait of a shuffling nag.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 133.

A flawless cup: how delicate and fine
The flowing curve of every jewelled line!
Look, turn it up or down, 'tis perfect still,—
But holds no drop of life's heart-warming wine.

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Empty Quatrain.

There have been many most excellent poets that never versified, and now swarm many versifiers that need never answer to the name of poets.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Apologie for Poetrie. Pt. ii.

One may be a poet without versing, and a versifier without poetry.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Apologie for Poetrie. Pt. ii.

Men endowed with highest gifts,
The vision and the faculty divine;
Yet wanting the accomplishment of verse.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. i, l. 78.

XIV—Poetry and Prose

Who all in raptures their own works rehearse,
And draw out measur'd prose, which they call
verse.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Independence, l. 295.

And with poetic trappings grace thy prose.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 679.

For all those pretty knacks you compose,
Alas, what are they but poems in prose?

SIR JOHN DENHAM, To the Five Members of the Hon. House of Commons, l. 41.

I wish our clever young poets would remember my homely definitions of prose and poetry; that is, prose,—words in their best order; poetry,—the best words in their best order.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 12 July, 1827.

Poetry has done enough when it charms, but prose must also convince.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 166.

A kind of hobbling prose,
That limped along, and tinkled in the close.
DRYDEN, To the Earl of Roscommon, l. 13.

Our poetry in the eighteenth century was prose; our prose in the seventeenth, poetry.
J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

Truth is enough for prose:
Calmly it goes
To tell just what it knows.
For verse, skill will suffice—
Delicate, nice
Casting of verbal dice.

Poetry, men attain
By subtler pain
More flagrant in the brain—

An honesty unfeigned,
A heart unchained,
A madness well restrained.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, At the Mermaid Cafeteria.

And he whose fustian 's so sublimely bad,
It is not poetry, but prose run mad.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 187.

Who says in verse what others say in prose.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. i, l. 202.

One merit of poetry few persons will deny: it says more and in fewer words than prose.

VOLTAIRE, A Philosophical Dictionary: Poets.

There is in Poesy a decent pride,
Which well becomes her when she speaks to Prose,
Her younger sister.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 64.

XV—Poetry Old and New

And Marlowe, Webster, Fletcher, Ben,
Whose fire-hearts sowed our furrows when
The world was worthy of such men.

E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets, l. 400.

God's prophets of the Beautiful,
These Poets were.

E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets, l. 292.

<sup>1</sup> You speak As one who fed on poetry.
BULWER-LYTTON, Richelieu. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>2</sup> Oh, the bards of olden days, blessed bards in song-craft skilled,
Happy henchmen of the Muses, when the field was yet untilled.

CHERILUS. (ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. iii, ch.
14, sec. 4. Sandys, tr.)

<sup>3</sup> In every cell and every blooming bower
The sweetness of old lays is hovering still.
HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Whither Is Gone the Wisdom and the Power?

I love the old melodious lays
Which softly melt the ages through,
The songs of Spenser's golden days,
Arcadian Sidney's silver phrase,
Sprinkling our noon of time with freshest morning dew.
WHITTIER, Proem.

<sup>4</sup> Subtract from many modern poets all that may be found in Shakespeare, and trash will remain.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. No. 568.

<sup>5</sup> My Muse is rightly of the English strain,
That cannot long one fashion entertain.
MICHAEL DRAYTON, Idea.

<sup>6</sup> You admire, Vacerra, only the poets of old and praise only those who are dead. Pardon me, Vacerra, if I think death too great a price to pay for your praise.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, ep. 49.

<sup>7</sup> It stands on record, that in Richard's times
A man was hang'd for very honest rhymes.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat.
1, l. 145. The reference is, perhaps, to John Ball, the reputed author of the lines, "When Adam dolve and Eve span, Who was then the gentleman?" who was hanged during the reign of Richard II. See under ANCESTRY.

<sup>8</sup> Poets that lasting marble seek Must come in Latin or in Greek.
EDMUND WALLER, Of English Verse.

<sup>9</sup> Old-fashioned poetry, but choicely good.
WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Pt. i, ch. 4.

It was written in the homespun verse of that time and people.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.

<sup>10</sup> Come Muse migrate from Greece and Ionia, Cross out please those immensely overpaid accounts,
That matter of Troy and Achilles' wrath, and Æneas', Odysseus' wanderings, Placard "Removed" and "To Let" on the rocks of your snowy Parnassus, . . .
For know a better, fresher, busier sphere,

a wide, untried domain awaits, demands
you.
WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Exposition. Sec.
2.

POETS

I—Poets: Definitions

<sup>11</sup> Poets are all who love, who feel great truths,
And tell them.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Another and a Better World.

<sup>12</sup> For poets (bear the word),
Half-poets even, are still whole democrats.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iv, l. 314.

<sup>13</sup> All great poets have been men of great knowledge.

BRYANT, Lectures on Poetry: Relation of Poetry to Time and Place.

No man was ever yet a great poet without being at the same time a profound philosopher.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 15.

<sup>14</sup> He that works and does some Poem, not he that merely says one, is worthy of the name of Poet.

CARLYLE, *Cromwell's Letters and Speeches:
Introduction*.

How does the poet speak to men with power, but by being still more a man than they.

CARLYLE, Essays: Burns.

It is a man's sincerity and depth of vision that makes him a poet.

CARLYLE, *Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero
as Poet*.

<sup>15</sup> Most joyful let the Poet be;
It is through him that all men see.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, The Poet of the Old and New Times.

<sup>16</sup> Party-Poets are like wasps, who dart Death to themselves, but to their foes but smart.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Newspaper, l. 11.

<sup>17</sup> A poet is the painter of the soul.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character. Ch. 20.

The poet must be alike polished by an intercourse with the world as with the studies of taste; one to whom labour is negligence, refinement a science, and art a nature.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius: Vers de Société.

<sup>18</sup> Poets should be law-givers; that is, the boldest lyric inspiration should not chide and insult, but should announce and lead the civil code, and the day's work.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Of Prudence.

The sign and credentials of the poet are that he announces that which no man has foretold.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

1 What are our poets, take them as they fall,
Good, bad, rich, poor, much read, not read at
all?

Them and their works in the same class you'll find—

They are the mere wastepaper of mankind.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Paper.

2 The poet is the truest historian.
JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE, Homer.

We call those poets who are first to mark
Through earth's dull mist the coming of the dawn,—

Who see in twilight's gloom the first pale spark,
While others only note that day is gone.

O. W. HOLMES, Memorial Verses: Shakespeare.
Poets, the first instructors of mankind.

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 449. (Dillon, tr.)

The true poet is all-knowing! he is an actual world in miniature.

NOVALIS, Fragment. (Carlyle, tr.)

3 A poet is that which by the Greeks is called κατ' ἐξοχήν, ὁ ποιητής, a maker, a feigner: . . .
from the word ποιεῖν, which means to make, to feign. Hence he is called a poet.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Poeta.

4 If men will impartially, and not asquint, look toward the offices and function of a poet, they will easily conclude to themselves the impossibility of any man's being a good poet without first being a good man.

BEN JONSON, Volpone: Dedication.

A poet's soul must contain the perfect shape of all things good, wise and just. His body must be spotless and without blemish, his life pure, his thoughts high, his studies intense.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, *Obiter Dicta: Second
Series: Milton*.

5 They shall be accounted poet kings
Who simply tell the most heart-easing things.
JOHN KEATS, Sleep and Poetry, l. 267.

6 Nothing is more certain than that great poets are no sudden prodigies but slow results.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Chaucer.

7 He who would not be frustrate of his hope to write well hereafter in laudable things ought himself to be a true poem.

MILTON, Apology for Smeectymnus.

He who would write heroic poems should make his whole life a heroic poem.

CARLYLE, Essays: Schiller.

8 A poet is a nightingale who sits in darkness and sings to cheer its own solitude with sweet sounds.

SHELLEY, A Defence of Poetry.

Poets are the heirophants of an unapprehended inspiration; the mirrors of the gigantic shadows which futurity casts upon the present.

SHELLEY, A Defence of Poetry.

9 The tadpole poet will never grow into anything bigger than a frog; not though in that stage of development he should puff and blow himself till he bursts with windy adulation at the heels of the laureled ox.

SWINBURNE, Under the Microscope.

II—Poets: Apothegms

10 An eager meagre servant of the Muses.
(Μουσῶν θεράπων ὀτηρηός.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 909.

11 They all are off their native heath—
Shake, Mulleary and Go-ethe.

H. C. BUNNER, Shake, Mulleary and Go-ethe.

12 When people say, "I've told you fifty times,"
They mean to scold, and very often do;
When poets say, "I've written fifty rhymes,"
They make you dread that they'll recite them too.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 108.

13 Spare the poet for his subject's sake.
COWPER, Charity, l. 636.

They best can judge a poet's worth,
Who oft themselves have known
The pangs of a poetic birth
By labours of their own.

COWPER, To Dr. Darwin. St. 2.

Poets! not in Arabia alone
You get beheaded when your skill is gone.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, The World's Way.

14 Idleness, that is the curse of other men, is the nurse of poets.

D'ARCY CRESSWELL, The Poet's Progress.

15 All men are poets at heart.

EMERSON, *Nature, Addresses, and Lectures:
Literary Ethics*.

Every man will be a poet if he can; otherwise a philosopher or man of science. This proves the superiority of the poet.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 11 April, 1852.

16 The experience of each new age requires a new confession, and the world seems always waiting for its poet.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: the Poet.

17 The poet's business is not to save the soul of man but to make it worth saving.

JAMES ELROY FLECKER. (UNTERMAYER, Modern British Poetry, p. 533.)

18 Those who err follow the poets.

The Koran. Ch. 26. The Oriental belief is that poets are prompted by devils with such scraps of angels' converse as they can hear by stealth.

1 Next to being a great poet, is the power of understanding one.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

2 He is upbraidingly called a Poet, as if it were a most contemptible nickname.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Jam Literæ Sordent.

Slight not the songsmith.

WILLIAM WATSON, England My Mother. Pt. i.

3 He does not write whose verses no one reads. (Non scribit, cujus carmina nemo legit.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, ep. 9, l. 2.

Enthusiast, go, unstring the lyre;

In vain thou sing'st if none admire,

How sweet soe'er the strain.

WILLIAM WHITEHEAD, The Enthusiast.

4 God's most candid critics are those of his children whom he has made poets.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH THE YOUNGER, Oxford Poetry, 1914: Preface.

5 The poet who does not revere his art, and believe in its sovereignty, is not born to wear the purple.

E. C. STEDMAN, Poets of America. Ch. 9.

6 For pointed satire I would Buckhurst choose, The best good man with the worst-natured muse.

JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF ROCHESTER, An allusion to Horace, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 64.

Thou best humour'd man with the worst humour'd muse.

GOLDSMITH, Retaliation; Postscript, last line. Quoted. Referring to Caleb Whitefoord.

But you're our partic'lar author, you're our patriot and our friend,

You're the poet of the cuss-word an' the swear.

EDGAR WALLACE, Tommy to his Laureate. Referring to Rudyard Kipling.

III—Poets: Born, Not Made

7 Sure there are poets which did never dream Upon Parnassus, nor did taste the stream Of Helicon; we therefore may suppose Those made not poets, but the poets those.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Cooper's Hill.

8 Each year new consuls and proconsuls are made; but not every year is a king or a poet born. (Consules fiunt quotannis et novi proconsules: Solus aut rex aut poeta non quotannis nascitur.)

FLORUS, De Qualitate Vitæ. Fragment 8. Hence the proverb, "Poeta nascitur, non fit," the poet is born, not made.

And, therefore, is an old proverb, Orator fit, poeta nascitur.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Apologie for Poetrie. (1595)

9 A good poet's made as well as born.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare.

10 The god makes not the poet; but

The thesis, vice-versa put,

Should Hebrew-wise be understood:

And means, the poet makes the god.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Epistle to Fleetwood Shepherd. No. i, l. 62.

11 No man is so born a poet but that he needs to be regenerated into a poetic artist.

JOHN STERLING, Essays and Tales: Thoughts and Images.

IV—Poets: Their Madness

12 All poets are mad.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Democritus to the Reader.

13 For that fine madness still he did retain,

Which rightly should possess a poet's brain.

DRAYTON, To Henry Reynolds: Of Poets and Poesy, l. 109.

The man is mad, or else he's writing verses. (Aut insanit homo aut versus facit.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 7, l. 117. The line is spoken by Davus, Horace's slave, referring to his master's eccentric habits.

14 Perhaps no person can be a poet, or even enjoy poetry, without a certain unsoundness of mind.

MACAULAY, Essays: Milton.

15 Prince of sweet songs made out of tears and fire,

A harlot was thy nurse, a God thy sire;

Shame soiled thy song, and song assoiled thy shame.

But from thy feet now death has washed the mire,

Love reads out first, at head of all our choir, Villon, our sad bad glad mad brother's name.

SWINBURNE, A Ballad of François Villon: Envoi.

Mad verse, sad verse, glad verse and bad verse.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET. Title of book. (1644)

How sad and mad and bad it was, But then, how it was sweet!

ROBERT BROWNING, Confessions.

V—Poets: Their Inspiration

16 Shuddering they drew her garments off—and found

A robe of sackcloth next the smooth, white skin.

Such, poets, is your bride, the Muse! young, gay,

Radiant, adorn'd outside; a hidden ground

Of thought and of austerity within.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Austerity of Poetry.

The world but feels the present's spell,
The poet feels the past as well;
Whatever men have done, might do,
Whatever thought, might think it too.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Bacchanalia. Pt. ii, l. 65.

Not deep the Poet sees, but wide.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Resignation, l. 212.

Poets, who bear buckets to the well
Of ampler draught.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. vi, l. 135.

2
For as nightingales do upon glow-worms feed,
So poets live upon the living light.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.

3
I cast my nets in many streams
To catch the silver fish of dreams.

KARLE WILSON BAKER, Poet Songs.

4
The "vision and the faculty divine"
Come not by dreaming; he whose eye is clear

To read the present, reads the future sign,
The truest seer.

HENRY MONTAGU BUTLER, The Seer. See 1529:8.

5
Homer's words are as costly and admirable to Homer as Agamemnon's victories are to Agamemnon.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

6
Like a Chimborazo under the line, running up from a torrid base through all the climates of the globe.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

With a poet, as with a mountain, the altitude is reckoned by the highest point.

R. U. JOHNSON, Poems of Fifty Years: Preface.

7
Do not judge the poet's life to be sad because of his plaintive verses and confessions of despair. Because he was able to cast off his sorrows into these writings, therefore went he onward free and serene to new experiences.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. v, p. 520.

Slow comes the verse that real woe inspires:
Grief unaffected suits but ill with art,
Or flowing numbers with a bleeding heart.

THOMAS TICKELL, To the Earl of Warwick, on the Death of Mr. Addison, l. 6.

8
'Tis one of the mysteries of our condition that the poet seems sometimes to have a mere talent,—a chamber in his brain into which an angel flies with divine messages, but the man, apart from this privilege, commonplace. . . .
Poets are not to be seen.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. x, p. 360.

9
Turnpike is one thing and blue sky another.
Let the poet, of all men, stop with his inspiration. The inexorable rule in the muse's court, either inspiration or silence, compels the bard to report only his supreme moments.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

10
If bright the sun, he tarries,
All day his song is heard;
And when he goes he carries
No more baggage than a bird.

EMERSON, The Poet.

Ever the Poet from the land
Steers his bark and trims his sail;
Right out to sea his courses stand,
New worlds to find in pinnace frail.

EMERSON, Quatrains: Poet.

Tell men what they knew before,
Paint the prospect from their door,
Give to barrows, trays, and pans
Grace and glimmer of romance.

EMERSON, Quatrain.

11
Whatever can happen to man has happened so often that little remains for fancy or invention. We have all been born; we have most of us been married; and so many have died before us, that our deaths can supply but few materials for a poet.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, ii, 408. (Hawkins, ed.)

Knowledge of the subject is to the poet what durable materials are to the architect.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, ii, 408.

To tell of disappointment and misery, to thicken
the darkness of futurity, and perplex the labyrinth of uncertainty, has always been a delicious employment of the poets.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, iv, 110.

12
A stewed poet; he doth sit like an unbraced drum, with one of his heads beaten out; for that you must note, a poet has two heads as a drum has: one for making, the other repeating.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News: Induction.

13
Bards of Passion and of Mirth,
Ye have left your souls on earth!
Ye have souls in heaven too,
Double-lived in regions new.

JOHN KEATS, Ode. Written on the blank page before Beaumont and Fletcher's The Fair Maid of the Inn, and thus addressed to these bards in particular.

14
As fire is kindled by fire, so is a poet's mind kindled by contact with a brother poet.

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry. No. 16.

15
Content, with meagre scrip and pilgrim staff, Singing he journeys through the changeful years;
At whiles, he stays to laugh with those that laugh;

Anon, his way lies through the Vale of Tears.
JAMES B. KENYON, The Singing Pilgrim.

He flings a Romany ballad
Out through his prison bars
And, deaf, he sings of nightingales
Or, blind, he sings of stars.
MARY SINTON LEITCH, The Poet.

1 Nine-tenths of the best poetry of the world has been written by poets less than thirty years old; a great deal more than half of it has been written by poets under twenty-five.
H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 147.

2 Read from some humbler poet,
Whose songs gushed from his heart,
As showers from the clouds of summer,
Or tears from the eyelids start;

Who, through long days of labor,
And nights devoid of ease,
Still heard in his soul the music
Of wonderful melodies.
LONGFELLOW, The Day Is Done.

3 Poets have forgotten that the first lesson of literature, no less than of life, is the learning how to burn your own smoke; that the way to be original is to be healthy; . . . and that to make the common marvellous . . . is the test of genius.
J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Chaucer.

4 A poet, soaring in the high region of his fancies, with his garland and singing robes about him.
MILTON, Reason of Church Government: Bk.
ii, Introduction.

5 Through moving waters of his mind
He daily drags thought's seine along,
Hoping within its mesh to find
A song!
J. R. MORELAND, The Poet.

6 Dreamer of dreams, born out of my due time,
Why should I strive to set the crooked
straight?

Let it suffice me that my murmuring rhyme
Beats with light wing against the ivory gate,
Telling a tale not too unfortunate
To those who in the sleepy region stay,
Lulled by the singer of an empty day.
WILLIAM MORRIS, Earthly Paradise: Apology.

7 Whether verses are good for aught, I doubt;
they have always been my bane. . . . Would that the Muses had looked away when I began to write, and Phœbus refused to aid me when my attempt was new. (An prosint, dubium, nocuerunt carmina semper; . . . Averssis utinam tetigissem carmina Musis, Phœ-bus et inceptum destituisset opus!)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 12, l. 13.

8 There is a god within us; we are in touch with heaven: from celestial places comes our inspiration. (Est deus in nobis, et sunt commercia cæli: Sedibus ætheriis spiritus ille venit.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 549.

9 To build from matter is sublimely great,
But gods and poets only can create.

WILLIAM PITT, To the Unknown Author of the Battle of the Sexes.

10 All good poets, epic as well as lyric, compose their beautiful poems not as works of art, but because they are inspired and possessed.

PLATO, Ion. Sec. 533.

Poets utter great and wise things which they do not themselves understand.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. ii, sec. 5.

11 If I could dwell Where Israfel
Hath dwelt, and he where I,—
He might not sing so wildly well
A mortal melody,

While a bolder note than his might swell
From my lyre within the sky.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, Israfel.

12 While pensive Poets painful vigils keep,
Sleepless themselves to give their readers
sleep.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 93.

13 Curs'd be the verse, how well soe'er it flow,
That tends to make one worthy man my foe,
Give Virtue scandal, Innocence a fear,
Or from the soft-eyed virgin steal a tear!

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 283.

14 Where stray ye, Muses! in what lawn or grove, . . .

In those fair fields where sacred Isis glides,
Or else where Cam his winding vales divides?

POPE, Pastorals: Summer, l. 23.

Rise, honest Muse! and sing the Man of Ross.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 250. The Man of Ross was John Kyrle, a public-spirited resident of Herefordshire.

15 Verse comes from Heav'n, like inward light;
Mere human pains can ne'er come by't;
The god, not we, the poem makes;
We only tell folks what he speaks.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Epistle to Fleetwood Shepherd, l. 41.

16 Sweet the exultance of song, but the strain that precedes it is sweeter,
And never was poem yet writ, but the meaning outmastered the metre.

RICHARD REALE, Indirection.

No song's pinions ever can
Quite out-soar the heart of man!

RICHARD ROWLEY, To a Poet.

1 The degree in which a poet's imagination dominates reality is, in the end, the exact measure of his importance and dignity.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, The Life of Reason. Vol. iv, p. 114.

2 O for a Muse of fire, that would ascend
The brightest heaven of invention.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V: Prologue, l. 1.

3 The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,
Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth
to heaven;
And as imagination bodies forth
The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen
Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing
ing

A local habitation and a name.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 12.

4 Thus, great with child to speak, and helpless
in my throes,
Biting my truant pen, beating myself for spite:
"Fool!" said my Muse to me, "look in thy heart, and write."

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet i.

For voices pursue him by day,
And haunt him by night,
And he listens, and needs must obey,
When the Angel says, "Write!"

LONGFELLOW, The Poet and His Songs.

Would you have your songs endure?
Build on the human heart!

ROBERT BROWNING, Sordello. Bk. ii.

"Give me a theme," the little poet cried,
"And I will do my part,"
"Tis not a theme you need," the world replied;
"You need a heart."

R. W. GILDER, Wanted, a Theme.

5 The poet in a golden clime was born,
With golden stars above;
Dower'd with the hate of hate, the scorn of scorn,

The love of love.

TENNYSON, The Poet.

6 Vex not thou the poet's mind
With thy shallow wit;
Vex not thou the poet's mind,
For thou canst not fathom it.
Clear and bright it should be ever,
Flowing like a crystal river,
Bright as light, and clear as wind.

TENNYSON, The Poet's Mind.

7 The Poet gathers fruit from every tree, Yea, grapes from thorns and figs from thistles
he.

Plucked by his hand, the basest weed that grows

Towers to a lily, reddens to a rose.

WILLIAM WATSON, Four Epigrams.

The statue—Buonarroti said—doth wait,
Thrall'd in the block for me to liberate.
The poem—saith the poet—wanders free
Till I betray it to captivity.

WILLIAM WATSON, Four Epigrams.

VI—Poets: Their Virtues

8 Happy who in his verse can gently steer
From grave to light, from pleasant to severe.
(Heureux qui, dans ses vers, sait d'une voix légère

Passer de grave au doux, du plaisant au sévère.)

BOILEAU, L'Art Poétique. Canto i, l. 75. (Dryden, tr.)

Form'd by thy converse, happily to steer
From grave to gay, from lively to severe.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 379.

9 O brave poets, keep back nothing,
Nor mix falsehood with the whole!
Look up Godward; speak the truth in Worthy song from earnest soul:
Hold, in high poetic duty,
Truest Truth the fairest Beauty!

E. B. BROWNING, The Dead Pan. St. 39.

10 I reckon, when I count at all,
First Poets—then the Sun—
Then Summer—then the Heaven of God—
And then the list is done.
But looking back—the first so seems
To comprehend the whole—
The others look a needless show,
So I write Poets—All.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. vi, No. 9.

11 True poets are the guardians of the state.
WENTWORTH DILLON, *Essay on Translated
Verse*, l. 356.

12 There was never poet who had not the heart
in the right place.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success.

13 By many hands the work of God is done, Swart toil, pale thought, flushed dream, he spurneth none:

Yea! and the weaver of a little rhyme
Is seen his worker in his own full time.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, English Poems: Inscription, p. 105.

14 All that is best in the great poets of all countries is not what is national in them, but what is universal.

LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 20.

15 The clear, sweet singer with the crown of snow

Not whiter than the thoughts that housed below!

J. R. LOWELL, Epistle to George William Curtis: Postscript, l. 43.

<sup>1</sup> "But how divine is utterance!" she said. "As we to the brutes, poets are to us."

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways. Ch. 16.

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 75.

The flower of poets. (Flos poetarum.)

PLAUTUS, Casina: Prologue, l. 18.

He could songs make and well indite.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 95.

<sup>3</sup> Let me for once presume t' instruct the times,
To know the Poet from the man of rhymes:
'Tis he who gives my breast a thousand pains,
Can make me feel each passion that he feigns,
Enrage, compose, with more than magic art,
With pity and with terror tear my heart,
And snatch me o'er the earth, or thro' the air,
To Thebes, to Athens, when he will, and where.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. i, l. 340.

The varying verse, the full resounding line,
The long majestic march, and energy divine.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. i, l. 268. Referring to Dryden.

<sup>4</sup> I learnt life from the poets.

MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne. Bk. xviii, ch. 5.

<sup>5</sup> He is a poet strong and true
Who loves wild thyme and honey-dew;
And like a brown bee works and sings
With morning freshness on his wings,
And a golden burden on his thighs,—
The pollen-dust of centuries!

MAURICE THOMPSON, Wild Honey.

<sup>6</sup> Blessings be with them—and eternal praise,
Who gave us nobler loves, and nobler cares,—

The Poets, who on earth have made us heirs
Of truth and pure delight by heavenly lays!
WORDSWORTH, Personal Talk. Sonnet iv.

UNKNOWN, Inscription, on the tomb of William Cowper, l. 10. (See HAYLEY, Life of Cowper. Vol. iv, p. 189.)

VII—Poets: Their Shortcomings

<sup>8</sup> I agree with one of your reputable critics that a taste for drawing-rooms has spoiled more poets than ever did a taste for gutters.

THOMAS BEER, The Mauve Decade, p. 235.

<sup>9</sup> "Poets needs must be
Or men or women—more's the pity"—"Ah,

But men, and still less women, happily,
Scarce need be poets."

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ii, l. 90.

<sup>10</sup> I do distrust the poet who discerns
No character or glory in his times.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. v, l. 189.

Your poet who sings how Greeks
That never were, in Troy which never was,
Did this or the other impossible great thing.

ROBERT BROWNING, Mr. Sludge "The Medium."

<sup>11</sup> Yet half the beast is the great god Pan,
To laugh as he sits by the river,

Making a poet out of a man:
The true gods sigh for the cost and the pain—
For the reed that grows nevermore again
As a reed with the reeds in the river.

E. B. BROWNING, A Musical Instrument.

<sup>12</sup> I have never yet known a poet who did not think himself the best. (Adhuc neminem cognovi poetam, qui sibi non optimum videretur.)
CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v,
ch. 22, sec. 63.

<sup>13</sup> The worst tragedy for a poet is to be admired through being misunderstood.

JEAN COCTEAU, Le Rappel à l'Ordre, p. 10.

<sup>14</sup> Poor slaves in metre, dull and addle-pated,
Who rhyme below ev'n David's Psalms translated.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 402.

Poets, like disputants, when reasons fail,
Have one sure refuge left, and that's to rail.

DRYDEN, All for Love: Epilogue, l. 1.

<sup>15</sup> Poets have often nothing poetical about them except their verses.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

Poets are prosy in their common talk,
As the fast trotters, for the most part, walk.

O. W. HOLMES, The Banker's Secret.

<sup>16</sup> Our poets are men of talents who sing, and not the children of music.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

<sup>17</sup> Of course poets have morals and manners of their own, and custom is no argument with them.

THOMAS HARDY, Hand of Ethelberta. Ch. 2.

<sup>18</sup> Beggar is jealous of beggar and poet of poet.
(Καὶ πτωχὸς πτωχῷ φθονεῖ καὶ δοῦδὸς δοῦδῳ.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 26.

Envy's a sharper spur than pay:
No author ever spar'd a brother;
Wits are gamecocks to one another.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Elephant and the Bookseller, l. 74.

Poets are sultans, if they had their will;
For every author would his brother kill.

ROGER B. ORRERY, Prologues.

Every poet in his kind

Is bit by him that comes behind.

SWIFT, On Poetry: A Rhapsody, l. 341.

1 That poets should be mediocre, neither men, nor gods, nor booksellers ever permitted. (Mediocribus esse poetis Non homines, non di, non concessere columnæ.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 372.

Third-rate poets no one knows, and but few know those who are good. (Mediocres poetas nemo novit; bonos pauci.)

TACITUS, Dialogues de Oratoribus. Sec. 10.

Let's strive to be the best; the Gods, we know it, Pillars and men, hate an indifferent Poet.

ROBERT HERRICK, Parcel-gilt Poetry.

For there's no second-rate in poetry.

JOHN OLDHAM, An Ode on St. Cecilia's Day.

2 Men of sense fear to come in contact with a raging poet. (Vesanum tetigisse timent fugientque poetam Qui sapiunt.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 455.

All these fear verses and detest poets. (Omnes hi metuunt versus, odere poetas.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 33.

I hate all Boets and Bainters.

GEORGE I OF ENGLAND. (CAMPBELL, Life of Lord Mansfield, ch. 30, note.)

But was there ever such stuff as the great part of Shakespeare? Is it not sad stuff? But one must not say so.

GEORGE III OF ENGLAND, Remark, to Miss Burney.

3 Doctors undertake a doctor's work; carpenters handle carpenter's tools: but, skilled or unskilled, we scribble poetry, all alike.

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 116.

6 The passionate heart of the poet is whirl'd into folly and vice.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 4.

7 Dear Madam, take it from me, no Man . . . is more dreadful than a Poet.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. (1672)

I am as barren and hidebound as one of your scribbling poets.

WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act i, sc. 2.

VIII—The Poet and His Song

See also Song and Singer

8 Dropped feathers from the wings of God
My little songs and snatches are.

KARLE WILSON BAKER, Poet Songs.

9 And I made a rural pen,
And I stained the water clear,
And I wrote my happy songs
Every child may joy to hear.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Reeds of Innocence.

10 Content, as random fancies might inspire,
If his weak harp at times or lonely lyre
He struck with desultory hand, and drew
Some softened tones, to Nature not untrue.

W. L. BOWLES, Sonnet.

11 O my uncared-for songs, what are ye worth,
That in my secret book, with so much care,
I write you, this one here and this one there,
Marking the time and order of your birth?

ROBERT BRIDGES, The Growth of Love. St. 51.

12 Many tender souls
Have strung their losses on a rhyming thread,
As children cowslips.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 946.

13 Piping a vagrant ditty free from Care.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Pastoral Pictures.

14 Some rhyme a neebor's name to lash;
Some rhyme (vain thought!) for needfu' cash;

Some rhyme to court the country clash,
An' raise a din;

For me, an aim I never fash—

I rhyme for fun.

BURNS, Epistle to James Smith. St. 5.

I am nae poet, in a sense,
But just a rhymmer like by chance,
An' hae to learning nae pretence;

Yet, what the matter?

Whene'er my Muse does on me glance,

I jingle at her.

BURNS, Epistle to John Lapraik. St. 9.

15 There is a pleasure in poetic pains

Which only poets know.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 285. Quoted by Wordsworth, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Sonnet xix, l. 1.

16 Yea, though he sang not, he was unto song

A light, a benediction.

JOHN DRINKWATER, The Dead Critic.

1
Good people all, of every sort,
Give ear unto my song;
And if you find it wondrous short,
It cannot hold you long.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Elegy on the Death of a Mad Dog.

2
To write a verse or two, is all the praise
That I can raise.

GEORGE HERBERT, Praise.

I sing of brooks, of blossoms, birds, and bowers,
Of April, May, of June, and July flowers;
I sing of May-poles, hock-carts, wassails, wakes,
Of bridegrooms, brides, and of their bridal-cakes.
I write of Youth, of Love, and have access
By these, to sing of cleanly wantonness.
I sing of dews, of rains, and, piece by piece,
Of balm, of oil, of spice, and ambergris.
I sing of times trans-shifting; and I write
How roses first came red, and lilies white.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Argument of His Book.

I sometimes sit beneath a tree
And read my own sweet songs.

O. W. HOLMES, The Last Reader.

I know not why, but even to me
My songs seem sweet when read to thee.

HENRY TIMROD, A Trifle.

4
For dear to Gods and man is sacred song.
Self-taught I sing; by Heav'n, and Heav'n
alone,

The genuine seeds of poesy are sown.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxii, l. 382. (Pope, tr.)

5
A humble bard, I fashion laborious songs.
(Operosa parvus Carmina fingo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 2, l. 31.

But if you rank me among lyric bards,
With my exalted head I touch the stars.
(Quodsi me lyricis vatibus inseris, Sublimi feriam sidera vertice.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 1, l. 35.

6
My poesy was, "The deeper, the sweeter."

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act ii, sc. 4.

7
But since the world with writing is possest,
I'll versify in spite; and do my best
To make as much waste-paper as the rest.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 23. (Dryden, tr.)

8
Could I but speak it and show it,
This pleasure more sharp than pain,
That baffles and lures me so,
The world should once more have a poet,
Such as it had
In the ages glad,
Long ago!

J. R. LOWELL, In the Twilight.

9
Lo! he am I whose light verse yields to none;

Reader, thy love, not awe, methinks I've won.
Let greater men strike loftier notes: I earn Enough if my small themes oft to thy hands return.

(Ille ego sum nulli nugarum laude secundus,
Quem non miraris sed puto, lector, amas.
Majores majora sonent: mihi parva locuto
Sufficit in vestras sæpe redire manus.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, epig. 1.

10 Better be a cornfed bard, writing lyrics by the yard, with an appetite so gay it won't balk at prairie hay, than to have a mighty pile, and forget the way to smile!

WALT MASON, Plutocrat and Poet.

11
More safe I sing with mortal voice, unchang'd
To hoarse or mute, though fall'n on evil days,
On evil days though fall'n, and evil tongues.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 24.

12
My unpremeditated verse.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 24.

And as in Beauty's bower he pensive sate,
Pour'd forth this unpremeditated lay,
To charms as fair as those that soothed his happier day.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 84.

The unpremeditated lay.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel: Introduction, l. 18.

A bard here dwelt, more fat than bard beseems
Who, void of envy, guile, and lust of gain,
On virtue still, and nature's pleasing themes,
Poured forth his unpremeditated strain.

JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence.
Canto i, st. 68. Thomson himself is meant by "a bard here dwelt," and in a footnote he says: "The following lines of this stanza were writ by a friend of the author." The friend is supposed to have been Lord Lyttelton.

13
As yet a child, nor yet a fool to fame,
I lisp'd in numbers, for the numbers came.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 127.

In numbers warmly pure and sweetly strong.
WILLIAM COLLINS, Ode to Simplicity, l. 3.

By magic numbers and persuasive sound.

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act i, sc. 1.

To add to golden numbers golden numbers.

THOMAS DEKKER, Patient Grissell. Act i, sc. 1.

14
For I was taught in Paradise
To ease my breast of melodies.

SHELLEY, Faery Song.

15
And song is as foam that the sea-winds fret,
Though the thought at its heart should be deep as the sea.

SWINBURNE, Poems and Ballads. Second Series: Dedication.

16
Ring out, ring out my mournful rhymes,
But ring the fuller minstrel in!

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cvi, st. 5.

- 1
I do but sing because I must,
And pipe but as the linnets sing.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xxi, st. 6.
- I sing but as the linnet sings.
GOETHE, Wilhelm Meister: Bk. ii, ch. 11, The Harper's Song. (Carlyle, tr.)
- Soft as a bubble sung
Out of a linnet's lung.
RALPH HODGSON, Eve.
- I was singing as a bird mourns. (Je chantais comme l'oiseau gémit.)
LAMARTINE, Le Poète Mourant.
- 2
The Doric reed once more
Well-pleased, I tune.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 3.
- 3
I, too, have songs; me also the shepherds call a poet, but I trust them not. For as yet, methinks, I sing nothing worthy of a Varius or a Cinna, but cackle as a goose among melodious swans. (Sed argutos inter strepere anser olores.)
VERGIL, Eclogues. No. lx, l. 33.
- When to my haughty spirit I rehearse
My verse,
Faulty enough it seems; yet sometimes when
I measure it by that of other men,
Why, then—
I see how easily it might be worse.
J. T. TROWBRIDGE, An Odious Comparison.
- 4
Wake, Betsy, wake, my sweet galoot!
Rise up, fair lady, while I touch my lute!
ARTEMUS WARD, Among the Fenians.
- 5
I sound my barbaric yawp over the roofs of
the world.
WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 52.
- 6
If I had peace to sit and sing,
Then I could make a lovely thing;
But I am stung with goads and whips,
So I build songs like iron ships.
Let it be something for my song,
If it is sometimes swift and strong.
ANNA WICKHAM, The Singer.
- 7
Surely there was a time I might have trod
The sunlit heights, and from life's dissonance
Struck one clear chord to reach the ears of God.
OSCAR WILDE, Helas! Lines prefixed to his poems, Paris edition, 1903.
- 8
I have seized life by the poetic side.
FRANZ WOEPKKE. (EMERSON, Journals, 1868.)
- 9
The moving accident is not my trade;
To freeze the blood I have no ready arts:
'Tis my delight, alone in summer shade,
To pipe a simple song for thinking hearts.
WORDSWORTH, Hart-leap Well. Pt. ii, st. 1.

- He murmurs near the running brooks
A music sweeter than their own.
WORDSWORTH, A Poet's Epitaph, l. 39.
- The harvest of a quiet eye
That broods and sleeps on his own heart.
WORDSWORTH, A Poet's Epitaph, l. 51.

POISON

- 10
When the Fates will, two poisons work for good. (Cum fata volunt, bina venena juvant.)
AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. iii, l. 12.
- Venom destroys venom.
LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus xxi, l. 156.
- 11
The gnat that sings his summer's song
Poison gets from Slander's tongue;
The poison of the snake and newt
Is the sweat of Envy's foot;
The poison of the honey-bee
Is the artist's jealousy; . . .
The strongest poison ever known
Came from Cæsar's laurel crown.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence, l. 45.
- 12
The poisons are our principal medicines,
which kill the disease, and save the life.
EMERSON, *Conduct of Life: Considerations by
the Way*.
- 13
Tobacco, coffee, alcohol, hashish, prussic acid, strychnine, are weak dilutions: the surest poison is time.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.
- 14
The coward's weapon, poison.
PHINEAS FLETCHER, Sicelides. Act v, sc. 3.
- 15
One drop of poison infecteth the whole tun
of wine.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 39.
- A little poison embitters much sweetness.
UNKNOWN, Old English Homilies. Ser. i, p.
23. (c. 1175)
- 16
One man's meat is another man's poison.
(Quod aliis cibus est, aliis fuat acre venenum.)
LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 638.
- What's one man's poison, signior,
Is another's meat or drink.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act
iii, sc. 2.
- And one man's meat, another's poison is.
JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Works, p. 254.
- Wan Lo has made an amazing discovery.
"I have found," he cries,
"That what is one man's poison
Is another man's poison."
HENRY HARRISON, Wan Lo Tanka.
- 17
A little poison now and then: that causeth pleasant dreams; and much poison at last for an easy death.
NIETZSCHE, Thus Spake Zarathustra. Sec. 5.

1 Wicked poisons lurk in sweet honey. (Inpia sub dulci melle venena latent.)

    OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 104.
See also SWEETNESS: SWEET AND BITTER.

2 I know too well the poison and the sting
Of things too sweet.
    ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Per Pacem ad Lucem.

3 Poison is drunk from cups of gold. (Venenum in auro bibitur.)
    SENECA, Thyestes, l. 453.

Poison is poison though it comes in a golden cup.
    THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 705. (1630)

4 I bought an unction of a mountebank,
So mortal that, but dip a knife in it,
Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue Under the moon, can save the thing from death

That is but scratch'd withal.
    SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 142.

Then, venom, to thy work.
    SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 333.

5 In poison there is physic.
    SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 1, l. 137.

Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth.
    SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act i, sc. 1, l. 213.

6 They love not poison that do poison need.
    SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 6, l. 38.

7                     Let me have
A dram of poison, such soon-speeding gear
As will disperse itself through all the veins
That the life-weary taker may fall dead
And that the trunk may be discharg'd of breath
As violently as hasty powder fir'd
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.
    SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 1,
    l. 59.

8 Oh! you do bear a poison in your mind
That would not let you rest in Paradise.
    CHARLES JEREMIAH WELLS, Joseph and His Brethren. Act iii, sc. 1.

9 He kissed her cold corpse a thousand times o'er,
And called her his jewel though she was no
more;
And he drank all the pison like a lovyer so brave,
And Villikins and Dinah lie buried in one grave.

    UNKNOWN, Villikins and Dinah. George Augustus Sala (Autobiography) states that this ballad is older than the age of Elizabeth; modern version interpolated by Henry Mayhew in his Wandering Minstrel.

POLAND

10 Hope of the half-defeated; house of gold,
Shrine of the sword and tower of ivory.
    HILAIRE BELLOC.

Mr. Belloc has put the Polish ideal into lines dedicated to a great Polish shrine.
    CHESTERTON, Generally Speaking, p. 53.

11 She, like the eagle, will renew her age,
And fresh historic plumes of Fame put on,— Another Athens after Marathon,
Where eloquence shall fulmine, arts refine.
    THOMAS CAMPBELL, Lines on Poland, l. 30.

12 He smote the sledded Polacks on the ice.
    SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 63.

13                     The heart of Poland hath not ceased
To quiver, tho' her sacred blood doth drown
The fields, and out of every smouldering town
Cries to Thee.
    TENNYSON, Poland, l. 3.

POLICE

14 Ah, take one consideration with another—
A policeman's lot is not a happy one.
    W. S. GILBERT, The Pirates of Penzance. Act ii.

15 A fiend, a fury, pitiless and rough;
A wolf, nay, worse, a fellow all in buff;
A back-friend, a shoulder-clapper, one that countermands
The passages of alleys, creeks and narrow lands;
A hound that runs counter and yet draws dry-foot well;
One that before the judgement carries poor souls to hell.
    SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iv,
    sc. 2, l. 35.

16 Thou art pinch'd for't now.
    SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act v, sc. 1, l. 74.

17 Policemen are soldiers who act alone; soldiers are policemen who act in unison.
    HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iii, ch. 21,
    sec. 8.

18 A lidless watcher of the public weal.
    TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iv, l. 306.

19 You'll be copped, then.
    THOMAS TERRELL, Lady Delmar. Act i.

There were cries of "Coppers, coppers!" in the yard.

I—Politics: Definitions

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. i, ch. 1, sec. 10. The complete quotation is: "And why man is a political animal in a greater measure than any bee or any gregarious animal, is clear. For nature, as we declare, does nothing without purpose, and man alone of the animals possesses speech."

Learn'd or unlearn'd, we all are politicians.

SOAME JENYNS, Imitations of Horace. Bk. ii, epis. 1.

<sup>2</sup> There is no gambling like politics.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 82.

There is nothing in which the power of circumstances is more evident than in politics.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Life of Bentinck.

<sup>3</sup> A good deal of our politics is physiological.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

<sup>4</sup> Politics, like religion, hold up torches of martyrdom to the reformers of error.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol xiii, p. 69.

There is a holy, mistaken zeal in politics, as well as religion. By persuading others we convince ourselves.

JUNIUS, Letters. Letter 35, 19 Dec., 1769.

<sup>5</sup> Those who would treat politics and morality apart will never understand the one or the other.

JOHN MORLEY, Rousseau, p. 380.

<sup>6</sup> Politics is the science of exigencies.

THEODORE PARKER, Ten Sermons: Of Truth.

<sup>7</sup> It is the first business of men, the school to mediocrity, to the covetously ambitious a sty, to the dullard his amphitheatre, arms of Titans to the desperately enterprising, Olympus to the genius.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways. Ch. i. Of Politics.

<sup>8</sup> There is no more perfect endowment in man than political virtue.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides and Marcus Cato. Ch. 3.

<sup>9</sup> I tell you Folks, all Politics is Apple Sauce.

WILL ROGERS, The Illiterate Digest, p. 30.

<sup>10</sup> Those two amusements for all fools of eminence, Politics or Poetry.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 43.

Politics and theology are the only two really great subjects.

HARRIET GROTE. Quoted by W. E. Gladstone,

Letter to Lord Rosebery, 16 Sept., 1880. (MORLEY, Life of Gladstone. Bk. viii, ch. 1.)

<sup>11</sup> Politics is perhaps the only profession for which no preparation is thought necessary.

R. L. STEVENSON, Yoshida-Torajiro.

We trust a man with making constitutions on less proof of competence than we should demand before we gave him our shoe to patch.

J. R. LOWELL, On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners.

<sup>12</sup> Politics . . . are but the cigar-smoke of a man.

H. D. THOREAU, Walking.

<sup>13</sup> Politics I conceive to be nothing more than the science of the ordered progress of society along the lines of greatest usefulness and convenience to itself.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, Pan-American Scientific Congress. Washington, 6 Jan., 1916.

II—Politics: Apothegms

<sup>14</sup> Politics, indeed, make strange bedfellows.

JOHN SPENCER BASSETT, Life of Andrew Jackson, p. 351.

<sup>15</sup> Politics fill me with doubt and dizziness.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Fine Weather on the Diogenia. Pt. i, st. 4.

<sup>16</sup> Magnanimity in politics is not seldom the truest wisdom; and a great empire and little minds go ill together.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America.

<sup>18</sup> In politics, what begins in fear usually ends in folly.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 5 Oct., 1830.

<sup>19</sup> The practice of politics in the East may be defined by one word—dissimulation.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming. Pt. v, ch. 10.

<sup>20</sup> In politics experiments mean revolutions.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Popanilla. Ch. 4. Note, dated 1828.

Finality is not the language of politics.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 28 Feb., 1859.

<sup>21</sup> As I sat opposite the Treasury Bench, the Ministers reminded me of those marine landscapes not unusual on the coasts of South America. You behold a range of exhausted volcanoes.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech. Manchester, 3 April, 1872.

1 No politics disturb their mind.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Logicians Refuted, l. 24.

Politics we bar, They are not our bent.
W. S. GILBERT, Princess Ida. Act i.

2 It is the good of public life that it supplies agreeable topics and general conversation.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters. Vol. i, p. 343.

3 Agitate, agitate, agitate.

LORD MELBOURNE. (TORRENS, Life of Lord Melbourne. Vol. i, p. 320.) See also under ACTION.

4 The immemorial political-economic principle that it never will get well if you pick it.

H. L. MENCKEN, What is Going on in the World. (American Mercury, Nov., 1933, p. 257.)

5 In political discussion heat is in inverse proportion to knowledge.

J. G. C. MINCHIN, The Growth of Freedom in the Balkan Peninsula.

When quacks with pills political would dope us
When politics absorbs the livelong day,
I like to think about the star Canopus,
So far, so far away! . . .

For after one has had about a week of
The arguments of friends as well as foes,
A star that has no parallax to speak of Conduces to repose.

BERT LESTON TAYLOR, Canopus.

6 The quicksands of politics.

BASIL MONTAGUE, Essays: Bacon's Works.

7 There is no Canaan in politics.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech: Public Opinion, 28 Jan., 1852.

8 Civilization dwarfs political machinery.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, on the election of Lincoln, 7 Nov., 1860.

9 'Tis not juggling that is to be blamed, but much juggling, for the world cannot be governed without it.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Juggling.

10 Political changes should never be made save after overcoming great resistance.

SPENCER, Principles of Ethics. Sec. 468.

III—Politics: Their Corruption

11 The age of virtuous politics is past.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 493.

12 I am sufficiently behind the scenes to know the worth of political life. I am quite an infidel about it, and shall never be converted.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 43.

13 What a vicious practice is this of our politicians at Washington pairing off! as if one man who votes wrong, going away, could excuse you, who mean to vote right, for going away; or as if your presence did not tell in more ways than in your vote. Suppose the three hundred heroes at Thermopylæ had paired off with three hundred Persians: would it have been all the same to Greece, and to history?

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

14 Politics is a deleterious profession, like some poisonous handicrafts.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power.

In politics and in trade, bruisers and pirates are of better promise than talkers and clerks.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

There is a certain satisfaction in coming down to the lowest ground of politics, for we get rid of cant and hypocrisy.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon.

15 They politics like ours profess,
The greater prey upon the less.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Grotto, l. 69.

16 State-business is a cruel trade; good-nature is a bungler in it.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 217.

17 You can't adopt politics as a profession and remain honest.

LOUIS MCHENRY HOWE, Address, to Columbia University School of Journalism, 17 Jan., 1933.

No man, I fear, can effect great benefits for his country without some sacrifice of the minor virtues.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir.)

Scrupulous people are not suited to great affairs.

TURGOT.

18 O ye who lead, Take heed!

Blindness we may forgive, but baseness we will smite.

WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY, An Ode in Time of Hesitation.

19 With what grace could I face the men who were driven out of the Republican party by the crooked work at the convention of 1912, and ask them to support for President the head devil [Elihu Root] of the whole thing? How could I face them and say, "The emergency is so great that I must ask you to forget the burglary of 1912, and put this unconvicted felon in the White House?"

THEODORE ROOSEVELT. (THOMPSON: Presidents I've Known, p. 204.)

20 In public life, instead of modesty, incorruptibility, and honesty, shamelessness, bribery, and rapacity hold sway. (Ad rem publicam

... pro pudore, pro abstentia, pro virtute, audacia, largito, avarita vigeabant.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Sec. 3.

1 In politics I am sure it is even a Machiavelian holy maxim, "That some men should be ruined for the good of others."

SWIFT, Essay on English Bubbles.

The public path of life Is dirty.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 373.

IV—Politics: Their Reformation

2 To convince a poor voter by the common argument of promised reforms is merely to corrupt him with hope.

CHARLES JOHN DARLING, Scintillæ Juris.

3 When shall the softer, saner politics, Whereof we dream, have play in each proud land?

THOMAS HARDY, Departure, l. 11.

4 The purification of politics is an iridescent dream. Government is force. . . . The Decalogue and the Golden Rule have no place in a political campaign. . . . The commander who lost the battle through the activity of his moral nature would be the derision and jest of history.

JOHN J. INGALLS, Article, New York World, 1890.

5 Most schemes of political improvement are very laughable things.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, ii, 102.)

6 As it was in the beginning,

Is to-day official sinning,

And shall be for evermore.

RUDYARD KIPLING, A General Summary.

V—Politics: Measures Not Men

7 Measures, not men.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letter, 6 March, 1742;

EARL OF SHELburne, Letter, 11 July, 1765.

Measures, not men, have always been my mark.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act ii, sc. 1. (1768)

8 It is necessary that I should qualify the doctrine of its being not men, but measures, that I am determined to support. In a monarchy it is the duty of parliament to look at the men as well as at the measures.

LORD BROUGHAM, Speech, House of Commons. Nov., 1830.

9 Of this stamp is the cant of "Not men but measures"; a sort of charm by which many people get loose from every honourable engagement.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents. (1770)

10 Away with the cant of "Measures, not men!"—the idle supposition that it is the harness and not the horses that draw the chariot along. No Sir, if the comparison must be made, if the distinction must be taken, men are everything, measures comparatively nothing.

GEORGE CANNING, Speech, against the Adding-ton Ministry, 1801.

11 It used to be an applauded political maxim, "Measures, not men." I venture to denounce the soundness of this maxim, and to propose "Men, not measures." . . . Better a hundred times an honest administration of an erroneous policy than a corrupt administration of a good one.

E. J. PHELPS, Address, at dinner N. Y. Chamber of Commerce, 19 Nov., 1889.

VI—Politics: Parties

12 All political parties die at last of swallowing their own lies.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT. (RICHARD GARNETT, Life of Emerson, p. 165.)

13 When great questions end, little parties begin.

WALTER BAGEHOT, English Constitution, p. 261.

14 Party divisions, whether on the whole operating for good or evil, are things inseparable from free government.

EDMUND BURKE, Observations on a Publication, "The Present State of the Nation."

15 Being of no party,

I shall offend all parties:—never mind!

My words, at least, are more sincere and hearty

Than if I sought to sail before the wind.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ix, st. 26.

16 In these days, more emphatically than ever, "to live, signifies to unite with a party or to make one."

CARLYLE, Signs of the Times.

17 Party honesty is party expediency.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Interview, New York Commercial Advertiser. 19 Sept., 1889.

They have proved themselves offensive partisans and unscrupulous manipulators of local party management.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Letter to George William Curtis, 25 Dec., 1884.

18 To sacrifice one's honour to one's party is so unselfish an act that our most generous statesmen have not hesitated to do it.

CHARLES JOHN DARLING, Scintillæ Juris.

I always voted at my party's call,
And never thought of thinking for myself at all!
I thought so little, they rewarded me

By making me the ruler of the Queen's navee!
W. S. GILBERT, Pinafore. Act i.

1 Party is organized opinion.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, Oxford, 25 Nov., 1864.

2 I believe that without party Parliamentary Government is impossible.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, Manchester, 3 April, 1872.

All free governments are party governments.

JAMES A. GARFIELD, Remarks, on the death of Levi P. Morton, House of Representatives, 18 Jan., 1878.

3 Still violent, whatever cause he took,
But most against the party he forsook;
For renegadoes, who ne'er turn by halves,
Are bound in conscience to be double knaves.
DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 364.

4 At home the hateful names of parties cease,
And factious souls are wearied into peace.
DRYDEN, Astræa Redux, l. 312.

5 The vice of our leading parties in this country is that they do not plant themselves on the deep and necessary grounds to which they are respectively entitled, but lash themselves to fury in the carrying of some local and momentary measure, nowise useful to the commonwealth. Of the two great parties which at this hour almost share the nation between them, I should say that one has the best cause, and the other contains the best men.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.

In our political parties, compute the power of badges and emblems. See the great ball which they roll from Baltimore to Bunker Hill! Witness the cider-barrel, the log-cabin, the hickory-stick, the palmetto.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

6 Who, born for the universe, narrow'd his mind,
And to party gave up what was meant for mankind.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 31.

7 The best party is but a kind of conspiracy against the rest of the nation. . . . Ignorance maketh men go into a party, and shame keepeth them from going out of it.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 225.

8 He serves his party best who serves the country best.

RUTHERFORD B. HAYES, Inaugural Address, 5 March, 1877.

He serves me most who serves his country best.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. x, l. 201. (Pope, tr.)

9 If I could not go to heaven but with a party,
I would not go there at all.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Francis Hopkinson, 1789.

10 Faction, Disappointment's restless child.

SOAME JENYNS, On the Late Attempt on His Majesty's Life.

And clamorous Faction, gagged and bound,
Gasping its life out on the ground.

RICHARD REALE, Apocalypse.

11 Our differences are policies, our agreements principles.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY, Speech, at Des Moines, 1901.

12 A party of order or stability and a party of progress or reform are both necessary elements of a healthy state of political life.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 2.

13 Any party which takes credit for the rain must not be surprised if its opponents blame it for the drought.

DWIGHT W. MORROW, Campaign Speech, Oct., 1930.

14 Party-spirit, which at best is but the madness of many, for the gain of a few.

POPE, Letter to Blount, 27 Aug., 1714.

Party is the madness of the many for the gain of a few.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects. Sometimes mistakenly ascribed to Swift.

15 A good party is better than the best man that ever lived.

THOMAS B. REED. (W. A. ROBINSON, Life.)

16 The first advice I have to give the party is that it should clean its slate.

LORD ROSEBERY, Speech, Chesterfield, 16 Dec., 1901.

17 You tell me I am a party man. I hope I shall always be so.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 1.

18 He shall be disfranchised who, in time of faction, takes neither side.

SOLOX, Tables of the Law. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 20.)

19 When I first came into Parliament, Mr. Tierney, a great Whig authority, used always to say that the duty of an Opposition was very simple—it was to oppose everything and propose nothing.

LORD STANLEY, Debate, 4 June, 1841.

The Duty of an Opposition is to oppose.

LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, quoting George Tierney.

VII—Politics: Liberal and Conservative

<sup>1</sup> He belonged to the third party, the quiddists or quids, being the tertium quid, . . . which had no name, but was really an anti-Madison movement.

HENRY ADAMS, John Randolph, p. 182.

<sup>2</sup> You want a seat? Then boldly sate your itch;

Be very radical, and very rich.

ALFRED AUSTIN, The Golden Age.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 28 Feb., 1845.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 17 March, 1845. See CONSERVATISM.

<sup>5</sup> It [Liberalism] is the introduction into the practical business of life of the highest kind—namely, politics—of philosophical ideas instead of political principle.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 5 June, 1848.

The liberal deviseth liberal things; and by liberal things shall he stand.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxxii, 8.

<sup>6</sup> What is a communist? One who has yearnings

For equal division of unequal earnings.

EBENEZER ELLIOT, Epigram.

Parlor bolshevism.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Metropolitan Magazine, June, 1918.

<sup>7</sup> The Democratic party is the party of the Poor marshalled against the Rich. . . . But they are always officered by a few self-seeking deserters from the Rich or Whig party.

EMERSON, Journals, 1857.

The Democratic party is like a mule—without pride of ancestry or hope of posterity.

EMORY STORRS, Speech, during campaign of 1888. Also attributed to William C. Linton, Ignatius Donnelly and Judge Gay Gordon.

The Democratic party is like a man riding backward in a railroad car; it never sees anything until it has got past it.

THOMAS B. REED. (ROBINSON, Life.)

The penguin flies backwards because he doesn't care to see where he's going, but wants to see where he's been.

FRED ALLEN, The Backward View.

Yes, I am a Democrat still, very still.

DAVID B. HILL. When asked, on his return from the Democratic convention of 1896 if he was still a Democrat.

<sup>8</sup> Deprived of all they had [by Cromwell], they took to a wild life of robbery, and were called Tories, from the Irish word meaning a plunderer.

W. S. GREGG, Irish History, p. 62.

A gentleman had a red Ribband in his hat . . . he said it signified that he was a Tory. What's that? said she. He answered, An Irish rebel . . . I hear that . . . instead of Cavalier and Round-head, they are now called Torys and Wiggs.

OLIVER HEYWOOD, Diaries, 24 Oct., 1681.

<sup>9</sup> Where you see a Whig you see a rascal. . . . The first Whig was the devil.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. ii, p. 393; and BOSWELL, Life, 1778.

Whig: The name of a faction.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary of the English Language.

<sup>10</sup> A wise Tory and a wise Whig, I believe, will agree. Their principles are the same, though their modes of thinking are different.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Of Tory and Whig. Written statement given to Boswell, 1783.

<sup>11</sup> There is always some basic principle that will ultimately get the Republican party together. If my observations are worth anything, that basic principle is the cohesive power of public plunder.

A. J. McLAURIN, Speech, U. S. Senate, May, 1906.

Stalwart Republicans.

JAMES G. BLAINE. Coined in 1877 to describe the group in Congress who fought to sustain the privileges of Republicans in the South.

The Republicans have their splits right after election and Democrats have theirs just before an election.

WILL ROGERS, Syndicate Article, 29 Dec., 1930.

<sup>12</sup> Socialism is simply the degenerate capitalism of bankrupt capitalists. Its one genuine object is to get more money for its professors.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices, p. 109.

Tory and Whig in turn shall be my host; I taste no politics in boiled and roast.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to John Murray, 1834.

<sup>14</sup> He thinks like a Tory and talks like a Radical, and that's so important now-a-days.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act ii.

<sup>15</sup> Toryism is an innate principle o' human nature—Whiggism but an evil habit.

far; by "conservative" one who does not go far enough; by "reactionary" one who won't go at all. I suppose I must be a "progressive," which I take to be one who insists on recognizing new facts, adjusting policies to facts and circumstances as they arise.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, N. Y., 29 Jan., 1911.

By a progressive I do not mean a man who is ready to move, but a man who knows where he is going when he moves.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, St. Paul, Minn., 9 Sept., 1919.

A man of hope and forward-looking mind.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vii, l. 276.

VIII—Politics: Expediency

2
I am invariably of the politics of people at whose table I sit, or beneath whose roof I sleep.

GEORGE BORROW, The Bible in Spain. Ch. 16.

And so God save the regent, church, and King!
Which means that I like all and every thing.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 48.

3
In politics if thou wouldst mix,
And mean thy fortunes be,
Bear this in mind: Be deaf and blind,
Let great folks hear and see.
ROBERT BURNS, At the Globe Tavern. No. 4.

4
Principle is ever my motto, not expediency.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. ii, ch. 2.

5
He [Sir Condry] . . . was very ill-used by the Government about a place that was promised him and never given, after his supporting them against his conscience very honourably, and being greatly abused for it, which hurt him greatly, he having the name of a great patriot in the country before.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Castle Rackrent: Continuation of Memoirs.

The greatest superstition now entertained by public men is that hypocrisy is the royal road to success.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Speech, Thirteen Club Dinner, 13 Dec., 1886.

A marcfiful Providunce fashioned us holler,
O' purpose that we might our princerples swaller.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 4.

It ain't by princerples nor men
My preudent course is steadied:

I scent wich pays the best, an' then
Go into it baldheaded.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers: Ser. i, No. 6.

Ez to my princerples, I glory
In hevin' nothin' o' the sort;

I aint a Whig, I aint a Tory,
I'm jest a canderdate, in short.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 7.

Now warn't thet a system wuth pains in pre-sarvin',

Where the people found jints an' their frien's done the carvin'?

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 5.

8
I keep my principle, that of living and dying
the vicar of Bray.

REV. SYMON SYMONDS. Bray is a village in Berkshire, England, and tradition asserts that Symon Symonds, the vicar there, preserved his incumbency for half a century by being twice Protestant and twice Catholic under Henry VIII, Edward VI, Mary, and Elizabeth. (FULLER, Worthies of Berkshire.)

In good King Charles's golden days,

When loyalty no harm meant,

A zealous high-churchman was I,

And so I got preferment. . . .

And this is law that I'll maintain

Until my dying day, sir,

That whatsoever king shall reign,

Still I'll be Vicar of Bray, sir.

UNKNOWN, The Vicar of Bray. (c. 1700)

Sometimes ascribed to a Colonel Fuller, an officer in the army of George I.

He held it safer to be of the religion of the King or Queen that was in being, for he knew that he came raw into the world, and accounted it no point of wisdom to be broiled out of it.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, The Old, Old, Very Old Man. (1635)

Whatever I can say or do,

I'm sure not much avails;

I shall still Vicar be of Bray,

Whichever side prevails.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Tale of the Cobbler and the Vicar of Bray.

I dare be bold, you're one of those

Have took the covenant,

With cavaliers are cavaliers

And with the saints, a saint.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Tale of the Cobbler and the Vicar of Bray.

I loved no King since Forty One

When Prelacy went down,

A Cloak and Band I then put on,

And preached against the Crown.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Turn-Coat.

I never doubted of the prudent versatility of your Vicar of Bray.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Nov., 1756.

9
From whatever direction the wind is, the sail is shifted accordingly. (Utquomque est ventus, quasi navi in mari.)

PLAUTUS, Pænulus, l. 754.

Not a weathercock on the top of the edifice, exalted for my levity and versatility, and of no use but to indicate the shiftings of every fashionable gale.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, at Bristol, 1780.

<sup>1</sup> My pollertics, like my religion, bein of a exceedin accommodatin character.
ARTEMUS WARD, The Crisis.

IX—Politics: The Politician

<sup>2</sup> It is as hard and severe a thing to be a true politician as to be truly moral.
BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

<sup>3</sup> Surely, as there are mountebanks for the natural body, so there are mountebanks for the political body: men who undertake great cures; and perhaps have been lucky in two or three experiments, but want the grounds of science, and therefore cannot hold out.
BACON, Essays: Of Boldness.

<sup>4</sup> There are three classes of politicians—those who under pressure of an existing evil seek for change; . . . those who, with conscious and definite aim, plant the great Hereafter in the Now; . . . and thirdly, those who with clear eye discern the dependence of the Hereafter upon the Now, and because they shrink from the Hereafter, refuse to take the step which renders it inevitably certain.

GEORGE BRIMLEY, *Essays: Wordsworth's
Poems*.

<sup>5</sup> I was not swaddled and rocked and dawdled into a legislator.
EDMUND BURKE, Letter to a Noble Lord.

<sup>6</sup> An honest politician is one who, when he is bought, will stay bought.

SIMON CAMERON, Republican Boss of Pennsylvania, about 1860. Quoted by Thomas B.
Reed. (ROBINSON, Life.)

<sup>7</sup> Pelting each other for the public good.
COWPER, Charity, l. 623.

<sup>8</sup> It is wonderful how little mischief we can do with all our trouble.
MANDELL CREIGHTON. (CREIGHTON, Life.)

<sup>9</sup> Demagogues are the mob's lacqueys. (Τοὺς δημαγωγούς ὄχλου διακόνους.) DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 24.) See also under PEOPLE.

In every age the vilest specimens of human nature are to be found among demagogues.
MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 5.

<sup>10</sup> One who is a master of jibes and flouts and jeers.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 1874, referring to the Marquis of Salisbury.

<sup>11</sup> For politicians neither love nor hate.
DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 223.

Politicians neither love nor hate. Interest, not sentiment, directs them.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 23 Dec., 1748.

<sup>12</sup> To the people they're ollers ez slick ez molasses,
An' butter their bread on both sides with
The Masses.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 4.

We're the original friends o' the nation,
All the rest air a paltry an' base fabrication.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 5.

<sup>13</sup> Skilled to pull wires, he baffles Nature's hope,
Who sure intended him to stretch a rope.

J. R. LOWELL, The Boss. Probably referring to Boss Tweed, of New York.

Whitewashed, he quits the politicians' strife
At ease in mind, with pockets filled for life.

J. R. LOWELL, Tempora Mutantur.

But John P. Robinson, he

Sez they did n't know everythin' down in Judee.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 3.

<sup>14</sup> Once there were two brothers. One ran away to sea, the other was elected Vice-President, and nothing was ever heard of either of them
again.

THOMAS R. MARSHALL, Recollections.

<sup>15</sup> To scholars who become politicians the comic role is usually assigned; they have to be the good conscience of a state policy.

NIETZSCHE, Human, All-Too-Human. Bk. ii,
p. 468.

We cannot safely leave politics to politicians, or political economy to college professors.

HENRY GEORGE, Social Problems, p. 9.

<sup>16</sup> They [politicians] are the semi-failures in business and the professions, men of mediocre mentality, dubious morals, and magnificent commonplaceness.

W. B. PITKIN, The Twilight of the American Mind, p. 81.

<sup>17</sup> The conduct of a wise politician is ever suited to the present posture of affairs. Often by foregoing a part he saves the whole, and by yielding in a small matter secures a greater.

PLUTARCHI, Lives: Publicola and Solon.

<sup>18</sup> Old politicians chew on wisdom past,
And totter on in bus'ness to the last.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 228.

Coffee, which makes the politician wise,
And see thro' all things with his half-shut eyes.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto iii, l. 117.

<sup>19</sup> There lies beneath this mossy stone

A politician who

Touched a live issue without gloves,
And never did come to.

KEITH PRESTON, Epitaph.

1 Perhaps been poorly rich, and meanly great,
The slave of pomp, a cipher in the state.

RICHARD SAVAGE, The Bastard, l. 39.

2 It might be the pate of a politician, . . . one that would circumvent God.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 86.

This vile politician.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 241.

3 Get thee glass eyes;
And, like a scurvy politician, seem
To see the things thou dost not.

4 Or that eternal want of pence,
Which vexes public men.

TENNYSON, Will Waterproof's Lyrical Monologue, l. 43.

5 I'm not a politician and my other habits air good.

ARTEMUS WARD, Fourth of July Oration.

You won't be able to find such another pack of poppycock gabblers as the present Congress.

ARTEMUS WARD, Travels: Things in New York.

6 Lord of the golden tongue and smiting eyes;
Great out of season and untimely wise:
A man whose virtue, genius, grandeur, worth,
Wrought deadlier ill than ages can undo.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Political Luminary.

The earth's high places who attain to fill
By most indomitably sitting still, . . .
Find in the golden mean their proper bliss,
And doing nothing, never do amiss;
But lapt in men's good graces live, and die
By all regretted, nobody knows why.

WILLIAM WATSON, Sketch of a Political Character.

7 Things get very lonely in Washington sometimes. The real voice of the great people of America sometimes sounds faint and distant in that strange city. You hear politics until you wish that both parties were smothered in their own gas.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, St. Louis, Mo., 5
Sept., 1919.

It is easy enough to see why a man goes to the poor house or the penitentiary. Its becawz he can't help it. But why he should voluntarily go and live in Washinton, is intirely beyond my comprehension.

ARTEMUS WARD, Interview with the Prince Napoleon.

At Washington, where an insignificant individual may trespass on a nation's time.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Social Aims.

X—Politics: Office-Holding

8 No man who ever held the office of President would congratulate a friend on obtaining it.

He will make one man ungrateful, and a hundred men his enemies, for every office
he can bestow.

JOHN ADAMS, referring to the election of his son, John Quincy Adams, to the Presidency. (QUINCY, Figures of the Past, p. 74.)

Every time I bestow a vacant office I make a hundred discontented persons and one ingrate.
(Toutes les fois que je donne une place vacante, je fais cent mécontents et un ingrat.)

LOUIS XIV. (VOLTAIRE, Siecle de Louis XIV.)

9 In order to distribute the offices according to merit it is necessary for the citizens to know each other's personal characters. . . . Haphazard decision is unjust, and this must obviously prevail in a numerous community.

ARISTOTLE, Politica. Bk. vii, ch. 4, sec. 7.

But we'll hae ane frae 'mang oursel's,
A man we ken, and a' that.

BURNS, Heron Election Ballad.

10 Examine the Honours List and you will know exactly how a government feels in its inside.
When the Honours List is full of rascals, millionaires, and er—chumps,—you may be quite sure that the Government is dangerously ill.

ARNOLD BENNETT, The Title. Act i.

Literature is always a good card to play for Honours. It makes people think that Cabinet ministers are educated.

ARNOLD BENNETT, The Title. Act iii.

11 Office will show the man. (Ἀρχὰ ἄνδρα δείξει.)

12 Can you let me know what positions you have at your disposal with which to reward deserving Democrats?

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, *Letter to Walter
W. Vick*, Receiver General, 20 Aug., 1913.

I am glad to have the public know that I appreciate the services of those who work in politics and feel an interest in seeing them rewarded.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, Interview, N. Y.
Times, 16 Jan., 1915.

The folks down south like you, but they are tired of going into the post office and having their mail handed to them by a Republican.

O. O. STEALEY, Letter to W. J. Bryan.
(THOMPSON, Presidents I've Known, p. 51.)

13 In their nomination to office they will not appoint to the exercise of authority as to a pitiful job, but as to a holy function.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 985.

<sup>4</sup> Take from the United States the appointment of postmasters and let the towns elect them, and you deprive the Federal Government of half a million defenders.

EMERSON, Journals, 1860.

I have heard in highest places the shameless doctrine avowed by men grown old in public office that the true way by which power should be gained in the Republic is to bribe the people with the offices created for their service.

GEORGE F. HOAR, Speech, at impeachment trial of Secretary W. W. Belknap, in 1876. (HOAR, Autobiography of Seventy Years, i, 307.)

What are we here for, except the offices?

WEBSTER FLANAGAN, leader of the Republican party in Texas, at the national Republican convention, in 1880. (Dict. Amer. Biog., vi, 453. See also The Nation, 10 June, 1880.)

<sup>5</sup> But the President has paid dear for his

<sup>6</sup> Of the various executive duties, no one excited more anxious concern than that of placing the interests of our fellow citizens in the hands of honest men, with understanding sufficient for their stations. No duty is at the same time more difficult to fulfil.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Elias Shipman,
12 July, 1801.

No duty the Executive has to perform is so trying as to put the right man in the right place.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. As quoted by J. B. Mc-Master, History of the People of the United States. Vol. ii, p. 586.

I have always believed that success would be the inevitable result if the two services, the army and the navy, had fair play, and if we sent the right man to fill the right place.

SIR AUSTEN HENRY LAYARD, Speech, in Parliament, 15 Jan., 1855.

In place and power all public spirit ends;
Like hardy plants, that love the air and sky,
When out, 'twill thrive—but taken in, 'twill
die!

THOMAS MOORE, Corruption, l. 149.

<sup>13</sup> There's not a particle of doubt
We've turned a bunch of rascals out,

And put a nice clean aggregation

In very serious temptation.

KEITH PRESTON, Post-election Misgivings.

<sup>14</sup> My business, Sir, you'll quickly guess,

Is to desire some little place:
And fair pretensions I have for't,
Much need, and very small desert.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Epistle to Fleetwood Shepherd. No. 2.

1 But long I will not be Jack out of office.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 175.

Some folks are Jacks-in-office, fond of power.

JOHN WOLCOT, The Louisiad. Canto iv. (1800)
See also under JACK.

2 O, that estates, degrees, and offices

Were not derived corruptly, and that clear honour

Were purchased by the merit of the wearer!
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 9, l. 41.

3 Every man who takes office in Washington either grows or swells, and when I give a man an office, I watch him carefully to see whether he is swelling or growing.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, Washington, 15 May, 1916.

XI—Politics: Public Office a Public Trust

4 For the administration of the government, like the office of a trustee, must be conducted for the benefit of those entrusted to one's care, not of those to whom it is entrusted.

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 25, sec. 85.

5 All political power is a trust.

CHARLES JAMES FOX, Speech, 1788.

6 To execute laws is a royal office; to execute orders is not to be a king. However, a political executive magistracy, though merely such, is a great trust.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France. (1790)

All persons possessing any portion of power ought to be strongly and awfully impressed with an idea that they act in trust, and that they are to account for their conduct in that trust to the one great Master, Author, and Founder of society.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

7 All power is a trust; that we are accountable for its exercise; that from the people and for the people all springs, and all must exist.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. vi, ch. 7. (1826)

The English doctrine that all power is a trust for the public good.

MACAULAY, Essays: Horace Walpole. (1833)

8 It is not fit the public trusts should be lodged in the hands of any till they are first proved and found fit for the business they are to be entrusted with.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Timothy, iii. (1708)

9 No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.

Constitution of the United States. Art. vi, sec. 3. (1787)

10 When a man assumes a public trust, he should consider himself as public property.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. In a conversation with Baron Humboldt. (RAYNER, Life of Jefferson, p. 356.)

11 Government is a trust, and the officers of the government are trustees; and both the trust and the trustees are created for the benefit of the people.

HENRY CLAY, Speech, at Lexington, Ky., 16 May, 1829.

12 The very essence of a free government consists in considering offices as public trusts, bestowed for the good of the country, and not for the benefit of an individual or a party.

JOHN C. CALHOUN, Speech, 13 Feb., 1835.

13 An' in convartin' public trusts

To very privit uses.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 6. (1848)

14 The phrase, "public office is a public trust," has of late become common property.

CHARLES SUMNER, Speech, U. S. Senate, 31 May, 1872.

The public offices are a public trust.

W. W. CRAPO, Speech, Republican State Convention, Mass., 1881.

Public office is a public trust, the authority and opportunities of which must be used as absolutely as the public moneys for the public benefit.

DORMAN B. EATON, The "Spoils" System and Civil-Service Reform. Ch. iii.

15 Public officials are the trustees of the people.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Letter Accepting Nomination for Mayor of Buffalo, 1881.

Public officers are the servants and agents of the people to execute laws which the people have made.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Letter Accepting Nomination for Governor of New York, 7 Oct., 1882.

But what man is fit to hold office? Only he who regards political office as a public trust.

A. S. HEWITT, Address, at opening Brooklyn bridge, 24 May, 1883.

16 Public office is a public trust.

WILLIAM C. HUDSON, a newspaper man who was asked to write a campaign document summarizing the achievements of Grover Cleveland, at the opening of his first Presidential campaign, in June, 1884, and who produced this slogan from various utterances by Cleveland. Sometimes attributed to Dan Lamont, one of Cleveland's campaign managers.

<sup>1</sup> Your every voter, as surely as your chief magistrate, under the same high sanction, though in a different sphere, exercises a public trust.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Inaugural, 4 Mar., 1885.

JOHN ADAMS, Diary, ii, 164, Feb., 1753. The first known instance of the printed use of "caucus," whose origin is uncertain.

OAKES AMES, Letter to Henry S. McComb, referring to Crédit Mobilier stock distributed to members of Congress in 1872.

<sup>4</sup> This new page opened in the book of our public expenditures, and this new departure taken, which leads into the bottomless gulf of civil pensions and family gratuities.

T. H. BENTON, Speech, U. S. Senate, against a grant to President Harrison's widow, April, 1841.

<sup>5</sup> The contempt of that large-minded gentleman is so wilting; his haughty disdain, his grandiloquent swell, his majestic, supereminent, overpowering turkey-gobbler strut has been so crushing to myself and all the members of this House, that I know it was an act of the greatest temerity for me to venture upon a controversy with him. . . . Hyperion to a satyr, Thersites to Hercules, mud to marble, dunghill to diamond, a singed cat to a Bengal tiger, a whining puppy to a roaring lion.

JAMES G. BLAINE, Speech, House of Representatives, 30 April, 1866, referring to Roscoe Conkling, who never forgave it. (Congressional Globe, 1st session, 39th Cong., p. 2299.)

<sup>6</sup> The right honourable gentleman [Robert Lowe, Viscount Sherbrooke] is the first of the new party who has retired into his political cave of Adullam and he has called about him everyone that was in distress and everyone that was discontented.

JOHN BRIGHT, Speech on the Reform Bill, March, 1866, referring to Mr. Horsman and other liberals.

David therefore departed thence, and escaped to the cave Adullam; and when his brethren and all his father's house heard it, they went down thither to him.

Old Testament: I Samuel, xxii, 1.

<sup>7</sup> John A. Logan is the Head Centre, the Hub, the King Pin, the Main Spring, Mogul, and Mugwump of the final plot.

ISAAC HILL BROMLEY, Impeach Logan. Editorial in N. Y. Tribune, 16 Feb., 1877.

Mugwump D. O. Bradley.

Headline N. Y. Sun, 23 March, 1884. Applied by the Sun, 15 June, 1884, to the "independents" of the Blaine-Cleveland campaign.

A mugwump is a person educated beyond his intellect.

HORACE PORTER, Speech, during Cleveland-Blaine campaign, 1884. The Nation defined a mugwump as "a man who, for some reason or other, is unable to vote his regular party ticket." An Algonquin Indian word, meaning "Big Chief," used in Eliot's translation of the Bible, 1661. Said to have been first used in its political sense by the Indianapolis Sentinel in 1872. Thomas B. Reed described the mugwumps as "long-tailed birds of Paradise."

A mugwump is a fellow with his mug on one side of the fence and his wump on the other.

HAROLD WILLIS DODDS.

The case of these independents or Mugwumps is an illustrative one. . . . Very few . . . take an active part in politics, however interested they may be in public affairs.

BRYCE, American Commonwealth, ii, iii, 379.

<sup>8</sup> I shall not help crucify mankind upon a cross of gold. I shall not aid in pressing down upon the bleeding brow of labor this crown of thorns.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, Speech, House of Representatives, 22 Dec., 1894.

You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns; you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, Speech, before National Democratic Convention, Chicago, 10 July, 1896. Concluding sentence.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN. Phrase used by him in the 1896 campaign to describe the East, specifically New York.

I never said, "Great is Tammany and Croker is its prophet." Bryan did.

CHAMP CLARK, Memories.

In a consistent, albeit futile gesture, therefore, he [Bryan] resolved to invade "The enemy's country" and formally accept his nomination at Madison Square Garden—"the champion of Lazarus at the gates of Dives."

PAXTON HIBBEN, The Peerless Leader, p. 197.

The first quoted phrase was Bryan's, the second was coined by Edward C. Little.

Ours is no sapling, chance-sown by the fountain,
Blooming at Beltane, in winter to fade.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake: Canto ii, st. 19.

Quoted by Senator Vest in nominating Richard Parks Bland for the Presidency at Chicago, in 1896, referring to Bryan.

<sup>1</sup> We are Republicans, and we don't propose to leave our party and identify ourselves with the party whose antecedents have been rum, Romanism, and rebellion.

REV. SAMUEL DICKINSON BURCHARD, Speech of Congratulation, to James G. Blaine, at Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York City, 29 Oct., 1884, as spokesman for a party of clergymen gathered to assure him of their support in his presidential campaign. There is good reason to believe that the phrase "rum, Romanism, and rebellion," which Blaine failed to repudiate promptly, lost him the Presidency. Cleveland carried New York by a plurality of 1047, and the state's electoral vote decided the election. Burchard was a Presbyterian clergyman, whom the New York Sun described as "a Silurian or early Paleozoic bigot."

The combined power of rebellion, Catholicism and whiskey.

JAMES A. GARFIELD, Letter, 1876, when he thought Tilden elected, explaining how it had happened. (CALDWELL, James A. Garfield, p. 251.)

HENRY CLAY. To Preston, of Kentucky, when told that his advocacy of the Missouri compromise measures of 1850 would injure his chances for the Presidency.

The gentleman need not worry. He will never be either.

THOMAS B. REED. Retorting to Congressman Springer, when he quoted Clay's statement (W. A. ROBINSON, Life.)

Bargain and Corruption.

The cry that "barred the door of the Presidency to Henry Clay." (Dictionary of American Biography, ii, 324.)

<sup>3</sup> It is a condition which confronts us, not a theory.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Annual Message, 1887. Referring to the tariff.

<sup>4</sup> A halcyon and vociferous occasion.

ROSCOE CONKLING, Speech.

<sup>5</sup> I do not choose to run for President in 1928.

CALVIN COOLIDGE. Statement to press in 1927.

"I do not choose" means in the Yankee language "I am determined not to."

C. W. THOMPSON, Presidents I've Known, p. 345.

In my opinion, it was never meant to bring about the results it did. . . . The President hoped to be the nominee, expected to be the nominee, and was disappointed and distressed when he was not chosen by the convention.

IRWIN HOOD ("IKE") HOOVER, Forty-Two Years in the White House, p. 177.

I should like to be known as a former president who tries to mind his own business.

CALVIN COOLIDGE. (Cosmopolitan Magazine, May, 1930.)

He looks as if he had been weaned on a pickle.

ALICE ROOSEVELT LONGWORTH, characterizing Mr. Coolidge, by quoting her physician. (Crowded Hours, p. 337.)

<sup>6</sup> Because the things did not work forth your platform.

OLIVER CROMWELL, Letters. Vol. iii, p. 89.

Probably the first use of "platform" in the sense of a creed or declaration of principles. Its first use in American politics is said to have been during the campaign of 1844.

What piece of work have you now in hand? None in hand, if it like your Majesty, but I am devising a platform in my head.

JOHN LYLY, Alexander and Campaspe. Act v, sc. 4. (1584)

He can soon quit the way wherein he was, and become religious, after the manner of this novel platform.

PATRICK, Parable of the Pilgrim, p. 206. (1687)

COLBERT. (See speech by Lord John Russell, London Times, 2 April, 1840.) Attributed also to Gournay, Minister of Commerce, 1751. Quoted by Adam Smith, Wealth of Nations.

<sup>8</sup> The convention will be deadlocked and the nomination will be decided by twelve or thirteen men at two o'clock in the morning, in a smoke-filled room.

HARRY M. DAUGHERTY. Prophecy to reporters before Republican convention of 1920 at Chicago, which nominated Harding. He was correct to the last word. The "smoke-filled room" was Colonel George Harvey's room at the Hotel Blackstone.

<sup>9</sup> "Hargrave," said his Lordship, "if you want any information upon points of practical politics."

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Ch. 14. (1826) The first known appearance in print of the phrase, "practical politics."

Out of the range of practical politics.

GLADSTONE. Referring to the abolition of the Established Church in Ireland, April, 1867. (O'CONNOR, The Parnell Movement, p. 216.)

It would be interesting to imagine the first President of the United States confronted with some one who had ventured to approach him upon the basis of what is now commonly called "practical politics."

HENRY CODMAN POTTER, Address, Washington Centennial service, 30 April, 1889.

<sup>1</sup> The first favourite was never heard of, the second favourite was never seen after the distance post, all the ten-to-oners were in the rear, and a dark horse which had never been thought of, and which the careless St. James had never even observed in the list, rushed past the grand stand in sweeping triumph.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, The Young Duke. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1831)

Who is the dark horse he has in his stable?
THACKERAY, Adventures of Philip.

<sup>2</sup> I will leave the leader of the opposition, for the present, floundering and foundering in the Straits of Malacca.

GLADSTONE, Speech, at Greenwich, Jan., 1874.
Referring to Disraeli's accusation that the Liberal government had neglected British interests in the Straits of Malacca.

The country has, I think, made up its mind to close this career of plundering and blundering.

DISRAELI, Letter to Lord Grey de Wilton, Oct., 1873.

Support a compatriot against a native, however the former may blunder or plunder.

R. F. BURTON, Explorations of the Highroads of Brazil. Vol. i, p. 11. (c. 1869)

The foreign policy of the noble earl . . . may be summed up in two truly expressive words: "meddle" and "muddle."

EDWARD STANLEY, LORD DERBY, Speech, House of Lords, Feb., 1864, referring to Earl Russell.

WILLIAM CASSIUS GOODLOE. Referring to the Republican stump-speakers in campaign of 1888, who were publicised as holding their audiences spell-bound.

<sup>4</sup> I have the courage of my opinions, but I have not the temerity to give a political blank cheque to Lord Salisbury.

SIR WILLIAM EDWARD GOSCHEN, Speech, in Parliament, 19 Feb., 1884.

<sup>5</sup> Who will burden himself with your liturgical parterre when the burning questions [brennende Fragen] of the day invite to very different toils?

HAGENBACH, Grundlinien der Liturgik und Homiletik. (1803)

The burning question of the day.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, March, 1873.

MARK HANNA. When asked by a reporter to state the issue of the 1900 campaign to re-elect McKinley. Hence the sobriquet, "stand-patters." (See STODDARD, As I Knew Them, p. 259.)

I felt as if I were before this speech tarred with the brush of being a thick-and-thinnite.

A. J. BALFOUR, Speech, 9 Jan., 1900. The British for standpatter.

<sup>7</sup> One thing, if no more, I have gained by my custom-house experience—to know a politician. It is a knowledge which no previous thought, or power of sympathy, could have taught me, because the animal, or the machine rather, is not in nature.

HAWTHORNE, Note Books, 15 March, 1840.
Said to be the origin of "machine politics."

Such is the operation of the machine, as now established, that . . . scarcely an individual is certain of his political existence.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Letter to Thomas Raikes, 12 Sept., 1845. (Raikes-Wellington Correspondence, p. 384.)

They call the system—I do not coin the phrase, I adopt it because it carries its own meaning—the system they call "invisible government."

ELIHU ROOT. Referring to boss rule, specifically to Thomas C. Platt, of New York.

<sup>8</sup> If the Man Higher Up is ever found, take my assurance for it, he will be a large, pale man with blue wristlets showing under his cuffs, and he will be sitting to have his shoes polished within sound of a bowling alley, and there will be somewhere about him turquoises.

O. HENRY, Man About Town.

<sup>9</sup> We in America today are nearer to the final triumph over poverty than ever before in the history of any land. The poorhouse is vanishing from among us. We have not yet reached the goal, but given a chance to go forward with the policies of the last eight years, and we shall soon, with the help of God, be within sight of the day when poverty shall be banished from this nation.

HERBERT HOOVER, Speech, 11 Aug., 1928, accepting the Republican nomination for President.

Ours is a land . . . filled with millions of happy homes, blessed with comfort and opportunity. . . . In no nation are the fruits of accomplishment more secure. . . . I have no fears for the future of our country. It is bright with hope.

HERBERT HOOVER, Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1929.

They are playing politics at the expense of human misery.

HERBERT HOOVER, Statement to the Press, 9 Dec., 1930. Referring to members of Congress who had introduced bills for unemployment relief.

<sup>10</sup> Like an armed warrior, like a plumed knight, James G. Blaine marched down the halls of the American Congress and threw his shining lance full and fair against the brazen forehead of every traitor to his country and every maligner of his fair reputation.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Speech, nominating Blaine for President, at the National Republican Convention, Cincinnati, 15 June, 1876. (Proceedings of the Convention, p. 73-75.)

Mulligan letters.

Letters supposed to show corruption on the part of James G. Blaine in various railroad and land deals in 1869. Used with deadly effect during his campaign against Cleveland, they "probably barred the door of the Presidency to him forever." (Dict. Amer. Biog., ii, 324.)

<sup>1</sup> No sooner does he hear any of his brothers mention reform or retrenchment, than up he jumps.

WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch Book: John Bull. (1820)

I am for peace, for retrenchment, and for reform,—thirty years ago the great watchwords of the great Liberal Party.

JOHN BRIGHT, Speech, Birmingham, 28 April, 1859. The phrase dates from 1830, when it was probably said by William IV to Earl Grey in an interview, 17 Nov., 1830, and is in H. B.'s Cartoons, No. 93, 26 Nov., 1830. (See MOLESWORTH, History of the Reform Bill of 1832, p. 98. Also WARREN, Ten Thousand a Year, 1839, where it is inscribed on the banner of Tittlebat Titmouse.)

ANDREW JOHNSON, Speech, on the Presidential Reconstruction tour, August, 1866.

<sup>3</sup> It was not free silver that frightened the plutocratic leaders. What they feared then, what they fear now, is free men.

TOM JOHNSON, My Story, p. 109.

<sup>4</sup> Allow me to introduce to you my particular friend, Mr. George O. Evans. . . . He understands Addition, Division, and Silence.

WILLIAM H. KEMBLE, while State Treasurer of Pennsylvania, in a letter to Titian J. Coffey, recommending a political protégé, March, 1867. Published in the New York Sun, 20 June, 1872, the phrase soon became famous.

Multiplication, Division and Silence.

MATTHEW STANLEY QUAY, political boss of Pennsylvania, when asked the qualification for a ring or trust. (Every schoolboy knows that "Addition, Division and Silence" was not spoken by Bill Tweed, but written by Matt Quay.—BRANDER MATTHEWS, New York Times Book Review, 1 Jan., 1922.)

JAMES M. KIERAN, of the New York Times, in a conversation with Franklin D. Roosevelt, at Hyde Park, N. Y., in August, 1932, referring to the group of Columbia University professors with whom Mr. Roosevelt was consulting concerning his campaign speeches. Modified to "brain trust" by the newspapers.

<sup>6</sup> I do not allow myself to suppose that either the convention or the League have concluded to decide that I am either the greatest or best man in America, but rather they have concluded it is not best to swap horses while crossing the river, and have further concluded that I am not so poor a horse that they might not make a botch of it in trying to swap.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, to a delegation of the National Union League, which had called to congratulate him on his renomination as the Republican presidential candidate, 9 June, 1864. (RHODES, Hist. of the U. S., iv, 470; NICOLAY AND HAY, Complete Works of Abraham Lincoln, ii, 532.)

I have not permitted myself, gentlemen, to conclude that I am the best man in the country, but I am reminded in this connection of an old Dutch farmer who remarked that it was not best to swap horses while crossing a stream.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN. Version of above speech by W. O. Stoddard. (RAYMOND, Life and Public Services of Abraham Lincoln, p. 500.)

LOUIS PHILIPPE, Speech, from the throne, January, 1843, referring to the friendly relations existing between France and England, during Guizot's administration of foreign affairs. QUEEN VICTORIA, Letter to Lord John Russell, 7 Sept., 1848.

The cordial understanding which exists between the governments of France and Great Britain. (La cordiale entente qui existe entre le gouvernement français et celui de la Grande-Bretagne.)

UNKNOWN, Article, in Le Charivari, Paris, 6 Jan., 1844, reviewing a speech by Guizot.

The people of two nations [French and English] must be brought into mutual dependence by the supply of each other's wants. There is no other way of counteracting the antagonism of language and race. It is God's own method of producing an entente cordiale.

RICHARD COBDEN, Letter to M. Michel Chevalier, Sept., 1859.

<sup>8</sup> A kin' o' hangin' roun' an' settin' on the fence, Till Prov'dunce pinte how to jump.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 3. (1862)

<sup>9</sup> There are some things so elastic that even the heavy roller of democracy cannot flatten them altogether down.

J. R. LOWELL, On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners.

The steam-roller was first heard of in American politics in June, 1908, when it was applied by Oswald F. Schuette, of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, to the methods employed by the Roosevelt-Taft majority in the Republican National Committee in over-riding the protests against seating Taft delegates from Alabama and Arkansas.

H. L. MENCKEN, American Language, p. 372.

MACAULAY, Mirabeau. (Miscellany, ii, 95.) In England a lame duck is a defaulter on the Exchange, in America a defeated Congressman, but lame-duck Congresses were abolished in 1934.

I'll have no lame duck's daughter in my family.
THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 13.

President Lincoln selected Hale [John Parker Hale, appointed minister to Spain] out of general kindness and good will to the lame ducks.

E. L. PIERCE, Memoir and Letters of Charles Sumner. Vol. iv, p. 255.

<sup>2</sup> I know, sir, that it is the habit of some gentlemen to speak with censure or reproach of the politics of New York. . . . It may be, sir, that the politicians of New York are not as fastidious as some gentlemen are as to disclosing the principles on which they act. They boldly preach what they practice. When they are not contending for victory, they avow their intention of enjoying the fruits of it. . . . They see nothing wrong in the rule that to the victor belong the spoils of the enemy.

<sup>3</sup> "Vote early and vote often," the advice openly displayed on the election banners in one of our northern cities.

W. P. MILES, of South Carolina, Speech, House of Representatives, 31 March, 1858.

PYTHAGORAS. (ARISTOTLE, On the Pythagoreans.) According to Aristotle, this Pythagorean rule had nothing to do with politics; beans were banished from the diet because they resembled the testicles. (See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Bk. viii, sec. 34.) However, the same word was used for the lot by which officials at Athens were chosen. (ὁ κνάμω λαχών), and the phrase was given that meaning. (See also PLUTARCH, Of the Training of Children.) Diogenes Laertius states that Pythagoras was captured and killed by some enemies pursuing him because he refused to cross a field of beans.

JOHN RANDOLPH OF ROANOKE, Speech, House of Representatives, 30 March, 1826, denouncing the alliance between J. Q. Adams and Henry Clay. The result was a duel with Clay.

<sup>6</sup> Our policy is "Nothing is no good."
WILL ROGERS, The Illiterate Digest.

<sup>7</sup> I am as strong as a bull moose and you can use me to the limit.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Letter to Mark Hanna, at opening of the campaign in 1900. (BISHOP, Theodore Roosevelt and His Times. Vol. i, p. 139.)

It takes more than that to kill a Bull Moose.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, at Milwaukee, Wis., on evening of the attempt to assassinate him, Oct., 1912.

Bull Moose, an emblem of the Progressive Party in 1912, originated from the statement of President Roosevelt made upon his arrival at Chicago just before the Republican convention, that he felt like a "Bull Moose."

E. C. SMITH, Dictionary of American Politics. The first discovered newspaper use of the term was in the New York Tribune, 26 June, 1912. The New York Times used it the following day.

I want to be a Bull Moose,
And with the Bull Moose stand
With Antlers on my forehead
And a Big Stick in my hand.

UNKNOWN, Inscription, on California campaign banner at Bull Moose convention, 1912.

<sup>8</sup> My hat's in the ring. The fight is on and I'm stripped to the buff.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Newspaper Interview, at Cleveland, Ohio, 21 Feb., 1912, while on his way to Columbus to address the State Constitutional Convention.

It is no advantage to change the Barneses, the Guggenheims and the Penroses, for the Murphys, the Sullivans and the Taggart.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, in campaign against Wilson and Taft in 1912.

Dear Maria.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Letter to Mrs. Bellamy Storer, 9 Dec., 1906.

<sup>9</sup> We fight in honorable fashion for the good of mankind; fearless of the future, unheeding of our individual fates, with unflinching hearts and undimmed eyes; we stand at Armageddon, and we battle for the Lord.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, at Chicago, 17 June, 1912, on the eve of the Republican National Convention which re-nominated Taft.

We seemed to see our flag unfurled,
Our champion waiting in his place
For the last battle of the world,—
The Armageddon of the race.
J. G. WHITTIER, Rantoul.

And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon.

New Testament: Revelation, xvi, 16. Armageddon, or Har-Magedon, meant Mount Megiddo, possibly Mount Carmel, at whose foot lay the plain of Megiddo, the scene of many battles.

1 I have come home to look after my fences.
JOHN SHERMAN, Speech, to his neighbors at Mansfield, Ohio, referring to the fences around his farm; said to be the origin of the political phrase. (See STODDARD, As I Knew Them, p. 161.)

2 What a man that would be had he . . . the least knowledge of the value of red tape.

SYDNEY SMITH, referring to Sir John Mackintosh. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, p. 245.)

3 The Forgotten Man works and votes—generally he prays—but his chief business in life is to pay. . . . If any student of social science comes to appreciate the case of the Forgotten Man, he will become . . . a hard-hearted skeptic as regards any scheme of social amelioration. He will always want to know, Who and where is the Forgotten Man in this case, who will have to pay for it all.

WILLIAM GRAHAM SUMNER, The Forgotten Man. (Title essay in The Forgotten Man and Other Essays, 1883.)

The State cannot get a cent for any man without taking it from some other man, and this latter must be a man who has produced and saved it. The latter is the Forgotten Man.

WILLIAM GRAHAM SUMNER, What Social Classes Owe to Each Other. It will be noted that Mr. Sumner's "forgotten man" was the taxpayer, still completely forgotten!

These unhappy times call for the building of plans that rest upon the forgotten, the unorganized but indispensable units of economic power, for plans like those of 1917 that build from the bottom up and not from the top down, that put their faith once more in the forgotten man at the bottom of the economic pyramid.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, Radio Address, 7 April, 1932.

The Forgotten Man is a myth.

ALFRED E. SMITH, Editorial, The New Outlook, October, 1932, p. 3.

4 You can't beat somebody with nobody.

MARK SULLIVAN, Our Times, iii, 289. Quoted as an axiom of practical politics.

One truth which they enforce is the old one that you can't beat somebody with nobody.

Editorial, N. Y. Times, 3 July, 1932.

5 Pitiless publicity.

WOODROW WILSON. His prescription for curing the ills of government. (SULLIVAN, Our Times, iv, 119.)

They released a letter written five years earlier by Wilson to Adrian Joline, expressing the wish that "something at once dignified and effective" might be done to "knock Bryan once and for all into a cocked hat."

PAXTON HIBBEN, The Peerless Leader, p. 303.

6 Very naïvely, he told those who remained that they might go too; he should speak for some time, but he was only talking for Buncombe.

WHEELER, Hist. North Carolina, 18. Referring to a member of Congress from Buncombe county, N. C.

Talk plain truth, and leave bunkum for right honorables who keep their places thereby.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Two Years Ago. Ch. 25.

America too will find that caucuses, division-lists, stump-oratory, and speeches to Buncombe will not carry men to the immortal gods.

CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets: Parliaments.

7 The Copperhead Bright Convention meets in Indianapolis today.

UNKNOWN. (Cincinnati Gazette, 30 July, 1862.)

A glorious sequel to the Copperhead convention.

UNKNOWN. (Cincinnati Gazette, 31 July, 1862.) Both references were to the Indiana Democratic convention, and are the earliest printed use of the word "copperhead" in this connection. James Ford Rhodes (History of the United States, iv, 224) states that the earliest use of the word he could find was in the Cincinnati Commercial, of 1 Oct., 1862. Albert Matthews (Publications of the Colonial Society of Massachusetts, xx, 207) states that he found it in the Chicago Tribune, for 24 Sept., 1862. (PAUL S. SMITH, First Use of the Term Copperhead, American Historical Review, xxxii, 799.)

Every Democrat who did not openly and actively support the Administration and the war was labelled a venomous 'copperhead,' at once a southern sympathiser and a traitor to the Union.

MILO ERWIN, History of Williamson County, Illinois, p. 302.

As the copperhead is a particularly poisonous snake indigenous to southern Illinois the meaning was clear.

PAXTON HIBBEN, The Peerless Leader, p. 25.

8 Hanna was a fat-frier, not the fat-frier. The fat-frier was John P. Forster, president of the League of Young Republican Clubs. It was in 1888 that he wrote a letter suggesting 'to fry the fat out of the manufacturers,' i. e., secure campaign contributions.

HENRY L. STODDARD, As I Knew Them.

9 The Mysterious Stranger.

In the election of 1904, the state of Missouri for the first time appeared in the Republican column. On November 10, John T. McCutcheon published a cartoon in the Chicago Tribune with this caption, which instantly became famous.

XIII—Politics: Campaign Slogans

10 Tippecanoe and Tyler too.

Republican campaign slogan, 1840. "Tippecanoe" was William Henry Harrison, who had won an indecisive victory over the Indians in 1811, at the spot where Tippecanoe Creek empties into the Wabash. Attributed to Orson E. Woodbury.

<sup>1</sup> Fifty-four forty, or fight!

WILLIAM ALLEN, Speech, U. S. Senate, 1844. Adopted as the slogan of the war party, in the presidential election of James K. Polk, 1844. During the same session war with England regarding the Oregon question seemed imminent. . . . The Democratic convention of 1844 had demanded the reoccupation of the whole of Oregon up to 54° 40', with or without war with England. Stephen A. Douglas was one of the small band of congressmen who shouted for "fifty-four forty" to the bitter end. It was therefore humiliating to find the new President willing to compromise with Great Britain on the forty-ninth parallel.—Dic Am. Biog., v, 398.

<sup>2</sup> We stand for free soil.

LEONARD BACON. Motto for the Independent, which he helped to found and edited in 1848.

<sup>3</sup> Young America!

Slogan of an important group of the Democratic party during campaign of 1852.

The position and duties of Young America.

EDWIN DE LEON (Charleston, 1845), first formulation of Young America idea, in commencement address at South Carolina College, in 1845. The idea was that if there was to be a Young America, the younger generation must seize political power and participate directly in the affairs of the world. (M. E. CURTI, American Historical Review, xxxii, 34.)

<sup>4</sup> Free soil, free men, free speech, Fré-mont. Republican slogan in campaign of 1856.

Oh! we'll give 'em Jessie

When we rally round the polls.

Song used by FRÉMONT's supporters in the Presidential campaign of 1856.

<sup>7</sup> Turn the rascals out!

CHARLES A. DANA, used first in the New York Sun, and afterwards as the slogan of Greeley's campaign against Grant in 1872.

<sup>8</sup> Hurrah for Maria, Hurrah for the kid, I voted for Grover And am damn glad I did.

Campaign song, Blaine-Cleveland campaign, 1884, the reference being to Maria Halpin, of Buffalo, N. Y., the mother of Cleveland's reputed illegitimate child. Cleveland always doubted its paternity. (For full story, see NEVINS, Grover Cleveland, pp. 163-167.)

Ma! Ma! Where's my pa?
Gone to the White House,

Ha, ha, ha!

Campaign jingle used by Democrats in Blaine-Cleveland campaign, referring to the Maria Halpin scandal.

Tell the truth.

GROVER CLEVELAND, when asked by his campaign managers what they should do about the scandal. (Harper's Weekly, 16 Aug., 1884.)

<sup>9</sup> Blaine, Blaine, Blaine,

The continental liar from the State of Maine,
Burn this letter!

Campaign jingle used by Democrats during Blaine-Cleveland campaign, referring to an incriminating letter written by Blaine to a business associate named Warren G. Fisher, which he had endorsed on the back, "Burn this letter." (NEVINS, Grover Cleveland, p. 161.)

I do not engage in criminal practise.

GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS, when asked why he did not speak for Blaine during the Blaine-Cleveland campaign of 1884. (NEVINS, Grover Cleveland, p. 178.) MUZZEY (Life of Blaine, p. 307) attributes the phrase to Roscoe Conkling.

Prohibitionist campaign slogan in presidential campaign of 1884. St. John, the Prohibition candidate, had been a Republican party leader. They started the cry, "What's the matter with St. John?" The reply was, "Oh, he's all right!" which the Prohibitionists adopted as their slogan. So far as known, the earliest use of the phrase.

UNKNOWN, Campaign Song, 1888. "Ben" was Benjamin Harrison, Republican candidate for President, whose grandfather was General William Henry Harrison.

Grandpa's Pants Won't Fit Benny.

Democratic slogan in campaign of 1888.

<sup>13</sup> If the American people want me for this high office, I shall be only too willing to serve them. . . . Since studying this sub- ject I am convinced that the office of Presi- dent is not such a very difficult one, to fill.

ADMIRAL GEORGE DEWEY, announcing his candidacy, 4 April, 1900.

<sup>1</sup> Grover, Grover, Four years more of Grover;
In we'll go, Out they'll go,
Then we'll be in clover.

Democratic campaign song in 1892. Sung to the air of the berceuse in Wang:
Baby, baby, Bless the darling baby;
Down she goes, Up she goes,
Ninety times high as the moon.
J. CHEEVER GOODWIN, Wang. Act i.

Wanamaker runs the Sunday School,
Morton runs the bar,
Baby McKee runs the White House,
And by God, here we are!

UNKNOWN. Democratic campaign slogan, 1892, referring to Postmaster-General John Wanamaker, superintendent of a Philadelphia Sunday School; Vice-President Levi P. Morton, who owned the Shoreham hotel, in Washington; and "Baby" McKee, Harrison's small grandson.

The prophet and the ballot-box—both stuffed.
THOMAS B. REED, suggested as a slogan for the Democratic party in 1892.

<sup>2</sup> Liliuokalani,
Give us your little brown hannie.
Popular jingle, referring to the Hawaiian annexation question, Feb., 1893. Liliuokalani was Queen of the Hawaiian Islands.

<sup>3</sup> Elect McKinley, the Advance Agent of Prosperity!
Republican campaign slogan, 1896.

<sup>4</sup> The full dinner pail.
Republican campaign slogan, 1900, alleged to have been coined by the editor of Judge.

<sup>5</sup> Ev'ry time I come to town,
The boys keep kickin' my dawg aroun';
Makes no dif'rence if he is a houn',
They gotta quit kickin' my dawg aroun'.
WEBB M. OUNGST, *They Gotta Quit Kickin'
My Dawg Aroun'*. Published in 1912, and the slogan of the campaign for Champ
Clark in that year.

<sup>6</sup> The New Freedom.
WOODROW WILSON. Used as the slogan of his first campaign. Grover Cleveland said of it:
"Sounds fine—I wonder what it means."

<sup>7</sup> You have laid upon me this double obligation: "We are relying upon you, Mr. President, to keep us out of war, but we are relying upon you, Mr. President, to keep the honor of the nation unstained."

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, at Cleveland, 29
Jan., 1916.

I am the friend of peace and mean to preserve it for America so long as I am able. . . . War can come only by the wilful acts and aggressions
of others.

WOODROW WILSON, Address to Congress, 26
Feb., 1917.

He kept us out of war!

MARTIN H. GLYNN, Keynote Speech, National Democratic Convention, St. Louis, June 15, 1916. Referring to Woodrow Wilson. The phrase became the Democratic slogan of the campaign.

<sup>8</sup> The fathers who gave us this government were not graduated from soap-boxes.

JOSEPH S. SCOTT, Speech, nominating Herbert
Hoover, Chicago, 15 June, 1932.

<sup>11</sup> An ordinary song or ballad that is the delight of the common people cannot fail to please all such readers as are not unqualified for the entertainment by their affectation or ignorance. . . . For it is impossible that anything should be universally tasted and

POSTERITY

The care of posterity is most in them that have no posterity.

BACON, Essays: Of Parents and Children.

People will not look forward to posterity, who never look backward to their ancestors.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

Be careful of this—it is my carte de visite to posterity.

CHAMPOLLION. On his death-bed, as he gave the printer the revised proofs of his Egyptian Grammar.

I look upon Leaves of Grass . . . as my definitive carte de visite to the coming generations of the New World.

WALT WHITMAN, A Backward Glance o'er Travel'd Roads.

He thinks posterity a packhorse, always ready to be loaded.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 3 June, 1862.

Posterity is a most limited assembly. Those gentlemen who reach posterity are not much more numerous than the planets.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 3 June, 1862.

The love of posterity is the consequence of the necessity of death. If a man were sure of living forever here, he would not care about his offspring.

HAWTHORNE, American Note Books. See also under SON.

Posterity, thinned by the crimes of its ancestors. (Vitio parentum Rara juvenus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 2, l. 23.

Posterity pays for the sins of their fathers.
(Culpam majorum posterii luunt.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, *De Rebus Gestis
Alexandri Magni*. Bk. vii, sec. 5.

Herself the solitary scion left
Of a time-honour'd race.

BYRON, The Dream. St. 2.

Believe it, posterity! (Credite, posterii.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 19, l. 2.

He lives to posterity. (Vivit ad posteros.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xciii, 5.

Our descendants will be still far unhappier than we are. Would I not be a criminal if, notwithstanding this view, I should provide for progeny, i. e., for unfortunates?

ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT. Conversation with Arago in 1812.

The ancients said our ancestors, we say posterity. (Les anciens disaient nos ancêtres, nous disons la postérité.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 228.

Posterity, that high court of appeal which is never tired of eulogising its own justice and discernment.

MACAULAY, Essays: Machiavelli.

Like Sir Condy Rackrent in the tale, she survived her own wake, and overheard the judgment of posterity.

MACAULAY, Essays: Madame d'Arblay. Referring to Miss Edgeworth's novel, Castle Rackrent.

Leaving no posterity:

'Twas not their infirmity,

It was married chastity.

SHAKESPEARE, Phoenix and the Turtle, l. 59.

All his successors, gone before him, have done 't; and all his ancestors that come after him, may.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 14.

What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
Seeming to bury that posterity
Which by the rights of time thou needs must have,

If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity?

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 757.

We are always doing, says he, something for Posterity, but I would fain see Posterity do something for us.

STEELE, The Spectator. No. 583. (1712)

The man was laughed at as a blunderer who said in a public business: "We do much for posterity;
I would fain see them do something for us."

MRS. ELIZABETH MONTAGU, Letters, 1 Jan., 1742.

As to posterity, I may ask (with somebody whom I have forgot) what has it ever done to oblige me?

THOMAS GRAY, Letter to Dr. Warton, 8
March, 1758.

As though there were a tie,
And obligation to posterity!
We get them, bear them, breed and nurse.
What has posterity done for us,
That we, lest they their rights should lose,

Should trust our necks to gripe of noose?

JOHN TRUMBULL, McFingal. Canto ii, l. 121. (1775)

Why should we put ourselves out of the way to do anything for posterity? What has posterity done for us?

SIR BOYLE ROCHE, Speech, in Irish Parliament, 1780. (FLAKINER, Studies in Irish History.)

Few can be induced to labor exclusively for posterity. Posterity has done nothing for us.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

1 Think of your ancestors and your posterity. (Vestros et posteros cogitate.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 32.

Think of your forefathers! Think of your posterity!

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, Speech, Plymouth, Mass., 22 Dec., 1802.

See also under ANCESTRY.

2 Posterity gives to every man his proper praise. (Sum cuique decus posteritas reddit.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 35.

Posterity pays every man his honour.

5 We'll find out rich husband to make you the pot boil.

SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Play-House to be Let. Act v. (c. 1663)

Glory is excellent, but will not make the national pot boil.

CARLYLE, Frederick the Great, xvi, 2; vi, 151.

She teaches you economy, which makes the pot to boil.

CHRISTOPHER SMART, Ballads. No. 13.

I think this piece will help to boil thy pot.

JOHN WOLCOT, The Bard Complimenteth Mr. West. (c. 1790) Probably the origin of the term "pot-boiler."

6 How agree the kettle and earthen pot together?

APOCRYPHA: Ecclesiasticus, xiii, 2.

The earthen pot must keep clear of the brass kettle.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

7 A pot that belongs to many is ill stirred and worse boiled.

14 Thy moist clay is pliant to command,

Unwrought, and easy to the potter's hand:

Now take the mould; now bend thy mind to feel

The first sharp motions of the forming wheel.

DRYDEN, Third Satire of Persius. l. 38.

15 Dear Tom, this brown jug that now foams with mild ale,—

In which I will drink to sweet Nan of the vale,—

Was once Toby Fillpot, a thirsty old soul

As e'er drank a bottle, or fathomed a bowl;
In bousing about 'twas his praise to excel,
And among jolly toppers he bore off the bell.
FRANCIS FAWKES, The Brown Jug.

κεραμεὺς κεραμεῖ κοτεῖ.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 25.

<sup>2</sup> There's a joy without canker or cark, There's a pleasure eternally new,
'Tis to gloat on the glaze and the mark
Of china that's ancient and blue;
Unchipp'd, all the centuries through
It has pass'd, since the chime of it rang,
And they fashion'd it, figures and hue,
In the reign of the Emperor Hwang.

ANDREW LANG, Ballade of Blue China.

I am content to be a bric-a-bracker and a Ceramiker.

MARK TWAIN, A Tramp Abroad. Ch. 20.

<sup>3</sup> Every potter boasts of his own pot.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>4</sup> No handicraft can with our art compare,
For pots are made of what we potters are.
UNKNOWN. Motto of 18th century potters, often used on glazed ware. Another version was used by Longfellow in an introduction to Kéramos, and is sometimes mistakingly ascribed to him.

Turn, turn, my wheel! Turn round and round
Without a pause, without a sound:

So spins the flying world away!
This clay, well mixed with marl and sand,
Follows the motion of my hand;
For some must follow, and some command,
Though all are made of clay!

LONGFELLOW, Kéramos, l. 1.

I—Poverty: Definitions

<sup>5</sup> Poverty does not mean the possession of little, but the non-possession of much. (Paupertas enim est non quæ pauca possidet, sed quæ multa non possidet.)

ANTIPATER, Fragments. No. 54. (SENECA,
Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxvii, sec. 39.)

It is not the man who has too little, but the man who craves more, that is poor. (Non qui parum habet, sed qui plus cupit, pauper est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ii, sec. 6.
He is not poor that hath little, but he that desireth much.

That breathes the keen yet wholesome air
Of ragged penury.

THOMAS GRAY, On the Pleasure Arising from Vicissitude. This stanza is said to have been added to Gray's poem by his biographer, the Rev. William Mason.

Poverty has no means to feed its passion, yet it is not worth while to wish to be poor because of that. (Non habet, unde suum paupertas pascat amorem: Non tamen hoc tanti est, pauper ut esse velis.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 749.

1 Poverty, when it is voluntary, is never despicable, but takes an heroic aspect.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. Pt. i, ser. 2.

2 The loss of wealth is loss of dirt,
As sages in all times assert;
The happy man's without a shirt.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Be Merry, Friends.

I hold him rich, al had he not a shirt.

CHAUCER, Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 330.

3 Who can sing so merry a note
As he that cannot change a groat?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)

Rich men never whistle, poor men always do;
bird-songs are in the hearts of the people.

STEPHEN B. ELKINS, Speech, 1906.

4 Wrapped in my virtue, I woo honest Poverty, undowered though she be. (Virtute me involve probamque Pauperiem sine dote quæro.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode, 29, l. 55.

Content with poverty, my soul I arm;
And virtue, though in rags, will keep me warm.

HORACE, Odes, iii, 29, 55. (Dryden, tr.)

5 Yes! in the poor man's garden grow,
Far more than herbs and flowers,
Kind thoughts, contentment, peace of mind,
And joy for weary hours.

MARY HOWITT, The Poor Man's Garden.

Cultivate poverty like a garden herb, sage.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

6 The penniless traveler may sing before thieves. (Cantabit vacuus coram latrone viator.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 22.

The traveller, freighted with a little wealth, Sets forth at night, and makes his way by stealth; . . .

While, void of care, the beggar trips along,
And, in the spoiler's presence, trolls his song.

JUVENAL, Satires, x. (Gifford, tr.)

If you are empty-handed, the highwayman passes you by; even along an infested road, the poor travel in peace. (Nudum latro transmittit; etiam in obsessa via pauperi pax est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xiv, 10.

A poor man, that beareth no riches on him by the way, may boldly sing before thieves.

CHAUCER, Boethius. Bk. ii, prose 5.

The poor man before the thief doth sing.

JOHN LYDGATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. iii, l. 582.

7 How safe and easy the poor man's life and his humble dwelling! (O vitæ tuta facultas Pauperis angustique lares!)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. v, l. 527.

There is nothing perfectly secure but poverty.

11 It is not poverty that we praise, it is the man whom poverty cannot humble or bend.
(Laudatur enim non paupertas, sed ille, quem paupertas non summittit nec incurvat.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. 82, 11.

12 The couch of turf, softer than Tyrian purple, often soothes to fearless slumber. (Cæspes Tyrio millior ostro solet inpavidos ducere somnos.)

SENECA, Hercules Cætaeus, l. 644.

Less wildly does Fortune rage among humble folks, and more lightly does God smite the more lightly blessed. (Minor in parvis Fortuna furit Leviusque ferit leviora deus.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 1124.

13 The town's poor seem to me often to live the most independent lives of any.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

14 By breathing in content
The keen, the wholesome, air of poverty,
And drinking from the well of homely life.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. i, l. 306.

15 No man should commend poverty but he who is poor. (Nemo paupertatem commen-daret nisi pauper.)

ST. BERNARD, Sermons.

He must have a great deal of godliness who can find any satisfaction in being poor.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 44.

'Tis mighty easy, o'er a glass of wine,
On vain refinements vainly to refine,
To laugh at poverty in plenty's reign,
To boast of apathy when out of pain.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Farewell, l. 47.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 164.

To be poor, and to seem poor, is a certain method never to rise.

GOLDSMITH, On Concealing Our Wants.

This mournful truth is ev'rywhere confess'd,
Slow rises worth, by poverty depress'd.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 176.

3 It is the world's one crime its babes grow dull,
Its poor are ox-like, limp and leaden-eyed.
Not that they starve, but starve so dreamlessly, . . .

Not that they die, but that they die like sheep.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Leaden-Eyed.

4 A blind man is a poor man, and blind a poor man is;

For the former seeth no man, and the latter no man sees.

6 The poor man must labor while life lasts, for idleness cannot support even the frugal
life.

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 634.

A poor man, though he speak the truth, is not believed. (Πένης λέγων τάληθές οὐ πιστεύεται.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 856.

7 Poverty may be an unescapable misfortune, but that no more makes it honorable than a cocked eye is made honorable by the same cause.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 17.

8 But to the world no bugbear is so great

As want of figure and a small estate.
To either India see the merchant fly,
Scared at the spectre of pale Poverty!
See him with pains of body, pangs of soul,
Burn thro' the Tropics, freeze beneath the Pole!

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. i,
epis. 1, l. 67.

The prevalent fear of poverty among the educated classes is the worst moral disease from which our civilization suffers.

WILLIAM JAMES, Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 370.

9 In a change of rule among the citizens, the poor change nothing except the name of their master. (In principatu commutando civium, Nil præter domini nomen mutant pauperes.)

VI—Poverty and Riches

<sup>2</sup> The rich feast, the poor fast;
The dogs dine, the poor pine.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 39. (1630)

<sup>3</sup> Poverty is an anomaly to rich people. It is very difficult to make out why people who want dinner do not ring the bell.

BAGEHOT, Literary Studies. Vol. ii, p. 160.

If they cannot get bread, why don't they eat cake?

MARIE ANTOINETTE, of the French mob which was demanding bread.

She had an idea from the very sound
That people with naught were naughty.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Education.

<sup>4</sup> God only, who made us rich, can make us poor.

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese. No. 24.

<sup>5</sup> There are only two families in the world, the Haves and the Have Nots.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 20.

That these two parties still divide the world—
Of those that want, and those that have: and still

The same old sore breaks out from age to age,
With much the same result.

TENNYSON, Walking to the Mail, l. 69.

<sup>6</sup> A poor man who does not flatter, and a rich man who is not proud, are passable characters; but they are not equal to the poor who are cheerful, and the rich who yet love the rules of propriety.

CONFUCIUS, Analects.

<sup>8</sup> Wealth is crime enough to him that's poor.

I don't 'old with Wealth. What is Wealth? Labour robbed out of the poor.

H. G. WELLS, Kipps. Bk. ii, ch. 4.

<sup>11</sup> Ye friends to truth, ye statesmen, who survey
The rich man's joys increase, the poor's decay,

'Tis yours to judge, how wide the limits stand

Between a splendid and a happy land.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 265.

The nakedness of the indigent world may be clothed from the trimmings of the vain.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 4.

<sup>12</sup> Poverty breeds wealth; and wealth in its turn breeds poverty. The earth, to form the mould, is taken out of the ditch; and whatever may be the height of the one will be the depth of the other.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

<sup>13</sup> The greatest luxury of riches is, that they enable you to escape so much good advice. The rich are always advising the poor, but the poor seldom venture to return the compliment.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Brevia.

<sup>14</sup> God could have made all rich, or all men poor;

But why He did not, let me tell wherefore:
Had all been rich, where then had Patience been?

Had all been poor, who had His Bounty seen?

ROBERT HERRICK, Riches and Poverty.

<sup>15</sup> Two of a thousand things are disallow'd,
A lying rich man, and a poor man proud.

ROBERT HERRICK, Two Things.

<sup>16</sup> My soul . . . will not own a notion so unholy,
As thinking that the rich by easy trips
May go to heav'n, whereas the poor and lowly

Must work their passage, as they do in ships.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 129.

<sup>17</sup> Stitch! stitch! stitch!

In poverty, hunger, and dirt,
And still with a voice of dolorous pitch,
Would that its tone could reach the Rich,
She sang this "Song of the Shirt!"

Rich men direct you to their furniture, poor ones divert you from it.

LAMB, Last Essays of Elia: Captain Jackson.

Neither locks had they to their doors nor bars
to their windows;
But their dwellings were open as day and the hearts of the owners;
There the richest was poor and the poorest lived in abundance.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i, sec. 1, l. 36.

The Little Sister of the Poor . . .
The Poor, and their concerns, she has Monopolized, because of which

It falls to me to labor as
A Little Brother of the Rich.

EDWARD SANDFORD MARTIN, A Little Brother of the Rich.

Those whom we strive to benefit
Dear to our hearts soon grow to be;
I love my Rich, and I admit

That they are very good to me.

Succor the poor, my sisters,—I
While heaven shall still vouchsafe me health
Will strive to share and mollify
The trials of abounding wealth.

Oh impudence of wealth! with all thy store
How darest thou let one worthy man be poor?

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii,
sat. 2, l. 117.

But Satan now is wiser than of yore,
And tempts by making rich, not making poor.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 351.

Who am I to condemn you, O Dives,
I who am as much embittered
With poverty

As you with useless riches?

EZRA POUND, To Dives.

Bear wealth; poverty will bear itself.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

The pride of the rich makes the labours of the poor.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

The labours of the poor make the pride of the rich.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Riches come better after poverty than poverty after riches.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

It is still her use

To let the wretched man outlive his wealth,
To view with hollow eye and wrinkled brow
An age of poverty.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 268.

But she was rich, and he was poor,
And so it might not be.

JOHN GODFREY SAXE, The Way of the World.

He who has made a fair compact with poverty is rich. (Cui cum paupertas bene con-venit, dives est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. iv, 11.

A man is sheltered just as well by a thatch as by a roof of gold. (Bene hominem culmo quam auro tegi.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. viii, 5.

That which makes poverty a burden, makes riches also a burden. It matters little whether you lay a sick man on a wooden or a golden bed, for whithersoever he be moved he will carry his malady with him.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xvii, 12.

1 No, madam, 'tis not so well that I am poor, though many of the rich are damned.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act. i, sc. 3, l. 17.

2 If thou art rich, thou'rt poor;
For, like an ass whose back with ingots bows,
Thou bear'st thy heavy riches but a journey,
And death unloads thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 25.

3 When rich villains have need of poor ones
Poor ones may make what price they will.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 121.

4 Poor and content is rich and rich enough,
But riches fineless is as poor as winter
To him that ever fears he shall be poor.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 172.

The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor, but break it.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 73.

5 For often evil men are rich, and good men
poor;

But we will not exchange with them
Our virtue for their wealth, since one abides always,

While riches change their owners every day.
SOLON, Fragments. Frag. 15. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 3.)

6 Many who appear to be struggling with adverse fortune are happy; and many, that wallow in wealth, are most wretched. (Multos qui conflictari adversis videantur, beatos; ac plerosque, quanquam magnas per opes, miserrimos.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 22.

7 Happy must be the State
Whose ruler heedeth more
The murmurs of the poor
Than flatteries of the great.

WHITTIER, King Solomon and the Ants.

8 I know how to be rich and still enjoy all the little comforts of poverty.

HARRY LEON WILSON, The Spenders, p. 24.

POWER

9 I am more and more convinced that man is a dangerous creature; and that power, whether vested in many or a few, is ever grasping, and like the grave, cries "Give, give!"

ABIGAIL ADAMS, Letter to Her Husband, 27 Nov., 1775.

10 Give me a lever long enough, and a fulcrum strong enough, and single-handed I can move the world.

ARCHIMEDES OF SYRACUSE. (PAPPUS ALEXANDER, Collectio, viii, 10; PLINY, Historia Naturalis, vii, 37.) Sometimes quoted: "Give me where to stand and I will move the world," or "Give me a base and I will move the world."

If there were another world, and I could go to it, I could move this.

ARCHIMEDES. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcellus. Ch. 14, sec. 7.)

Don't talk to me of your Archimedes' lever. . . . Give me the right word and the right accent and I will move the world.

JOSEPH CONRAD, A Personal Record: Preface.

11 The seeds of godlike power are in us still:
Gods are we, Bards, Saints, Heroes, if we will.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Written in Emerson's Essays.

12 It is the solecism of power, to think to command the end, and yet not to endure the mean.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Empire.

It is a strange desire, to seek power, and to lose liberty; or to seek power over others, and to lose power over a man's self.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Great Place.

13 He hath no power that hath not power to use.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Visit.

14 Energy is Eternal Delight.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

15 Then wakes the power which in the age of iron

Burst forth to curb the great and raise the low.

BULWER-LYTTON, Richelieu. Act iv, sc. 2.

16 The greater the power the more dangerous the abuse.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons, 7 Feb., 1771.

Power gradually extirpates from the mind every humane and gentle virtue.

EDMUND BURKE, A Vindication of Natural Society.

17 Dim with the mist of years, grey flits the shade of power.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 2.

<sup>1</sup> Power is so far from being desirable in itself, that it sometimes ought to be refused, and sometimes to be resigned.

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 20, sec. 68.

Next to the assumption of power was the responsibility of relinquishing it.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 27 May, 1841.

CICERO, Philippicæ. No. ii, ch. 37, sec. 95.

<sup>3</sup> To know the pains of power, we must go to those who have it; to know its pleasures, we must go to those who are seeking it: the pains of power are real, its pleasures imaginary.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

You shall have joy, or you shall have power, said God; you shall not have both.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. vi, p. 282.

What is grandeur, what is power?
Heavier toil, superior pain.

THOMAS GRAY, Ode for Music, l. 57.

I have never been able to conceive how any rational being could propose happiness to himself from the exercise of power over others.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 18.

Power, like a desolating pestilence,
Pollutes whate'er it touches.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto iii, l. 176.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Adventurer, No. 45.

Power is ever stealing from the many to the few.
WENDELL PHILLIPS, Address: Public Opinion,
Boston, 28 Jan., 1852.

9 Power is easily retained by the qualities by which it was first won. (Imperium facile eis artibus retinetur quibus initio partum est.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Sec. 2.

Power is more certainly retained by wary measures than by daring counsels. (Potentium cautius quam acribus consiliis tutius haberi.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xi, sec. 29.

10 Power on an ancient consecrated throne,
Strong in possession, founded in old custom;
Power by a thousand tough and stringy roots
Fixed to the people's pious nursery-faith.

I—Praise: Definitions

BROADHURST [?], To the Celebrated Beauties of the British Court. (BELL, Fugitive Poetry. Vol. iii, p. 118.)

When one good line did once my wonder raise
In Br——st's works, I stood resolv'd to praise,
And had, but that the modest author cries,
"Praise undeserv'd is satire in disguise."

UNKNOWN, On a Certain Line of Mr. Br——.
(The Garland, London, 1721.) This epigram, which was signed B., is the only clue to the author of this famous line. It is assumed that the name was Broadhurst.

Praise undeserv'd is scandal in disguise.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 413. (1733) Pope encloses the line
in quotation marks.

Why, praise is satire in these sinful days.

PAUL WHITEHEAD, Manners.

Praise is rebuke to the man whose conscience alloweth it not.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Commendation.

<sup>2</sup> Praise is but the shadow of virtue.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains. Vol. ii, p. 118.

<sup>3</sup> Praises of the unworthy are felt by ardent minds as robberies of the deserving.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 3.

<sup>4</sup> It is as great a spite to be praised in the wrong place, and by a wrong person, as can be done to a noble nature.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Non Vulgi Sunt.

Praise that stings like shame.

SWINBURNE, In Sepulcretis. St. 1.

<sup>5</sup> Be silent, Praise,

Blind guide with siren voice, and blinding all
That hear thy call.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Wednesday before Easter.

<sup>6</sup> All praise is foreign, but of true desert;
Plays round the head, and comes not to the heart.

WILLIAM MASON, Musæus.

<sup>7</sup> Among the smaller duties of life I hardly know any one more important than that of not praising where praise is not due.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy. Lecture 9.

<sup>8</sup> The art of praising began the art of pleasing. (L'art de louer commença l'art de plaire.)

VOLTAIRE, La Pucelle. Chant xx.

<sup>9</sup> I now perceived

That we are praised, only as men in us
Do recognise some image of themselves,
An abject counterpart of what they are,
Or the empty thing that they would wish to be.

WORDSWORTH, The Borderers. Act iv, l. 1822.

II—Praise: Apothegms

<sup>10</sup> Praise is deeper than the lips.

ROBERT BROWNING, Hervé Riel. St. 9.

<sup>11</sup> He wants worth who dares not praise a foe.
DRYDEN, Conquest of Granada. Act ii, sc. 1.

<sup>12</sup> Praise without profit puts little into the pot.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3922.

Praise makes good men better and bad men worse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3918.

<sup>13</sup> Good people all, with one accord,
Lament for Madam Blaize,
Who never wanted a good word—
From those who spoke her praise.

GOLDSMITH, An Elegy on Mrs. Mary Blaize.

<sup>14</sup> Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise.

New Testament: Matthew, xxi, 16; Psalms, viii, 2.

<sup>15</sup> And touch'd their golden harps, and hymning prais'd
God and his works.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 258.

<sup>16</sup> I am deaf with praises, and all dazed with flowers.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Herod. Act i.

<sup>17</sup> Poetic Justice, with her lifted scale,
Where, in nice balance, truth with gold she weighs,
And solid pudding against empty praise.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 52.

<sup>18</sup> Be thou the first true merit to befriend;
His praise is lost who stays till all commend.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 274.

<sup>19</sup> Forbear to mention what thou canst not praise.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Carmen Seculare, l. 106.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 326.

Old praise dies unless you feed it.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>21</sup> Praise a fool and you water his folly.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>1</sup> I will praise any man that will praise me.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 6, l. 91.

You were ever good at sudden commendations.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act v, sc. 3, l. 122.

In thy condign praise.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i,
sc. 2, l. 26.

<sup>2</sup> Old John of Gaunt, time-honoured Lancaster.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 1, l. 1.

<sup>3</sup> Praise is the best diet for us, after all.
SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir.
Vol. i.)

<sup>4</sup> Their silence is sufficient praise. (Tacent, satis laudant.)
TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 476. (Act iii, sc. 2.)

III—Praise: Love of Praise

See also Flattery: Love of Flattery

<sup>5</sup> We are all imbued with the love of praise.
(Trahimur omnes laudis studio.)
CICERO, Pro Archia Poeta. Ch. 11, sec. 26.

<sup>6</sup> The praise of a fool is incense to the wisest of us.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. vii,
ch. 2.

<sup>7</sup> What cannot praise effect in mighty minds,
When flattery soothes, and when ambition blinds?
DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 303.

<sup>8</sup> We thirst for approbation, yet cannot forgive the approver.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

<sup>9</sup> Spite of all modesty, a man must own a pleasure in the hearing of his praise.
FARQUHAR, The Twin Rivals. Act iii, sc. 2.

The modesty of praise wears gradually away.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Halifax.
Modesty is the only sure bait when you angle for praise.

<sup>10</sup> LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 17 May, 1750.
What woman can resist the force of praise?
JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 182.

Beauty's elixir vitæ, praise.
COVENTRY PATMORE, The Angel in the House:
Bk. ii, Prologue.

Delightful praise!—like summer rose,
That brighter in the dew-drop glows,
The bashful maiden's cheek appear'd.
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto ii, st. 24.

When all the world conspires to praise her,
The woman's deaf and does not hear.
POPE, On a Certain Lady at Court.

The sweeter sound of woman's praise.
MACAULAY, Lines Written on the Night of 30th of July, 1847.

<sup>11</sup> Of praise a mere glutton, he swallow'd what came,
And the puff of a dunce, he mistook it for fame;
Till his relish grown callous, almost to dis-
please,
Who pepper'd the highest was surest to
please.
GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 109. Referring to David Garrick.

<sup>12</sup> Do you swell with the love of praise? (Laudis amore tumes?)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 36.

So light and so small a thing it is which casts down or restores a mind greedy of praise. (Sic leve, sic parvum est, animum quod laudis ava-rum Subruit ac reficit.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 179.

<sup>13</sup> For they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God.
New Testament: John, xii, 43.

<sup>14</sup> He that departs with his own honesty
For vulgar praise, doth it too dearly buy.
BEN JONSON, Epigrams. No. 2.

<sup>15</sup> Usually we praise only to be praised. (On ne loue d'ordinaire que pour être loué.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 146.

The refusal of praise is a wish to be praised twice. (Le refus des louanges est un désir d'être loué deux fois.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 149.

<sup>16</sup> We are apt to love praise, but not to deserve it. But if we would deserve it, we must love virtue more than that.
WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

<sup>17</sup> To what base ends, and by what abject ways,
Are mortals urged thro' sacred lust of praise!
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 320.

Itch of vulgar praise.
POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 60.

Whose Ruling Passion was the lust of praise.
POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 181.

His passion still, to covet gen'ral praise,
His life, to forfeit it a thousand ways.
POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 196.

<sup>18</sup> The greatest efforts of the race have always been traceable to the love of praise, as its greatest catastrophes to the love of pleasure.
JOHN RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies. Sec. i, 3.

<sup>19</sup> Praises, of whose taste the wise are fond.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 18.

1 Cram 's with praise, and make 's
As fat as tame things: one good deed, dying
tongueless,
Slaughters a thousand waiting upon that.
Our praises are our wages.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2, l. 91.
Farewell, Bristolia's dingy piles of brick,
Lovers of mammon, worshippers of trick!
Ye spurned the boy who gave you antique lays,
And paid for learning with your empty praise.
THOMAS CHATTERTON, Last Verses.

2 He who loves praise loves temptation.
THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, p. 114.

3 The most pleasing of all sounds, that of your own praise. ("Ἠδίστον ἀκουσμα ἑπαινος.")
XENOPHON, Heiro. Ch. 1, sec. 14.

4 The love of praise, howe'er concealed by art,
Reigns, more or less, and glows, in ev'ry
heart:
The proud, to gain it, toils on toils endure;
The modest shun it, but to make it sure.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 51.
As love of pleasure into pain betrays,
So most grow infamous through love of praise.
YOUNG, To the Right Hon. Mr. Dodington.

IV—Praise of the Living

5 Every one that has been long dead has a due proportion of praise allotted him, in which, whilst he lived, his friends were too profuse and his enemies too sparing.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 101.
To hear the world applaud the hollow ghost
Which blamed the living man.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Growing Old.

6 Him who ne'er listen'd to the voice of praise,
The silence of neglect can ne'er appall.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, st. 2.
And hearts that once beat high for praise
Now feel that pulse no more.

THOMAS MOORE, The Harp That Once Thro' Tara's Halls.

Praise cannot wound his generous spirit now.
SAMUEL ROGERS, Voyage of Columbus.
Canto i.

They have their passing paragraphs of praise,
And are forgotten.
ROBERT SOUTHBY, The Victory, l. 9.

7 The pathway of the living we can beautify and grace;
We can line it deep with roses and make earth a happier place.
But we've done all mortals can do, when our prayers are softly said
For the souls of those who travel o'er the pathway of the dead.
EDGAR GUEST, The Pathway of the Living.

8 Don't strew me with roses after I'm dead.
When Death claims the light of my brow,
No flowers of life will cheer me: instead
You may give me my roses now!

THOMAS F. HEALEY, Give Me My Roses Now.
A rose to the living is more
Than sumptuous wreaths to the dead.
NIXON WATERMAN, A Rose to the Living.

9 Then wherefore waste the rose's bloom
Upon the cold, insensate tomb?
Can flowery breeze, or odour's breath,
Affect the still, cold sense of death?
Oh no; I ask no balm to steep
With fragrant tears my bed of sleep:
But now, while every pulse is glowing,
Now let me breathe the balsam flowing.
THOMAS MOORE, Odes of Anacreon. Ode xxxii.

10 And so I charge ye, by the thorny crown,
And by the cross on which the Saviour
bled,
And by your own soul's hope of fair renown,
Let something good be said.
JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, Let Something Good Be Said.

11 Oh, friends! I pray to-night,
Keep not your roses for my dead, cold brow:
The way is lonely, let me feel them now.

ARABELLA EUGENIA SMITH, *If I Should Die
To-night*. Erroneously attributed to Robert
C. V. Myers, Alice Cary and Abram J. Ryan.
Claimed without foundation by Irvine Dungan. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems.)

If I should die to-night,
And you should come in deepest grief and woe,
And say, "Here's that ten dollars that I owe,"
I might arise in my large white cravat
And say, "What's that?" . . .
But I'd drop dead again!
BEN KING, If I Should Die To-night.

12 Closed eyes can't see the white roses;
Cold hands can't hold them, you know!
Breath that is stilled can not gather
The odors that sweet from them blow.
Death, with a peace beyond dreaming
Its children of earth doth endow;
Life is the time we can help them—
So give them the flowers now!
UNKNOWN, Give Them the Flowers Now.

Bring me all your flowers to-day—
Whether pink, or white, or red;
I'd rather have one blossom now
Than a truckload when I'm dead.
UNKNOWN, Kindness During Life.

13 Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. . . . Fill their lives with sweetness. . . . Postmortem kindness does not cheer the burdened spirit. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward over the weary way.

UNKNOWN, The Alabaster Boxes, attributed to Warren P. Lovett, George W. Childs, Ben Selling, and others.

V—Praise of Gods and Men

<sup>1</sup> The praise of so mean a creature was degrading to me. (Quæ quidem conlaudatio hominis turpissimi mihi ipsi erat pæne turpis.)

CICERO, In Pisonem. Ch. 19, sec. 72.

Of whom to be disprais'd were no small praise.
MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iii, l. 56.

<sup>2</sup> Nothing so soon the drooping spirits can raise
As praises from the men whom all men praise.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Ode upon Occasion of a Copy of Verses of My Lord Broghill's.

Approbation from Sir Hubert Stanley is praise indeed.

THOMAS MORTON, A Cure for the Heartache. Act v, sc. 2.

<sup>3</sup> Be not extravagantly high in expression of thy commendations of men thou likest: It may make the hearers' stomach rise.

THOMAS FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam. Vol. i, p. 51.

Long open panegyric drags at best,
And praise is only praise when well address'd.

JOHN GAY, Epistles. Epis. i, l. 29.

<sup>4</sup> Praising all alike is praising none.

JOHN GAY, Epistles. Epis. i, l. 114.

He who praises everybody praises nobody.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life. Vol. iii, p. 225, note.)

<sup>5</sup> I would both sing thy praise and praise thy singing.

HUGH HOLLAND, To Giles Farnaby.

<sup>6</sup> Sweet is the scene where genial friendship plays

The pleasing game of interchanging praise.

O. W. HOLMES, An After Dinner Poem.

<sup>7</sup> Praise me not too much,
Nor blame me, for thou speakest to the Greeks
Who know me.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. x, l. 289. (Bryant, tr.)

Praise none too much, for all are fickle.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>8</sup> I like you, Tom! and in these lays Give honest worth its honest praise.

THOMAS HOOD, Stanzas to Tom Woodgate.

<sup>9</sup> A continual feast of commendation is only to be attained by merit or by wealth.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 193.

<sup>10</sup> I should have praised you more had you praised me less. (Je vous louerais davantage si vous m'aviez loué moins.)

LOUIS XIV, Remark, to Bossuet.

<sup>11</sup> Praise from you delights me, father, you a man deserving praise. (Lætus sum laudari me abs te, pater, a laudato viro.)

NÆVIUS. (CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iv, ch. 31, sec. 67.)

I am pleased to be praised by a man whom every one praises. (Lætus sum laudari a laudato viro.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Familiares. Bk. v, epis. 12.

It is not the least praise to have pleased distinguished men. (Principibus placuisse viris non ultima laus est.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 17, l. 35.

A word or nod from a good man is worth more than a thousand arguments from others.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Phocion. Ch. 5, sec. 4.

<sup>12</sup> Praise, the fine diet which we're apt to love,
If given to excess, does hurtful prove.

JOHN OLDHAM, A Letter from the Country to a Friend in Town.

Praise is like ambergris: a little whiff of it, and by snatches, is very agreeable; but when a man holds a whole lump of it to your nose, it is a stink, and strikes you down.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

<sup>13</sup> And make her chronicle as rich with praise
As is the ooze and bottom of the sea
With sunken wreck and sumless treasures.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act i, sc. 2, l. 163.

<sup>14</sup> To you! to you! all song of praise is due;
Only in you my song begins and endeth.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella: First Song.

And round thee with the breeze of song
To stir a little dust of praise.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxxv.

<sup>15</sup> On him and on his high endeavour
The light of praise shall shine for ever.

WORDSWORTH, The White Doe of Rylstone. Canto v, l. 1214.

VI—Praise and Blame

<sup>16</sup> For if it be but half-denied,
'Tis half as good as justified.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto ii, l. 803.

<sup>17</sup> Teasing with blame, excruciating with praise.
BYRON, Beppo. St. 74.

<sup>18</sup> I praise loudly, I blame softly.
CATHERINE II OF RUSSIA, Maxims.

1 Thus neither the praise nor the blame is our own.

COWPER, Letter to Mr. Newton.

2 This misery those dreary souls sustain
Who passed their lives without or praise or blame. (Questo misero modo
Tengon l'anime triste di coloro,
Che visser senza infamia e senza lodo.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto iii, l. 34.

Now God bless all true workers, let us pray:
The night-time cometh when we all must rest:
Strive we, and do, lest by-and-by we sit
In that blind life to which all other fate
Is cause for envy; with the naked souls
Who never lived, knowing nor praise nor blame,
But kept themselves in mean neutrality,
Hateful alike to God and to His foes.

EMILY HENRIETTA HICKEY, Michael Villiers,
Idealist.

3 It is more shameful to be praised faintly and coldly than to be censured violently and severely. For the man who reviles is regarded as unjust and hostile, but one who praises faintly is regarded as a friend, who would like to praise but can find nothing to commend.

FAVORINUS. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ.
Bk. xix, ch. 3, sec. 1.)

When needs he must, yet faintly then he praises;
Somewhat the deed, much more the means he raises:

So marreth what he makes, and praising most, dispraises.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, The Purple Island. Canto vii, st. 67.

Damn with faint praise, assent with civil leer,
And, without sneering, teach the rest to sneer.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 201.

Well, well, is a word of malice.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

With faint praises one another damn.

WYCHERLEY, The Plain-Dealer: Prologue, l. 6.

4 He that praiseth publicly will slander privately.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2250.

5 Praise from a friend, or censure from a foe,
Are lost on hearers that our merits know.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. x, l. 293. (Pope, tr.)

6 Cold Approbation gave the lingering bays,
For those who durst not censure, scarce could praise.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Prologue at the Opening of the Drury Lane Theatre, l. 13.

7 Few are wise enough to prefer useful reproof to treacherous praise. (Peu de gens sont assez sages pour préférer le blâme qui leur est utile à la louange qui les trahit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 147.

There are reproaches which praise and praises which reproach. (Il y a des reproches qui louent et des louanges qui médisent.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 148.

We blame or praise most things merely because it is the fashion. (On loue et on blâme la plupart des choses parce que c'est la mode de les louer ou de les blâmer.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 533.

8 Be sparing in praising and more so in blaming. (Parum lauda, vitupera parcius.)

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Quoted.

9 A man's accusations of himself are always believed, his praises never.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 8.

10 Fear not the anger of the wise to raise;
Those best can bear reproof who merit praise.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 23.

11 Such is the mode of these censorious days,
The art is lost of knowing how to praise.

JOHN SHEFFIELD, On Mr. Hobbes, l. 1.

<sup>19</sup> A single grateful thought towards heaven is the most complete prayer.

LESSING, Minna von Barnhelm. Act ii, sc. 7.

<sup>20</sup> Prayer is a strong wall and fortress of the church; it is a goodly Christian's weapon.

LUTHER, Table Talk: Of Prayer.

<sup>21</sup> Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Uttered or unexpressed,
The motion of a hidden fire
That trembles in the breast.

Prayer is the burden of a sigh,

The falling of a tear,

The upward glancing of an eye

When none but God is near.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, What Is Prayer?

Prayers, the sweet ambassadors to God,

The heralds to prepare a better life.

FRANCIS ROUS, Thule.

There is a bridge, whereof the span
Is rooted in the heart of man,
And reaches, without pile or rod,
Unto the Great White Throne of God.

Its traffic is in human sighs,
Fervently wafted to the skies;
'Tis the one pathway from Despair,
And it is called the Bridge of Prayer.
GILBERT THOMAS, The Unseen Bridge.

10 More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of.

TENNYSON, Morte d'Arthur, l. 247.

11 Lord, what a change within us one short hour
Spent in Thy presence will avail to make!
What heavy burdens from our bosoms take!
What parched grounds refresh as with a shower!

RICHARD CHENEVIX TRENCH, Prayer.

Time spent on the knees in prayer will do more to remedy heart strain and nerve worry than anything else.

GEORGE DAVID STEWART, Lecture, to his students at New York University.

12 Glory be unto her whose word
Sends her dear lord to bitter fight;
Although he conquer by his sword,
She to the praise has equal right;
He with the sword in battle, she at home
with prayer,
Both win the victory, and both the glory share.

IV—Prayer: The Good Prayer

16 Know that thou art freed from all desires when thou hast reached such a point that thou prayest to God for nothing except what thou canst pray for openly. (Tunc scito esse te omnibus cupiditatibus solutum, cum eo per-veneris, ut nihil deum roges, nisi quod rogare possis palam.)

Prayers that all men may hear. (Aperto vivere voto.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 7.

Live among men as if God beheld you; speak with God as if men were listening. (Sic vive cum hominibus, tamquam deus videat; sic loquere cum deo, tamquam homines audiant.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. x, sec. 5.

One way they look, another way they steer,
Pray to the gods, but would have mortals hear.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 73.

1 Whoso will pray, he must fast and be clean,
And fat his soul, and make his body lean.

CHAUCER, The Somnours Tale, l. 171.

2 He prayeth well who loveth well
Both man and bird and beast.
He prayeth best who loveth best
All things both great and small;
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. vii.

3 The prayer of the farmer kneeling in his field to weed it, the prayer of the rower kneeling with the stroke of his oar, are true prayers heard throughout nature.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

4 To pray . . . is to desire; but it is to desire what God would have us desire. He who desires not from the bottom of his heart, offers a deceitful prayer.

FÉNELON, Advice Concerning Prayer.

5 So a good prayer, though often used, is still fresh and fair in the ears and eyes of Heaven.

THOMAS FULLER, Good Thoughts in Bad Times. Sec. xii.

6 Thou canst not pray to God without praying to Love, but mayest pray to Love without praying to God.

RICHARD GARNETT, De Flagello Myrteo, xiii.

7 In prayer the lips ne'er act the winning part
Without the sweet concurrence of the heart.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Heart.

And, when I pray, my heart is in my prayer.
LONGFELLOW, Giles Corey. Act ii, sc. 3.

My prayers

Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes
More worth than empty vanities; yet prayers and wishes

Are all I can return.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 67.

8 A man can pray unbidden from a hassock,

And, passing by the customary cassock,
Kneel down remote upon the simple sod,
And sue in forma pauperis to God.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 206.

9 Thus she stood amid the stooks,
Praising God with sweetest looks.

THOMAS HOOD, Ruth.

10 You should pray for a sound mind in a sound body; for a stout heart that has no fear of death. (Orandum est ut sit mens sana in corpore sano; Fortem posce animum mortis terrore carentem.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 356.

Pray for a sound mind and for good health, first of soul and then of body. . . . Call boldly upon God; you will not be asking him for that which belongs to another.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. x, sec. 4.

Let our unceasing, earnest prayer
Be, too, for light,—for strength to bear
Our portion of the weight of care,
That crushes into dumb despair
One half the human race.

LONGFELLOW, The Goblet of Life. St. 10.

11 Full on this casement shone the wintry moon,
And threw warm gules on Madeline's fair
breast,

As down she knelt for heaven's grace and boon;

Rose-bloom fell on her hands, together prest,
And on her silver cross soft amethyst,
And on her hair a glory, like a saint:
She seemed a splendid angel, newly drest,
Save wings, for heaven.

KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 25.

12 In all thou dost first let thy Prayers ascend,
And to the Gods thy Labours first commend,
From them implore Success, and hope a prosperous End.

PYTHAGORAS, Golden Verses, l. 49. (DACIER, Life of Pythagoras.)

13 It may never be mine,
The loaf or the kiss or the kingdom
Because of beseeching;
But I know that my hand
Is an arm's length nearer the sky
For reaching.

EDWIN QUARLES, Petition.

14 A short prayer enters heaven; a long drink empties the can. (Brevis oratio penetrat cælum; longa potatio evacuat scyphos.)

BYRON, The Island. Canto ii, st. 4.

4 Prayer that craves a particular commodity, anything less than all good, is vicious. . . . Prayer as a means to a private end is mean-ness and theft.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

5 He who prays without confidence cannot hope that his prayers will be granted.

FÉNELON, Maximes: On Prayer.

6 God He rejects all Prayers that are slight,
And want their poise: words ought to have their weight.

ROBERT HERRICK, Prayers Must Have Poise.

7 Fool! why do you in vain beseech with childish prayers things which no day ever did bring, will bring, or could bring? (Stulte, quid hæc frustra votis puerilibus optas,
Quæ non ulla tibi, fertque, feretque dies?)

Do not lose the time in praying. (Ne tempora perde precando.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xi, l. 286.

8 He pray'd by quantity,
And with his repetitions, long and loud,
All knees were weary.

POLLOK, The Course of Time. Pt. viii, l. 628.

9 Do not pray for yourself: you do not know what will help you.

PYTHAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Sec. 9.)

10 Don't ask for what you'll wish you hadn't got. (Postea noli rogare, quod inpetrare nolueris.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, 1.

We often want one thing and pray for another, not telling the truth even to the gods. (Sæpe aliud volumus, aliud optamus et verum ne dis quidem dicimus.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, 2.

What we seek we shall find; what we flee from flees from us; as Goethe said, "What we wish for in youth, comes in heaps on us in old age," too often cursed with the granting of our prayer:
and hence the high caution, that, since we are sure of having what we wish, we beware to ask only for high things.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

11 My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:
Words without thoughts never to heaven go.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 97.

When I would pray and think, I think and pray
To several subjects; Heaven hath my empty
words.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii,
sc. 4, l. 1.

12 Common people do not pray; they only beg.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 57.

13 Complaint is the largest tribute heaven receives, and the sincerest part of our devotion.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

14 Nor are any prayers, unless righteous, heard by the gods. (Neque a Diis nisi justas sup-plicium preces audiri.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 36.

15 "Twas then belike," Honorious cried,
"When you the public fast defied,
Refused to heav'n to raise a prayer,
Because you'd no connections there."

JOHN TRUMBULL, McFingal. Canto i, l. 541.

16 Cease to think that the decrees of the gods can be turned aside by prayers. (Desine fata deum flecti sperare precando.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 376.

17 Though smooth be the heartless prayer, no ear in heaven will mind it;
And the finest phrase falls dead, if there is no feeling behind it.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Art and Heart.

18 "What is good for a bootless bene?"

With these dark words begins my Tale;
And their meaning is, whence can comfort
spring

When Prayer is of no avail?

WORDSWORTH, The Force of Prayer. St. 1.

VI—Prayer: Answered Prayer

19 Long tarries destiny, but comes to those who pray. (Τὸ μόρσιμον μένει πάλαι, εὐχομένοις δ' ἂν ἔλθοι.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Chæphoræ, l. 464. (Plumptre, tr.)

20 God answers sharp and sudden on some prayers,

And thrusts the thing we have prayed for in our face,

A gauntlet with a gift in 't.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ii, l. 952.

1 She knows omnipotence has heard her prayer
And cries, "It shall be done—sometime, somewhere."

OPHELIA G. BROWNING, Unanswered.

2 They never sought in vain that sought the Lord aright!

BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night. St. 6.

A generous prayer is never presented in vain.

R. L. STEVENSON, The Merry Men.

3 But this she knows, in joys and woes,
That saints will aid if men will call;
For the blue sky bends over all!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Christabel: Pt. i, Conclusion.

4 Our vows are heard betimes! and Heaven takes care

To grant, before we can conclude the pray'r:
Preventing angels met it half the way,
And sent us back to praise, who came to pray.

DRYDEN, Britannia Rediviva, l. 1.

5 Grant folly's prayers that hinder folly's wish,
And serve the ends of wisdom.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iv.

6 God, who's in Heav'n, will hear from thence,
If not to th' sound, yet to the sense.

ROBERT HERRICK, God Hears Us.

7 Who hearkens to the gods, the gods give ear.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 280. (Bryant, tr.)

A god when angry is moved by the voice of prayer. (Flectitur iratus voce rogante deus.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 442.

8 So spake he in prayer, and Zeus, the counselor, heard him, and a part the Father granted him, and a part denied.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvi, l. 249.

Ae half the prayer wi' Phœbus grace did find
And t'other half he whistled down the wind.

(Audiit et voti Phœbus succedere partem Mente dedit, partem volucris dispersit in auras.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xi, l. 794. (Scott, tr., Waverley. Ch. 43.)

9 Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask Him.

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 8.

Leave it to the gods to decide what is best for us and most suitable to our circumstances. (Per-mitte ipsis expendere numinibus quid Conveniat nobis rebusque sit utile nostris.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 347.

10 Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto
you.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 7.

Every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 8.

11 Who rises from Prayer a better man, his prayer is answered.

GEORGE MEREDITH, *The Ordeal of Richard
Feverel*. Ch. 12.

12 My debts are large, my failures great, my shame secret and heavy; yet when I come to ask for my good, I quake in fear lest my prayer be granted.

RABINDRANATH TAGORE, Gitanjali. No. 28.

13 I have never made but one prayer to God, a very short one: "O Lord, make my enemies ridiculous." And God granted it.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to M. Damilville, 16 May, 1767.

14 When the gods wish to punish us they answer
our prayers.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act ii.

Prayer must never be answered: if it is, it ceases to be prayer and becomes a correspondence.

OSCAR WILDE, Remark, to Laurence Housman.

VII—Prayer: Unanswered Prayer

15 Of course I prayed—
And did God care?

He cared as much
As on the air

A bird had stamped her foot
And cried "Give me!"

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. v, No. 38.

16 Is there never a chink in the world above
Where they listen for words from below?

JEAN INGELOW, Supper at the Mill: The Mother's Song.

17 If by prayer

Incessant I could hope to change the will
Of him who all things can, I would not cease
To weary him with my assiduous cries:
But prayer against his absolute decree
No more avails than breath against the wind,
Blown stifling back on him that breathes it
forth:

Therefore to his great bidding I submit.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 307.

18 O sad estate
Of human wretchedness; so weak is man,

So ignorant and blind, that did not God
Sometimes withhold in mercy what we ask,
We should be ruined at our own request.

HANNAH MORE, Moses in the Bulrushes. Pt. i.

19 We, ignorant of ourselves,
Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers

Deny us for our good; so find we profit
By losing of our prayers.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 5.

Who finds not Providence all good and wise,
Alike in what it gives, and what denies?

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 205.

Good when he gives, supremely good,
Nor less when he denies,
E'en crosses from his sovereign hand
Are blessings in disguise.

JAMES HERVEY, Hymn.

VIII—Prayer: Praying

1 A child may say amen
To a bishop's prayer, and feel the way it goes.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ii, l. 337.

2 Ave Maria! 'tis the hour of prayer!
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 103.

'Twas the hour when rites unholy
Called each Paynim voice to prayer.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Turkish Lady.

3 Father of Light! great God of Heaven!
Hear'st thou the accents of despair?
Can guilt like man's be e'er forgiven?
Can vice atone for crimes by prayer?
BYRON, The Prayer of Nature. St. 1.

4 O sweeter than the marriage-feast,
'Tis sweeter far to me,
To walk together to the kirk
With a goodly company:
To walk together to the kirk,
And all together pray,
While each to his great Father bends,
Old men, and babes, and loving friends
And youths and maidens gay.
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. vii.

5 White Captain of my soul, lead on;
I follow thee, come dark or dawn.
Only vouchsafe three things I crave:
Where terror stalks, help me be brave!
Where righteous ones can scarce endure
The siren call, help me be pure!
Where vows grow dim, and men dare do
What once they scorned, help me be true!
ROBERT FREEMAN, Prayer.

6 O Lord of Courage grave,
O Master of this night of Spring!
Make firm in me a heart too brave
To ask Thee anything.
JOHN GALSWORTHY, The Prayer.

7 Lord, dismiss us with thy blessing,
Hope, and comfort from above;
Let us each, thy peace possessing,
Triumph in redeeming love.
ROBERT HAWKER, Benediction.

8 Brightest and best of the sons of the morning,

Dawn on our darkness, and lend us thine aid.
REGINALD HEBER, Epiphany.

9 Father, I scarcely dare to pray,
So clear I see, now it is done,
How I have wasted half my day,
And left my work but just begun.
HELEN HUNT JACKSON, A Last Prayer.

10 Abide with me from morn till eve,
For without Thee I cannot live:
Abide with me when night is nigh,
For without Thee I dare not die.
JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Evening.

And help us, this and every day,
To live more nearly as we pray.
JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Morning.

11 I kneel not now to pray that thou
Make white one single sin,—
I only kneel to thank thee, Lord,
For what I have not been.
HARRY KEMP, A Prayer.

12 I ask and wish not to appear
More beauteous, rich or gay:
Lord, make me wiser every year,
And better every day.
CHARLES LAMB, A Birthday Thought.

13 O Lord my God, I have trusted in thee;
O Jesu my dearest one, now set me free.
In prison's oppression, in sorrow's obsession,
I weary for thee.
With sighing and crying bowed down as dying,

I adore thee, I implore thee, set me free!
(O Domine Deus! speravi in te;
O care mi Jesu! nunc libera me.
In dura catena, in misera poëna,
Disidero te.

Languendo, jemendo, et genuflectendo,
Adoro, imploro, ut liberes me!)

MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS. Written in her Book of Devotion before her execution. (Swinburne, tr., Mary Stewart. Act v, sc. 1.)

14 When the last sea is sailed and the last shallow charted,
When the last field is reaped and the last harvest stored,
When the last fire is out and the last guest departed,
Grant the last prayer that I shall pray, Be good to me, O Lord!
JOHN MASEFIELD, D'Avalos' Prayer.

15 Lord, help me live from day to day
In such a self-forgetful way,
That even when I kneel to pray,

My prayer shall be for—others.

CHARLES D. MEIGS, Others.

1 Let not that happen which I wish, but that which is right. (Μή μοι γένοιθ' ἂ βούλωμ' ἄλλ' ἂ συμφέρει.)

MENANDER, Fragment.

Not what we wish, but what we want,

Oh! let thy grace supply,

The good unask'd, in mercy grant;

The ill, though ask'd, deny.

JAMES MERRICK, Hymn.

2 As down in the sunless retreats of the Ocean,
Sweet flowers are springing no mortal can see,

So, deep in my soul the still prayer of devotion

Unheard by the world, rises silent to Thee.

THOMAS MOORE, As Down in the Sunless Retreats.

3 Without ceasing I make mention of you always in my prayers.

New Testament: Romans, i, 9.

Farewell! if ever fondest prayer

For other's weal avail'd on high,

Mine will not all be lost in air,

But wait thy name beyond the sky.

BYRON, Farewell! If Ever Fondest Prayer.

I would not exchange the prayer of the deceased [Mrs. Sheppard] in my behalf for the united glory of Homer, Cæsar, and Napoleon, could such be accumulated upon a living head.

BYRON, Letter to Mr. Sheppard. (MOORE, Life of Byron.)

Pray, sweet, for me, that I may be Faithful to God and thee.

EMILY HENRIETTA HICKEY, Beloved, It Is Morn.

Nymph, in thy orisons

Be all my sins remember'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 89.

4 Now that the sun is gleaming bright,
Implore we, bending low,

That He, the Uncreated Light,

May guide us as we go.

ADAM DE ST. VICTOR, Guide Us, Lord. A paraphrase of an old Latin hymn, said to have been sung at the death-bed of William the Conqueror.

5 Bow, stubborn knees; and, heart with strings of steel,
Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 70.

Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,

And lift my soul to heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 77.

Now I am past all comforts here, but prayers.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 123.

6 His worst fault is, that he is given to prayer;

he is something peevish that way; but nobody but has his fault.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act i, sc. 4, l. 13.

7 She prayed, that never prayed before.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 81.

8 Four things which are not in thy treasury,
I lay before thee, Lord, with this petition:—

My nothingness, my wants,

My sins, and my contrition.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Occasional Pieces. No. 19. Imitated from the Persian.

9 Holy Father, in thy mercy,
Hear our anxious prayer.

Keep our loved ones, now far absent,

'Neath Thy care.

ISABELLA S. STEPHENSON, Hymn. Popular with the British troops during the World War.

10 The day returns and brings us the petty round of irritating concerns and duties. Help us to play the man, help us to perform them with laughter and kind faces; let cheerfulness abound with industry. Give us to go blithely on our business all this day, bring us to our resting beds weary and content and undishonored, and grant us in the end the gift of sleep. Amen.

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, Prayer.

11 For what are men better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer

Both for themselves and those who call them friend?

TENNYSON, Morte d'Arthur, l. 301.

12 While Thee I seek, protecting Power,
Be my vain wishes stilled;

And may this consecrated hour

With better hopes be filled.

HELEN MARIA WILLIAMS, Trust in Providence.

13 If she, with those soft eyes in tears,
Day after day in her first years,

Must kneel and pray for grace from Thee,

What far, far deeper need have we!

How hardly, if she win not heaven,

Will our wild errors be forgiven!

NATHANIEL PARKER WILLIS, "Chamber Scene."

Ah! a seraph may pray for a sinner,

But a sinner must pray for himself.

CHARLES MONROE DICKINSON, The Children.

Her cushion's threadbare with her constant prayers.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vi, l. 78.

14 I pray the prayer the Easterners do;

May the peace of Allah abide with you.
(Salaam Aleikum.)
UNKNOWN, Peace Be With You.

PREACHER AND PREACHING

I—Preacher: Definitions

<sup>1</sup> For the preacher's merit or demerit,
It were to be wished the flaws were fewer
In the earthen vessel, holding treasure
Which lies as safe in a golden ewer;
But the main thing is, does it hold good measure?

Heaven soon sets right all other matters!
ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve. Pt. xxii.

I praise the heart, and pity the head of him,
And refer myself to Thee, instead of him.
ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve. Pt. xxii.

<sup>2</sup> For his religion, it was fit
To match his learning and his wit:
'Twas Presbyterian true blue;
For he was of that stubborn crew
Of errant saints, whom all men grant
To be the true Church Militant;
Such as do build their faith upon
The holy text of pike and gun;
Decide all controversies by Infallible artillery;
And prove their doctrine orthodox,
By Apostolic blows and knocks.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 1, l. 189.

<sup>3</sup> My profession is to keep secrets.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 1. It is a priest speaking.

<sup>4</sup> Priests are extremely like other men, and neither the better or worse for wearing a gown or a surplice.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 10 May, 1748.
Vows can't change nature; priests are only men.
ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book.
Pt. i, l. 1057.

All pastors are alike
To wand'ring sheep, resolv'd to follow none.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 890.

<sup>5</sup> For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord: . . . But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us.
New Testament: II Corinthians, iv, 5, 7.

Judge not the preacher; for he is thy Judge:
If thou mislike him, thou conceiv'st him not.
God calleth preaching folly. Do not grudge
To pick our treasures from an earthen pot.
The worst speak something good: if all want sense,
God takes a text, and preacheth patience.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 72.

<sup>6</sup> He that negotiates between God and man,

As God's ambassador, the grand concerns
Of judgment and of mercy, should beware
Of lightness in his speech.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 463.

<sup>7</sup> Alas for the unhappy man that is called to stand in the pulpit, and not give the bread of life.

EMERSON, Address to the Senior Class in Divinity College, Cambridge, 15 July, 1838.

<sup>8</sup> The Clergy in this sense, of Divine Institution, that God hath made mankind so weak that it must be deceived.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 221.

<sup>9</sup> Even ministers of good things are like torches, a light to others, waste and destruction to themselves.

RICHARD HOOKER. Quoted as "that admirable saying," by Gladstone, in 1880. (MORLEY,
Life of Gladstone. Bk. viii, ch. 1.)

<sup>10</sup> What bishops like best in their clergy is a dropping-down-deadness of manner.

SYDNEY SMITH, First Letter to Archdeacon Singleton.

They admire the Vicar of Bray, whose principle was to be Vicar of Bray, whether the church was Protestant or Popish.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 18.

See also POLITICS: EXPEDIENCY.

<sup>11</sup> A genius in a reverend gown
Must ever keep its owner down;
'Tis an unnatural conjunction,
And spoils the credit of the function.
SWIFT, To Dr. Delany.

Now hear an allusion:—A mitre, you know,
Is divided above, but united below.
If this you consider, our emblem is right;
The bishops divide, but the clergy unite.
SWIFT, On the Irish Bishops.

<sup>12</sup> I never saw, heard, nor read that the clergy were beloved in any nation where Christianity was the religion of the country. Nothing can render them popular but some degree of persecution.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Religion.

II—Preacher: Apothegms

<sup>13</sup> The parson knows enough who knows a Duke.
COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 403.

<sup>14</sup> Keeping our hearts warm and our heads cool, we clergy need do nothing emphatically.
DICKENS, Mystery of Edwin Drood. Ch. 16.

<sup>15</sup> Taylor, the Shakespeare of divines.
His words are music in my ear,
I see his cowl'd portrait dear;
And yet, for all his faith could see,

I would not the good bishop be.
EMERSON, The Problem.

1 A Mr. Wilkinson, a clergyman.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, telling Tennyson of the man to whom his sister was engaged. Tennyson seized upon the fact that the words made a line of blank verse, and aptly illustrated Wordsworth's weakest manner. (See BENSON, Life of Fitzgerald, p. 62.)

2 To a philosophic eye the vices of the clergy are far less dangerous than their virtues.

GIBBON, Decline and Fall. Ch. 49.

3 It is by the Vicar's skirts that the Devil climbs into the Belfry.

LONGFELLOW, Spanish Student. Act i, sc. 2.

4 Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm.

Old Testament: I Chronicles, xvi, 22; Psalms, cv, 15. The text upon which "Benefit of Clergy" (Beneficiura clericorum aut clericorum) was grounded. In England, the privilege was at first restricted to ecclesiastical places and persons, but in 1274 was extended to all persons who could read, and in 1691 to women. Such a person could not be put to death, but was branded on the hand. It was abolished in 1827. In America, the Congress passed an act in 1790 prohibiting benefit of clergy in any case of conviction of a capital crime.

Without Benefit of Clergy.

RUDYARD KIPLING. Title of short story. Kipling used the phrase in the sense of unmarried.

When want of learning kept the laymen low,
And none but priests were authoriz'd to know;
When what small knowledge was, in them did dwell;

And he a god, who could but read or spell.

JOHN DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 372.

5 A Curate—there is something which excites compassion in the very name of a Curate!

SYDNEY SMITH, Persecuting Bishops.

Ah me! I was a pale young curate then.

W. S. GILBERT, The Sorcerer. Act i.

The mildest curate going.

W. S. GILBERT, The Rival Curates.

The curate—he was fatter than his cure!

TENNYSON, Edwin Morris, l. 15.

III—Preachers: Their Virtues

6 I met a preacher there I knew, and said:

"Ill and o'erwork'd, how fare you in this scene?"

"Bravely!" said he; "for I of late have been Much cheer'd with thoughts of Christ, the living bread."

MATTHEW ARNOLD, East London.

7 I venerate the man whose heart is warm,
Whose hands are pure, whose doctrine and whose life,

Coincident, exhibit lucid proof
That he is honest in the sacred cause.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 372.

Would I describe a preacher, . . .

I would express him simple, grave, sincere;
In doctrine uncorrupt; in language plain,
And plain in manner; decent, solemn, chaste,
And natural in gesture; much impress'd
Himself, as conscious of his awful charge,
And anxious mainly that the flock he feeds
May feel it too; affectionate in look,
And tender in address, as well becomes
A messenger of grace to guilty men.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 394.

8 There, where a few torn shrubs the place disclose,

The village preacher's modest mansion rose.
A man he was to all the country dear,
And passing rich with forty pounds a year;
Remote from towns he ran his godly race,
Nor e'er had chang'd, nor wished to change,
his place.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 139.

But in his duty prompt at every call,
He watch'd and wept, he pray'd and felt, for all.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 165.

At church, with meek and unaffected grace,
His looks adorn'd the venerable place;
Truth from his lips prevail'd with double sway,
And fools, who came to scoff, remain'd to pray.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 177.

E'en children follow'd with endearing wile,
And pluck'd his gown, to share the good man's smile. . . .

To them his heart, his love, his griefs were given,
But all his serious thoughts had rest in Heaven.
As some tall cliff, that lifts its awful form,
Swells from the vale, and midway leaves the storm,

Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,

Eternal sunshine settles on its head.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 183.

9 As pleasant songs, at morning sung,
The words that dropped from his sweet tongue

Strengthened our hearts; or, heard at night,
Made all our slumbers soft and light.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. i.

Skilful alike with tongue and pen,
He preached to all men everywhere
The Gospel of the Golden Rule,
The New Commandment given to men,
Thinking the deed, and not the creed,
Would help us in our utmost need.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Prelude, l. 217.

1 He of their wicked ways
Shall them admonish, and before them set
The paths of righteousness.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 808.

2 It comes now into my mind to observe that I am sensible that I have been a little too free to make mirth with the minister of our ship, he being a very sober and upright man.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 11 April, 1660.

A minister, but still a man.

POPE, Epistle to James Craggs.

3 And truths divine came mended from that tongue.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 66.

4 He was a shrewd and sound divine,
Of loud Dissent the mortal terror;
And when, by dint of page and line,
He 'stablished Truth, or started Error,
The Baptist found him far too deep,
The Deist sighed with saving sorrow,
And the lean Levite went to sleep,
And dreamed of eating pork to-morrow.

WINTEROP MACKWORTH PRAED, The Vicar.

His sermon never said or showed
That Earth is foul, that Heaven is gracious,
Without refreshment on the road
From Jerome, or from Athanasius;
And sure a righteous zeal inspired,
The hand and head that penned and planned
them,

For all who understood, admired—
And some who did not understand them.

WINTEROP MACKWORTH PRAED, The Vicar.

5 I have taught you, my dear flock, for above thirty years how to live; and I will show you in a very short time how to die.

GEORGE SANDYS, Anglorum Speculum, p. 903.

He taught them how to live and how to die.

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, In Memory of the Rev.

Mr. Moore, l. 21.

6 Thou art no Sabbath-drawler of old saws,
Distill'd from some worm-canker'd homily.

TENNYSON, To J. M. K.

7 God's true priest is always free;
Free, the needed truth to speak,
Right the wronged, and raise the weak.

WHITTIER, The Curse of the Charter-Breakers.

IV—Preachers: Their Faults

8 Vile avarice and pride, from Heaven accurst,
In all are ill, but in a church-man worst.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomsday: The Seventh Hour. St. 86.

And of all plagues with which mankind are curst,
Ecclesiastic tyranny's the worst.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman.
Pt. ii, l. 299.

Inquisitorious and tyrannical duncery [of preaty].

MILTON, Reason of Church Government: Bk.
ii, Introduction.

9 First, the preacher speaks through his nose:
Second, his gesture is too emphatic:
Thirdly, to waive what's pedagogic,
The subject-matter itself lacks logic:
Fourthly, the English is ungrammatical.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve. Pt. xxii.

The pig-of-lead-like pressure
Of the preaching man's immense stupidity.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve. Pt. iii.

10 Hear how he clears the points o' Faith
Wi' rattlin' an' thumpin'!

Now meekly calm, now wild in wrath,
He's stampin', an' he's jumpin'!

BURNS, The Holy Fair. St. 13.

11 Cleric before and Lay behind;
A lawless linsey-woolsey brother,
Half of one order, half another.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1226.

12 The things that mount the rostrum with a skip,

And then skip down again; pronounce a text;
Cry hem: and, reading what they never wrote,
Just fifteen minutes, huddle up their work,
And with a well-bred whisper close the scene!

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 409.

13 There is not in the universe a more ridiculous nor a more contemptible animal than a proud clergyman.

FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. x, ch. 10.

That pride to pampered priesthood dear.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 44.

Cleric pride,
Whose reddening cheek no contradiction bears.

JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. iv, l. 62.

14 A country clergyman with a one story intellect and a one-horse vocabulary.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Autocrat of the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. ii.

15 Not one of those self-constituted saints,
Quacks—not physicians—in the cure of souls.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 14.

16 Preaching the people for profit of the belly,
And glosing the Gospel as them good liked.

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus i, l. 57.

Many chaplains are chaste, but charity is want-
ing;

There are none harder nor hungrier than men
of holy church.

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus ii, l. 187.

For with the Princes of Pride the Preachers dwelleth.

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman's Creed, l. 705.

1 We dislike the man who tries
To give us title clear

To any mansion in the skies
An' grab our title here.

DOUGLAS MALLOCH, Behind a Spire.

2 So clomb this first grand thief into God's fold;

So since into his church lewd hirelings climb.
Thence up he flew, and on the Tree of Life,
The middle Tree and highest there that grew,
Sat like a cormorant.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 192.

3 Clericalism, that is the enemy! (Le clérisme, voilà l'ennemi!)

ALPHONSE PEYRAT, Speech, 1859.

4 Dulness is sacred in a sound divine.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. ii, l. 352.

A little, round, fat, oily man of God.

THOMSON, Castle of Indolence. Canto i, st. 69.

V—Preachers: Priests

5 Once have a priest for an enemy, good-bye
To peace.

SARAH FLOWER ADAMS, Vivia Perpetua. Act iii, sc. 2.

6 The Jackdaw sat on the Cardinal's chair!
Bishop and abbot and prior were there;

Many a monk, and many a friar,

Many a knight, and many a squire,

With a great many more of lesser degree,—
In sooth a goodly company;

And they served the Lord Primate on bended knee.

Never, I ween, Was a prouder seen,
Read of in books, or dreamt of in dreams,
Than the Cardinal Lord Archbishop of Rheims!

R. H. BARHAM, The Jackdaw of Rheims.

7 In brief, I don't stick To declare Father Dick—

So they call'd him, "for short"—was a "Regular Brick,"

A metaphor taken—I have not the page aright—

Out of an ethical work by the Stagyrte.

R. H. BARHAM, The Brothers of Birchington.
The reference is to Aristotle, Nicomachean Ethics, sec. i, where he defines a happy man as a faultless cube.

Och! Father O'Flynn, you've the wonderful way wid you,
All ould sinners are wishful to pray wid you,
All the young childer are wild for to play wid you,

You've such a way wid you, Father avick!
Still, for all you've so gentle a soul,
Gad, you've your flock in the grandest control,

Checking the crazy ones,

Coaxin' onaisy ones,

Liftin' the lazy ones on wid the stick.

ALFRED PERCEVAL GRAVES, Father O'Flynn.

Once the Bishop looked grave at your jest,
Till this remark sent him off with the rest:

"Is it lave gaity

All to the laity?"

Cannot the clargy be Irishmen too?"

ALFRED PERCEVAL GRAVES, Father O'Flynn.

8 They said this mystery shall never cease:
The priest promotes war, and the soldier

peace.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Gnomic Verses. No. 3.

9 As the caterpillar chooses the fairest leaves to lay her eggs on, so the priest lays his curse on the fairest joys.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

10 Mothers, wives, and maids,
These be the tools wherewith priests manage fools.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book.
Bk. iv, l. 503.

11 Those vegetables of the Catholic creed
Are apt exceedingly to run to seed.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 81. Referring to monks.

And, from long residence upon your living, are become a kind of holy vegetable.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley's Letters. No. 1.

12 Oh, laugh or mourn with me, the rueful jest,
A cassock'd huntsman, and a fiddling priest!
COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 110.

A priest,
A piece of mere church-furniture at best.
COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 424.

The priest he merry is, and blithe
Three-quarters of a year,
But oh! it cuts him like a scythe
When tithing time draws near.

COWPER, Yearly Distress. St. 2.

13 In pious times, ere priestcraft did begin,
Before polygamy was made a sin.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 1.

14 But the black earthly spirit of the priest wounded my life.

GEORGE FOX, Account of His Mission.

15 Bad priests bring the devil into the church.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 835.

16 But now I see well the old proverb is true:
That parish priest forgetteth that ever he was clerk!

JOHN HEYWOOD, Tyb, 86. (1533)

The proverb old is come to pass,
The priest when he begins the mass
Forgets that ever clerk he was.

RICHARD JOHNSON, The Crown Garland of Golden Roses, 48. (1612)

There goes the parson, oh! illustrious spark.
And there, scarce less illustrious, goes the clerk!

COWPER, On Observing Some Names of Little Note.

1
A wealthy priest, but rich without a fault.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. v, l. 16. (Pope, tr.)

Say, ye priests, what does gold do in the sacred place? (Dicite, pontifices, in sacro quid facit aurum?)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 69.

2
In every country and in every age, the priest has been hostile to liberty. He is always in alliance with the despot, abetting his abuses in return for protection to his own.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 119.

3
The priest is always with the herd and against the individual.

HUGH KINGSMILL, Matthew Arnold, p. 192.

4
New Presbyter is but Old Priest writ large.
MILTON, On the New Forcers of Conscience.

5
But first among the Priests dissension springs,
Men who attend the altar, and should most Endeavour peace.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 353.

When knaves fall out, honest men get their goods; when priests dispute, we come at the truth.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1742.

6
Ridden you need not fear to be,
By prophet or by priest,
Since Balaam's dead,—and none but he
Would choose you for his beast.

What baron or squire or knight of the shire
Lives half so well as a holy friar?

JOHN O'KEEFFE, The Friar of Orders Grey.

9
At length Erasmus, that great injur'd name,
(The glory of the priesthood and the shame!)
Stemm'd the wild torrent of a barb'rous age,
And drove those holy Vandals off the stage.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 134.

10
I have seen nobody since I saw you, but persons in orders. My only varieties are vicars, rectors, curates, and every now and then (by way of turbot) an archdeacon.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Miss Berry, 28 Jan., 1843.

Embryos and idiots, eremites and friars,
White, black, and grey, with all their trumpery.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 474.

11
So the priests hated him, and he
Repaid their hate with cheerful glee.

SHELLEY, Rosalind and Helen, l. 689.

12
Perhaps thou wert a Priest,—if so, my struggles Are vain, for priestcraft never owns its juggles.

HORACE SMITH, Address to a Mummy. St. 4.

13
The snowy-banded dilettante,
Delicate-handed priest.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 8.

14
What village parson would not like to be pope?

VOLTAIRE, Letters on the English. No. 5.

No priestling, small though he may be,
But wishes some day Pope to be.

HEINRICH HEINE, Confessions.

15
A priest, ye cry, a priest!—lame shepherds
they,
How shall they gather in the straggling flock?
Dumb dogs that bark not—how shall they compel

The loitering vagrants to the Master's fold?
Fitter to bask before the blazing fire,
And snuff the mess neat-handed Phillis
dresses,

Than on the snow-wreath battle with the wolf.

VI—Preaching

16
I preached as never sure to preach again,
And as a dying man to dying men.

RICHARD BAXTER, Love Breathing Thanks and Praise.

I shook the sermon out of my mind.
JOHN BUNYAN, Grace Abounding.

17
Well stored with pious frauds, and like most discourses of the sort, much better calculated for the private advantage of the preacher than the edification of the hearers.

18
I'll grunt a real Gospel-groan.

BURNS, Epistle to James Tait.

19
And pulpit, drum ecclesiastic,
Was beat with fist instead of a stick.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 1, l. 11.

By thy language cabalistic,
By thy cymbal, drum, and his stick.
UNKNOWN, The Debauchée. Sometimes attributed to Thomas Stanley.

1 The foolishness of preaching.
New Testament: I Corinthians, i, 21.

2 How oft, when Paul has serv'd us with a text,
Has Epictetus, Plato, Tully, preach'd!
COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 539.

He bangs and bethwacks them,—their backs he salutes

With the whole tree of knowledge torn up by the roots;

His sermons with satire are plenteously verjuiced,
And he talks in one breath of Confutzee, Cass, Zerduscht.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 707.

His hearers can't tell you on Sunday beforehand,
If in that day's discourse they'll be Bibled or Koraned.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 786. Of Theodore Parker.

One may as well preach a respectable mythology as anything else.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Robert Elsmere, i, 5.

3 His weekly drawl, Though short, too long.
COWPER, Hope, l. 199.

I preach for ever; but I preach in vain.
GEORGE CRABBE, The Parish Register. Pt. ii.

The parson exceeds not an hour in preaching,
because all ages have thought that a competency.

GEORGE HERBERT, Priest to the Temple. Ch. 7.

Talks much, and says just nothing for an hour.
Truth and the text he labours to display,
Till both are quite interpreted away.

CHRISTOPHER PITT, On the Art of Preaching.

With patient inattention hear him prate.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Bellerophon. St. 4.

4 Go forth and preach impostures to the world,
But give them truth to build on.

DANTE, Vision of Paradise. Canto xxix, l. 116.

5 God preaches,—a noted clergyman,—
And the sermon is never long;

So instead of getting to heaven at last,
I'm going all along!

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. ii, No. 57.

6 More vacant pulpits would more converts make.

DRYDEN, The Hind and Panther. Pt. iii, l. 182.

7 One may prefer fresh eggs, though laid by a fowl of the meanest understanding, but why fresh sermons?

GEORGE ELIOT, Theophrastus Such: Looking Backward.

8 I like the silent church before the service begins, better than any preaching.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

9 Great sermons lead the people to praise the preacher. Good preaching leads the people to praise the Saviour.

CHARLES G. FINNEY, Autobiography, p. 72.

10 None preaches better than the ant, and she says nothing.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard.

The lilies say: Behold how we Preach without words of purity.

12 Resort to sermons, but to prayers most:
Praying's the end of preaching.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 69.

13 Calling all sermons contrabands,
In that great Temple that's not made with hands.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 369.

A daw's not reckoned as a religious bird
Because it keeps a-cawing from a steeple.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 173.

14 Sir, a woman preaching is like a dog's walking on his hind legs. It is not done well: but you are surprised to find it done at all.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1763.)

15 The top of the hill he will ne'er come nigh reaching

Till he learns the distinction 'twixt singing and preaching.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 1584. Referring to himself.

I shall never be a poet till I get out of the pulpit, and New England was all meeting-house when I was growing up.

J. R. LOWELL, Letter to Norton, 28 Aug., 1865.

16 Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.

New Testament: Mark, xvi, 15.

17 Only the sinner has a right to preach.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Tolerance, p. 863.

18 A lazy, poor sermon.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 1660.

A good, honest, and painful sermon.
SAMUEL PEPPYS, Diary, 17 March, 1661.

A very good and seraphic kind of a sermon too good for an ordinary congregation.

Meaning mighty well:
Thinks he's preached the doubters down.
And old men never tell.

JOHN CROWE RANSOM, Under the Locusts.

3 To preach long, loud, and Damnation, is the way to be cried up. We love a man that Damns us, and we run after him to save us.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Damnation.

"Parson," said I, "you pitch the pipe too low."
TENNYSON, Edwin Morris, l. 52.

4 The excellency of this text is that it will suit any sermon; and of this sermon, that it will suit any text.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. vi, ch. 11.

"Dear sinners all," the fool began, "man's life is but a jest,
A dream, a shadow, bubble, air, a vapour at the best.

In a thousand pounds of law I find not a single ounce of love,
A blind man killed the parson's cow in shooting at the dove;

The fool that eats till he is sick must fast till he is well,

The wooer who can flatter most will bear away the belle." . . .

And then again the women screamed, and every staghound bayed;

And why? because the motley fool so wise a sermon made.

GEORGE W. THORNBURY, The Jester's Sermon.

He bowed his head, and bent his knee
Upon the monarch's silken stool;

His pleading voice arose: "O Lord,
Be merciful to me, a fool!"

EDWARD ROWLAND SILL, The Fool's Prayer.

5 A fool is he that comes to preach or prate,
When men with swords their right and wrong debate.

16 A prejudice is a vagrant opinion without visible means of support.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary.

17 But his eddication to his ruination had not been over nice, And his stupid skull was choking full of vulgar prejudice.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Phil Blood's Leap.

18 Prejudice renders a man's virtue his habit, and not a series of unconnected acts. Through just prejudice, his duty becomes a part of his nature.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

19 What extravagancy is not man capable of entertaining, when once his shackled reason is led in triumph by fancy and prejudice!

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 Sept., 1748.

Our prejudices are our mistresses; reason is at best our wife, very often heard indeed, but seldom minded.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 13 April, 1752.

Prejudice is never easy unless it can pass itself off for reason.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Sketches and Essays: Of Prejudice.

PREPAREDNESS

19 The commonwealth of Venice in their armoury have this inscription: "Happy is that city which in time of peace thinks of war."

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. 2, mem. 6.

20 Forewarned, forearmed; to be prepared is half the victory.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 17.

Unforeseen, they say, is unprepared.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. ii, l. 74.

Forewarned, forearmed.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1736.

21 They who are best prepared for war have it most in their power to live in peace. ("Οτι τοῖς κάλλιστα πολεμῶν παρεσκευασμένοις, τοῦτοις μάλιστα ἔξεστιν εἰρήνην ἄγειν.")

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, First Discourse on Kingship. Sec. 27.

To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Address, to Congress,

8 Jan., 1790. Theodore Roosevelt misquoted Washington's words in an address at the University of Pennsylvania: "To be prepared for war is the most effective means to promote peace."

A man-of-war is the best ambassador.
OLIVER CROMWELL. (CARLYLE, Life.)

2
The time is coming, it will soon be come
When those who dare not fight
For God or for the right,
Shall fight for peace.
AUBREY THOMAS DE VERE, Liberalism.

3
The lawyers have always . . . some reserve of sovereignty, tantamount to the Rob Roy rule that might makes right. America should affirm and establish that in no instance should the guns go in advance of the perfect right.
EMERSON, Journals, 1866.

We have all grown up in the sight of frigates and navy yards, of armed forts and islands, of arsenals and militia. . . . One is scared to find at what a cost the peace of the globe is kept.
EMERSON, Miscellanies: War.

The Saviour came. With trembling lips
He counted Europe's battlements.
"Yet millions lack their daily bread.
So much for Calvary!" He said.
NORMAN GALE, The Second Coming.

The first blow is as much as two.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

The first blow is half the battle.
GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act ii, sc. 1.

Which spills the foremost foeman's life,
That party conquers in the strife.
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto iv, st. 6.

"Thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just"—
And four time he who gets his fist in fust.
ARTEMUS WARD, Shakespeare Up-to-Date. See also under JUSTICE: ITS POWER.

7
Set thine house in order.
Old Testament: Isaiah, xxxviii, 1.

8
To aim at such a navy as the greater European nations possess would be a foolish and wicked waste of the energies of our countrymen. It would be to pull on our own heads that load of military expense which makes the European laborer go supperless to bed, and moistens his bread with the sweat of his brow.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vii, p. 241.

The good sense of the people will always be found to be the best army.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vi, p. 55.

No nation ever had an army large enough to guarantee it against attack in time of peace or insure it victory in time of war.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, Address, 6 Oct., 1925.

Ef you want peace, the thing you've gut to du
Is jes' to show you're up to fightin', tu.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 2.

God, give us Peace! not such as lulls to sleep,
But sword on thigh and brow with purpose knit!

And let our Ship of State to harbor sweep,
Her ports all up, her battle-lanterns lit,
And her leashed thunders gathering for their leap.

J. R. LOWELL, The Washers of the Shroud.

One sword keeps another in the sheath.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Who carries a sword, carries peace. (Qui porte épée, porte paix.)

UNKNOWN. A French proverb. A variant is, "Baton porte paix." A cudgel brings peace.

15
There is a homely adage which runs: "Speak softly and carry a big stick; you will go far." If the American nation will speak softly and yet build and keep at a pitch of the highest training a thoroughly efficient navy, the Monroe Doctrine will go far.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Address, Minnesota State Fair, 2 Sept., 1901. Elsewhere he referred to this saying as "a West African proverb."

Broomstick preparedness.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, The Great Adventure.

16
It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe;
For peace itself should not so dull a kingdom, . . .

But that defences, musters, preparations,
Should be maintain'd, assembled and collected,

As were a war in expectation.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 15.

Peace the offspring is of Power.

BAYARD TAYLOR, A Thousand Years.

Who desires peace, let him prepare for war.

(In pace ut sapiens aptarit idonea bello.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 111.

Peace prepares for war. (Pax paritur bello.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, Epaminondas, v. Statius (Thebais, vii, 554) has it: "Sævus pax quæritur annis."

And who stands safest? tell me, is it he
That spreads and swells in puff'd prosperity,
Or bless'd with little, whose preventing care
In peace provides fit arms against a war?

II—Present: The Everlasting Now

Dear Land to which Desire for ever flees;

Time doth no present to our grasp allow;
Say in the fix'd Eternal shall we seize

At last the fleeting Now?

BULWER-LYTTON, The First Violets.

The Now, that indivisible point which studs the length of infinite line

Whose ends are nowhere, is thine all, the puny all thou callest thine.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ix,
st. 34.

Nothing is there to come, and nothing past,
But an eternal now does always last.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Dauides. Bk. i, l. 25.

One of our poets—which is it?—speaks of an everlasting now. If such a condition of existence were offered to us in this world, and it were put to the vote whether we should accept the offer and fix all things immutably as they are, who are they whose votes would be given in the affirmative?

<sup>10</sup> The gallery in which the reporters sit has become a fourth estate of the realm.

MACAULAY, Essays: Hallam's Constitutional History. Tenth paragraph from end. (Published in the Edinburgh Review, Sept., 1828.)

Burke said there were Three Estates in Parliament; but, in the Reporters' Gallery yonder, there sat a Fourth Estate more important far than they all.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters. 1839. The statement is not found in Burke's published works, and it is probable that Carlyle inadvertently attributed the phrase to Burke instead of to Macaulay.

<sup>11</sup> A Fourth Estate, of Able Editors, springs up.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. 6, ch. 5. (1837)

<sup>12</sup> One of them was dressed like a Monk in his frock, draggled-tail'd and booted: the other like a Falconer with a lure and a long-tailed hawk on his fist: the third like a Solicitor, with a large bag: . . . the fourth look'd like one of your Vine Barbers. . . . Pantagruel enquir'd of one of their Coxwain's Crew who those persons were? He answer'd that they were the Four Estates of the Island.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 48. (1532)

<sup>13</sup> You have been a long time talking of the three estates; there is a fourth which, if not well looked to, will turn us all out of doors—the army.

LORD FALKLAND, Speech, in Parliament, 1638.

The "three estates of the realm" are the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal, and the Commons.

None of our political writers . . . take notice of any more than three estates, namely, Kings, Lords and Commons . . . passing by in silence that very large and powerful body which form the fourth estate in the community . . . the Mob.

FIELDING, Covent Garden Journal, 13 June, 1752.

<sup>14</sup> Mr. Fox's Board of Commissioners, which Mr. Pultenay and Mr. Pitt clamoured against as a Fourth Estate, was to be responsible to Parliament. Mr. Pitt's Fourth Estate, of the Queen and her Council, is to have no responsibility.

Lively or sad, life's meanest, mightiest things,
The fate of fighting cocks, or fighting kings.

CHARLES SPRAGUE, Curiosity.

VI—Press: Its Faults

<sup>14</sup> Can it be maintained that a person of any education can learn anything worth knowing from a penny paper? It may be said that people may learn what is said in Parliament.
Well, will that contribute to their education?

ROBERT CECIL, Speech, House of Commons, 1861.

<sup>15</sup> How shall I speak thee, or thy pow'r address,
Thou god of our idolatry, the Press?

By thee, religion, liberty, and laws

Exert their influence and advance their cause;
By thee, worse plagues than Pharaoh's land
befell,

Diffus'd, make earth the vestibule of hell;
Thou fountain, at which drink the good and
wise;

Thou ever bubbling spring of endless lies;
Like Eden's dread probationary tree,
Knowledge of good and evil is from thee.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 460.

<sup>1</sup> The more of these instructors a man reads,
the less he will infallibly understand.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Newspaper: To the Reader.

One editor will sometimes convey his abuse with more decency, and colour his falsehood with more appearance of probability than another.

CRABBE, The Newspaper: To the Reader.

These things have their use; and are, besides, vehicles of much amusement: but this does not outweigh the evil they do to society, and the irreparable injury they bring upon the character of individuals.

CRABBE, The Newspaper: To the Reader.

<sup>2</sup> I sing of News, and all those vapid sheets
The rattling hawker vends through gaping streets;

Whate'er their name, whate'er the time they fly,

Damp from the press, to charm the reader's
eye:

For, soon as morning dawns with roseate hue,

The Herald of the morn arises too;
Post after Post succeeds, and all day long,
Gazettes and Ledgers swarm, a noisy throng.
When evening comes, she comes with all her train

Of Ledgers, Chronicles, and Posts again,
Like bats, appearing when the sun goes down,
From holes obscure and corners of the town.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Newspaper.

<sup>3</sup> What is the newspaper but a sponge or invention for oblivion?

EMERSON, Natural History of Intellect: Memoirs.

They have ceased to publish the "Newgate Calendar" and the "Pirate's Own Book" since the family newspapers . . . have quite superseded them in the freshness as well as the horror of their records of crime.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

<sup>4</sup> Caused by a dearth of scandal should the vapours

Distress our fair ones—let them read the papers.

DAVID GARRICK, Prologue to Sheridan's "School for Scandal".

<sup>5</sup> A reply to a newspaper attack resembles very much the attempt of Hercules to crop the Hydra, without the slightest chance of his ultimate success.

THEODORE HOOK, Gilbert Gurney. Vol. ii, ch. 1.

<sup>6</sup> The man who never looks into a newspaper is better informed than he who reads them, inasmuch as he who knows nothing is nearer the truth than he whose mind is filled with falsehoods and errors.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xi, p. 224.

Perhaps an editor might . . . divide his paper into four chapters, heading the first, Truths;
2d, Probabilities; 3d, Possibilities; 4, Lies.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xi, l. 224.

<sup>7</sup> Newspapers always excite curiosity. No one ever lays one down without a feeling of disappointment.

CHARLES LAMB, Last Essays of Elia: Detached Thoughts on Books.

<sup>8</sup> The press is like the air, a chartered libertine.

WILLIAM PITT, Letter to Lord Grenville, 1757.

The newspapers! Sir, they are the most villainous —licentious—abominable—infernal—not that I ever read them—no—I make it a rule never to look into a newspaper.

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>9</sup> Blessed are they who never read a newspaper, for they shall see Nature, and, through her,
God.

THOREAU, Essays and Other Writings, p. 254.

<sup>10</sup> I have been reading the morning paper. I do it every morning—well knowing that I shall find in it the usual depravities and basenesses and hypocrisies and cruelties that make up civilization, and cause me to put in the rest of the day pleading for the damnation of the human race.

MARK TWAIN, Letter to W. D. Howells, 1899.

<sup>11</sup> In old days men had the rack. Now they have the press.

OSCAR WILDE, The Soul of Man Under Socialism.

VII—Press: The Press-Men

<sup>12</sup> Nor ever once ashamed, so we be named Press-men; Slaves of the Lamp; Servants of Light.

SIR EDWIN ARNOLD, The Tenth Muse. St. 18.

<sup>13</sup> Journalists say a thing that they know isn't true, in the hope that if they keep on saying it long enough it will be true.

ARNOLD BENNETT, The Title.

<sup>14</sup> If there's a hole in a' your coats,
I rede you tent it:

A chield's amang you takin' notes,

And faith he'll prent it.

ROBERT BURNS, On the Late Captain Grose's Peregrinations Thro' Scotland. St. 1.

When found make a note of.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Bk. i, ch. 15.

Adopted as the motto of Notes and Queries.

Note this before my notes.

There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 56.

A would-be satirist, a hired buffoon,
A monthly scribbler of some low lampoon,
Condemn'd to drudge, the meanest of the mean,

And furbish falsehoods for a magazine.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 975.

Newspaper wits, and sonneteers,
Gentlemen bards, and rhyming peers.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. ii, l. 513.

To serve thy generation, this thy fate:

"Written in water," swiftly fades thy name;
But he who loves his kind does, first and late,
A work too great for fame.

MARY CLEMMER, The Journalist.

As for the press, I am myself a "gentleman of the press," and I have no other escutcheon.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 18 Feb., 1853.

With much communication will he tempt thee,
and smiling upon thee will get out thy secrets.
Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xiii, 11.

Ask how to live? Write, write, write anything;

The world's a fine believing world, write news!

JOHN FLETCHER, Wit Without Money. Act ii.

I am a printer, and a printer of news; and I do hearken after them, wherever they be at any rates; I'll give anything for a good copy now, be it true or false, so it be news.

BEN JONSON, News from the New World.

He wrote for certain papers which, as everybody knows,

Is worse than serving in a shop or scaring off the crows.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Delilah.

The highest reach of a news-writer is an empty Reasoning on Policy, and vain Conjectures on the public Management.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 1.

The News-writer lies down at Night in great Tranquillity, upon a piece of News which corrupts before Morning, and which he is obliged to throw away as soon as he awakes.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 1.

Every newspaper editor owes tribute to the devil. (Tout faiseur de journaux doit tribut au Malin.)

LA FONTAINE, Letter to Simon de Troyes, 1686.

I have always thought that I would like to be a newspaper man myself, because I love the classics and I love good literature.

JOHN P. O'BRIEN, Speech, to a company of journalists, while mayor of New York, 1933.

But I'll report it.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act i, sc. 9, l. 2.

He will print them, without a doubt, for he cares not what he puts into the press.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 79.

Ah, ye knights of the pen! May honour be your shield, and truth tip your lances! Be gentle to all gentle people. Be modest to women. Be tender to children. And as for the Ogre Humbug, out sword, and have at him.

THACKERAY, Roundabout Papers: Ogres.

The thorn in the cushion of the editorial chair.

THACKERAY, Roundabout Papers: The Thorn in the Cushion.

An Ambassador is a man of virtue sent to lie abroad for his country; a news-writer is a man without virtue who lies at home for himself.

I—Price: Apothegms

Buy not what you want, but what you need; what you do not need is dear at a farthing. (Emas non quod opus est, sed quod necesse est; quod non opus est, asse carum est.)

CATO, Reliquæ. (JORDAN, p. 79.) Quoted by Seneca, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, sec. 27.

Never, from a mistaken economy, buy a thing you do not want because it is cheap; or, from a silly pride, because it is dear.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 10 Jan., 1749.

Never buy what you do not want because it is cheap; it will be dear to you.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvi, p. 111.

What costs little is valued less.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 34.

What we obtain too cheaply we esteem too lightly; it is dearness only which gives everything its value.

THOMAS PAINE, The Crisis: Introduction.

<sup>1</sup> You cannot make a cheap palace.

EMERSON, Journals, 1857.

Magnificence cannot be cheap, for what is cheap cannot be magnificent.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. v, p. 458.

<sup>2</sup> Earth gets its price for what Earth gives us;

The beggar is taxed for a corner to die in,
The priest hath his fee who comes and thrives us,

We bargain for the graves we lie in;
At the devil's booth are all things sold,
Each ounce of dross costs its ounce of gold.

J. R. LOWELL, Vision of Sir Launfal: Pt. i, Prelude.

<sup>3</sup> Things of greatest profit are set forth with least price.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues.

<sup>4</sup> The things are most dear to us which have cost us most. (Les choses nous sont plus chères, qui nous ont plus coûté.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 8.

<sup>5</sup> No mortal thing can bear so high a price,
But that with mortal thing it may be bought.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Love the Only Price of Love.

<sup>6</sup> The highest price a man can pay for a thing is to ask for it.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. See also under FAVORS.

<sup>7</sup> There is hardly anything in the world that some man cannot make a little worse and sell a little cheaper, and the people who consider price only are this man's lawful prey.

JOHN RUSKIN.

All works of taste must bear a price in proportion to the skill, taste, time, and expense and risk attending their invention and manufacture. Those things called dear are, when justly estimated, the cheapest: they are attended with much less profit to the artist than those which everybody calls cheap. Beautiful forms and compositions are not made by chance, nor can they ever, in any material, be made at small expense. A competition for cheapness and not excellence of workmanship is the most frequent and certain cause of the rapid decay and entire destruction of arts and manufactures.

JOSIAH WEDGWOOD, Dearness and Cheapness.

Not how cheap, but how good.

WILLIAM MORRIS.

<sup>8</sup> Her price is fall'n.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 200.

I know my price.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 1, l. 10.

II—Price: "All Men Have Their Price"

<sup>9</sup> 'Tis pleasant purchasing our fellow creatures;

And all are to be sold, if you consider
Their passions, and are dext'rous; some by features

Are bought up, others by a warlike leader,
Some by a place—as tend their years or natures;

But most by ready cash—but all have prices,
From crowns to kicks, according to their vices.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 27.

<sup>10</sup> Still as of old men by themselves are priced—
For thirty pieces Judas sold himself, not Christ.

HESTER H. CHOLMONDELEY. Quoted by her sister, Mary Cholmondeley, as heading to Chapter 11, Diana Tempest. Quoted by Robert Hugh Benson at end of chapter, Herod, in Christ in the Church.

SIR ROBERT WALPOLE. (WILLIAM COXE, Memoirs of Sir Robert Walpole. Vol. iv, p. 369.)

The context is as follows: "Flowery oratory he [Walpole] despised. He ascribed to the interested views of themselves or their relatives the declarations of pretended patriots, of whom he said, 'All those men have their price.'"

Every man has his price.

Attributed to SIR ROBERT WALPOLE, but probably a misquotation. A. F. Robbins, in the Gentleman's Magazine (No. iv, p. 589), asserts that Walpole used this phrase in a speech either in November or December, 1734. Horace Walpole denies this, and claims that it was falsely attributed to Sir Robert by his enemies. (Letter, 26 Aug., 1785.)

I know the price of every man in this house except three.

Attributed to SIR ROBERT WALPOLE. (Notes and Queries, 11 May, 1907, p. 367.) Latham's Famous Sayings and Their Authors asserts that Walpole made this remark to Lord John Leveson-Gower, and that it was from this that the misquotation, "Every man has his price" arose.

SIR WILLIAM WYNDEHAM. (The Bee, vol. viii, p. 97, 1733.)

Every man is worth his price. (Chacun vaut son prix.)

UNKNOWN. A French proverb.

Every man has his price, and every woman her figure.

UNKNOWN. A modern variant.

<sup>5</sup> Pride, Envy, Avarice—these are the sparks
Have set on fire the hearts of all men.

(Superba, invidia ed avarizia sono Le tre faville ch' hanno i cuori accesi.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto vi, l. 74.

<sup>6</sup> There is no pride on earth like the pride of intellect and science.

R. D. HITCHCOCK, Eternal Atonement: Secret Things of God.

A pride there is of rank—a pride of birth,
A pride of learning, and a pride of purse,
A London pride—in short, there be on earth
A host of prides, some better and some worse;
But of all prides, since Lucifer's attain,
The proudest swells a self-elected saint.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 314.

<sup>7</sup> Pride and conceit were the original sin of man.

LE SAGE, Gil Blas. Bk. vii, ch. 3.

<sup>8</sup> Pride is the spring of malice and desire of revenge, and of rash anger and contention.

ARCHBISHOP LEIGHTON, Works. Vol. iv, p. 147.

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 438.

Pride grows, forsooth, by the reflection in the mirror. (Scilicet a speculi sumuntur imagine fastus.)

Earth for whose use,—Pride answers, "'Tis for mine:

For me kind Nature wakes her genial power,
Suckles each herb, and spreads out ev'ry flower; . . .

Seas roll to waft me, suns to light me rise;
My footstool earth, my canopy the skies."

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 131.

All the parts of the universe I have an interest in: the earth serves me to walk upon; the sun to light me; the stars have their influence upon me.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

<sup>11</sup> Some glory in their birth, some in their skill,
Some in their wealth, some in their bodies' force,

Some in their garments, though new-fangled ill;

Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their horse;

And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
Wherein it finds a joy above the rest.

<sup>1</sup> And the Devil did grin, for his darling sin
Is pride that apes humility.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Devil's Thoughts.

He pass'd a cottage with a double coach-house,
A cottage of gentility!

And he owned with a grin that his favourite sin
Is pride that apes humility.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Devil's Walk. St. 8.
Coleridge's poem, of seventeen stanzas, was published in 1799; in 1827, Southey re-wrote it and expanded it to fifty-seven stanzas.

They are proud in humility; proud in that they are not proud.

17 Pride will have a fall; for pride goeth before and shame cometh after.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

18 When pride is in the saddle, mischief and shame are on the crupper.
LOUIS XI OF FRANCE. (Countryman's New Commonwealth, 26. (1647)

19 When pride cometh, then cometh shame.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 2.

V—Pride: Its Virtues

20 He who would climb and soar aloft
Must needs keep ever at his side
The tonic of a wholesome pride.
ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, The Higher Courage.

21 Though pride is not a virtue, it is the parent of many virtues.
CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms.

22 There is a paradox in pride: it makes some men ridiculous, but prevents others from becoming so.
C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

23 Pride is handsome, economical; pride eradicates so many vices, letting none subsist but itself, that it seems as if it were a great gain to exchange vanity for pride. . . . Only one drawback: proud people are intolerably selfish, and the vain are gentle and giving.
EMERSON, Essays: Conduct of Life.

24 The truly proud man knows neither superiors nor inferiors. The first he does not admit of: the last he does not concern himself about.
WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 112.

The vile are only vain, the great are proud.
BYRON, Marino Faliero. Act ii, sc. 1.

PLAUTUS, Stichus. Act ii, sc. 2.

Be exceeding proud. Stand upon your gentility, and scorn every man. Speak nothing humbly.
BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act iii, sc. 4.

<sup>2</sup> Why, who cries out in pride,
That can therein tax any private party?
Doth it not flow as hugely as the sea?
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 70.

But, sure, he's proud, and yet his pride becomes him.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 114.

<sup>3</sup> Was never in this world aught worthy tried,
Without some spark of such self-pleasing pride.
SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet v.

VI—Pride: Its Faults

<sup>4</sup> Pride hated stands, and doth unpitied fall.
WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomsday: The Fourth Hour. St. 85.

Thus unlamented pass the proud away,
The gaze of fools, and pageant of a day!
POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, l. 43.

<sup>5</sup> Of all the lunacies earth can boast,
The one that must please the devil the most
Is pride reduced to the whimsical terms
Of causing the slugs to despise the worms.
ROBERT BROUGH, The Tent-Maker's Story.
Curs'd pride, that creeps securely in,
And swells a haughty worm.
ISAAC WATTS, Sincere Praise.

<sup>6</sup> The sad rhyme of the men who proudly clung
To their first fault, and withered in their pride.
ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. iv.

<sup>7</sup> But his heart was swollen, and turned aside,
By deep, interminable pride.
BYRON, The Siege of Corinth. St. 21.

<sup>8</sup> There be, whose loveless wisdom never failed
In self-adoring pride securely mailed.
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 9.

<sup>9</sup> How blind is Pride! what Eagles we are still
In matters that belong to other men!
What Beetles in our own!
GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act iv, sc. 1.

See also under FAULTS.

<sup>10</sup> My thoughtless youth was wing'd with vain desires;

My manhood, long misled by wandering fires,
Follow'd false lights; and, when their glimpse was gone,

My pride struck out new sparkles of her own.
Such was I, such by nature still I am;
Be thine the glory, and be mine the shame.
DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. i, l. 72.

I was not ever thus, nor pray'd that Thou Shouldst lead me on;
I loved to choose and see my path, but now
Lead Thou me on!
I loved the garish day, and, spite of fears,
Pride ruled my will: remember not past years.
JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, The Pillar of the Cloud.

Alas, I have loved pride and praise, like others
worse or worthier.
M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Second Series: The End.

<sup>11</sup> Pride is the sworn enemy to content.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3944.

Pride and grace never dwell in one place.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6273.

But was ever Pride contented,
Or would Folly ere be taught?
W. S. LANDOR, An Arab to His Mistress.

<sup>12</sup> How insolent is upstart pride!
JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, fab. 24.

<sup>13</sup> Pride is the cause of allë woe.
JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. i, l. 3006.

<sup>14</sup> Hating that solemn vice of greatness, pride.
BEN JONSON, On Lady Bedford.

<sup>15</sup> There are such as fain would be the worst Amongst all men, since best they cannot be,
So strong is that wild lie that men call pride.
WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: The Hill of Venus. Sts. 184, 185.

<sup>16</sup> Of all the causes which conspire to blind Man's erring judgment, and misguide the mind,
What the weak head with strongest bias rules,
Is Pride, the never failing vice of fools.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 1.

Whatever Nature has in worth denied,
She gives in large recruits of needful Pride;
For as in bodies, thus in souls, we find,
What wants in blood and spirits, swell'd with
wind:
Pride, where Wit fails, steps in to our defence,
And fills up all the mighty void of Sense.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 5.

<sup>17</sup> In pride, in reas'ning pride, our error lies;
All quit their sphere, and rush into the skies!
Pride still is aiming at the bless'd abodes,
Men would be Angels, Angels would be Gods.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 123.

Pride (of all others the most dangerous fault)

Proceeds from want of sense, or want of thought.
The men who labour and digest things most,
Will be much apter to despond than boast.

WENTWORTH DILLON, Essay on Translated Verse, l. 161.

1 Save me alike from foolish Pride
Or impious Discontent.

POPE, Universal Prayer, l. 33.

2 In general, pride is at the bottom of all great mistakes.

RUSKIN, True and Beautiful: Conception of God.

3 He that is proud eats up himself: pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 164.

He is so plaguy proud that the death-tokens of it

Cry "No recovery."

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 187.

4 For often a man's own angry pride
Is cap and bells for a fool.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 6, st. 7.

PRIMROSE

5 Ring-ting! I wish I were a Primrose,
A bright yellow Primrose, blowing in the Spring!

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Wishing.

Primrose, first-born child of Ver,
Merry springtime's harbinger.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Two Noble Kinsmen. Act i, sc. 1.

The sweet Infanta of the year.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Primrose.

6 The primrose banks how fair!

BURNS, My Chloris, Mark How Green.

7 "I could have brought you some primroses, but I do not like to mix violets with anything." "They say primroses make a capital salad," said Lord St. Jerome.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 13.

8 First came the primrose,

On the bank high,

Like a maiden looking forth

From the window of a tower.

SYDNEY DOBELL, A Chanted Calendar.

9 Why do ye weep, sweet Babes? can tears
Speak grief in you

Who were but born

Just as the modest morn
Teem'd her refreshing dew?

ROBERT HERRICK, To Primroses Fill'd With Morning Dew.

10 A tuft of evening primroses,
O'er which the mind may hover till it dozes.
KEATS, I Stood Tiptoe, l. 107.

11 Bountiful Primroses,
With outspread heart that needs the rough leaves' care.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Wild Flowers.

12 Bring the rathe primrose that forsaken dies.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 142.

13 In this low vale, the promise of the year,
Serene, thou openest to the nipping gale,
Unnoticed and alone, thy tender elegance.

HENRY KIRKE WHITE, To an Early Primrose.

14 Primroses, the Spring may love them;
Summer knows but little of them.

WORDSWORTH, Foresight.

15 A primrose by a river's brim
A yellow primrose was to him,
And it was nothing more.

WORDSWORTH, Peter Bell. Pt. i, st. 12.

16 The Primrose for a veil had spread
The largest of her upright leaves;
And thus, for purposes benign,
A simple flower deceives.

WORDSWORTH, A Wren's Nest, l. 57.

PRINCE

See also King, Royalty

17 Princes are like to heavenly bodies, which cause good or evil times, and which have much veneration, but no rest.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Empire.

Kings are like stars: they rise and set, they have
The worship of the world, but no repose.

SHELLEY, Hellas, l. 195.

18 The prince who
Neglects or violates his trust is more
A brigand than a robber-chief.

BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act ii, sc. 1.

19 The Prince exists for the sake of the State,
not the State for the sake of the Prince.

ERASMUS, Adagia.

Princely offspring of Braganza,
Erin greets thee with a stanza.

BYRON, To the Infanta.

A prince is the first servant and first magistrate of the state.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, the motto of his political testament, written in French with his own hand. (Memoirs of Brandebourg.)

The freedom princes owe their people is the freedom of law, of which you are only the minister and first depository.

JEAN BAPTISTE MASSILLON, in a sermon to Louis XV.

The king will show that he belongs to the republic, not the republic to him.

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, sec. 19.

The Wind of Complication.

SUSAN ERTZ. Title of book of short stories.

3 Experience has shewn that between the prisons and the graves of princes, the distance is very small.

SIR MICHAEL FOSTER, Foster's Crown Cas., 1762. (Discourse I, c. 1. s. 3.)

4 A yeoman upon his legs is higher than a prince upon his knees.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 488.

5 Princes and lords may flourish, or may fade;
A breath can make them, as a breath has made.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 53.

6 Of a new prince, new bondage.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

When the prince fiddles, the subjects must dance.
(Was die Fürsten geigen, müssen die Unterthanen tanzen.)

UNKNOWN. A German proverb.

7 Madame, bear in mind
That princes govern all things—save the wind.
VICTOR HUGO, The Infanta's Rose.

8 A prince without letters is a Pilot without eyes. All his government is groping.

BEN JONSON, Discoveries: Illiteratus Princeps.
Learning in a prince is like a dangerous knife in the hands of a madman.

DANIEL TUVILL, Vade Mecum, 16. (1638)

9 The devotion which one gives to princes is an inferior self-love. (La dévotion qu'on donne aux princes est un second amour-propre.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 518.

10 The punishment of bad princes is to be thought worse than they are. (Le châtement des mauvais princes est d'être crus pires qu'ils ne sont.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 195.

11 A Prince's greatest virtue is to know his own.
(Principis est virtus maxima nosce suos.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, epig. 15.

12 Go now and cultivate princes. (I, cole nunc reges.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 96.

13 For princes never more make known their wisdom,
Than when they cherish goodness where they find it.

MASSINGER, Great Duke of Florence. Act i, sc. 1.

14 If the prince of a State love benevolence, he will have no opponent in all the empire.

MENCIUS, Works. Bk. iv, pt. i, ch. 7.

15 The secret counsels of princes are a troublesome burden to such as have only to execute them. (C'est une importune garde, du secret des princes, à qui n'en à que faire.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 1.

But still remember, that a prince's secrets
Are balm concealed; but poison if discovered.

MASSINGER, The Duke of Milan. Act i, sc. 3.

16 Put not your trust in princes.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxlvi, 3.

17 The fortune of princes changes with their character. (Fortuna simul cum maribus immutatur.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Sec. 2.

18 The sword protects the prince. Still better, loyalty. (Ferrum tuetur principem. Melius fides.)

SENECA, Octavia, l. 457.

19 The shepherd's homely curds,
His cold thin drink out of his leathern bottle,
His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
Is far beyond a prince's delicates,
His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
His body couched in a curious bed,
When care, mistrust, and treason waits on him.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 47.

20 The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
So much they love it: but to stubborn spirits
They swell, and grow as terrible as storms.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 162.

O how wretched
Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favours!
There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 366.

21

Yet in bestowing, madam,

He was most princely.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 56.

1 Princes are the glass, the school, the book,
Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do
look.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 88.

Like prince, like people. (Qualis rex, talis grex.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

2 A begging prince what beggar pities not?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 270.

3 Remember who you are,
A prince, born for the good of other men;
Whose god-like office is to draw the sword
Against oppression, and set free mankind.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, Oroonoko. Act iii, sc. 3.

4 Princes are mortal, the commonwealth is eternal. (Principes mortales, rempublican aeternam.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 6.

5 The princes among us are those who forget themselves and serve mankind.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Washington, 31
March, 1916.

Princes of courtesy, merciful, proud and strong.
HENRY NEWBOLT, Craven.

6 The prince that is feared of many must of necessity fear many.

UNKNOWN, Politeuphuia, 79. (1669)

PRINCIPLE

7 Every principle contains in itself the germs of a prophecy.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 10.

8 When independence of principle consists in having no principle on which to depend.

J. C. COLTON, Lacon: Preface.

9 Principles do not mainly influence even the principled; we talk on principle, but we act on interest.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations:
Banos and Alpuente.

I don't believe in princerples,
But, oh, I du in interest!

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 6.

10 Ez to my princerples, I glory
In hev'in' nothin' o' the sort.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 7.

11 Flinch not, neither give up nor despair, if the achieving of every act in accordance with right principle is not always continuous with thee.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. v, sec. 9.

12 Their feet through faithless leather meet the dirt;

And oftener chang'd their principles than shirt.

YOUNG, Epistle to Mr. Pope. No. i, l. 277.

PRINTING

13 The art preservative of arts. (Ars artium omnium conservatrix.)

Inscription, on façade of the house at Haarlem,
Holland, formerly occupied by Laurent Koster, one of the reputed inventors of printing. The inscription ran: "Memoræ
Sacrum Typographia Ars Artium Omnium
Conservatrix Hic Primum Inventa Circa Annum MCCCCXL." It is first mentioned about 1628.

14 The printing-press is either the greatest blessing or the greatest curse of modern times, one sometimes forgets which.

J. M. BARRIE, Sentimental Tommy, p. 58.

Th' printin'-press isn't wondherful. What's won-dherful is that annybody shud want it to go on doin' what it does.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, On the Midway.

15 Ready-writing which we call Printing.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

He who first shortened the labour of Copyists by device of Movable Types was disbanding hired Armies and cashiering most Kings and Senates, and creating a whole new Democratic world:
he had invented the Art of printing.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 5.

16 For when news is printed,
It leaves, sir, to be news; while 'tis but written,

Tho' it be ne'er so false, it runs news
still. . . .

See divers men's opinions! unto some
The very printing of 'em makes them news;
That have not the heart to believe anything
But what they see in print.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act i, sc. 1.
The thing is written. It is true. (Cela est escrit.
Il est vray.)

RABELAIS, Works.

I love a ballad in print o' life, for then we are sure they are true.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 264.

If it is in print, it must be true.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

If you see it in the Sun it's so.

CHARLES A. DANA, Motto of the New York
Sun.

17 Though an angel should write, still 'tis devils
must print.

THOMAS MOORE, The Fudge Family in Eng- land. Letter 3.

<sup>1</sup> Sdeath, I'll print it, And shame the fools.
POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 61.

<sup>2</sup> All this I speak in print, for in print I found it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 175.

<sup>3</sup> And whereas, before, our forefathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be used, and, contrary to the king, his crown and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 39.

<sup>4</sup> The jour printer with gray head and gaunt jaws works at his case,
He turns his quid of tobacco while his eyes blurr with the manuscript.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 15.

PRISON

<sup>5</sup> Prisons are built with stones of Law, brothels with bricks of Religion.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

<sup>6</sup> In durance vile here must I wake and weep,
And all my frowsty couch in sorrow steep.

BURNS, Epistle from Esopus to Maria, l. 57.

In durance vile.

WILLIAM KENDRICK, Falstaff's Wedding. Act i, sc. 2; EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts on the Present Discontents. (1770) The Oxford Dictionary states that this phrase has been traced back to 1513.

What boots it him from death to be unbound,
To be captived in endless durance?

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto v, st. 42.

<sup>7</sup> As he went through Cold-Bath Fields he saw
A solitary cell;
And the Devil was pleased, for it gave him a hint

For improving his prisons in Hell.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Devil's Thoughts. St. 8.

Sometimes they shut you up in jail—

Dark, and a filthy cell;

I hope the fellows built them jails

Find 'em down in hell.

EDWIN FORD PIPER, Bindlestiff.

<sup>8</sup> Away with him to the deepest dungeon beneath the castle moat.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 29.

<sup>9</sup> Golden fetters. (Χρυσὰι πέδαι.)

DIOGENES. (ERASMUS, Chiliades Adajiorum, "Amor.")

A fool I do him firmly hold,
That loves his fetters, though they were of gold.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto ix, st. 8.

No man loveth his fetters, be they made of gold.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Bk. i, ch. viii.

Then, when I am thy captive, talk of chains.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 970.

<sup>10</sup> Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage;

Minds innocent and quiet take

That for an hermitage;

If I have freedom in my love,

And in my soul am free,

Angels alone, that soar above,

Enjoy such liberty.

RICHARD LOVELACE, To Althea from Prison. (1642)

That which the world miscalls a jail,

A private closet is to me. . . .

Locks, bars, and solitude together met,

Make me no prisoner, but an anchorite.

LORD ARTHUR CAPEL, Written in Confinement.

(1649) Also attributed to Sir Roger L'Estrange. (Notes and Queries, 10 April, 1909, p. 288.)

Double grills with great nails, triple doors, heavy bolts, to wicked souls you represent hell;
but to the innocent you are only wood, stones,
iron.

(Doubles grilles à gros cloux,

Triples portes, forts verroux,

Aux âmes vraiment méchantes

Vous représenter l'enfer:

Mais aux âmes innocentes

Vous n'êtes que de bois, des pierres, du fer.)

PELLISSON-FONTANIER, Written on the Wall of His Cell in the Bastille.

<sup>11</sup> Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 7, l. 93.

Might I but through my prison once a day
Behold this maid: all corners else o' the earth
Let liberty make use of; space enough
Have I in such a prison.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 490.

<sup>12</sup> Come, let's away to prison:
We two alone will sing like birds i' the cage.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 8.

We'll wear out

In a wall'd prison, packs and sects of great ones
That ebb and flow by the moon.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 17.

Our cage

We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 42.

<sup>13</sup> Whilst we have prisons it matters little which of us occupies the cells.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

The most anxious man in a prison is the governor.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

<sup>14</sup> Even savage animals, if you keep them confined, forget their natural courage. (Etiam fera animalia, si clausa teneas, virtutis obliviscuntur.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iv, sec. 64.

1 I know not whether Laws be right,
Or whether Laws be wrong;
All that we know who lie in gaol
Is that the wall is strong;
And that each day is like a year,
A year whose days are long.

OSCAR WILDE, The Ballad of Reading Gaol.
Pt. v, st. 1.

This too I know—and wise it were
If each could know the same—
That every prison that men build
Is built with bricks of shame,
And bound with bars, lest Christ should see
How men their brothers maim.

OSCAR WILDE, The Ballad of Reading Gaol.
Pt. v, st. 3.

The vilest deeds like poison weeds
Bloom well in prison-air:
It is only what is good in Man
That wastes and withers there:

Pale Anguish keeps the heavy gate
And the Warder is Despair.

OSCAR WILDE, The Ballad of Reading Gaol.
Pt. v, st. 5.

But though lean Hunger and green Thirst
Like asp with adder fight,
We have little care of prison fare,
For what chills and kills outright
Is that every stone one lifts by day
Becomes one's heart by night.

OSCAR WILDE, The Ballad of Reading Gaol.
Pt. v, st. 9.

By and by is easily said.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 403.

4 It is an undoubted truth, that the less one has to do, the less time one finds to do it in. One yawns, one procrastinates, one can do it when one will, and therefore one seldom does it at all.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 30 Sept., 1757.

5 No idleness, no laziness, no procrastination; never put off till to-morrow what you can do to-day.

TACITUS, History. Bk. iv, sec. 64.

<sup>1</sup> I know not whether Laws be right,
Or whether Laws be wrong;
All that we know who lie in gaol
Is that the wall is strong;
And that each day is like a year,
A year whose days are long.

OSCAR WILDE, The Ballad of Reading Gaol.
Pt. v, st. 1.

This too I know—and wise it were
If each could know the same—
That every prison that men build
Is built with bricks of shame,
And bound with bars, lest Christ should see
How men their brothers maim.

OSCAR WILDE, The Ballad of Reading Gaol.
Pt. v, st. 3.

The vilest deeds like poison weeds
Bloom well in prison-air:
It is only what is good in Man
That wastes and withers there:

Pale Anguish keeps the heavy gate
And the Warder is Despair.

OSCAR WILDE, The Ballad of Reading Gaol.
Pt. v, st. 5.

But though lean Hunger and green Thirst
Like asp with adder fight,
We have little care of prison fare,
For what chills and kills outright

Is that every stone one lifts by day
Becomes one's heart by night.

PROGRESS

Progress, man's distinctive mark alone,
Not God's, and not the beast's;
God is, they are,

Man partly is, and wholly hopes to be.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Death in the Desert.

Progress is

The law of life, man is not man as yet.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. v.

A race that binds
Its body in chains and calls them Liberty,
And calls each fresh link Progress.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Political Mystics: Titan and Avatar.

What we call "Progress" is the exchange of one nuisance for another nuisance.

HAVELOCK ELLIS, Impressions and Comments. Ser. i, p. 16.

Now, by St. Paul, the work goes bravely on.

COLLEY CIBBER, Richard III (altered). Act iii, sc. 1.

It is the darling delusion of mankind that the world is progressive in religion, toleration, freedom, as it is progressive in machinery.

MONCURE D. CONWAY, Dogma and Science.

So long as all the increased wealth which modern progress brings, goes but to build up great fortunes, to increase luxury, and make sharper the contest between the House of Have and the House of Want, progress is not real and cannot be permanent.

HENRY GEORGE, Progress and Poverty: Introductory.

Social progress makes the well-being of all more and more the business of each; it binds all closer and closer together in bonds from which none can escape.

HENRY GEORGE, Social Problems.

All that is human must retrograde if it does not advance.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 71.

He who moves not forward goes backward!
A capital saying!

GOETHE, Herman and Dorothea. Canto iii, 66. Applaud us when we run, console us when we fall, cheer us when we recover, but let us pass on—for God's sake, let us pass on.

EDMUND BURKE [?].

Slackness breeds worms; but the sure traveller,

Though he alights sometimes, still goeth on.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 57.

Cost is the father and compensation is the mother of progress.

J. G. HOLLAND, Plain Talks: Cost and Compensation.

We rise by things that are under our feet;
By what we have mastered of good and gain;
By the pride deposed and the passion slain,
And the vanquished ills that we hourly meet.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gradation.

All progress begins with a crime.

ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 109.

There is no greater disloyalty to the great pioneers of human progress than to refuse to budge an inch from where they stood.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 176.)

Harsh and brutal systems slowly give place to gentler ones. The stars in their courses have all along fought against Sisera and his kind. The way of the transgressor has proved to be not only difficult but impossible. The universe is against it.

RUFUS M. JONES. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 57.)

From lower to the higher next,
Not to the top, is Nature's text;
And embryo Good, to reach full stature,
Absorbs the Evil in its nature.

J. R. LOWELL, Festina Lente: Moral.

New times demand new measures and new men;

The world advances, and in time outgrows
The laws that in our fathers' day were best;
And, doubtless, after us, some purer scheme
Will be shaped out by wiser men than we.

J. R. LOWELL, A Glance Behind the Curtain.

New occasions teach new duties, time makes ancient good uncouth;
They must upward still and onward, who would keep abreast of truth.

J. R. LOWELL, The Present Crisis.

A single breaker may recede; but the tide is evidently coming in.

MACAULAY, Essays: Southey's Colloquies.

We're driven back for our next fray
A newer strength to borrow,

And where the vanguard camps to-day,
The rear shall rest to-morrow.

GERALD MASSEY, Song: 'Tis Weary Watching.

Not enjoyment, and not sorrow,
Is our destined end or way;

But to act, that each to-morrow
Find us farther than to-day.
LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life.

1
That in our proper motion we ascend
Up to our native seat: descent and fall
To us is adverse.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 75.

2
I forge ahead, nor can the opposing rush,
That sways all else, my onward progress
check,
But bears me on against a whirling world.
(Nitor in adversum, nec me, qui cætera, vincit Impetus, et rapido contrarius evehor orbi.)
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 72. (King, tr.)

3
Every step of progress the world has made has been from scaffold to scaffold and from stake to stake.
WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech for Woman's Rights, 15 Oct., 1851.

Life means progress, and progress means suffering.
H. W. VAN LOON, Tolerance, p. 89.

4
For my own part I am persuaded that everything advances by an unchangeable law through the eternal constitution and association of latent causes, which have been long before predestinated.

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, *De Rebus Gestis
Alexandri Magni*. Bk. v, ch. 11, sec. 10.

5
There is a period of life when we go back as we advance. (Il est un terme de la vie au-delà duquel en rétrograde en avançant.)
ROUSSEAU, Émile. Ch. 2.

6
The greater part of progress is the desire to progress. (Magna pars est profectus velle proficere.)
SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxi, 36.

7
Progress, therefore, is not an accident, but a necessity. . . . It is a part of nature.
HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. i, ch. 2.

8
Men, my brothers, men the workers, ever reaping something new:
That which they have done but earnest of the things that they shall do.
TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 117.

9
Onward the chariot of the Untarrying moves;
Nor day divulges him nor night conceals;
Thou hear'st the echo of unreturning hooves
And thunder of irrevocable wheels.
WILLIAM WATSON, Epigrams.

10
And step by step, since time began,
I see the steady gain of man.
WHITTIER, The Chapel of the Hermits.

I have seen that Man moves over with each new generation into a bigger body, more awful, more reverent and more free than he has had before.

ingratum est; quod non licet acrius urit.)
OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 19, l. 3.

We are always striving for things forbidden, and desiring those denied us. (Nitimur in vetitum semper cupimusque negata.)
OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. iv, l. 17.

Whatever is guarded we desire the more; the very care invites the thief; few love what they may have. (Quidquid servatur cupimus magis, ipsaque furem Cura vocat; pauci, quod sinit alter, amant.)
OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 4, l. 25.

So great is man's hunger for forbidden food!
(Fames homini vetitorum tanta ciborum est!)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 138.

Only forbidden pleasures are loved immoderately;
when lawful, they do not excite desire. (Diliguntur immodice sola quæ non licent; . . . non nutrit ardorem concupiscendi, ubi frui licet.)

QUINTILIAN, Declamationes, xiv, 18.

Things forbidden have a secret charm. (Prævalent illicita.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xiii, sec. 1.

1
As stolen love is pleasant to a man, so is it also to a woman. (Utque viro furtiva venus, sic gratta puellæ.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 275.

How glowing guilt exalts the keen delight!

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 230.

2
Stolen waters are sweet, and bread eaten in secret is pleasant.

Old Testament: Proverbs, ix, 17.

Pleasure stolen being sweetest.

MASSINGER, City Madam. Act ii, sc. 1. (1632)

Stolen meat is sweetest.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, English Rogue: Preface. (1671)

Stolen sweets are best.

COLLEY CIBBER, Rival Fools. Act i. (1709)

Stolen glances, sweeter for the theft.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 74. (1818)

Stolen sweets are always sweeter:

Stolen kisses much completer;

Stolen looks are nice in chapels:

Stolen, stolen be your apples.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, Song of Fairies.

3
The pleasure of all things, amongst the ignorant, increases with the very danger which should repel. (Omnium enim rerum voluptas, apud imperitos, ipso quo fugare debet periculo, crescit.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. vii, sec. 9.

4
He found out a new thing—namely, that to promise not to do a thing is the surest way in the world to make a body want to go and do that very thing.

MARK TWAIN, The Adventures of Tom Sawyer. Ch. 22.

II—Prohibition: The Eighteenth Amendment

5
See Social-life and Glee sit down
All joyous and unthinking,

Till, quite transmugrify'd, they're grown Debauchery and Drinking.

ROBERT BURNS, An Address to the Unco Guid.

6
In all matters having to do with the personal habits and customs of large numbers of our people, we must be certain that the established processes of legal change are followed.

WOODROW WILSON, Veto Message, on the Volstead Act, 27 Oct., 1919.

7
It is here at last—dry America's first birthday. At one minute past twelve to-morrow morning a new nation will be born. . . . Tonight John Barleycorn makes his last will and testament. Now for an era of clear thinking and clean living.

UNKNOWN, Anti-Saloon League Manifesto, 15 Jan., 1920.

Good-bye, John. You were God's worst enemy. You were Hell's best friend. I hate you with a perfect hatred.

BILLY SUNDAY, Funeral Oration, over John Barleycorn, Norfolk, Va., 16 Jan., 1920.

But the cheerful Spring came kindly on,

And show'rs began to fall:

John Barleycorn got up again,

And sore surpris'd them all.

ROBERT BURNS, John Barleycorn. St. 3.

Of old, all invitations ended

With the well-known R.S.V.P.,

But now our laws have been amended

The hostess writes B.Y.O.B.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Thoughts on Being Invited to Dinner. "B.Y.O.B.," it should perhaps be explained, means "Bring your own booze."

8
There are conditions relating to its [prohibition's] enforcement which savor of a nationwide scandal. It is the most demoralizing factor in our public life.

WARREN G. HARDING, Message to Congress, 8 Dec., 1922.

9
Vice, crime, immorality, disease, insanity, corruption, and a general disregard for law, directly traceable to the unenforceability of the Volstead Act, are increasing with alarming rapidity.

CONGRESSMAN GEORGE J. SCHNEIDER, of Wisconsin. (Congressional Record, 69th Congress, 1st session, p. 629.)

Industry, commerce, art, literature, music, learning, entertainment, and benevolence all find their finest expression in this saloonless land.

Anti-Saloon League Statement, N. Y. Times, 26 Nov., 1925.

10
One out of the twelve disciples went wrong.

JOHN W. HARRELD, Senator from Oklahoma, minimizing the fact that 875 agents of the government's prohibition enforcement service, one-twelfth of the entire force, had been dismissed for corruption. (Congressional Record, 69th Congress, 1st session, p. 80.)

11
Our country has deliberately undertaken a great social and economic experiment, noble in motive and far-reaching in purpose.

HERBERT HOOVER, Letter to Senator William H. Borah, 28 Feb., 1928. Repeated by Hoover in address at Stanford University accepting the Republican nomination for President.

HERBERT HOOVER, Letter of Transmissal, accompanying Wickersham Report, Jan., 1931.

We expect legislation to conform to public opinion, not public opinion to yield to legislation.

Report of Wickersham Commission, 20 Jan., 1931.

The whole subject is one of great difficulty.

GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM, Interview, after submission of his report on prohibition.

Prohibition has made nothing but trouble.

ALPHONSE CAPONE, Newspaper interview.

<sup>2</sup> All I kin git out o' the Wickersham position on prohibition is that the distinguished jurist seems to feel that if we'd let 'em have it the problem o' keepin' 'em from gittin' it would be greatly simplified.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 125.

<sup>3</sup> The prohibition law, written for weaklings and derelicts, has divided the nation, like Gaul, into three parts—wets, dries, and hypocrites.

MRS. CHARLES H. SABIN, Address, 9 Feb., 1931.

<sup>4</sup> You cannot write on the banner of the Democratic party the skull and crossbones of an outlaw trade.

JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, U. S. Senator from Arkansas, replying to Raskob's state control of liquor plan, before the Democratic National Committee, 5 March, 1931.

<sup>5</sup> In the meantime alcohol produces a delightful social atmosphere that nothing else can produce.

ARNOLD BENNETT, Things That Have Interested Me: For and Against Prohibition.

<sup>6</sup> A young prohibition worker had his office in the Burr Block [Lincoln, Neb., 1890] with Bryan and Charley Dawes. He had been baptized William Eugene, but he came to be known to fame as "Pussyfoot" Johnson.

PAXTON HIBBEN, The Peerless Leader, p. 125.

<sup>7</sup> The law of Maine will hardly take effect while the law of fermentation stands unrepealed on the pages of heaven's statute book. The strictest Sabbath edict never could keep the Puritan ale from working on Sunday.

O. W. HOLMES, Address, before the New England Society in New York, December, 1865, referring to the passage of the Maine prohibition law.

A law made to be habitually and openly violated is a frightful demoralizer of society. A law notoriously despised by many that appear as its public advocates, which takes many a vote from the same hand that an hour later is lifted trembling to the voter's lips with the draught that quiets at once his nerves and his conscience.

O. W. HOLMES, Address, before the New England Society in New York, December, 1885, referring to the Maine prohibition law.

<sup>8</sup> It is mighty difficult to get drunk on 2.75 per cent beer.

HERBERT HOOVER, Statement to the Press, while Food Administrator, 5 June, 1918.

<sup>9</sup> As for prohibition, it is going to be recorded as one of the results of the European War, foreseen by nobody.

STEPHEN LEACOCK, The Woman Question.

<sup>10</sup> Whether or not the world would be vastly benefited by a total banishment from it of all intoxicating drinks seems not now an open question. Three-fourths of mankind confess the affirmative with their tongues, and I believe all the rest acknowledge it in their hearts.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, before the Washington Society of Springfield, Ill., 22 Feb., 1842.

Prohibition will work great injury to the cause of temperance. It is a species of intemperance within itself, for it goes beyond the bounds of reason, in that it attempts to control a man's appetite by legislation and makes a crime out of things that are not crimes.

Statement attributed to ABRAHAM LINCOLN, in handbill circulated in 1887, during a campaign to close saloons. In Wet Slanders of Abraham Lincoln, by Albert Porter, the author says that a copy of this handbill was sent to Lincoln's biographers, Nicolay and Hay, and they declared that they were unable to discover the statement in any of his papers or speeches. Every Evening, 12 Feb., 1926, states that there are affidavits extant to the effect that Col. John B. Goodwin, of Atlanta, Ga., admitted he had fabricated the statement.

MARGARET J. PRESTON, The First Thanksgiving Day.

<sup>12</sup> There is as much chance of repealing the Eighteenth Amendment as there is for a humming-bird to fly to the planet Mars with the Washington Monument tied to its tail.

MORRIS SHEPPARD, Senator from Texas, Newspaper Interview, 24 Sept., 1930.

<sup>13</sup> We drained the flask we dared not keep And laughed and talked ourselves to sleep.

J. C. SQUIRE, Approaching New York.

<sup>14</sup> In the whole course of history, there's been no government that could alter the laws of nature. When by mere legislation man can stop fruit from fermenting of its own accord after it falls to the ground, he can talk about a law of prohibition. The very word destroys its meaning. You can't prohibit nature.

E. TEMPLE THURSTON, Mr. Bottleby Does Something.

1 It was the Eighteenth Amendment that for the first time in our history challenged the integrity of the compact between the States and struck at the heart of our Federal system—the principles of local self-government.

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, Drifting Sands of Party Politics, p. 365.

2 Temperance is moderation in the things that are good and total abstinence from the things that are bad.

FRANCES E. WILLARD. "The accepted definition when the W.C.T.U. was organized as a total abstinence society in 1874, and handed down through its records."—MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, Letter to Compiler, 10 June, 1932.

3 There is as much whisky consumed in Iowa now as before . . . "for medicinal purposes only," and on the boot-leg plan.

Editorial: Omaha Herald, 1889.

The bootlegger is a grim spectre to the anti-prohibitionist. He is a man who wears boots in whose tops are concealed a flask or two of liquor.

Editorial: Voice, N. Y., 17 July, 1890.

PROMISE

I—Promise: Apothegms

4 Promise is most given when the least is said.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Hero and Leander, l. 234.

5 Promise is debt.

CHAUCER, Man of Law's Tale: Prologue.

6 There was never promise made, but it was broken or kept.

QUEEN ELIZABETH. (JOHN DEE, Diary, p. 37.)

7 Apt to promise is apt to forget.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 271.

He promises like a merchant, but pays like a man-of-war.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2007.

8 You never bade me hope, 'tis true;

I asked you not to swear:

But I looked in those eyes of blue,

And read a promise there.

GERALD GRIFFIN, You Never Bade Me Hope.

9 Promise is a promise, dough you make it in de dark er de moon.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Nights with Uncle Remus, Ch. 39.

10 Some persons make promises for the pleasure of breaking them.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics, p. 145.

11 Many promises impair confidence. (Multa fidem promissa levant.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 10.

12 Ah! what a fine promise La Châtre has! (Ah! le bon billet qu'a La Châtre!)

NINON DE L'ENCLOS, when taking another lover, after promising the Marquis de La Châtre to be faithful to him in his absence. "It became," says Sainte-Beuve, "a proverb upon empty assurances."

13 A promise to men in grief is lightly broken.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Wild Swan.

14 Be sure to promise: what harm is there in promises? In promises anyone can be rich. (Promittas facito: quid enim promittere lædit? Pollicitus dives quilibet esse potest.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 443. The way to win a woman.

Promise, promise; want for no promising.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Monsieur d'Olive. Act iii, sc. 1.

Promise, large promise, is the soul of an advertisement.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 40.

15 To promise seas and mountains. (Maria montisque polliceri.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Ch. xxiii, sec. 3.

Promising mountains of gold. (Montis auri pollicens.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 68.

16 Promises and pie-crust are made to be broken.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

Fair promises avail but little,
Like too rich pie-crust, they're so brittle.

EDWARD WARD, Hudibras Redivivus. Pt. v, canto vii, l. 9.

II—Promise and Performance

17 If we've promised them aught, let us keep our promise!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Pied Piper. Pt. xv.

18 Great promise, small performance.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Epigrams. Cent. v, No. 10.

Those who are quick to promise are generally slow to perform.

C. H. SPURGEON, Ploughman's Pictures, 18.

19 Half the promises people say were never kept were never made.

E. W. HOWE, Howe's Monthly.

20 We promise according to our hopes, and perform according to our fears. (Nous promettons selon nos espérances, et nous tenons selon nos craintes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 38.

21 Fair words fat few; great promises without performance, delight for the time, but irk ever after.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 476.

1 Giants in Their promises, but, those obtained, weak pigmies
In their performance.

MASSINGER, Great Duke of Florence. Act ii, sc. 3.

2 Begin to supplement your promises with deeds. (Incipe pollicitis addere facta tuis.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 16, l. 48.

His presents are falling short of his promises.
(Quia non suppetunt dictis data.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 56. (Act i, sc. 1.)

3 Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens
That one day bloom'd and fruitful were the next.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act i, sc. 6, l. 6.

He was ever precise in promise-keeping.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i, sc. 2, l. 76.

And though he promise to his loss,

He makes his promise good.

TATE AND BRADY, Psalms XV.

4 His promises were, as he then was, mighty;
But his performance, as he is now, nothing.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act. iv, sc. 2, l. 41.

Promising is the very air o' the time; it opens the eyes of expectation: performance is ever the duller for his act; and, but in the plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying is quite out of use.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act v, sc. 1, l. 24.

He will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brab-bler the hound; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 1, l. 97.

5 And be these juggling fiends no more believ'd,
That palter with us in a double sense:
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 8, l. 19.

6 They promise mountains, and perform molehills.

C. H. SPURGEON, Ploughman's Pictures, 18.

PROOF

7 What is now proved was once only imagin'd.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

8 The proof of the pudding is the eating.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 24.

9 Compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses.

New Testament: Hebrews, xii, 1.

10 We must never assume that which is incapable of proof.

G. H. LEWES, The Physiology of Common Life.
Ch. 13.

11 You cannot demonstrate an emotion or prove an aspiration.

JOHN MORLEY, Rousseau, p. 402.

12 The event proves the act. (Exitus acta probat.)

OVID, Heroides. Eleg. ii, l. 85.

13 For when one's proofs are aptly chosen,
Four are as valid as four dozen.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto i, l. 514.

14 He who furnishes a voucher for his statements argues himself unknown. (Qui notorem dat, ignotus dat.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. 39, sec. 2.

15 Who finds the heifer dead and bleeding fresh
And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,
But will suspect 'twas he that made the slaughter?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 188.

Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it;
therefore deny it not.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 156.

16 To vouch this, is no proof,
Without more wider and more overt test
Than these thin habits and poor likelihoods
Of modern seeming do prefer against him.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 106.

Be sure of it; give me the ocular proof.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 360.
See also under EYE.

Where are the evidence that do accuse me?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 188.

17 For nothing worthy proving can be proven,
Nor yet disproven.

TENNYSON, The Ancient Sage, l. 66.

18 Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.
New Testament: I Thessalonians, v, 21.

19 Some circumstantial evidence is very strong,
as when you find a trout in the milk.

2 Property has its duties as well as its rights.

THOMAS DRUMMOND, Letter to the Landlords of Tipperary, 22 May, 1838. "The letter was jointly composed by Wolfe, Drummond and Chief Baron Pigot, and none of them was afterwards able to say who suggested the celebrated phrase."—MCLENNAN, Memoir of Thomas Drummond, p. 338. It is usually credited to Drummond, and is engraved on the pedestal of his statue in the City Hall, Dublin. Disraeli appropriated the phrase without credit in his novel, Sybil, bk. ii, ch. 11.

We mustn't forget that property has duties even if other people forget that it has rights.

HENRY ARTHUR JONES, The Triumph of the Philistines. Act i.

3 Some people talk of morality, and some of religion, but give me a little snug property.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Absentee. Ch. 2.

PROPHECY AND PROPHETS

I—Prophecy

16 The passion of prying into futurity makes a striking part of the history of human nature.

ROBERT BURNS, Hallowe'en: Introduction.

17 Of all the horrid, hideous notes of woe, Sadder than owl-songs or the midnight blast, Is that portentous phrase, "I told you so," Utter'd by friends, those prophets of the past.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 50.

18 Ancestral voices prophesying war.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Kubla Khan.

19 We know in part, and we prophesy in part. New Testament: I Corinthians, xiii, 9.

1 Sweet is the harp of prophecy; too sweet
Not to be wrong'd by a mere mortal touch.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 747.

Mean you to prophesy, or but to preach?

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 479.

2 Divinations, and soothsayings, and dreams are vain.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxiv, 5.

All prophecies make sad reading when their term has elapsed.

JOSEPH W. KRUTCH, The Modern Temper, p. 59.

The prophesying business is like writing fugues;
it is fatal to everyone save the man of absolute genius.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. i, p. 31.

3 Thy voice sounds like a prophet's word;
And in its hollow tones are heard
The thanks of millions yet to be.

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, Marco Bozzaris.

4 Whatever I state either will come to pass or will not; truly the great Apollo has given me the art of divination. (Quidquid dicam, aut erit aut non: Divinare etenim magnus mihi donat Apollo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 5, l. 59.

9 There is a history in all men's lives,
Figuring the nature of the times deceased;
The which observed, a man may prophesy.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 80.

Over thy wounds now do I prophesy.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 259.

10 If you can look into the seeds of time,
And say which grain will grow and which will not,

Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear
Your favours nor your hate.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 58.

11 I prophesied that, though I never told anybody.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Rejected Addresses.
No. 5, Hampshire Farmer's Address.

12 I am about to die, and that is the hour in which men are gifted with prophetic power.

18 He is the best diviner who conjectures well.
(Μάντις ὁ ἀριστος ὅστις εἰκάζει καλῶς.)

EURIPIDES, Fragment.

I shall always consider the best guesser the best prophet. (Bene qui conjiciet, vatem hunc per-hibebo optimum.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, sec. 5.

The best qualification of a prophet is to have a good memory.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 249.

19 Prophet of evil! never hadst thou yet
A cheerful word for me. To mark the signs
Of coming mischief is thy great delight,
Good dost thou ne'er foretell nor bring to pass.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 138. (Bryant, tr.)

And better skill'd in dark events to come.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. v, l. 219. (Pope, tr.)

20 God has granted to every people a prophet in its own tongue.

The Koran. (EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon.)

God, when he makes the prophet, does not unmake the man.

JOHN LOCKE. (EMERSON, Representative Men: Swedenborg.)

1
Thine was the prophet's vision, thine
The exultation, the divine
Insanity of noble minds,
That never falters nor abates,
But labors and endures and waits,
Till all that it foresees it finds,
Or what it cannot find creates!
LONGFELLOW, Kéramos.

2
It takes a mind like Dannel's, fact, ez big ez
all ou' doors
To find out thet it looks like rain arter it fairly pours.
J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 9,
l. 97.

3
Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves.
New Testament: Matthew, vii, 15.

Take heed of a prophetess.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

4
A prophet is not without honour, save in his own country, and in his own house.
New Testament: Matthew, xiii, 57; Mark, vi,
4; Luke, iv, 24; John, iv, 44.

No man has been a prophet, not only in his own house, but in his own country, saith the experience of histories.
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2.

5
What should I be but a prophet and a liar, Whose mother was a leprechaun, whose father was a friar?
Teethed on a crucifix and cradled under water,
What should I be but the fiend's goddaughter?

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, *The Singing-
Woman from the Wood's Edge*.

No nightly trance, or breathed spell
Inspires the pale-ey'd Priest from the prophetic cell.
MILTON, *Hymn on the Morning of Christ's
Nativity*, l. 179.

7
That Prophet ill sustains his holy call,
Who finds not heav'ns to suit the tastes of
all.

THOMAS MOORE, *Lalla Rookh: The Veiled
Prophet*, l. 558.

8
No prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation.
New Testament: II Peter, i, 20.

9
I ought to let my hair grow and set up for a fortune-teller. (Capillum promittam optimumst occipiamque hariolari.)
PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 376. (Act ii, sc. 3.)

10
"Prophet!" said I, "thing of evil—prophet still, if bird or devil!"
EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven. St. 16.

11
With the fond maids in palmistry he deals;
They tell the secret first which he reveals.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Henry and Emma, l. 134.

12
Is Saul also among the prophets?
Old Testament: I Samuel, x, 11.

13
"In the name of the Prophet—figs!"
HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Rejected Addresses: Johnson's Ghost.

14
How long have you been a sectary astronomical?
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 2, l. 166.

15
Prophets are all a money-getting tribe. (Τὸ μαντικὸν γὰρ πάντων φιλαργόρον γένος.)
SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1055.

16
He'd rather choose that I should die
Than his prediction prove a lie.
SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 131.

17
Alas for the ignorant minds of the Seers!
(Heu vatum ignaræ mentes!)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iv, l. 65.

18
He too was a king, and the augur best beloved of king Turnus; yet he could not by augury avert his doom. (Rex idem et regi
Turno gratissimus augur; Sed non augurio potuit depellere pestem.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ix, l. 327.

19
Prognostics do not always prove prophecies, at least the wisest prophets make sure of the event first.
HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Thomas Walpole,
9 Feb., 1785.

My gran'ther's rule was safer 'n 'tis to crow:
Don't never prophesy—unless ye know.
J. R. LOWELL, Mason and Slidell.

20
Your fathers, where are they? And the prophets, do they live forever?
Old Testament: Zechariah, i, 5.

PROSPERITY

I—Prosperity: Its Dangers

21 Prosperity is a feeble reed. (C'est un faible roseau que la prospérité.)
DANIEL D'ANCHÈRES, Tyr et Sidon.

22
In prosperity, when the stream of life flows according to our wishes, let us diligently avoid all arrogance, haughtiness and pride. (In re-bus prosperis et ad voluntatem nostram flu-entibus superbiam magnopere, fastidium arrogantiamque fugiamus.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 26, sec. 90.

In prosperity one should resolve nothing arrogantly or vindictively against anyone. (In secundis rebus nihil in quemquam superbe ac violenter consulere decet.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xlv, sec. 8.

1 And you shall find the greatest enemy
A man can have is his prosperity.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Philotas: Dedication, l. 13.

2 Everything in the world may be endured, except only a succession of prosperous days.
(Alles in der Welt lässt sich ertragen, Nur nicht eine Reihe von schönen Tagen.)
GOETHE, Sprüche in Reimen, iii.

3 Prosperity lets go the bridle.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Prosperity destroys fools and endangers the wise.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

4 As you bear your prosperity, Celsus, so shall we bear with you. (Ut tu fortunam, sic nos te, Celse, feremus.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 8, l. 17.

5 The prosperous man is never sure that he is loved for himself. (Felix se nescit amari.)
LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. vii, l. 727.

Prosperity makes few friends. (La prospérité fait peu d'amis.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 17.

6 Pride waxes in prosperity, nor is it easy to bear good fortune with equal mind. (Luxuriant animi rebus plerumque secundis, Nec facile est æqua commoda mente pati.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 437.

Prosperity can change man's nature; and seldom is any one cautious enough to resist the effects of good fortune. (Res secundæ valent commutare naturam, et raro quisquam erga bona sua satis cautus est.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, *De Rebus Gestis
Alexandri Magni*. Bk. x, ch. 1, sec. 40.

7 How much does great prosperity overspread the mind with darkness. (Quantum caliginis mentibus nostris obicit magna felicitas!)

SENECA, De Brevitate Vitæ. Sec. 13.

When God has once begun to oppress the prosperous, he bears down hard. To such an end do mighty fortunes come. (Semel profecto premere felices deus Cum cœpit, urget. Hos habent magna exitus.)

SENECA, Hercules Cætaus, l. 713.

8 Seeing upon how slippery a place
Fortune for mortals and misfortune stand,
The man who lives at ease should ever look
For rocks ahead, and when he prospers most

Watch lest he suffer shipwreck unawares.
SOPHOCLES, Philoctetes, l. 502.

9 We are corrupted by prosperity. (Felicitate corrumpimur.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. i, sec. 15.

10 Let me see no other conflict but with prosperity. If my path run on before me level and smooth, it is all a mirage; in reality it is steep and arduous as a chamois pass.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 25 June, 1840.

11 Prosperity doth bewitch men, seeming clear;
As seas do laugh, show white, when rocks are near.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act v, sc. 6.

II—Prosperity and Adversity

12 If Fortune favors, no need for toil.

If Fortune aids not, so much the less toil.

(Si fortuna juvat, nihil laboris:

Si non adjuvat, hoc minus laboris.)

AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententiæ:
No. 4, Periander.

If Fortune favors, do not rejoice;

If Fortune thunders, do not despond.

(Si fortuna juvat, caveto tolli:

Si fortuna tunat, caveto mergi.)

AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententiæ.
Another rendering.

13 Prosperity is the blessing of the Old Testament; adversity is the blessing of the New,
which carrieth the greater benediction.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Adversity.

Prosperity is not without many fears and dis-tastes; and adversity is not without comforts and hopes.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Adversity.

14 He who swells in prosperity, will shrink in adversity.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 401.

It is a sign of weakness not to bear prosperity as well as adversity with moderation. (Ut adversus res, sic secundas immoderate ferre levitatis est.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 26, sec. 90.

15 Reverse cannot befall that fine Prosperity
Whose sources are interior.

As soon Adversity

A diamond overtake.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. v, No. 8.

16 In the day of prosperity be joyful, but in the day of adversity consider.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 14.

In prosperity, caution; in adversity, patience.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Take your part as it cometh, of rough and eke of smooth.

UNKNOWN, Beryn, 37. (c. 1400)

<sup>1</sup> Adversity is easier borne than prosperity forgot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 763.

<sup>2</sup> Prosperity is a great teacher; adversity is a greater.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Sketches and Essays: On the Conversation of Lords.

<sup>3</sup> Hopeful in adversity, fearful in prosperity, is the heart that is prepared for weal or woe. (Sperat infestis, metuit secundis, Alteram sortem bene preparatum Pectus.)

HORACE, Odes, Bk. ii, ode 10, l. 13.

If hindrances obstruct thy way,
Thy magnanimity display.

And let thy strength be seen:

But O, if Fortune fill thy sail
With more than a propitious gale,
Take half thy canvas in.

HORACE, Odes, ii, 10. (Cowper, tr.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 8, l. 73.

<sup>9</sup> Prosperity makes friends, adversity tries them.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 872.

See also FRIENDS AND ADVERSITY.

<sup>10</sup> We become wiser in the midst of adversity; it is prosperity that takes away righteousness. (Melius in malis sapimus; secunda recum auferunt.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. 94, sec. 74.

Affliction teacheth a wicked person some time to pray: Prosperity never.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Afflictio Pia Magistra.

<sup>11</sup> The good things which belong to prosperity are to be wished; but the good things that belong to adversity are to be admired. (Bona rerum 'secundarum, optabilia; adversarum, mirabilia.)

SENECA. (BACON, Essays: Of Adversity.)

Happy is he who knows how to bear the estate of either slave or king, and who can match his countenance with either lot. For he who bears his ills with even soul has robbed misfortune of its power.

(Felix quisque novit famulum
Regemque pati vultusque suos Variare potest. Rapuit vires pondusque malis casus animo
Qui tulit æquo.)

SENECA, Hercules Cætus, l. 228.

<sup>12</sup> Welcome the sour cup of prosperity! Affliction may one day smile again; and until then, sit thee down, sorrow!

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 316.

<sup>13</sup> All men, when prosperity is at its height, ought then chiefly to consider in what way they will endure disaster. (Omnis, quom secundæ res sunt maxumæ, tum maxume Meditari secum oportet quo pacto advorsam ærum nam ferant.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 241. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

<sup>14</sup> To me, Cyrus, it appears more difficult to find a man that bears prosperity well, than one that bears adversity well; for prosperity creates presumption in most men, but adversity brings sobriety to all.

XENOPHON, Cyropædia. Bk. viii, ch. 4, sec. 14.

Adversity is sometimes hard upon a man; but for one man who can stand prosperity, there are a hundred that will stand adversity.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

I'll say this for adversity—people seem to be able to stand it, an' that's more'n I kin say for prosperity.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 79.

<sup>15</sup> Affliction is the good man's shining scene: Prosperity conceals his brightest ray; As night to stars, woe lustre gives to man.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 406.

III—Prosperity: Public

<sup>16</sup> Prosperity is only an instrument to be used, not a deity to be worshipped.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, Speech, 11 June, 1928.

<sup>17</sup> Prosperity cannot be restored by raids upon the public treasury.

HERBERT HOOVER, Statement to the Press, 9 Dec., 1930.

navigation, the four pillars of our prosperity, are the most thriving when left most free to individual enterprise.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. iii, p. 337.

Surer to prosper than prosperity
Could have assured us.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 39.

2
Plenty is the child of peace.

WILLIAM PRYNNE, Histrion-Mastix. Act i, sc. 1.

3
If the period of prosperity could be expressed in a single word, that word would be confidence; and if the period of adversity, as we call it, could be expressed in a single word, that word would be distrust.

4
There shall be in England seven halfpenny loaves sold for a penny: the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it a felony to drink small beer.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 71.

5
Prosperity's the very bond of love.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 583.

6
We were living in a fairyland of exorbitance, called "prosperity." Poverty is much better.

UNKNOWN. (The New Yorker, 7 Feb., 1931.)

PROVERBS AND FAMILIAR SAYINGS

I—Proverbs: Definitions

8
Certainly apothegms are of excellent use. They are "mucrones verborum," pointed speeches. Cicero prettily called them "salinas," salt pits, that you may extract salt out of and sprinkle it where you will. They serve to be interlaced in continued speech. They serve to be recited upon occasion of themselves. They serve, if you take out the kernel of them and make them your own.

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms: Introduction.

This delivering of knowledge in distinct and disjointed aphorisms doth leave the wit of man more free to turn and toss, and to make use of that which is so delivered to more several purposes and applications.

FRANCIS BACON, Maxims of the Law: Preface.

There is some degree of licentiousness and error in forming axioms.

FRANCIS BACON, Novum Organum: Summary of the Second Part. Aphorism 17.

9
The genius, wit, and spirit of a nation are discovered in its proverbs.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays:

The proverbs of a nation furnish the index to its spirit, and the results of its civilization.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: An Exordial Essay.

Maxims are the condensed good sense of nations.

SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH. (Quoted on the title page of Broom's Legal Maxims.)

10
There is a certain list of vices committed in all ages, and declaimed against by all authors, which will last as long as human nature; or digested into commonplaces may serve for any theme, and never be out of date until Doomsday.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudodoxia Epidemica.

I do not say a proverb is amiss when aptly and seasonably applied; but to be forever discharging them, right or wrong, hit or miss, renders conversation insipid and vulgar.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.

This formal fool, your man, speaks naught but proverbs,

And speak men what they can to him he'll answer

With some rhyme, rotten sentence, or old saying,
Such spokes as ye ancient of ye parish use.

HENRY PORTER, Two Angry Women of Abington: The Proverb Monger. (1599)

Sigh'd forth proverbs,

That hunger broke stone walls, that dogs must eat,

That meat was made for mouths, that the gods sent not

Corn for the rich man only.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 209.

12
There is no proverb which is not true. (No hay refran que no sea verdadero.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote.

13
A proverb is a short sentence based on long experience.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote.

Proverbs are the daughters of daily experience. (Spreekwoorden zijn dochters der dagelijksche ondervinding.)

UNKNOWN. A Dutch proverb.

14
Most maxim-mongers have preferred the prettiness to the justness of a thought, and the turn to the truth.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

Proverbs are art—cheap art. As a general rule they are not true; unless indeed they happen to be mere platitudes.

JOSEPH CONRAD, Gaspar Ruiz. Ch. 5.

In all pointed sentences, some degree of accuracy must be sacrificed to conciseness.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. x, p. 286.

1 Proverbial expressions and trite sayings are the flowers of the rhetoric of a vulgar man. . . . A man of fashion never has recourse to proverbs and vulgar aphorisms.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 Sept., 1749.

Never utter the truism, but live it among men.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iii, p. 455.

To repeat what has been said a thousand times is commonplace.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Works. Vol. i, p. 381.

2 Mean narrow maxims which enslave mankind,

Ne'er from its bias warp thy settled mind.

CHURCHILL, The Prophecy of Famine, l. 163.

The mind of man, when its daily maxims are put before it, revolts from anything so stupid, so mean, so poor.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Literary Studies. Vol. ii, p. 266.

3 A man of maxims only is like a Cyclops with one eye, and that eye placed in the back of his head.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 24 June, 1827.

4 Proverbs are easily made in cold blood.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 14.

5 Thou shalt become an astonishment, a proverb, and a byword, among all nations.

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxviii, 37.

Constant popping off of proverbs will make thee a byword thyself.

THOMAS FULLER, Intro. ad Prudentiam, i, 196.

6 Syllogisms do breed or rather are all the variety of man's life. They are the steps by which we walk in all our businesses.

SIR KENELM DIGBY, Man's Soul, p. 29.

7 The wise make proverbs and fools repeat them.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature. Ser. ii, vol. i, p. 449.

8 Despise not the discourse of the wise, but acquaint thyself with their proverbs; for of them thou shalt learn instruction.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, viii, 8.

9 He gave good heed, and sought out, and set in order many proverbs.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 9.

These proverbs, which contained the wisdom of many ages and nations, I assembled and formed into a connected discourse prefixed to the Almanack of 1757, as the harangue of a wise old man to the people attending an auction.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.

Franklin's memory seems to have been wrong in this, for his reference is undoubtedly to the preface to Poor Richard for 1758.

10 Proverbs, like the sacred books of each nation, are the sanctuary of the intuitions.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

11 A proverb is much better decocted into few words.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England. Ch. 2.

Well short in words and well lang in wit.

FRÈRE LORENZ, Le Somme des Vices et des Vertus. (1279) Referring to the Lord's Prayer.

12 Don't you go believing in sayings, Picotee; they are all made by men, for their own advantage.

THOMAS HARDY, Hand of Ethelberta. Ch. 20.

13 Stories and sayings they will well remember.

GEORGE HERBERT, Priest to the Temple. Ch. 7.

14 There are words and maxims whereby you may soothe the pain and cast much of the malady aside. (Sunt verba et voces, quibus hunc lenire dolorem Possis et magnam morbi deponere partem.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 34. Referring to avarice.

15 The People's Voice the voice of God we call; And what are proverbs but the People's Voice?

JAMES HOWELL, Before a Great Volume of Proverbs.

16 Pointed axioms and acute replies fly loose about the world, and are assigned successively to those whom it may be the fashion to celebrate.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Waller.

17 A maxim is the exact and noble expression of an important and unquestionable truth. (Une maxime est l'expression exacte et noble d'une vérité importante et incontestable.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 137.

18 A proverb is no proverb to you till life has illustrated it.

KEATS, Letters, p. 305.

19 As I pass through my incarnations in every age and race,

I make my proper prostrations to the Gods of the Market Place.

Peering through reverent fingers, I watch them flourish and fall,

And Gods of the Copybook Headings, I notice, outlast them all.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Gods of the Copybook Headings.

We were living in trees when they met us. They showed us each in turn

That Water would certainly wet us, as Fire would certainly burn:

But we found them lacking in Uplift, Vision and Breadth of Mind,
So we left them to teach the Gorillas while we followed the March of Mankind. . . .

As it will be in the future, it was at the birth of Man—

There are only four things certain since Social Progress began:—

That the Dog returns to his Vomit and the Sow returns to her mire,

And the burnt Fool's bandaged finger goes wabbling back to the fire.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Gods of the Copybook Headings.

1 Nothing is so useless as a general maxim.
MACAULAY, Essays: Machiavelli.

2 Proverbs are the wisdom of the streets.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Copper coinage of wisdom is the way of proverbs.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Sandra Belloni. Ch. 40.

3 A maker of maxims is synonymous with a pessimist. (Maximist, pessimist.)

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: Prelude.

4 A proverb is one man's wit and all men's wisdom.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL. (MACKINTOSH, Memoirs. Vol. ii, p. 473.) Usually quoted, "The wisdom of many, the wit of one."

5 Almost every wise saying has an opposite one, no less wise, to balance it.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 237.

6 Full of wise saws and modern instances.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 156.

7 The proverb is something musty.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 359.

For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 37.

A most remarkably long-headed, flowing-bearded, and patriarchal proverb.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 13.

8 He was never yet a breaker of proverbs.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 131.

9 Patch grief with proverbs.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 1, l. 17.

10 I can tell thee where that saying was born.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, l. 9.

An old saying, that was a man when King Pepin of France was a little boy.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 121.

11 A short saying oft contains much wisdom.
SOPHOCLES, Aletes. Frag. 99.

Much of the wisdom of the world is not wisdom.
EMERSON, Works. Vol. i, p. 155.

12 There is a strong feeling in favor of cowardly and prudential proverbs. . . . Most of our pocket wisdom is conceived for the use of mediocre people, to discourage them from ambitious attempts, and generally console them in their mediocrity.

R. L. STEVENSON, Crabbed Age and Youth.

13 Man is a creature who lives not upon bread alone, but principally by catchwords.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. ii.

14 With a little hoard of maxims preaching down a daughter's heart.

II—Proverbs and Familiar Sayings *

The proverbs and sayings which follow are grouped alphabetically according to the key word. Only those are included here which do not fall naturally under other subject headings. "The great refusal" (il gran rifiuto), for example, will be found under Refusal.

17 I will tell you in verse the cities, names, and sayings of the seven sages:

Cleobulus of Lindus said, "Moderation is best." (Μέτρον ἀριστον.)

Chilon in hollow Lacedæmon said, "Know thyself." (Γνῶθι σεαυτόν.)

* Only a few of the best known and most important proverbs have been included in this book. Any one interested in pursuing the subject further should consult the source-books. One of the most important of these is the collection of Latin proverbs (Sententiæ), including many translations from the Greek, made by Publilius Syrus, about 40 B. C. Erasmus also made a noteworthy collection (Adagia), translated into English by Richard Taverner in 1539. The principal early English collections are: John Heywood, Proverbs (1546); John Florio, First Fruites (1578), and Second Frutes (1591); George Herbert, Jacula Prudentum (1640); James Howell, Proverbs (1659); John Ray, English Proverbs (1670); Thomas Fuller, Gnomologia (1732). There are, of course, many modern collections.

Periander, who dwelt in Corinth, said, "Master anger." (Χόλου κρατέειν.)

Pittacus, who was from Mytilene, said, "Nothing in excess." (Οὐδὲν ἄγαν.)

And Solon, in holy Athens, "Look at the end of life." (Τέρμα δ' ὄραν βιότου.)

Bias of Priene declared that "Most men are bad." (Τοὺς πλείους κακίους.)

And Thales of Miletus said, "Shun suretyship." (Ἐγγύην φεύγειν.)

UNKNOWN. (Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, epig. 366.)

<sup>1</sup> "You I love, and you alone."

"And so in love says every one."

"Virtue alone is an estate."

"But money's virtue, gold is fate."

"I scorn your gold, and yet I love."

"I'm poor; let's see how kind you'll prove."

"Let love alone be our debate."

"She loves enough that does not hate."

DANIEL DEFOE, Moll Flanders, p. 103. Moll and one of her lovers are capping proverbs.

<sup>2</sup> As Love and I late harbour'd in one inn,
With proverbs thus each other entertain:

"In love there is no lack," thus I begin;

"Fair words make fools," replieth he again;

"Who spares to speak doth spare to speed,"
quoth I;

"As well," saith he, "too forward as too slow";

"Fortune assists the boldest," I reply;

"A hasty man," quoth he, "ne'er wanted woe";

"Labour is light where love," quoth I, "doth pay";

Saith he, "Light burden's heavy, if far borne";

Quoth I, "The main lost, cast the by away";

"Y'have spun a fair thread," he replies in scorn.

And having thus awhile each other thwarted

Fools as we met, so fools again we parted.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Proverbs.

A

FREDERICK III, Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire (1415-1493), had these vowels stamped upon coins and medals and inscribed upon public buildings. They were originally used at the coronation of his predecessor, Albert II, signifying, "Albertus Electus Imperator Optamus Vivat." After Frederick's coronation, the motto was changed to "Archidux Electus Imperator Optime Vivat." Still later to "Austria est imperare orbi universo" (German, "Alles Erdreich ist Oesterreich unterthan"), Austria is to rule the whole universe.

<sup>4</sup> "He must be a first-rater," said Sam. "A 1," replied Mr. Roker.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 41.

He was six foot o' man, A 1,
Clear grit an' human natur'.

J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'.

<sup>5</sup> I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord.

New Testament: Revelation, i, 8. Alpha is the first and Omega the last letter of the Greek alphabet.

I am not the first, and shall not be the last.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. From the Latin proverb, "Primus non sum nec imus."

Undoubtedly you have not been the first, and you will not be, as I suppose, the last.

(Vous n'avez pas été sans doute la première, Et vous ne serez pas, que je crois, la dernière.)

MOLIÈRE, Dépit Amoureux. Act ii, sc. 9, l. 57.

STODDARD DEWEY. Dewey suggested this name, in 1890, to a French reporter seeking a phrase to describe the La Chapelle gang of blood-thirsty desperadoes who were terrorizing Paris.

<sup>7</sup> To hold by the apron strings.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. (1678)

B

<sup>8</sup> Between you and me and the bed-post, young master has quarrelled with old master.

BULWER-LYTTON, Eugene Aram. Bk. iv, ch. 1.

Between you and me and the general post.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 10.

<sup>9</sup> You whirled them to the back of beyond.

SCOTT, The Antiquary.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 22. A baker's dozen is thirteen for twelve. At one time a heavy penalty was inflicted on bakers for short weight, and consequently they added a surplus number of loaves, called the inbread, to avoid all risk of incurring the fine. The thirteenth was the "vantage loaf."

The pleasant institution of napa—the petty gratuity added by the dealer to anything bought—grew the pleasanter, drawn out into Gallicized lagnappe.

G. W. CABLE, Creoles of Louisiana. Ch. 16.

More usually spelled lagniappe, and in current use in the South, especially Louisiana.

<sup>11</sup> This beats Bannagher.

CARR, Craven Dialect, i, 128. A retort to anyone trying to humbug.

Who was Betty Martin, and wherefore should she be so often mentioned in connection with my precious eye or yours?

SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 125.

Only your eye and Miss Elizabeth Martin.

PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, iv, 158.

1 Big-endians and Little-endians.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Gulliver, Voyage to Lilliput. The controversy was as to whether a boiled egg should be broken at the big or little end. Big-endians signified the Catholics and Little-endians the Protestants.

2 The Blue Ribbon of the Turf.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, referring to the Derby. (Life of Lord George Bentinck.)

3 Talking of boots. (À propos de bottes.)

REGNARD, Le Distrait. A French proverb, applied to sayings or doings which are without motive or relevance. Said to have arisen in the time of Francis I, when a man who had been decided against (debouté) in a lawsuit, told the king that he had been "debotté" (debooted).

4 Now Dragon could kill a wolf in a brace of shakes.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 93.

5 The green new broom sweepeth clean.

HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

Ah, well I wot that a new broom sweepeth clean.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 89. (1579)

6 His palfrey was as brown as a berry.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 207. (c. 1386)

Thy nose is as brown as a berry.

JOHN TATHAM, Love Crowns the End. (1640)

7 For Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 2, l. 2.

8 A Big Butter-and-Egg Man.

TEXAS GUINAN, introducing from the floor of her night club in New York a generous stranger who, one night in 1924, paid all the cover charges and distributed $50 bills to the entertainers, and who refused to reveal his name, remarking only that he was in the dairy produce business. The phrase became popular as a designation for a reckless spender or a financial "angel," and was used by George Kaufman as the title for a comedy produced in 1925.

9 Your cake is dough, and all your fat in the fire.

THOMAS BECON, Prayers, 277. (1559)

My cake is dough.

10 Set the cart before the horse.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

Others set carts before the horses.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 22.

To make the plough go before the horse.

JAMES I, Letter to the Lord Keeper, July, 1617.

It is folly to put the plough in front of the oxen. (Folie est mettre la charrue devant les bœufs.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. ii, ch. 11.

11 But catch who that catch might.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. vii, l. 4422. (c. 1390)

They catch that catch may, keep and hold fast.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 1773. (1520)

There's catch as catch can, hit or miss, luck is all.

KANE O'HARA, Midas. Act ii, sc. 8. (1761)

12 Carthage should be destroyed. (Delenda est Carthago.)

MARCUS CATO, who ended every speech in the Roman Senate with the words, "Ceterum censeo Carthaginem esse delendam." (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. 27, sec. 1. The Greek is: Καρχηδόνα μὴ εἶναι.)

13 If I can give that Cerberus a sop, I shall be at rest for one day.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act i, sc. 1. Cerberus, in Roman mythology, is the three-headed dog which guards the entrance to the infernal regions. Whenever a person died, a cake was placed in his hand, to be used as a sop to Cerberus, so that the dead might pass without molestation.

To Cerberus they give a sop

His triple barking mouth to stop.

SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 213.

These realms huge Cerberus makes ring with his triple-throated baying, his monstrous bulk crouching in the cavern opposite. To him, seeing the snakes now bristling on his neck, the seer flung a morsel drowsy with honey and drugged meal. . . . The warder buried in sleep, Æneas wins the entrance, and swiftly leaves the bank of that stream whence none return. (Melle soporatum et medicatis frugibus offam Obicit.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 417.

14 'Tis as cheap sitting as standing.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

15 I believe he would make three bits of a cherry. (Je croy qu'il feroit d'une cerise trois morceaux.)

12
I do not know the lady, but damn her at a venture.

CHARLES LAMB, to an insufferable fellow-guest at a dinner, who was inquiring persistently as to Lamb's acquaintance with persons of note: "Do you know So-and-So? Do you know Thus-and-Thus? Do you know Miss —?" "No, madam, I do not," Lamb replied, "but damn her at a venture." (See LUCAS, Charles Lamb. Vol. i, p. 440.)

13
Then all the children of Israel went out, and the congregation was gathered together as one man from Dan even unto Beersheba.

Old Testament: Judges, xx, 1.

After us the deluge! (Après nous le déluge.)

MADAME DE POMPADOUR to Louis XV. (MADAME DE HAUSSET, Memoirs, p. 19.) La Tour (Correspondence) states that Pompadour used the phrase to Louis after the battle of Rossbach, 5 Nov., 1757. Sainte-Beuve also ascribes it to her. Larousse, on the other hand (Fleurs Historiques) attributes it to the king.

15
Where's Brummel? Dish'd. Where's Long Pole Wellesley? Diddled.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 77.

16
And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear you, when ye depart thence, shake off the dust under your feet, for a testimony against them.

New Testament: Mark, vi, 11.

And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet.

New Testament: Matthew, x, 14.

Out of the frying-pan into the fire. (Perbenimus igitur de calceria in carbonarium.)
TERTULLIAN, De Carne Christi, vi.
But as the flounder doth,

Leap out of the frying pan into the fire.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

Leap they like a flounder out of a frying-pan into the fire.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Works, p. 179. (1557)

But I was saved, as is the flounder, when He leapeth from the dish into the fire.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Bk. xiii, st. 28. (1591)

As the saying is, the people who would avoid the slavery of freemen, which is smoke and appearance, has fallen under the tyranny of slaves, which is fire.

PLATO, The Republic. Sec. 569.

<sup>1</sup> To leap out of the hall into the kitchen, or out of Christ's blessing into the warm sun.

JOHN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus. Sig. H3. (1540)

The proverb refers to the haste of the congregation to leave the church after the benediction has been pronounced.

Good king, thou must approve the common saw, That out of heaven's benediction comest To the warm sun!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 166.

Out of God's blessing into the warm sun.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, bk. 3, ch. 4.

Motteux takes the saying to mean "Out of the frying pan into the fire," which is an error. "From better to worse" would be nearer its meaning.

<sup>2</sup> I'll make the fur Fly 'bout the ears of the old cur.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 278.

G

Said to be an allusion to the high gallows on which a notorious robber, Patrick McGregor, alias Gilderoy, was hanged at Edinburgh, July, 1638, from which his body looked like a kite.

They hung him high aboon the rest,

He was sae trim a boy;

There died the youth whom I loved best,

My handsome Gilderoy.

UNKNOWN, Gilderoy. (PERCY, Reliques. Ser. i, bk. iii, No. 12.) The greater the crime the higher the gallows was at one time a practical legal axiom.

<sup>4</sup> Add to golden numbers golden numbers.

<sup>5</sup> Gone, glimmering.

<sup>6</sup> By all that's good and glorious.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act i, sc. 2.

<sup>7</sup> But for the grace of God there goes John Bradford.

JOHN BRADFORD, on seeing some criminals on the way to execution, c. 1553. A traditional ascription. (See Dictionary of National Biography, vol. iv, p. 159.) The saying has also been attributed to John Bunyan and to John Wesley.

<sup>8</sup> But for this whoreson cutting of throats, it goes a little against the grain.

DRYDEN, Amboyna. Act i, sc. 1. (1673)

Hither, though much against the grain,

The Dean has carried Lady Jane.

SWIFT, Works. Vol. 14, p. 250. (c. 1730)

Which again, naturally, rubs against the grain of Mr. Bazzard.

DICKENS, Edwin Drood. Ch. 20.

<sup>9</sup> I will go against the hair in all things, so I may please thee in any thing.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 394. (1580)

He is . . . merry against the hair.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc. 2, l. 26. (1609)

<sup>10</sup> The more he thought on't, the madder he grew,

Until he vowed by the great horn spoon, Unless they did the thing that was right,

He'd give them a licking, and that pretty soon.

UNKNOWN, French Claim. (McCARTY, National Song Book, i, 222. 1842.)

Sez Mr. Foote,

"I should like to shoot

The holl gang, by the gret horn spoon!" sez he.

J. R. LOWELL, The Debate in the Sennit.

H

<sup>11</sup> He waxed hail fellow with him.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, 148. (1519)

They would be hail fellow well-met with him.

THOMAS BECON, Catechism, 561. (c. 1530)

Hail fellow well met, all dirty and wet;

Find out, if you can, who's master, who's man.

SWIFT, My Lady's Lamentation.

If he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 261.

<sup>12</sup> The half is more than the whole. (Τὸ ἥμισυ τοῦ παντὸς πλεῖον εἶναι.)

PITTACUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus. Bk. i, sec. 75.)

Fools! they know not how much the half exceeds the whole. (Νῆπιον, οὐδὲ ἴσασιν ὅσῳ πλεον ἥμισυ παντὸς.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 40.

That's just, if the half shall judge the whole.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 13. (1546)

<sup>13</sup> He is handsome that handsome does.

JOHN GAY, Wife of Bath, iii, 1. (1713)

Handsome is that handsome does.

PIERRE BLANCHET, La Farce de Maître Pierre Patelin, l. 1291. (c. 1460) Used also by Brueys in his L'Avocat Patelin, taken from Blanchet's play. In the play, a cloth-dealer prosecutes his shepherd for stealing some of his sheep, and employs the advocate Patelin, but perceives, as he is in the midst of his evidence, that the advocate is wearing a suit made of stolen cloth. He is so troubled by this that his mind keeps wandering from the stolen sheep to the stolen cloth, while the judge tries to keep him to his story by adjuring him, "Revenons à nos moutons." As mouton is French for both sheep and mutton, British waggery (or ignorance) has transformed the phrase into, "Let us stick to our muttons."

Let us get back to our sheep. (Retournons à nos moutons.)

Thou art in a parlous state.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 45.

<sup>11</sup>
Not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 170. (1599) The phrase, which was in use as early as 1550 (HULOET, Abcedarium Anglico-Latinum), is credited to Froissart by Lord Berners. (Vol. i, ch. 320, p. 497.)

<sup>12</sup>
Can one desire too much of a good thing?
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 123.

<sup>13</sup>
"So so" is good, very good, very excellent good; and yet it is not; it is but so so.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 1, l. 29.

Breathe twice and cry "so, so."

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 45.

<sup>14</sup>
We are for you.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 3, l. 10.

<sup>15</sup>
I help to frame thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act v, sc. 3, l. 63.

The maid will I frame.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 266.

<sup>16</sup>
That it should come to this!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 137.

<sup>17</sup>
I know a hawk from a handsaw.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 397. Handsaw is probably a corruption of heronshaw, a heron: I know a hawk from a heron—the bird of prey from the prey itself.

<sup>18</sup>
What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 585.

<sup>19</sup>
The observed of all observers.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 162.

<sup>20</sup>
Tear a passion to tatters . . . to split the ears of the groundlings.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 11.

<sup>21</sup>
It out-herods Herod.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 16.

<sup>22</sup>
To hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 24.

<sup>23</sup>
Make the judicious grieve.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 29.

- 1 Not to speak it profanely.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 34.
- 2 Here's metal more attractive.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 116.
- 3 Let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 253.
- 4 Now might I do it pat.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 73.
- 5 How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 148.
- 6 We'll put the matter to the present push.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 318.
- 7 The phrase would be more german to the matter, if we could carry cannon by our sides.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 165.
- 8 A hit, a very palpable hit.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 292.
- 9 God save the mark!
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 56.
- 10 If he fall in, good night!
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 194.
This wicked world was once my dear delight;
Now all my conquests, all my charms, good night!
POPE, The Wife of Bath: Prologue, l. 225.
- 11 Nay, I will; that's flat.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 218.
I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 42.
That's flat.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 102.
- 12 I know a trick worth two of that.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 41.
- 13 Not an inch further.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 117.
- 14 Show it a fair pair of heels.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 53.
- 15 I sent him Bootless home.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 66.
- 16 Let me tell the world.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 2, l. 66.
- 17 Away, you scullion! you rampallion! you fustilarian!
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 65.

- 18 I'll tickle your catastrophe.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 66.
- 19 With all appliances and means to boot.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 29.
- 20 Most forcible Feeble.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 179.
- 21 Under which king, Besonian? speak, or die.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 3, l. 117.
Recruits sent from Spain to Rome were called besogni, because they were in need of everything, from the Italian bisogno, need.
- Great men oft die by vile bezonians.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 134.
- Base and pilfering bisognos and marauders.
SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 16.
- 22 To this gear the sooner the better.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 4, l. 17.
- 23 A fig for Peter!
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 67.
- Figo for thy friendship!
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 60.
- 24 We will fall for it?
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 128.
- 25 Thou shalt see me at Philippi.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 284. This is the warning addressed to Brutus by the ghost of Cæsar. The story is told by Plutarch (Lives: Cæsar. Ch. 69), where the phantom says, "I am thy evil genius, Brutus, and thou shalt see me at Philippi." ('Ο σός, ὦ Βρούτε, δαίμων κακός· ὄψει δέ με περί Φιλίππους.)
- 26 Bell, book, and candle shall not drive me back.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 219.
- 4 Say that I said so.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 195.
- 5 I will presently to Saint Luke's: there, at the moated grange, resides this dejected Mariana.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 276.
- Mariana in the moated grange.
TENNYSON, Motto: Mariana.
- 6 My business in this state
Made me a looker on here in Vienna.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act v, sc. 1, l. 318.
- 7 What 's mine is yours and what is yours is mine.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act v, sc. 1, l. 543.
- 8 Nay, but I bar to-night: you shall not gauge me
By what we do to-night.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 208.
- 9 From the four corners of the earth they come.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 39.
- From the four corners of the world do haste.
DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 2. (Sylvester, tr.)
- 10 It will go hard with poor Antonio.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 293.
- 11 Now, infidel, I have you on the hip.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 334.
- 12 You Banbury cheese!
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act i, sc. 1, l. 130. Bardolph is speaking to Slender, and has in mind the proverb, "As thin as Banbury cheese."
- As thin as Banbury cheese.
BISHOP GRIFFITH WILLIAMS, Sad Condition of the Clergy in Ossory, 26. (1664)

- 13 We burn daylight.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 54.
- 14 Shall we wag?
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 238.
- Let us wag, then.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 101.
- 15 This is the short and the long of it.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 60.
- 16 O, understand my drift.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 251.
- 17 I will smite his noddles.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 128.
- 18 I can not tell what the dickens his name is.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 19.
- 19 A man of my kidney.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 117.
- 20 God speed, fair Helena! whither away?
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act i, sc. 1, l. 180.
- 21 Masters, spread yourselves.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act i, sc. 2, l. 19.
- 22 O spite! O hell! I see you all are bent
To set against me for your merriment.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 145.
- You all did see that on the Lupercal
I thrice presented him a kingly crown,
Which he did thrice refuse.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 100.
- "You all" is the Southern plural for you.
UNKNOWN. Nashville Banner, 24 July, 1921.

26 How old is Ann?
UNKNOWN. In the New York Press, October 16, 1903, appeared the following problem: "Mary is 24 years old. She is twice as old as Ann was when she was as old as Ann is now. How old is Ann now?"

27 His name was George F. Babbitt, and . . . he was nimble in the calling of selling houses for more than people could afford to pay.
SINCLAIR LEWIS, Babbitt, p. 2. (1922)

28 Who hit [or struck] Billy Patterson?
It has been impossible to verify any of the stories which purport to explain this expression. One story is to the effect that in a row at the corner of Baltimore and Charles Streets, Baltimore, a man named Billy Patterson was struck by somebody and went around inquiring "Who hit me?" till it became a joke. Another is that a student at a medical college died from fright during a hazing some eighty years ago, after being struck a mock blow, and at the inquest the great question was "Who struck Billy Patterson?" until it developed that no one had really struck him. Still another version places the locale at Lancaster, Pa.

<sup>1</sup> It's "bold," it's "clever" and it's "cute,"
And so is this my blurb.
GELETT BURGESS, Burgess Unabridged, p. 7.
Blurb: an inspired testimonial; a sound like a publisher.

<sup>2</sup> Are you a bromide?
GELETT BURGESS. Title of essay. (Smart Set, April, 1906.)

Bromides and sulfites.
GELETT BURGESS. Two words coined in 1907, the first to indicate the majority of mankind, who all think and talk alike, the latter the select minority who "eliminate the obvious from their conversation."

<sup>3</sup> Nothing doing. That's just "baloney." Everybody knows I can't lay bricks.

ALFRED E. SMITH, at the laying of the cornerstone of the New York State Office Building, when asked to permit a motion picture showing him actually laying the brick. His secretary states that "it is impossible to say exactly when the Governor first used the expression 'baloney.'"

I am for gold dollars against baloney dollars. I am for experience against experiment.

ALFRED E. SMITH, Editorial, New Outlook,
Dec., 1933, referring to the devaluation experiments of the F. D. Roosevelt administration.

<sup>4</sup> Bonehead.

CHARLES DRYDEN, reviving an old word, in newspaper article describing the famous play in which Fred Merkle, first baseman of the New York Giants, failed to touch second base in the deciding game of the 1908 championship series, at Polo Grounds, New York City, 23 Sept. The error lost the game for the Giants, and a riot followed. Dryden died at Chicago, 11 Feb., 1931, aged 71. (See SULLI-VAN, Our Times. Vol. iii, p. 541.)

<sup>5</sup> The practice for which W. E. Woodward, in a novel [Bunk] published in 1923, invented the word "debunking."

F. L. ALLEN, Only Yesterday, p. 236.

<sup>6</sup> I acknowledge the corn.

CHARLES A. WICKLIFFE, of Kentucky, in debate in House of Representatives in 1828. (DE VERE, Americanisms.)

<sup>7</sup> Gibson has drawn the true American girl.
He is the American Du Maurier. . . . As soon as the world saw Gibson's ideal it bowed down in adoration, saying: "Lo, at last the typical American girl." . . . The girls themselves held her as their portrait and strove to live up to the likeness. Thus did nature follow in the footsteps of art and thus did the Gibson girl become legion.

<sup>11</sup> Another phrase, which often glides in music from the lip,

Is one of fine significance and beauty, "Let her rip!"

PARK BENJAMIN, Hard Times.

<sup>12</sup> Mollycoddles instead of vigorous men.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Cambridge,
Mass., 23 Feb., 1907.

The large mollycoddle vote—the people who are soft physically and morally.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Autobiography. Ch. 7.
When asked to define mollycoddle, Roosevelt quoted Herodotus (History. Bk. ii, sec.
35); who, describing the habits of the Egyptians, writes: Οὔτε οὐσι αἱ μὲν γυναῖκες ὀρθαί, οἱ δὲ ἄνδρες κατήμενοι.

Hold him up to scorn as a mollycoddle and a milksoy.

THACKERAY, English Humorists: Fielding.

chinery!

PHILANDER JOHNSON, Shooting Stars. (See Everybody's Magazine, May, 1920.)

<sup>14</sup> Nifty! (short for magnificent).

BRET HARTE, The Tale of a Pony.

<sup>15</sup> Andrew Jackson, Esq., proved a bill of sale from Hugh McGary to Gasper Mansker, for a negro man, which was O. K.

Archives of Sumner County, Tenn., 6 Oct., 1790. (The first recorded use of O.K. James Parton suggested that O.K. was a misreading of O. R., Order Recorded. (Life of Andrew Jackson. Vol. i, p. 136.)

The People is Oll Korrekt.

Wording of a banner displayed at a Harrison and Tyler meeting at Urbana, Ohio, 15 Sept., 1840; and a week later, the letters, "O. K."
are said to have been painted by Samuel Medary, over the door of his tavern at Columbus, Ohio, to signify "Oll Korrekt." (See story in Columbus, Ohio, Dispatch, 3 Sept., 1933.)

<sup>16</sup> It depends upon whose ox is gored.

Table 8, in NOAH WEBSTER'S The American Spelling Book, is called The Partial Judge, in which an ox is gored by a bull, and the expression is supposed to have originated from this.

Attributed to FAY TEMPLETON, who chucked it at the head of a plunger named John Gates, about 1899, meaning a tremendous nobody.

<sup>2</sup> Why is this thus? What is the reason of this thusness?

ARTEMUS WARD, Moses, the Sassy.

KATHERINE KENT WALKER. Title of essay, Atlantic Monthly, Sept., 1864.

<sup>5</sup> We are bound toward the scuppers,

And the time has come to act,

Or we'll both be on our uppers

For a fact!

GUY WETMORE CARRYL, How a Cat Was Annoyed and a Poet Was Booted.

<sup>6</sup> As you are not prepared, as the Americans say, to go the whole hog, we will part good friends.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Japhet. Ch. 54. This is not really an Americanism. Notes and Queries (27 Sept., 1851) says it is of Irish origin, where a shilling is called a "hog," so that "To go the whole hog" means to spend a whole shilling.

JAMES FISK. At Congressional investigation of Black Friday, (Sept., 1869), referring to the money he had lost in the attempt to corner gold.

I—Providence: Definitions and Apothegms

<sup>8</sup> Providence labors with quaint instruments, dilapidating Troy by means of a wooden rocking-horse, and loosing sin into the universe through a half-eaten apple.

JAMES BRANCH CABELL, The Cream of the Jest, p. 87.

<sup>9</sup> He does not, like Bolingbroke, patronise Providence.

CARLYLE, Essays: Voltaire.

<sup>10</sup> Providence has been called the baptismal name of Chance, but a devout person would say that Chance is a nickname of Providence. (Quelqu'un disait que la Providence était le nom de baptême du Hasard, quelque dévot dira que le Hasard est un sobriquet de la Providence.)

CHAMFORT, Maximes et Pensées. Pt. i.

<sup>11</sup> Providence has a wild, rough, incalculable road to its end, and it is of no use to try to whitewash its huge, mixed instrumentalities or to dress up that terrific benefactor in a clean shirt and white neckcloth of a student in divinity.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

A pistareen-Providence, which, whenever the good man wants a dinner, makes that some body shall knock at his door, and leave a half dollar.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

<sup>12</sup> What is the operation we call Providence? There lies the unspoken thing, present, omnipresent. Every time we converse we translate it into speech.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

III—Providence: Its Beneficence

Confide ye aye in Providence,
For Providence is kind:

An' bear ye a' life's changes
Wi' a calm an' tranquil mind.

Tho' pressed and hemmed on every side,
Ha'e faith, an' ye'll win through;

For ilka blade o' grass
Keeps its ain drap o' dew.

Yea, providently caters for the sparrow,
Be comfort to my age!

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 43.

There's a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 't is not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 230.

Eye me, blest Providence, and square my trial

To my proportion'd strength.

MILTON, Comus, l. 329.

The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxi, 6.

Come wealth or want, come good or ill,
Let young and old accept their part,
And bow before the Awful Will,
And bear it with an honest heart.

THACKERAY, The End of the Play.

So, darkness in the pathway of Man's life
Is but the shadow of God's providence,
By the great Sun of Wisdom cast thereon;
And what is dark below is light in Heaven.

WHITTIER, Tauler, l. 79.

While Thee I seek, protecting Power,
Be my vain wishes stilled;
And may this consecrated hour
With better hopes be filled.

HELEN MARIA WILLIAMS, Trust in Providence.

We rather think, with grateful mind sedate,
How Providence educeth, from the spring
Of lawless will, unlooked-for streams of good,

Which neither force shall check nor time abate.

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. iii,
No. 4. Of Henry VIII.

PRUDENCE

See also Discretion

I—Prudence: Definitions

By prudence, which the Greeks call φρόνησις, we understand the practical knowledge of things to be sought, and of things to be avoided. (Prudentiam enim, quam Græci φρόνησις dicunt, aliam quandam intellegimus, quæ est rerum expetendarum fugiendarumque scientia.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 43, sec. 153.

I prefer silent prudence to loquacious folly. (Malo indisertam prudentiam, quam loquacem stultitiam.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. iii, sec. 35.

Prudence is God taking thought for oxen.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

The greatest good is prudence; a more precious thing even than philosophy; from it spring all the other virtues.

EPICURUS, Letter to Menæceus. (DIOGENES
LAËRTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 132.)

That man is prudent who neither hopes nor fears anything from the uncertain events of the future.

ANATOLE FRANCE, The Procurator of Judea.

1 Wise venturing is the most commendable part of human prudence.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 245.

2 One has no protecting power save prudence. (Nullum numen habes si sit prudentia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 365; sat. xiv, l. 315.

No divinity is absent if Prudence is present. (Nullum numen abest si sit Prudentia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 365. Adapted.

II—Prudence: Apothegms

3 Prudence is of no service unless it be prompt.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Pt. i, bk. 6. Promptitudo.

4 Hearken with your ears that ye may know prudence.

Apocrypha: Baruch, iii, 9. (Douay.)

5 Early and provident fear is the mother of safety.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, on the Unitarian petition, 11 May, 1792.

For those that fly may fight again,
Which he can never do that's slain.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto 3, l. 243. See under DISCRETION for other quotations.

6 Achilles, though invulnerable, never went to battle but completely armed.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

7 Precaution is better than cure. (Præstat cautela quam medela.)

COKE, Institutes.

Prevention is the daughter of intelligence.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Letter to Sir Robert Cecil, 10 May, 1593.

8 The cautious seldom err.

CONFUCIUS, *Analec*t. Bk. iv, ch. 23.

9 Chance fights ever on the side of the prudent. (Πᾶσιν γὰρ εὐφρονοῦσι συμμαχεῖ τύχη.)

EURIPIDES, Peirithous. Frag.

10 One virtue he had in perfection, which was prudence—often the only one that is left us at seventy-two.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 2.

11 Every one stretcheth his legs according to his coverlet.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

He who does not stretch himself according to the coverlet finds his feet uncovered. (Wer sich nicht nach der Decke streckt, dem bleiben die Füße unbedeckt.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Reimen, iii.

I shall cut my coat after my cloth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

12 Prudence is always in season. (La prudence est toujours de saison.)

MOLLÈRE, Dépôt Amoureux. Act v, sc. 8, l. 8.

13 Prudence is the first thing to desert the wretched. (Miseros prudentia prima relinquit.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 12, l. 47.

14 The prudent man looketh well to his going. Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 15.

15 As he is slow he is sure.

STEELE, The Spectator. No. 140. See also under CERTAINTY.

16 I won't quarrel with my bread and butter. SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. 1.

17 It becomes a wise man to try negotiation before arms. (Omnia prius experiri verbis quam armis sapientem decet.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus. Act v, sc. 1, l. 19.

III—Prudence: Look Before You Leap

18 Look ere thou leap, whose literal sense is, Do nothing suddenly or without advisement.

WILLIAM TYNDALE, The Obedience of a Christian Man, 304. (1528)

Look ere you leap.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546)

19 Look ere you leap, see ere you go,
It may be for thy profit so.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry. Ch. 57. (1557)

20 He that looketh not before he leapeth
May chance to stumble before he sleepeth.
WILLIAM PAINTER, Palace of Pleasure, iii, 53. (1567)

21 Thou shouldst have looked before thou hadst leapt.

BEN JONSON, Eastward Hoe. Act v, sc. 1. (1605)

22 Let every man look before he leaps.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 14. (1615)

23 'Tis good to look before thou leap.

MARTIN PARKER, An Excellent New Medley. (Roxburghe Ballads. 1643.)

24 Try therefore before you trust; look before you leap.

JOHN TRAPP, Commentaries: I Peter. (1660)
Trapp traces the saying back to St. Bernard.

25 Look before you ere you leap,
For as you sow, ye are like to reap.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 2, l. 501. (1664)

26 I love to look before I leap.

STEELE, Tender Husband. Act iii, sc. 2. (1705)

1 Look twice before you leap.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 9. (1849)

2 Always wise men go back for to leap the further.

UNKNOWN, Melusine. Ch. 20. (14th century French romance.)

One must draw back to leap the better. (Il faut reculer pour mieux sauter.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 38.

IV—Prudence: Make Haste Slowly

3 Make haste slowly. (Σπεῦδε βραδέως.)

CÆSAR AUGUSTUS. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. x, ch. 11, sec. 5.) Aulus Gellius says that the Emperor used these two Greek words in conversation and in his letters, "by which he recommended that to accomplish a result we should use at once the promptness of energy and the delay of carefulness." Suetonius (Lives of the Cæsars: The Deified Augustus, xxv, 4) attributes to him the familiar Latin form, "Festina lente." Franklin used it in Poor Richard, April, 1744. The German form is, "Eile mit Weile."

4 Hasten slowly. (Hâtez-vous lentement.)

BOILEAU, L'Art Poétique. Canto i, l. 171.

5 Festination may prove precipitation; deliberating delay may be wise cunctation.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 23. Paraphrasing Cæsar Augustus.

6 He hasteth well that wisely can abide.

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 13.

V—Prudence: Two Strings to the Bow

7 'Tis true no lover has that pow'r

T' enforce a desperate amour,
As he that has two strings t' his bow,
And burns for love and money too.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto 1, l. 1.

8 I hope you will remember that who seeketh two strings to one bow, he may shoot strong but never straight.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, Letter to James VI. (Letters. No. 10.)

9 Yes, I had two strings to my bow; both golden ones, egad! and both cracked.

FIELDING, Love in Several Masques. Act v, sc. 13.

10 You have many strings to your bow.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

11 Have more strings to thy bow than one; it is safe riding at two anchors.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 116. (1579)

12 In the stormy night it is well that anchors twain be let down from the swift ship.

PINDER, Olympian Odes. Ode vi, l. 100.

A ship is safer when two cables hold it, and an anxious mother, if she rear twins, has less to dread. (Nam melius duo defendunt retinacula navim, Tutius et geminos anxia mater alit.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 22, l. 41.

Good riding at two anchors, men have told,
For if one fail, the tother may hold.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

13 I think it better to have two strings to my bow. (Commodius esse opinor duplici spectutier.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 603. (Act iv, sc. 2.)

I will well that every man be amorous and love but that he have two strings on his bow.

WILLIAM CAXTON, Jason, 57. (c. 1477)

It is always good for one to have two strings to his bow.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruites. Fo. 6. (1578)

So that every man lawfully ordained must bring a bow which hath two strings, a title of present right and another to provide for future possibility or chance.

RICHARD HOOKER, Laws of Ecclesiastical Polity. Bk. v, ch. 80. (1597)

A wise man's bow goes with a two-fold string.

JOHN DAY, Ile of Gulls. Act ii, sc. 2. (1606)

Archers ever

Have two strings to a bow; and shall great Cupid
(Archer of archers both in men and women),
Be worse provided than a common archer?

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act ii, sc. 1. (1607)

'Tis good in every case, you know,

To have two strings unto our bow.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iv, l. 1282. (1761)

VI—Prudence: Admonitions

14 He that cannot see well, let him go softly.

FRANCIS BACON, Baconiana, p. 65.

Where the road bends abruptly take short steps.

ERNEST BRAMAH, Kai Lung's Golden Hours.

Do not adjust your sandals while passing through a melon field; nor yet arrange your hat beneath an orange tree.

ERNEST BRAMAH, Kai Lung's Golden Hours.

15 It is always good

When a man has two irons in the fire.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Faithful Friends. Act i, sc. 2.

16 It is a common saying that it is best first to catch the stag, and afterwards, when he has been caught, to skin him. (Vulgariter dicitur, quod primum oportet cervum capere, et postea, cum captus fuerit, illum excoari.)

HENRY DE BRACON, De Legibus et Consuetudinibus Angliæ. Bk. iv, pt. i, ch. 2, sec. 4. (c. 1240) See also under FOLLY.

17 It is the part of a wise man to keep himself to-day for to-morrow, and not to venture all his eggs in one basket.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 9.

1 Let us not throw the rope after the bucket.
(No arrojemus la sogá tras el caldero.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 9.

2 They had best not stir the rice, though it sticks to the pot.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 37.

3 Never put thy thumbs between two back teeth.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.

Between the tree and your finger never put the bark. (Entre l'arbre et le doigt il ne faut point mettre l'écorce.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Médecin Malgré Lui. Act i, sc. 2.
Referred to as a saying of Cicero.

4 The branch is better that bowen will to wind
Than that that breaks.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 257.
(c. 1374)

Rather to bow than break is profitable;
Humility is a thing commendable.

UNKNOWN, Moral Proverbs of Christian.
(1390)

Better is to bow than break.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

I bend and do not break. (Je plie et ne romps pas.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 22.

5 If thou meet a red man and a bearded woman, greet them three mile off.

JOHN FLORIO, First Frutes. Fo. 30. (1578)

The red is wise, the brown trusty,
The pale envious, and the black lusty. . . .
To a red man read thy rede,
With a brown man break thy bread,
At a pale man draw thy knife,
From a black man keep thy wife.

ROBERT TOFTE, Blazon of Jealousy, 21. (1615)

He is false by nature that has a black head and a red beard.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1915.

6 Wonder at hills, keep on the plain;
Praise the sea, on shore remain.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes. Fo. 99. (1591)

Praise the mountains, but love the plains.

JOHN WODROEPE, Spared Hours, 277. (1623)

Praise a hill, but keep below;

Praise the sea, but keep on land.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Commend the sea, but keep thyself ashore.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, ii, 666.
(1659)

7 Whose house is of glass must not throw stones at another.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Nobody should throw stones whose house is made of glass.

CHARLES SHADWELL, The Sham Prince. Act i,
sc. 2. (1720)

Don't throw stones at your neighbors, if your own windows are glass.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1736.

One who has a head of glass should never engage in throwing stones.

JOHN GROSE, Olio, 281. (1793)

People who live in glass houses have no right to throw stones.

BERNARD SHAW, Widowers' Houses. Act ii.
(1892)

8 He that goes barefoot must not plant thorns.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

He that scatters thorns, let him not go barefoot.

But O! if Fortune fill thy sail

With more than a propitious gale,

Take half thy canvas in.

HORACE, Odes, ii, 10. (Cowper, tr.)

Set thy sails warily,

Tempests will come;

Steer thy course steadily;

Christian, steer home!

CAROLINE ANNE SOUTHEY, Mariner's Hymn.

8 Be prudent, and if you hear, . . . some insult or some threat, . . . have the appearance of not hearing it.

GEORGE SAND, Handsome Lawrence. Ch. 2.

9 Wake not a sleeping wolf. To wake a wolf is as bad as to smell a fox.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 173.
See also under WOLF.

10 Watch thou and wake when others be asleep.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 249.

11 My ventures are not in one bottom trusted, Nor to one place.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 1, l. 42. (1596)

Venture not all in one bottom.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 95. (1639)

12 What need the bridge much broader than the flood?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act i, sc. 1, l. 318.

13 We do as we can, since we can't do as we would. (Ut quimus quando ut volumus non licet.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 815. (Act iv, sc. 5.) Referred to as an old saying.

14 Hug the shore, and let the oar-blade graze the rocks on the left; let others keep to the deep! (Litus ama et læva stringat sine pal-mula cautes; Altum alii teneant.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. v, l. 163.

Great Estates may venture more,
But little Boats must keep near Shore.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1751.

VII—Prudence: Its Virtues

15 Know, one false step is ne'er retriev'd,
And be with caution bold.

THOMAS GRAY, On the Death of a Favourite Cat, l. 38.

16 Man never heeds enough from hour to hour what he should shun. (Quid quisque vitet, numquam homini satis Cautum est in horas.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 13, l. 13.

17 A prudence undeceiving, undeceived,
That nor too little, nor too much believed,
That scorned unjust Suspicion's coward fear,
And, without weakness, knew to be sincere.

GEORGE LYTTTELTON, Monody to the Memory of Lady Lyttelton.

18 The man within the coach that sits,
And to another's skill submits,
Is safer much (whate'er arrives),
And warmer too, than he that drives.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii, l. 137.

19 He is free from danger who, even when he is safe, is on his guard. (Caret periculo, qui etiam cum est tutus cavet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 127.

It is the part of a fool to give counsel to others, but himself not to be on his guard. (Sibi non cavere, et aliis consilium dare, Stultum esse.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 9, l. 1.

20 Who fears all snares falls into none. (Qui omnes insidias timet, in nullas incidit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 585.

1 You will conquer more surely by prudence than by passion. (Consilio melius vincas quam iracundia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 107.

We accomplish more by prudence than by force. (Plura consilio quam vi perficimus.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. ii, sec. 26.

2 An ounce of prudence is worth a pound of gold.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 15.

3 Who never wins can rarely lose,
Who never climbs as rarely falls.

WHITTIER, To James T. Fields. St. 13.

4 It is better to walk than to run; it is better to stand than to walk; it is better to sit than to stand; it is better to lie than to sit.

UNKNOWN. A Hindu proverb.

VIII—Prudence: Its Faults

5 Prudence is a rich, ugly old maid, courted by Incapacity.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

6 The prudent man may direct a state; but it is the enthusiast who regenerates it, or ruins.

BULWER-LYTTON, Rienzi. Bk. i, ch. 8.

7 Observe the prudent; they in silence sit,
Display no learning, and affect no wit;
They hazard nothing, nothing they assume,
But know the useful art of acting dumb.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales: The Patron, l. 315.

Too eager caution shows some danger's near,
The bully's bluster proves the coward's fear.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Parish Register. Pt. i.

8 Carefulness bringeth age before the time.

APOCRYPHA: Ecclesiasticus, xxx, 24.

9 The world is filled with the proverbs and acts and winkings of a base prudence; . . . a prudence which adores the Rule of Three, which never subscribes, which never gives, which seldom lends, and asks but one question of any project,—Will it bake bread?

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence. See also PROVERBS: DEFINITIONS.

10 Prudence keeps life safe, but does not often make it happy.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 57.

11 He could pledge himself to eternity, but shrank from being bound to eleven o'clock on the morrow morning.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Sandra Belloni. Ch. 20.

12 Refusing to accept as great a share
Of hazard as of honour.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 452.

13 He that is overcautious will accomplish little. (Wer gar zu viel bedenkt, wird wenig leisten.)

SCHILLER, Wilhelm Tell. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 72.

See also under TIMIDITY.

14 It is by the goodness of God that in our country we have those three unspeakably precious things: freedom of speech, freedom of conscience, and the prudence never to practice either.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

IX—Prudence and Forethought

15 Advisement is good before the need.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 343.

Let this proverb a lore unto you be,
"Too late y-were, quod Beauty, when it past."

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 398.

16 That should be considered long which can be decided but once. (Deliberandum est diu, quod statuendum semel.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 153.

When any great design thou dost intend,
Think on the means, the manner, and the end.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Of Prudence.

17 Looking before and after.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 37.

Shakespeare says, we are creatures that look before and after, the more surprising that we do not look round a little and see what is passing under our very eyes.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 1.

18 Ay, and you had any eye behind you, you might see more detraction at your heels than fortunes before you.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 148.

19 I have anticipated all things, and traversed them in thought. (Omnia præcepi atque animo mecum ante peregi.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 105.

PRUDERY

20 You have only, when before your glass, to keep pronouncing to yourself nimini-pimini; the lips cannot help taking their plie.

JOHN BURGOYNE, The Heiress. Act iii, sc. 2.

Father is rather vulgar, my dear. The word Papa, besides, gives a very pretty form to the lips. Papa, potatoes, poultry, prunes, and prism are all very good words for the lips; especially prunes and prism. You will find it serviceable, in the formation of a demeanour, if you sometimes say to yourself in company—on entering a room, for instance—Papa, potatoes, poultry, prunes and prism, prunes and prism.

THOMAS MOORE, We May Roam Through This World.

5 Hence, far hence, ye prudes! (Procul hinc, procul este, severæ!)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 1, l. 3.

6 What is Prudery? 'Tis a beldam, Seen with Wit and Beauty seldom. . . .

'Tis a virgin hard of feature,
Old, and void of all good-nature;
Lean and fretful; would seem wise,
Yet plays the fool before she dies.

POPE, Answer to Mrs. Howe.

7 Comstockery is the world's standing joke at the expense of the United States. It confirms the deep-seated conviction of the Old World that America is a provincial place, a second-rate town civilization, after all.

BERNARD SHAW, Interview, N. Y. Times, 26 Sept., 1905, commenting upon the action of the New York Public Library in relegating his Man and Superman to the reserved shelves, an action which he thought Anthony Comstock had inspired. It was Comstock who had complained to the police of Shaw's play, Mrs. Warren's Profession, in 1904, and caused it to be closed.

Our art is all a mockery Of Bokery-Comstockery.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Wail. (N. Y. Times, 11 Dec., 1906.) "Bokery" is a reference to Edward Bok, then editor of The Ladies' Home Journal. Anthony Comstock was the New York head of the Society for the Suppression of Vice.

PUBLICITY

9 The great art in writing advertisements is the finding out a proper method to catch the reader's eye; without which a good thing may pass over unobserved, or be lost among commissions of bankrupt.

ADDISON, The Tatler. No. 224.

Advertisements are of great use to the vulgar. First of all, as they are instruments of ambition. A man that is by no means big enough for the Gazette, may easily creep into the advertisements; by which means we often see an apothecary in the same paper of news with a plenipotentiary, or a running footman with an ambassador.

ADDISON, The Tatler. No. 224.

10 As gaslight is found to be the best nocturnal police, so the universe protects itself by pitiless publicity.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship. The phrase, "Pitiless publicity," was popularized by Woodrow Wilson.

11 In every field of human endeavor, he that is first must perpetually live in the white light of publicity.

THEODORE F. MACMANUS, The Penalty of Leadership. (Sat. Eve. Post, 2 Jan., 1915.)

12 Great is advertisement with little men.

OWEN SEAMAN, Ode to Spring in the Metropolis.

PUN

I—Puns: Their Faults and Virtues

13 The seeds of punning are in the minds of all men, and though they may be subdued by reason, reflection, and good sense, they will be very apt to shoot up in the greatest genius.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 61.

A turn for punning, call it Attic salt.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 68.

14 But still a pun I do detest,
'Tis such a paltry, humbug jest;
They who've least wit can make them best.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto xxvi.

15 A man who could make so vile a pun would not scruple to pick a pocket.

JOHN DENNIS. (Gentleman's Magazine. Vol. li, p. 324.)

The critic [Dennis] immediately started up and left the room, swearing that any man who could make such an execrable pun would pick his pocket.

UNKNOWN, Article in The Public Advertiser, London, 12 Jan., 1779.

And however our Dennises take offence,
A double meaning shows double sense;
And if proverbs tell truth, A double tooth
Is Wisdom's adopted dwelling.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Honey-moon, l. 1881.

16 Rare compound of oddity, frolic, and fun!
Who relish'd a joke, and rejoic'd in a pun.

GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 149.

1 People that make puns are like wanton boys that put coppers on the railroad tracks.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1.

2 My little dears, who learn to read,
Pray early learn to shun

That very foolish thing indeed

The people call a PUN.

THEODORE EDWARD HOOK, Cautionary Verses to Youth of Both Sexes.

3 A pun is a noble thing per se. O never bring it in as an accessory! . . . it fills the mind; it is as perfect as a sonnet; better.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to S. T. Coleridge.

4 It often happens a bad pun
Goes farther than a better one.

W. S. LANDOR, Last Fruit Off an Old Tree. No. 92.

5 How every fool can play upon the word!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 48.

6 I have mentioned puns. They are, I believe, what I have denominated them—the wit of words. They are exactly the same to words which wit is to ideas, and consist in the sudden discovery of relations in language.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy. Lecture 10.

Puns are in very bad repute. . . . The wit of words is so miserably inferior to the wit of ideas that it is very deservedly driven out of good company.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy.

7 I am thankful that my name is obnoxious to no pun.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Egotisms.

Pun-provoking thyme.

SHENSTONE, The Schoolmistress. St. 11.

II—Puns: A Few Examples

8 Mr. Hay was rather hazy and Mr. Wu was rather wozy.

ALVEY A. ADEE, Referring to conference between John Hay and Wu Ting-fang during the Boxer uprising.

9 The Window has Four Little Panes;
But One have I—

The Window Panes are in its Sash;
I Wonder Why!

GELETT BURGESS, Panes.

10 In all quarters of Paris, and to every store, While McFlimsey in vain stormed, scolded,
and swore,
They footed the streets, and he footed the bills.

WILLIAM ALLEN BUTLER, Nothing to Wear.

11 There are months which nature grows more merry in—

March has its hares, and May must have its heroine.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 102.

12 How funny it'll seem to come out among the people who walk with their heads downwards. The antipathies, I think.

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, p. 5.

13 Whoever weds the young lawyer at C.

Will surely have prospects most cheering,
For what must his person and intellect be,
When even his name is "N. Deering"?

LYDIA MARIA CHILD, On Nathaniel Deering Moving to Canaan.

14 So stooping down, as needs he must

Who cannot sit upright,

He grasped the mane with both his hands,
And eke with all his might.

WILLIAM COWPER, John Gilpin.

15 Burgoyne, alas, unknowing future fates,
Could force his way through woods, but not through Gates.

DAVID EDWARDS, On Burgoyne's Surrender.
General Gates was the commander of the American army.

The very day that General Lee,
Flower of Southern chivalry,
Baffled and beaten, backward reeled
From a stubborn Meade and a barren field.

BRET HARTE, John Burns of Gettysburg.
General Meade was in command of the Union forces.

16 We found on his nails, which were taper,
What is frequent in tapers,—that's wax.

BRET HARTE, Plain Language From Truthful James.

17 My sense of sight is very keen,

My sense of hearing weak.

One time I saw a mountain pass,
But could not hear its peak.

OLIVER HERFORD, My Sense of Sight.

18 Ben Battle was a soldier bold,

And used to war's alarms;

But a cannon-ball took off his legs,
So he laid down his arms.

THOMAS HOOD, Faithless Nelly Gray.

For here I leave my second leg,
And the Forty-second Foot!

THOMAS HOOD, Faithless Nelly Gray.

19 His death, which happen'd in his berth,
At forty-odd befell;

They went and told the sexton, and
The sexton toll'd the bell.

THOMAS HOOD, Faithless Sally Brown.

1 Upon your cheek I may not speak,
Nor on your lip be warm,
I must be wise about your eyes,
And formal with your form.
THOMAS HOOD, I'm Not a Single Man.

2 Heaven never heard his cry, nor did
The ocean heed his caul.
THOMAS HOOD, The Sea Spell.

3 The famous Gate of Billing
That does not lead to cooing.
THOMAS HOOD, The Turtles.

4 Phœbus, sitting one day in a laurel-tree's shade,
Was reminded of Daphne, of whom it was made,
For the god being one day too warm in his wooling,
She took to the tree to escape his pursuing;
Be the cause what it might, from his offers
she shrunk,
And, Ginevra-like, shut herself up in a trunk.
J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 1.

5 In Ethics—'tis you that can check,
In a minute, their doubts and their quarrels;
Oh! show but that mole on your neck,
And 'twill soon put an end to their morals.
THOMAS MOORE, To Fanny.

6 When Dido found Æneas would not come,
She mourned in silence, and was Di-do-dumb.
RICHARD PORSON, Facetiæ Cantabrigienses.
Porson had boasted that he could rhyme on any subject, and being asked to rhyme upon the three Latin gerunds, which, in the old Eton Latin grammar, are called -di, -do,
-dum, produced the couplet given above.

7 We wanted Li Wing But we winged Willie
Wong,
A sad but excusable Slip of the tong.
KEITH PRESTON, Lapsus Linguae.

8 Where the Rudyards cease from Kipling
And the Haggards ride no more.

Old Testament: Genesis, iv, 13.

12 It is grievous to be caught. (Deprendi mis-erum est.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 2, l. 134.

13 The power of punishment is to silence, not to confute.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. ix, p. 499.

14 The object of punishment is, prevention from evil; it never can be made impulsive to good.

HORACE MANN, Lectures and Reports on Education. Lecture 7.

Men are not hanged for stealing horses, but that horses may not be stolen.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, 229.

The best of us being unfit to die, what an inexpressible absurdity to put the worst to death!

HAWTHORNE, Journals, 13 Oct., 1851.

II—Punishment: Just and Unjust

15 See they suffer death,
But in their deaths remember they are men;
Strain not the laws to make their tortures grievous.

ADDISON, Cato. Act iii, sc. 5.

16 Severity breedeth fear, but roughness breedeth hate. Even reproofs from authority ought to be grave, and not taunting.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Great Place.

17 Let the punishment be equal with the offence. (Noxiæ poena par esto.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, ch. 20.

Care should be taken that the punishment does not exceed the guilt. (Cavendum est ne major poena quam culpa sit.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 25, sec. 89.

Let us have a system which assigns just penalties to offenses, lest you flay with the terrible scourge what calls only for the strap. (Adsit Regula, pec-catis quæ poenas innoget æquas, Ne scutica dig-num horribili sectere flagello.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 117.

The punishment, methinks, exceeds the offense.
CHARLES I, a soldier having invoked a blessing on him after having been struck by an officer. (HUME, History of England. Ch. 22.)

My object all sublime
I shall achieve in time—
To let the punishment fit the crime—
The punishment fit the crime.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii.

18 Anger is to be very specially avoided in inflicting punishment. (Prohibenda autem maxime est ira in puniendo.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 25, sec. 89.

It is to be desired that those who are at the head of the commonwealth be like the laws, which are moved to punish, not by anger, but by justice.

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 25, sec. 89.

But he is the peer of the gods whom reason, not anger, animates, and who, weighing the guilt, can with deliberation balance the punishment. (Dis proximus ille, Quem ratio, non ira movet, qui facta rependens Consilio punire potest.)

CLAUDIAN, Panegyricus Dictus Manlio Theodoro Consuli, l. 227.

He, who has committed a fault, is to be corrected both by advice and by force, kindly and harshly, and to be made better for himself as well as for another, not without chastisement, but without passion.

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. i, sec. 14.

1 Tell them the men that placed him here
Are friends unto the times;

But at a loss to find his guilt,
They can't commit his crimes.

DEFOE, Hymn to the Pillory. Conclusion.

2 In all cases where two have joined to commit an offence, punish one of the two lightly.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Richard Feverel. Ch. 27.

3 Let the ruler be slow to punish, swift to reward. (Sed piger ad poenas princeps, ad præmia velox.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 123.

4 Let those who have deserved their punishment, bear it patiently. (Æquo animo poenam, qui meruere, ferunt.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 7, l. 12.

Every one should bear patiently the results of his own conduct. (Sua quisque exempla debet æquo animo pati.)

PLÆDRUS, Bk. i, fab. 26, l. 12.

5 It is a smaller thing to suffer punishment than to have deserved it. . . . The punishment can be removed, the fault will remain forever. (Estque pati poenam, quam meruisse, minus. . . . Poena potest demi, culpa perennis erit.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 62.

Patiently must we bear whatever suffering is our desert; the punishment which comes without deserving, comes as a matter for bemoaning. (Leniter, ex merito quidquid patiari, ferendum est; Quæ venit indigno poena, dolenda venit.)

OVID, Heroides. Eleg. v, l. 7.

6 But if the first Eve
Hard doom did receive,
When only one apple had she,
What a punishment new
Shall be found out for you,
Who tasting have robb'd the whole tree?

POPE, To Lady Mary Wortley Montagu.

7 The time that precedes punishment is the severest part of it. (Quod antecedit tempus, maxima venturi supplicii pars est.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. ii, sec. 5.

8 Bid that welcome
Which comes to punish us, and we punish it
Seeming to bear it lightly.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv, sc. 14, l. 36.

Let death come now! 'tis right to die!

Right to be punished!

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes.

9 There needeth not the hell that bigots frame
To punish those who err: Earth in itself
Contains at once the evil and the cure;
And all-sufficing Nature can chastise
Those who transgress her law,—she only knows

How justly to proportion to the fault
The punishment it merits.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto iii, l. 79.

10 That's the penalty we have to pay for our acts of foolishness,—someone else always suffers for them.

ALFRED SUTRO, The Perfect Lover. Act ii.

11 Every great example of punishment has in it some injustice, but the suffering individual is compensated by the public good. (Habet aliquid ex iniquo omne magnum exemplum, quod contra singulos, utilitate publica rependitus.)

12 The sword of heaven is not in haste to smite,
Nor yet doth linger.

DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xxii, l. 16. (Cary, tr.)

13 There is no den in the wide world to hide a rogue. Commit a crime, and the earth is made of glass. . . . The laws and substances of nature become penalties to the thief.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

Crime and punishment grow out of one stem.
Punishment is a fruit that unsuspected ripens within the flower of the pleasure which concealed it.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

That is the bitterest of all,—to wear the yoke of our own wrong-doing.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Bk. v, ch. 36.

4 Good luck frees many men from punishment, but no man from fear. (Multos fortuna liberat poena, metu neminem.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvii, 15.

5 Crime can never go unpunished, since the punishment of crime lies in the crime itself. (Nec ullum scelus . . . in punitum est, quoniam sceleris in scelere supplicium est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvii, 14.

The greatest chastisement that a man may receive who hath outraged another, is to have done the outrage; and there is no man who is so rudely punished as he that is subject to the whip of his own repentance.

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 26.

Disgrace does not consist in the punishment, but in the crime. (Non nella pena, Nell' delitto è la infamia.)

ALFIERI, Antigone. Act i, sc. 3.

For crime is all the shame of punishment.

DANIEL DEFOE, Hymn to the Pillory.

6 There is no greater punishment for vice than that it is dissatisfied with itself and its deeds. (Nec ulla major poena nequitiae est quam quod sibi ac suis displicet.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xlii, sec. 2.

7 Even if at first we hide the perjury, yet in the end comes Punishment on noiseless feet. (Si quis primo perjuriam celat, Sera tamen tacitis Poena venit pedibus.)

TIBULLUS, Odes. Bk. i, ode 9, l. 3.

8 Each of us suffers his own Spirit. (Quisquis suos patimur Manes.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 743.

9 The soul itself its awful witness is.
Say not in evil doing, "No one sees."

J. G. WHITTIER, The Inward Judge.

IV—Punishment: Its Forms

10 Some have been beaten till they know
What wood a cudgel's of by th' blow:

Some kick'd until they can feel whether
A shoe be Spanish or neat's leather.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 1, l. 221.

11 Forty stripes save one.

New Testament: II Corinthians, xi, 24.

A rod is for the back of him that is void of understanding.

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 13.

A whip for the horse, a bridle for the ass, and a rod for the fool's back.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 3.

Judgments are prepared for scorers, and stripes for the back of fools.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xix, 29.

12 'Tis I that call, remember Milo's end,
Wedged in that timber which he strove to rend.

WENTWORTH DILLON, Essay on Translated Verse.

13 It's very hard to lose your cash,
But harder to be shot.

O. W. HOLMES, The Music Grinders.

14 The greatest punishment is to be despised by your neighbors, the world, and members of your family.

E. W. HOWE, Howe's Monthly.

15 Just prophet, let the damn'd one dwell
Full in the sight of Paradise,
Beholding heaven and feeling hell.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire Worshippers, l. 1028.

16 Say-all-you-know shall go with clouted head,
Say-nought-at-all is beaten.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: The Lovers of Gudrun, l. 121.

17 My father hath chastised you with whips,
but I will chastise you with scorpions.

Old Testament: I Kings, xii, 11; II Chronicles, x, 14.

18 Racks, gibbets, halters were their arguments.

JOHN OLDHAM, Satires upon the Jesuits: No. 1, Garnet's Ghost.

19 For thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxv, 22.

20 Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire, and stew'd in brine,
Smarting in lingering pickle.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 65.

For him at least I have a rod in pickle.

KANE O'HARA, Midas. Act ii, sc. 1.

Something lingering, with boiling oil in it, I fancy.
Something of that sort. I think boiling oil occurs in it, but I'm not sure, I know it's something humorous, but lingering, with either boiling oil or melted lead.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii.

1 Off with his guilty head!

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 5, l. 3.

Off with his head—so much for Buckingham!

CIBBER, Richard III (altered). Act iv, sc. 3.

Your great goodness, out of holy pity,

Absolved him with an axe.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 263.

2 Pinch the maids as blue as bilberry.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Act v, sc. 5, l. 49.

Some of us will smart for it.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 1, l. 109.

3 You will have words for your punishment, but for me there will be blows. (Tibi erunt parata verba, huic homini verbera.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 356. (Act ii, sc. 3.)

4 Poor Floyd Ireson, for his hard heart,
Tarred and feathered and carried in a cart
By the women of Marblehead!

WHITTIER, Skipper Ireson's Ride.

PURITANS

5 Round-heads and wooden-shoes are standing-jokes.

ADDISON, The Drummer: Prologue.

6 The Puritan has been made a popular scape-goat, and the word has become a catch-basin for undeserved reproaches.

SLAS BENT, Justice O. W. Holmes, p. 54.

7 It never frightened a Puritan when you bade him stand still and listen to the speech of God. His closet and his church were full of the reverberations of the awful, gracious, beautiful voice for which he listened.

PHILLIPS BROOKS, Sermons: The Seriousness of Life.

He made little, too little of sacraments and priests, because God was so intensely real to him. What should he do with lenses who stood thus full in the torrent of the sunshine.

PHILLIPS BROOKS, Sermons: The Seriousness of Life.

8 A sect, whose chief devotion lies
In odd perverse antipathies;

In falling out with that or this,
And finding somewhat still amiss;
More peevish, cross, and splenetic,
Than dog distract, or monkey sick:
That with more care keep holy-day
The wrong, than others the right way;

Compound for sins they are inclin'd to,
By damning those they have no mind to:
Still so perverse and opposite,
As if they worshipp'd God for spite.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 207.

9 A puritan is a person who pours righteous indignation into the wrong things.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Interview, N. Y. Times, 21 Nov., 1930.

10 There was a State without kings or nobles; there was a church without a bishop; there was a people governed by grave magistrates which it had elected, and equal laws which it had framed.

RUFUS CHOATE, Speech, before the New England Society, 22 Dec., 1843.

It [Calvinism] established a religion without a prelate, a government without a king.

GEORGE BANCROFT, History of the United States. Vol iii, ch. 6.

Oh, we are weary pilgrims; to this wilderness we bring

A Church without a bishop, a State without a King.

UNKNOWN, The Puritan's Mistake.

11 'Twas founded be th' Puritans to give thanks f'r bein' presarved fr'm the Indyan, an' we keep it to give thanks we are presarved fr'm
th' Puritans.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Thanksgiving.

12 The Puritan through Life's sweet garden goes,
He plucks the thorn and casts away the rose,
And thinks to please by this peculiar whim,
The God who fashioned it and gave it him.

KENNETH HARE, Epigram.

13 My Fathers and Brethren, this is never to be forgotten that New England is originally a plantation of religion, not a plantation of trade.

JOHN HIGGINSON, Election Sermon, 27 May, 1663.

14 He had stiff knees, the Puritan,
That were not good at bending.

J. R. LOWELL, An Interview with Miles Standish. St. 12.

15 Puritanism, believing itself quick with the seed of religious liberty, laid, without knowing it, the egg of democracy.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: New England Two Centuries Ago.

Puritanism meant something when Captain Hodgson, riding out to battle through the morning mist, turns over the command of his troop to a lieutenant, and stays to hear the prayer of a cornet, there was "so much of God in it."

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: New England Two Centuries Ago.

1 The Puritan hated bear-baiting, not because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the spectators.

MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. i, ch. 2. Even bear-baiting was esteemed heathenish and unchristian: the sport of it, not the inhumanity, gave offence.

HUME, History of England. Vol. i, ch. 62.

2 As Puritans they prominently wax,
And none more kindly gives and takes hard knocks.

Strong psalmic chanting, like to nasal cocks,
They join to thunderings of their hearty thwacks.

But naughtiness, with hoggerly, not lacks.

GEORGE MEREDITH, A Certain People.

3 What the Puritans gave the world was not thought, but action.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, 21 Dec., 1855.

The Puritan did not stop to think; he recognized God in his soul, and acted.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech. 18 Dec., 1859.

4 The Puritan was not a man of speculation. He originated nothing. His principles are to be found broadcast in the centuries behind him. His speculations were all old. . . . The distinction between his case and that of others was simply that he practised what he believed.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, The Puritan Principle.

5 Old times were changed, old manners gone;
A stranger filled the Stuarts' throne;
The bigots of the iron time
Had called his harmless art a crime.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel: Introduction.

6 Maria: Marry, sir, sometimes he is a kind of puritan.

Sir Andrew: O, if I thought that, I 'ld beat him like a dog!

Maria: What, for being a puritan?

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 151.

But one puritan amongst them, and he sings psalms to hornpipes.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 45.

7 Strait-laced, but all-too-full in bud
For puritanic stays.

TENNYSON, The Talking Oak, l. 59.

PURITY

8 Of the nature of the sun, which passeth through pollutions, and itself remains as pure as before.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

Yes—for a spirit, pure as hers,
Is always pure, even while it errs;
As sunshine, broken in the rill,
Though turned astray, is sunshine still.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Worshippers.

9 The pure soul
Shall mount on native wings, disdaining little sport,
And cut a path into the heaven of glory,
Leaving a track of light for men to wonder at.

WILLIAM BLAKE, King Edward the Third.

10 There's a woman like a dew-drop,
She's so purer than the purest.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Blot in the 'Scutcheon. Act i, sc. 3.

As pure as a pearl,
And as perfect: a noble and innocent girl.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto vi, st. 16.

11 Brief, brave, and glorious was his young career. . . . He had kept
The whiteness of his soul, and thus men o'er him wept.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 57.

The purity of his life was the brightness of his glory.

SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH, of Henry Grattan.

12 The purest soul that e'er was sent
Into a clayey tenement.

THOMAS CAREW, Epitaph on the Lady Mary Villiers.

There fled the purest soul that ever dwelt
In mortal clay.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, The Regicide. Act v, sc. 8.

A purer soul and one more like yourselves.
Ne'er entered at the golden gates of bliss.

D. G. ROSSETTI, Lady Jane Grey. Act i, sc. 1.

13 The blossoms opening to the day,
The dews of heaven refined,

Could nought of purity display
To emulate his mind.

GOLDSMITH, A Ballad. (Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 8.)

14 Purity is the feminine, Truth the masculine, of Honour.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. Pt. i. Purity of mind and conduct is the first glory of a woman.

MADAME DE STAËL, Germany. Pt. iii, ch. 19.

15 To doubt her pureness were to want a heart.
TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1366.

16 Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 8.

Blest are the pure in heart,
For they shall see our God.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: The Purification.

Still to the lowly soul
He doth Himself impart,
And for His cradle and His throne
Chooseth the pure in heart.
JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: The Purification.

For in heaven there's a lodge, and St. Peter keeps the door,
And none can enter in but those that are pure.
UNKNOWN, The Masonic Hymn. Stated by
J. H. Dixon (Ancient Poems, Percy Society, 1846) to be "a very ancient production."

1
Like the stain'd web that whitens in the sun,
Grow pure by being purely shone upon.
THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet of Khorassan.

2
Unto the pure all things are pure.
New Testament: Titus, i, 15.

With the pure thou wilt show thyself pure.
Old Testament: II Samuel, xxii, 27; Psalms, xviii, 26.

The better a man is, the less ready is he to suspect dishonesty in others. (Ut quisque est vir optimus, ita difficillime esse alios improbos suspicatur.)
CICERO, Epistolæ ad Quintum Fratrem. Bk. i, epis. 1, sec. 4.

3
The stream is always purer at its source.
(Les choses valent toujours mieux dans leur source.)
PASCAL, Lettres Provinciales, iv.

What will the stream become in its long course,
Since 'tis so dark and turbid at the source?
(Qual diverra quel fiume
Nel lungo suo cammino,
Se al fonte ancor vicino
E torbido così?)
METASTASIO, Morte d'Abele, i.

4
My good blade carves the casques of men,
My tough lance thrusteth sure,
My strength is as the strength of ten,
Because my heart is pure.
TENNYSON, Sir Galahad, l. 1.

Whose life was like the violet sweet,
As climbing jasmine pure.
WORDSWORTH, Elegiac Stanzas.

PURPOSE

6
I live for those who love me, for those who know me true;
For the heaven that smiles above me, and awaits my spirit too;
For the cause that lacks assistance, for the wrong that needs resistance,
For the future in the distance, and the good that I can do.
G. LINNÆUS BANKS. My Aim.

7
Never ascribe to an opponent motives meaner than your own.

J. M. BARRIE, Rectorial Address. St. Andrew's,
3 May, 1922.

8
The aim, if reached or not, makes great the
life;
Try to be Shakespeare, leave the rest to fate!
ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

Greatly begin! Though thou have time
But for a line, be that sublime—
Not failure, but low aim is crime.
J. R. LOWELL, For an Autograph.

9
Better have failed in the high aim, as I,
Than vulgarly in the low aim succeed,—
As, God be thanked! I do not.
ROBERT BROWNING, The Inn Album. Pt. iv, l.
450.

One great aim like a guiding star, above.
ROBERT BROWNING, Colombe's Birthday. Pt.
ii, l. 215.

Who aimeth at the sky,
Shoots higher much than he that means a tree.

That low man seeks a little thing to do,
Sees it and does it:
This high man, with a great thing to pursue,
Dies ere he knows it.
This low man goes on adding one to one,
His hundred's soon hit:
This high man, aiming at a million,
Misses an unit.

But when the act comes, stands for what 'tis
worth.
ROBERT BROWNING, Luria. Act iii.

12
A man without a purpose is soon down at zero. Better to have a bad purpose than no purpose at all.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Remark, to Churton Collins.
What makes life dreary is the want of motive.
GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Bk. viii, ch. 65.
Purpose is what gives life a meaning.

C. H. PARKHURST, Sermons: Pattern in the Mount.

13
Each natural agent works but to this end,—
To render that it works on like itself.
CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act iii, sc. 1.

As lordes do, when they will have their will.
CHAUCER, The Clerkes Tale, l. 524.

2 It was a favourite remark of the late Mr. Whitbread's that no man does anything from a single motive.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 11.

3 The one prudence in life is concentration; the one evil is dissipation: and it makes no difference whether our dissipations are coarse or fine. . . . Everything is good which takes away one plaything and delusion more, and drives us home to add one stroke of faithful work.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power.

4 We aim above the mark to hit the mark. Every act hath some falsehood or exaggeration in it.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

12 As cross as two sticks.

SCOTT, Journal, 2 Nov., 1831.

She scolded her maid and was as cross as two sticks.

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Ch. 33.

13 And each upon his rival glared,
With foot advanced, and blade half bared.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto ii, st. 34.

Quarrelers do not live long.

SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 8.

14 If you'll patch a quarrel.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 52.

15 O sir, we quarrel in print, by the book; as you have books for good manners: I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort Courteous; the second, the Quip Modest; the third, the Reply Churlish; the fourth, the Reproof Valiant; the fifth, the Countercheck Quarrelsome; the sixth, the Lie with Circumstance; the seventh, the Lie Direct. All these you may avoid but the Lie Direct; and you may avoid that too, with an If. . . . Your If is the only peace-maker; much virtue in If.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 4, l. 94.

16 As quarrelous as the weasel.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 162.

Carp and quarrel.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 222.

He is a devil in private brawls: souls and bodies hath he divorced three. . . . Hob, nob, is his word; give 't or take 't.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 259.

17 Beware

Of entrance to a quarrel; but being in,
Bear 't that the opposed may beware of thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 65.

18 No quarrel, but a slight contention.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 2, l. 6.

19 In a false quarrel there is no true valour.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 1, l. 120.

20 The quarrel is a very pretty quarrel as it stands; we should only spoil it by trying to explain it.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iv, sc. 3.

21 For souls in growth, great quarrels are great emancipations.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts.

22 It takes two to make a quarrel. ('Εμοί γὰρ οὐ πρόσσει ταῦτα.)

SOCRATES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Bk. ii, sec. 36.)

A quarrel is quickly settled when deserted by one party: there is no battle unless there be two. (Cedit statim simulatas, ab altera parte deserta; nisi pariter, non pugnans.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 34.

1 Some strand of our own misdoing is involved in every quarrel.

R. L. STEVENSON, Prince Otto.

2 There is no such test of a man's superiority of character as in the well-conducting of an unavoidable quarrel.

SIR HENRY TAYLOR, The Statesman, p. 101.

3 Na, na, abide, we have a crow to pull.

UNKNOWN, Towneley Plays, xviii. (c. 1410)

I've a crow to pluck wi' ye.

JOHN WILSON, The Projectors. Act v. (1665)

4 Lord Chatham, with his sword undrawn,
Is waiting for Sir Richard Strachan;
Sir Richard, longing to be at 'em,
Is waiting for the Earl of Chatham.

UNKNOWN, Epigram. (Morning Chronicle, London, 1809.) See under Chatham, Dict. Nat. Biog., for another version. The reference is to the recriminations following the failure of the expedition against Walcheren in 1809. Admiral Strachan referred to Pitt as "the late Earl of Chatham," because of his dilatoriness.

II—Quarreling: Its Folly

5 Those who in quarrels interpose,
Must often wipe a bloody nose.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, No. 34; FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1740.

So when two dogs are fighting in the streets,
When a third dog one of the two dogs meets:
With angry teeth he bites him to the bone,
And this dog smarts for what that dog has done.

FIELDING, Tom Thumb the Great. Act i, sc. 5, l. 55.

Thus when a barber and collier fight,
The barber beats the luckless collier—white;
The dusty collier heaves his ponderous sack,
And, big with vengeance, beats the barber—black.

In comes the brick-dust man, with grime o'er-spread,

And beats the collier and the barber—red;
Black, red, and white, in various clouds are toss'd,
And in the dust they raise the combatants are lost.

CHRISTOPHER SMART, Soliloquy of the Princess Periwinkle in A Trip to Cambridge.

We must have bloody noses and cracked crowns.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 96.

6 Dissensions, like small streams, are first begun,

Scarce seen they rise, but gather as they run:
So lines that from their parallel decline,

More they proceed the more they still dis-join.

GARTH, The Dispensary. Canto viii, l. 184.

7 But curb thou the high spirit in thy breast,
For gentle ways are best, and keep aloof
From sharp contentions.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 317. (Bryant, tr.)

This is no time nor fitting place to mar
The mirthful meeting with a wordy war.

BYRON, Lara. Canto i, st. 23.

8 He wrangles about goat's wool, and donning his armor, fights for trifles. (Rixatur de lana sæpe caprina, Propugnat nugis armatus.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 15. The question of whether the hair of goats could be called lana, or wool, was proverbial for a matter of no importance.

Thou! why, thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard than thou hast: thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes: what eye but such an eye would spy out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 18.

9 And bitter waxed the fray;
Brother with brother spake no word
When they met in the way.

JEAN INGELow, Strife and Peace.

10 And of their vain contest appear'd no end.

JOHN MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 1189.

11 But from sharp words and wits men pluck no fruit,
And gathering thorns they shake the tree at root.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

12 And musing on the little lives of men,
And how they mar this little by their feuds.

TENNYSON, Sea Dreams, l. 48.

QUEEN

13 Your queens Are generally prosperous in reigning.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 47.

14 I know that I have but the body of a weak and feeble woman; but I have the heart of a King, and of a King of England, too.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, to the troops assembled at Tilbury, in 1588, to oppose the Spanish Armada. (HUME, History of England.)

15 A queen devoid of beauty is not queen;
She needs the royalty of beauty's mien.

VICTOR HUGO, Evradnus, v.

16

Our queen,

The imperial jointress to this warlike state.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 8.

The fairest queen that ever king received.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 16.

She had all the royal makings of a queen;
As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown,
The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems
Laid nobly on her.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 87.

I would not be a queen For all the world.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 24.

A partial world will listen to my lays,
While Anna reigns, and sets a female name
Unrival'd in the glorious lists of fame.

YOUNG, The Force of Religion. Bk. i, l. 6.

With the selfsame sunlight shining upon her,
Shining down on her ringlets' sheen,
She is standing somewhere—she I shall honor,

She that I wait for, my queen, my queen!

UNKNOWN, My Queen.

QUESTION

To beg the question. (Petitio principii.)

ARISTOTLE, Topica, viii, 13. A logical fallacy, assuming a proposition which involves the conclusion. Its earliest known English use is in The Arte of Logicke, by an unknown author, 1584.

What song the Sirens sang, or what name Achilles assumed when he hid himself among the women, though puzzling questions, are not beyond all conjecture.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. v, sec. 4.

Mony e'en spiers the gat then ken right
weel.

SUSANNAH CENTILVRE, Woman Keeps a Secret. Act iii.

What sent the messengers to hell
Was asking what they knew full well.

SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 24.

Time has made this question without question.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes. No. iii, sec. 302.

A sovereign's ear ill brooks a subject's questioning.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Zapolya. Act i, sc. 1.

Perchance my too much questioning offends.

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto xviii, l. 6.

He that nothing questioneth, nothing learneth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2241.

Courage to ask questions; courage to expose our ignorance.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

Ask me no questions, and I'll tell you no fibs.
GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act iii.

Avoid a questioner, for such a man is also a tattler. (Perconcatorem fugito; nam gargulus idem est.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 69.

Questioning is not a mode of conversation among gentlemen.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (Boswell, Life, 1776.)

I keep six honest serving-men
(They taught me all I knew):

Their names are What and Why and When
And How and Where and Who.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Serving-Men.

Hard questions must have hard answers. (Tὰ ἀποκρίσεις ἀπόρους εἶναι.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Alexander. Ch. 64, sec. 4.

Hard are those questions;—answer harder still.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 1532.

That's a blazing strange answer.

DICKENS, A Tale of Two Cities. Bk. i, ch. 2.

But answer came there none.

SCOTT, Bridal of Triermain. Canto iii, st. 10.

I pause for a reply.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 36.

It is not every question that deserves an answer.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 581.

When anyone explains himself guardedly, nothing is more uncivil than to put a new
question.

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Hesperus. Ch. 3.

A question not to be asked.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 451.

How needless was it then to ask the question!
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act ii, sc.
1, l. 117.

That is not the question.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 227.

Questions are never indiscreet. Answers sometimes are.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act i.

The greatest men

May ask a foolish question, now and then.
JOHN WOLCOT, The Apple Dumpling and the King.

- 21 One must be a wise reader to quote wisely and well.
A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Quotation.
- 22 There is not less wit nor invention in applying rightly a thought one finds in a book, than in being the first author of that thought. Cardinal du Perron has been heard to say that the happy application of a verse of Virgil has deserved a talent.
PIERRE BAYLE, Dictionnaire. Vol. ii, p. 1077.

The art of quotation requires more delicacy in the practice than those conceive who can see nothing more in a quotation than an extract.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Quotation.

<sup>1</sup> 'Twas counted learning once, and wit,
To void but what some author writ,
And when men understood by rote,
By as implicit sense to quote.

All which he understood by rote,
And, as occasion serv'd, would quote.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 1, l. 135.

Perverts the Prophets, and purloins the Psalms.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 326.

<sup>2</sup> The wisdom of the wise, and the experience of ages, may be preserved by quotations.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Quotation.

The greater part of our writers, . . . have become so original, that no one cares to imitate them: and those who never quote in return are seldom quoted.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Quotation.

One may quote till one compiles.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Quotation.

<sup>3</sup> The adventitious beauty of poetry may be felt in the greater delight which a verse gives in happy quotation than in the poem.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Art.

<sup>4</sup> By necessity, by proclivity, and by delight, we all quote. We quote not only books and proverbs, but arts, sciences, religion, customs, and laws; nay, we quote temples and houses, tables and chairs by imitation.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

<sup>6</sup> We are as much informed of a writer's genius by what he selects as by what he originates. . . . A passage from one of the poets, well recited, borrows new interest from the rendering. As the journals say, "The italics are ours."

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

A great man quotes bravely, and will not draw on his invention when his memory serves him with a word as good.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

In his immense quotation and allusion we quickly cease to discriminate between what he quotes and what he invents. 'Tis all Plutarch by right of eminent domain, and all property vests in the emperor.

RAILROAD

7 The progress of invention is really a threat.
Whenever I see a railroad I look for a republic.

EMERSON, Journals, 1866.

8 These railroads—could but the whistle be made musical, and the rumble and the jar got rid of—are positively the greatest blessing that the ages have wrought out for us. They give us wings; they annihilate the toil and dust of pilgrimage; they spiritualize travel!

HAWTHORNE, House of the Seven Gables. Ch.
17.

9 Your railroad, when you come to understand it, is only a device for making the world smaller.

RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Pt. iv, ch. 17, sec.
35.

Going by railroad I do not consider as travelling at all; it is merely being "sent" to a place, and very little different from becoming a parcel.

JOHN RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Bk. iii, pt. 4,
ch. 17, sec. 24.

10 If railroads are not built, how shall we get to heaven in season? But if we stay at home and mind our business, who will want railroads?

We do not ride on the railroad; it rides upon us.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 2.

11 Commuter—one who spends his life
In riding to and from his wife;
A man who shaves and takes a train,
And then rides back to shave again.

11 St. Swinthin's day, if thou dost rain,

For forty days it will remain.

UNKNOWN, old adage concerning St. Swinthin's day, July 15. The French have a similar rhyme about St. Médard's day, June 8.

Now if on Swinthin's feast the welkin lours,
And every penthouse streams with hasty showers,
Twice twenty days shall clouds their fleeces drain
And wash the pavements with incessant rain.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 182.

O here, "St. Swinthin's, the 15 day, variable weather, for the most part rain," good! "for the most part rain." Why, it should rain forty days after, now, more or less."

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour. Act. i, sc. 1.

St. Swinthin is christening the apples.
HONE, Every Day Book. Vol. i, p. 960.

II—Rain: Description

12 We knew it would rain, for the poplars showed

The white of their leaves, the amber grain
Shrunk in the wind,—and the lightning now
Is tangled in tremulous skeins of rain.

T. B. ALDRICH, Before the Rain.

13 A little rain will fill
The lily's cup which hardly moistens the field.
EDWIN ARNOLD, Light of Asia. Bk. vi, l. 215.

14 The August cloud . . . suddenly
Melts into streams of rain.

BRYANT, Sella, l. 433.

15 Soon dries the rain-drop on the April leaf!
BULWER-LYTTON, New Timon. Pt. iii, sec. 3.

16 The raindrops' showery dance and rhythmic beat,
With tinkling of innumerable feet.

ABRAHAM COLES, The Microcosm Hearing.

17 The thirsty earth soaks up the rain,
And drinks, and gapes for drink again;
The plants suck in the earth, and are
With constant drinking fresh and fair.

ANACREON, Odes. No. 2. (Cowley, tr.)

18 Welcome falls the imprisoning rain—dear hermitage of nature.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses and Lectures: Literary Ethics.

19 Fall on me like a silent dew,
Or like those maiden showers,
Which, by the peep of day, do strew
A baptism o'er the flowers.

ROBERT HERRICK, To Music, to Becalme His Fever.

Like morning dew that in a pleasant shower
Drops pearls into the bosom of a flower.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Jealous Lovers.

20 How it pours, pours, pours,
In a never-ending sheet!

How it drives beneath the doors!

How it soaks the passer's feet!

How it rattles on the shutter!

How it rumples up the lawn!

How 'twill sigh, and moan, and mutter,

From darkness until dawn.

ROSSITER JOHNSON, Rhyme of the Rain.

21 And a thousand recollections
Weave their air-threads into woof,
As I listen to the patter

Of the rain upon the roof.

COATES KINNEY, Rain on the Roof.

The day is cold, and dark, and dreary;
It rains, and the wind is never weary;
The vine still clings to the mouldering wall,
But at every gust the dead leaves fall,
And the day is dark and dreary.
LONGFELLOW, The Rainy Day.

2
The ceaseless rain is falling fast,
And yonder gilded vane,
Immovable for three days past,
Points to the misty main.
LONGFELLOW, Travels by the Fireside. St. 1.

3
The gentleness of rain was in the wind.
SHELLEY, Fragment: Rain-Wind.
The good-will of the rain that loves all leaves.
MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

RAINBOW

4
And, lo! in the dark east, expanded high,
The rainbow brightens to the setting Sun!
JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, st. 30.

5
'Tis sweet to view on high
The rainbow, based on ocean, span the sky.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 122.

6
Triumphal arch, that fill'st the sky
When storms prepare to part,
I ask not proud Philosophy
To teach me what thou art.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, To the Rainbow. St. 1.

Still seem, as to my childhood's sight,
A midway station given
For happy spirits to alight
Betwixt the earth and heaven.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, To the Rainbow. St. 2.

The rainbow never tells me
That gust and storm are by;
Yet she is more convincing
Than philosophy.
EMILY DICKINSON, Further Poems. No. 48.

7
The sun athwart the cloud thought it no sin
To use my land to put his rainbows in.
EMERSON, Nature.

8
Over her hung a canopy of state,
Not of rich tissue, nor of spangled gold,
But of a substance, though not animate,
Yet of a heavenly and spiritual mould,
That only eyes of spirits might behold.
GILES FLETCHER, The Rainbow, l. 33.

9
I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.

Old Testament: Genesis, ix, 13.

God's glowing covenant.

HOSEA BALLOU, MS. Sermons.

Bright pledge of peace and sunshine! the sure tie
Of thy Lord's hand, the object of His eye!

When I behold thee, though my light be dim,
Distinct, and low, I can in thine see Him
Who looks upon thee from His glorious throne,
And minds the covenant between all and One.
HENRY VAUGHAN, The Rainbow.

10
God loves an idle rainbow
No less than labouring seas.
RALPH HODGSON, Poems, p. 59.

11
What skilful limner e'er would choose
To paint the rainbow's varying hues,
Unless to mortal it were given
To dip his brush in dyes of heaven?
SCOTT, Marmion. Canto vi, st. 5.

12
Mild arch of promise! on the evening sky
Thou shinest fair with many a lovely ray,
Each in the other melting.
SOUTHEY, The Evening Rainbow.

13
Whatso looks lovely
Is but the rainbow on life's weeping rain.
FRANCIS THOMPSON, Ode on the Setting Sun,
l. 192.

14
Hung on the shower that fronts the golden
West,
The rainbow bursts like magic on mine
eyes!

In hues of ancient promise there imprest;
Frail in its date, eternal in its guise.
CHARLES TENNYSON TURNER, The Rainbow.

15
My heart leaps up when I behold
A rainbow in the sky.
WORDSWORTH, My Heart Leaps Up.

Rain, rain, and sun! a rainbow in the sky!
TENNYSON, The Coming of Arthur, l. 401.

16
The rainbow comes and goes,
And lovely is the rose.
WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality. Pt.
ii.

17
Where the rainbow rests is a crock of gold.
UNKNOWN. (See Notes and Queries. Ser. i, vol.
2, p. 512.)

18
The rainbow in the morning
Is the shepherd's warning
To carry his coat on his back.
The rainbow at night
Is the shepherd's delight,
For then no coat will he lack.
UNKNOWN. (INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 112.)

A rainbow in the morning
Is the Shepherd's warning;
But a rainbow at night
Is the Shepherd's delight.

UNKNOWN. (HONE, Every Day Book, i, 670.)

If in the morning the rainbow appear, it signifyeth moisture; if in the evening it spend itself, fair weather ensueth.

LEONARD DIGGES, Prognostication. (1555)

Rainbow at eve, it will rain and leave;
Rainbow on the morrow, it will neither lend nor borrow.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

RAKE

1 He was a rake among scholars and a scholar among rakes.

MACAULAY, Essays: Aiken's Life of Addison.

2 Women who like, and will have for a hero, a rake! how soon are you not to learn that you have taken bankrupts to your bosoms, and that the putrescent gold that attracted you is the slime of the Lake of Sin!

GEORGE MEREDITH, Richard Feverel. Ch. 15.

3 Men some to business, some to pleasure take;

But every woman is at heart a rake.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 215.

Few men can be men of pleasure, every man
may be a rake.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 25 Jan., 1750.

4 A reformed rake makes the best husband.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. "Rake," an abbreviation of "rake-hell," dates from about 1663.

RAT

5 It is the wisdom of rats, that will be sure to leave a house somewhat before it fall.

BACON, Essays: Of Wisdom for a Man's Self.

It is a great house still, . . . but it is a ruin none the less, and the rats fly from it.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 59.

A rotten carcass of a boat, . . . the very rats instinctively have quit it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 5.

6 Anything like the sound of a rat
Makes my heart go pit-a-pat!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Pied Piper.

7 I smell a rat.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 821.

I begin to smell a rat.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 10.

Do you not smell a rat?

BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub. Act iv, sc. 3.

8 The rat is the concisest tenant.

He pays no rent,— . . .

Hate cannot harm

A foe so reticent.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. ii, No. 35.

9 Too late repents the rat when caught by the cat.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, 165.

10 Die here in a rage, like a poisoned rat in a hole.

SWIFT, Letter to Bolingbroke, 21 March, 1729.

RAVEN

11 The raven said to the rook, "Stand away, black coat!"

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4729.

Thou art a bitter bird, said the raven to the starling.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 195.

See also under POT.

12 He pardons ravens but storms at doves.
(Dat veniam corvis, vexat censura columbas.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 63.

Who will not change a raven for a dove?

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 2, l. 114.

13 Rarer even than a white raven. (Corvo quo-que rarior albo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 202.

14 Beware of the Raven at Zurich,

"Tis a bird of omen ill;

A noisy and an unclean bird,

With a very, very long bill.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Journal, 11 Aug., 1836.

The entry is as follows: "Prepared to leave Zurich. At the Hotel du Corbeau they brought us a most exorbitant bill, whereupon I made the following beautiful lines."

The quatrain is repeated, with minor variations, in Hyperion. Bk. iii, ch. 3.

15 He [Grenville] was the raven of the House of Commons, always croaking defeat in the midst of triumphs.

MACAULAY, Essays: The Earl of Chatham.

16 The Raven's house is built with reeds,—
Sing woe, and alas is me!

And the Raven's couch is spread with weeds,
High on the hollow tree;

And the Raven himself, telling his beads

In penance for his past misdeeds,

Upon the top I see.

THOMAS D'ARCY MCGEE, The Penitent Raven.

17 The raven once in snowy plumes was drest,
White as the whitest dove's unsullied breast,
Fair as the guardian of the Capitol,
Soft as the swan; a large and lovely fowl,
His tongue, his prating tongue has changed him quite

To sooty blackness from the purest white.

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 569. (Addison,
tr.)

1 It wasn't for nothing—that raven croaking on my left hand just now. (Non temere est quod corvos cantat nunc ab læva manu.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 624. (Act iv, sc. 3.)

That raven on yon left-hand oak (Curse on his ill-betiding croak)

Bodes me no good.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Farmer's Wife and the Raven, l. 27. See also SUPERSTITION: OMENS.

2 Ghastly, grim, and ancient Raven, wandering from the nightly shore,—

Tell me what thy lordly name is on the night's Plutonian shore?

Quoth the Raven, "Nevermore!"

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven. St. 8.

Take thy beak from out my heart, and take thy form from off my door!

Quoth the Raven, "Nevermore!"

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven. St. 17.

And the Raven, never flitting, still is sitting, still is sitting

On the pallid bust of Pallas just above my chamber door;

And his eyes have all the seeming of a demon's
that is dreaming,

And the lamplight o'er him streaming throws his shadow on the floor;

And my soul from out that shadow that lies floating on the floor,

Shall be lifted—nevermore!

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven. St. 18.

Raven from the dim dominions

On the Night's Plutonian shore,

Oft I hear thy dusky pinions

Wave and flutter round my door—

See the shadow of thy pinions

Float along the moonlit floor.

SARAH HELEN POWER WHITMAN, The Raven.

3 Bring up a raven and it will peck out your eyes.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

4 The croaking raven doth bellow for revenge.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 264.

5 O, it comes o'er my memory,
As doth the raven o'er the infected house,
Boding to all.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 20.

6 Did ever raven sing so like a lark,
That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise?

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iii, sc. 1,
l. 158.

READING

See also Books, Libraries

I—Reading: How to Read

7 Read not to contradict and confute; nor to believe and take for granted; nor to find talk and discourse; but to weigh and consider.

Some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested: that is, some books are to be read only in parts, others to be read, but not curiously, and some few to be read wholly, and with diligence and attention.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies.

Some books are only cursorily to be tasted of.

FULLER, Holy and Profane State: Of Books.

8 All rests with those who read. A work or thought

Is what each makes it to himself.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Proem, l. 326.

9 Reading is not a duty, and has consequently no business to be made disagreeable.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, *Obiter Dicta: Second
Series: The Office of Literature*.

Books soon are painful to my failing sight,
And oftener read from duty than delight.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales: Widow's Tale, l. 127.

10 Read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest.

Book of Common Prayer: Collect for the Second Sunday in Advent.

11 It is impossible to read properly without using all one's engine-power. If we are not tired after reading, common-sense is not in us.

ARNOLD BENNETT, *Things that Have Interested
Me: Translating Literature into Life*.

12 We get no good

By being ungenerous, even to a book,

And calculating profits,—so much help

By so much reading. It is rather when

We gloriously forget ourselves and plunge

Soul-forward, headlong, into a book's profound,

Impassioned for its beauty and salt of truth—

'Tis then we get the right good from a book.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 702.

13 If that thou wilt not read, let it alone;

Some love the meat, some love to pick the bone.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology for His Book.

14 What we should read is not the words, but the man whom we feel to be behind the words.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books,
p. 94.

15 We have not read an author till we have seen his object, whatever it may be, as he saw it.

CARLYLE, Essays: Goethe's Helena.

Reading is seeing by proxy.

HERBERT SPENCER, Study of Sociology. Ch. 15.

1 It's with blood that letters enter. (La Letra con sangre entra.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 36.

2 There is a great deal of difference between the eager man who wants to read a book, and the tired man who wants a book to read.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Charles Dickens, p. 99.

3 It is poor traveling that is only to arrive, and it is poor reading that is only to find out how the book ends.

ARTHUR COLTON, The Reader, Feb., 1909.

4 Some read to think,—these are rare; some to write,—these are common; and some to talk,—and these form the great majority.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

5 In its leaves that day We read no more. (Quel giorno più non vi leggemmo avante.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 138. (Cary, tr.)

When the last reader reads no more.

O. W. HOLMES, The Last Reader.

6 There is an art of reading, as well as an art of thinking, and an art of writing.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character. Ch. 11.

The art of reading is to skip judiciously.

P. G. HAMERTON, Intellectual Life. Letter 4.

7 One must be a great inventor to read well.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: The American Scholar.

'Tis the good reader that makes the good book. EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success.

If I do not read, nobody will.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iii, p. 460.

We read often with as much talent as we write.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. x, p. 67.

8 All good and true book-lovers practise the pleasing and improving avocation of reading in bed.

EUGENE FIELD, Love Affairs of a Bibliomaniac, p. 31.

9 The use of books for pleasure is the most satisfactory recreation; without having acquired the power of reading for pleasure, none of us can be independent.

VISCOUNT GREY, Fallodon Papers: Recreation.

10 A man ought to read just as inclination leads him; for what he reads as a task will do him little good.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1763.)

11 What is twice read is commonly better remembered than what is transcribed.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 74.

12 There be some men are born only to suck out the poison of books.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life.)

13 It may be well to wait a century for a reader, as God has waited six thousand years for an observer.

JOHN KEPLER, Martyrs of Science, p. 197.

If the Almighty God waited six thousand years for one to see what he had made, I may surely wait two hundred for one to understand what I have written.

CARLYLE, Miscellanies: Voltaire. Referring to Kepler.

14 As you read it out it begins to grow your own. (Dum recitas, incipit esse tuus.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 39.

15 And better had they ne'er been born Who read to doubt, or read to scorn.

SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 12.

Waverley drove through the sea of books, like a vessel without a pilot or a rudder.

SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 3.

16 Of all the artificial relations formed between mankind, the most capricious and variable is that of author and reader.

LORD SHAFTESBURY, Characteristics, iii, 227.

17 Sometimes I read a book with pleasure, and detest the author.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

18 If thou wilt receive profit, read with humility, simplicity and faith; and seek not at any time the à being learned.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. i, ch. 5.

19 To read well, that is, to read true books in a true spirit, is a noble exercise.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Reading.

Books must be read as deliberately and reservedly as they were written.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Reading.

The works of the great poets have never yet been read by mankind, for only great poets can read them. . . . Most men have learned to read to serve a paltry convenience, . . . but of reading as a noble intellectual exercise they know little or nothing.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Reading.

20 Learn to read slow: all other graces Will follow in their proper places.

WILLIAM WALKER, The Art of Reading.

II—Reading: What to Read

21 It is not wide reading but useful reading that tends to excellence.

ARISTIPPUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristippus. Bk. ii, sec. 71.)

22 Preserve proportion in your reading. Keep your view of men and things extensive.

THOMAS ARNOLD, Address to His Scholars.

1 In science, read by preference the newest works; in literature, the oldest. The classics are always modern.

BULWER-LYTTON, Caxtoniana: Hints on Mental Culture.

For what are the classics but the noblest recorded thoughts of man? They are the only oracles which are not decayed.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Reading.

2 Let blockheads read what blockheads wrote.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 1 Nov., 1750.

3 The mind, relaxing into needful sport,
Should turn to writers of an abler sort,
Whose wit well manag'd, and whose classic style,

Give truth a lustre, and make wisdom smile.
COWPER, Retirement, l. 715.

4 The three practical rules, then, which I have to offer, are,—1. Never read any book that is not a year old. 2. Never read any but famed books. 3. Never read any but what you like.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Books.

I wish only to read that book it would have been a disaster to omit.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Books; Journals, ix, 429.

Every book is worth reading which sets the reader in a working mood.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Resources.

5 Turn over with nightly and daily labor.
(Nocturna versate manu, versate diurna.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 269. Of reading the Greek authors.

6 One should not read to swallow all, but rather see what one has use for.

HENRIK IBSEN, Peer Gynt. Act iv.

7 Was there ever anything written by mere man that was wished longer by its readers, excepting Don Quixote, Robinson Crusoe, and the Pilgrim's Progress?

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Remark. (Piozzi, Johnsoniana.)

8 Read this of which life can say: "Tis my own." (Hoc lege, quod possit dicere vita "Meum est.")

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 4, l. 8.

9 Read much, but not many books. (Multum legendum esse, non multa.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. vii, epis. 9;

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1738.

From one that reads but one book . . . the Lord deliver us.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-Eng., 7. (1659)

10 No man can read with profit that which he cannot learn to read with pleasure.

NOAH PORTER, Books and Reading. Ch. 1.

11 Life being short and the quiet hours of it few, we ought to waste none of them in reading valueless books.

JOHN RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies: Preface.

Life is too short for reading inferior books.

JAMES BRYCE, Address, Rutgers College, 10 Nov., 1911.

If time is precious, no book that will not improve by repeated readings deserves to be read at all.

CARLYLE, Essays: Goethe's Helena.

12 You must linger among a limited number of master-thinkers, and digest their works, if you would derive ideas which shall win firm hold in your mind.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. ii, sec. 2.

It is not the reading of many books which is necessary to make a man wise or good, but the well-reading of a few, could he be sure to have the best.

RICHARD BAXTER, Christian Directory. Pt. ii, ch. 16.

A few books thoroughly digested, rather than hundreds but gargled in the mouth.

FRANCIS OSBORNE, Advice to a Son.

13 You complain that in your part of the world there is a scant supply of books. But it is quality, rather than quantity, that matters; a limited list of reading benefits; a varied assortment serves only for delight.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xlv, sec. 1.

14 Digressions, incontestably, are the sunshine;—they are the life, the soul of reading!

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. i, ch. 22.

15 Nothing is worth reading that does not require an alert mind.

CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER, Backlog Studies. No. 1.

III—Reading: Its Benefits

16 Reading is to the mind, what exercise is to the body. As by the one, health is preserved, strengthened, and invigorated; by the other, virtue, which is the health of the mind, is kept alive, cherished, and confirmed.

ADDISON, The Tatler. No. 147.

17 Reading maketh a full man; conference a ready man; and writing an exact man.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies.

Reading makes a full man—meditation a profound man—discourse a clear man.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1738.

<sup>1</sup> Histories make men wise; poets, witty; the mathematics, subtle; natural philosophy, deep; morals, grave; logic and rhetoric, able to contend.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies.

Books have always a secret influence on the understanding; we cannot at pleasure obliterate ideas: he that reads books of science, though without any fixed desire of improvement, will grow more knowing; he that entertains himself with moral or religious treatises, will imperceptibly advance in goodness; the ideas which are often offered to the mind, will at last find a lucky moment when it is disposed to receive them.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Adventurer. No. 137.

<sup>2</sup> Of all the human relaxations which are free from guilt, none so dignified as reading.

EGERTON BRYDGES, The Ruminator. No. 24.

<sup>3</sup> Who is he . . . that will not be much lightened in his mind by reading of some enticing story, true or feigned?

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

<sup>4</sup> Let us assume that entertainment is the sole end of reading; even so, I think you would hold that no mental employment is so broadening to the sympathies or so enlightening to the understanding. Other pursuits belong not to all times, all ages, all conditions; but this gives stimulus to our youth and diversion to our old age; this adds a charm to success, and offers a haven of consolation to failure. Through the night-watches, on all our journeyings, and in our hours of ease, it is our un-failing companion.

CICERO, Pro Archia Poeta. Ch. vii, sec. 16.

<sup>5</sup> Ah! happy he who thus, in magic themes
O'er worlds bewitch'd, in early rapture dreams,
Where wild Enchantment waves her potent
wand,

And Fancy's beauties fill his fairy land.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Library, l. 563.

<sup>6</sup> The delight of opening a new pursuit, or a new course of reading, imparts the vivacity and novelty of youth even to old age.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 22.

<sup>7</sup> Our high respect for a well-read man is praise enough of literature.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

If we encountered a man of rare intellect, we should ask him what books he read.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

It is a tie between men to have read the same book.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

<sup>8</sup> My early and invincible love of reading, . . . I would not exchange for the treasures of India.

EDWARD GIBBON, Memoirs.

<sup>9</sup> He that loves reading, has everything within his reach. He has but to desire, and he may possess himself of every species of wisdom to judge and power to perform.

WILLIAM GODWIN, Enquirer: Early Taste for Reading.

<sup>10</sup> In a polite age, almost every person becomes a reader, and receives more instruction from the Press than the Pulpit.

GOLDSMITH, Citizen of the World. Letter 75.

The first time I read an excellent book, it is to me just as if I had gained a new friend: when I read over a book I have perused before, it resembles the meeting with an old one.

GOLDSMITH, Citizen of the World. Letter 83.

<sup>11</sup> Every reader who holds a book in his hand is free of the inmost minds of men past and present; . . . he needs no introduction to the greatest.

FREDERIC HARRISON, The Choice of Books, p. 7.

<sup>12</sup> Read anything five hours a day, and you will soon be learned.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life.)

<sup>13</sup> I love to lose myself in other men's minds. When I am not walking, I am reading; I cannot sit and think. Books think for me.

CHARLES LAMB, Last Essays of Elia: Detached Thoughts on Books and Reading.

<sup>14</sup> Have you ever rightly considered what the mere ability to read means? That it is the key which admits us to the whole world of thought and fancy and imagination? to the company of saint and sage, of the wisest and the wittiest at their wisest and wittiest moment? That it enables us to see with the keenest eyes, hear with the finest ears, and listen to the sweetest voices of all time?

J. R. LOWELL, Democracy and Other Addresses: Books and Libraries.

<sup>15</sup> I was so allured to read that no recreation came to me better welcome.

MILTON, An Apology for Smectymnus.

<sup>16</sup> He that I am reading seems always to have the most force.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

<sup>17</sup> To love to read is to exchange hours of ennui for hours of delight.

MONTESQUIEU, Pensées.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxiv, 1.

<sup>2</sup> He reads much;
He is a great observer and he looks
Quite through the deeds of men.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 201.

Exceedingly well read.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 166.

One who, to all the heights of learning bred,
Read books and men, and practised what he read.

GEORGE STEPNEY, To the Earl of Carlisle.

<sup>3</sup> He hath never fed of the dainties that are bred in a book; he hath not eat paper, as it were; he hath not drunk ink: his intellect is not replenished; he is only an animal, only sensible in the duller parts.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv,
sc. 2, l. 25.

<sup>4</sup> People say that life is the thing, but I prefer reading.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts.

<sup>5</sup> Give a man a pipe he can smoke,
Give a man a book he can read:
And his home is bright with a calm delight,
Though the room be poor indeed.

JAMES THOMSON, Sunday Up the River.

<sup>6</sup> The habit of reading is the only enjoyment in which there is no alloy; it lasts when all other pleasures fade.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Speech, 7 Dec., 1868.

IV—Reading: Its Dangers

<sup>7</sup> But so many books thou readeest,
But so many schemes thou breedest,
But so many wishes feedest,
That thy poor head almost turns.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, The Second Best.

<sup>8</sup> Affects all books of past and modern ages,
But reads no further than their title-pages.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Satires: Human Learning.

Kiss the book's outside, who ne'er look within.

COWPER, Expostulation, l. 389.

<sup>9</sup> And let a scholar all Earth's volumes carry,
He will be but a walking dictionary.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Tears of Peace, l. 270.

<sup>10</sup> With various readings stored his empty skull,
Learn'd without sense, and venerably dull.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 591.

<sup>11</sup> A man may as well expect to grow stronger by always eating as wiser by always reading.

. . . 'Tis thought and digestion which makes books serviceable, and gives health and vigour to the mind.

JEREMY COLLIER, Essays: Of the Entertainment of Books.

<sup>12</sup> Guanoed her mind by reading French novels.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. ii, ch. 9.

<sup>13</sup> Those book-learnèd fools who miss the world.
JOHN DRINKWATER, From Generation to Generation.

<sup>14</sup> You will see me any morning in the park
Reading the comics and the sporting page.
Particularly I remark

An English countess goes upon the stage,
A Greek was murdered at a Polish dance,
Another bank defaulter has confessed.
I keep my countenance.

T. S. ELIOT, Portrait of a Lady.

<sup>15</sup> He might be a very clever man by nature for aught I know, but he laid so many books upon his head that his brains could not move.

ROBERT HALL, (GREGORY, Life of Hall.) Referring to Kippis.

<sup>16</sup> Reading is sometimes an ingenious device for avoiding thought.

HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. ii, ch. 1.

<sup>17</sup> If I had spent as much time in reading as other men of learning, I should have been as ignorant as they.

THOMAS HOBBES. (D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature. Vol. ii, p. 179.)

<sup>18</sup> He has left off reading altogether, to the great improvement of his originality.

CHARLES LAMB, Last Essays of Elia: Detached Thoughts on Books and Reading.

<sup>19</sup> Reading furnishes the mind only with materials of knowledge; it is thinking makes what we read ours.

JOHN LOCKE, Conduct of Understanding:
Sec. 20, Reading.

Reading without thinking may indeed make a rich common-place, but 'twill never make a clear head.

JOHN NORRIS, Of the Advantages of Thinking.

<sup>20</sup> Night after night,
He sat and bleared his eyes with books.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. i.

<sup>21</sup> For reading new books is like eating new bread,

One can bear it at first, but by gradual steps
he
Is brought to death's door of a mental dyspepsy.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 104.

1
A reading-machine, always wound up and going,
He mastered whatever was not worth the knowing.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 164.

In books a prodigal, they say,
A living cyclopedia.

COTTON MATHER, Epitaph on Anne Bradstreet.

2
His classical reading is great: he can quote
Horace, Juvenal, Ovid and Martial by rote.
He has read Metaphysics, . . . Spinoza and Kant

And Theology too: I have heard him descant
Upon Basil and Jerome. Antiquities, art,
He is fond of. He knows the old masters by heart.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Canto ii, pt. 4.

3
Who reads
Incessantly, and to his reading brings not
A spirit and judgment equal or superior, . . .
Uncertain and unsettl'd still remains,
Deep vers'd in books and shallow in himself.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 322.

4
For men that read much and work little are as bells, the which do sound to call others, and they themselves never enter into the church.

THOMAS NORTH, Diall of Princes, 138. (1557)

More true knowledge comes by meditation than by reading; for much reading is an oppression of the mind, and extinguishes the natural candle, which is the reason of so many senseless scholars in the world.

WILLIAM PENN, Advice to His Children.

The bookful blockhead, ignorantly read,
With loads of learned lumber in his head,
With his own tongue still edifies his ears,
And always list'ning to himself appears.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 53.

7
In reading of many books is distraction.
(Distringit librorum multitudo.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. ii, sec. 3.

8
To pass from hearing literature to reading it is to take a great and dangerous step.

R. L. STEVENSON, Random Memories.

Who readeth much, and never meditates,
Is like the greedy eater of much food,
Who so surcloys his stomach with his cates,
That commonly they do him little good.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, Tetrasticha.

10 Verily, when the day of judgment comes, we shall not be asked what we have read, but what we have done.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. i, ch. 3.

V—Reading and Running

11
But truths on which depends our main concern,

That 'tis our shame and mis'ry not to learn,
Shine by the side of ev'ry path we tread
With such a lustre, he that runs may read.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 77.

12
And reads, though running, a<sup>m</sup> these needful motions.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 1. (Sylvester, tr.)

13
Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it.

Old Testament: Habakkuk, ii, 2. Frequently misquoted, "that he who runs may read."

Read my little fable:

He that runs may read.

TENNYSON, The Flower. St. 5.

REASON

I—Reason: Definitions

14
Every man's reason is every man's oracle.
LORD BOLINGBROKE, Of the True Use of Retirement and Study. Letter ii.

Every man's own reason is his best Œdipus.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 6.

Your own reason is the only oracle given you by heaven, and you are answerable for, not the rightness, but the uprightness of the decision.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. x, p. 178.

Reason is my augury, and my interpretation of the future; by it I have practised divination, and obtained knowledge. (Augurium ratio est, et conjectura futuri: Hac divinavi notitiamque tuli.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 9, l. 51.

15
Wherefore I assert:—if Reason's only function were to heighten our pleasure, that were vindication enough.

ROBERT BRIDGES, Testament of Beauty. Bk. i, l. 202.

16
Reason is Life's sole arbiter, the magic Labyrinth's single clue.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. vii, st. 22.

17
Reason to rule and mercy to forgive;

The first is law, the last prerogative.

DRYDEN, Hind and the Panther. Pt. i, l. 261.

Subdue

By force, who reason for their law refuse,
Right reason for their law.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vi, l. 40.

See also under LAW.

18
Reason is not measured by size or height, but by principle. (Δόγῳ γὰρ μέγεθος οὐ μήκει οὐδ' ὕψει κρίνεται, ἀλλὰ δόγμασιν.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Ch. 12, sec. 26.

To a rational being, to act according to nature and according to reason is the same thing. (Τῷ λογικῷ ζῶν ἡ αὐτὴ πράξις κατὰ φύσιν ἐστὶ καὶ κατὰ λόγον.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vii, 11.

Unto the good their reason ever is a god. (Θεὸς ἐστὶ τοῖς χρηστοῖς δειὸ νοῦς γάρ, ὡς ἔοικεν.)

MENANDER, Adelphoi. Frag. 11.

Say first, of God above or Man below
What can we reason but from what we know?

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 17.

The soul of man is divided into three parts, intelligence, reason, and passion. Intelligence and passion are possessed by other animals, but reason by man alone. . . . Reason is immortal, all else is mortal.

PYTHAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Bk. viii, sec. 30.)

Reason is nothing else but a portion of the divine spirit set in a human body. (Ratio autem nihil aliud est quam in corpus humanum pars divini spiritus mersa.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxvi, 12.

Reason, the choicest gift bestowed by heaven. (Φρένας, πάντων δὲ ἐστὶ κτημάτων ὑπέρτατον.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 683.

And what is reason? Be she thus defin'd:
Reason is upright stature in the soul.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 1440.

II—Reason: Apothegms

It must be so,—Plato, thou reason'st well!
ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 1, l. 1.

Sweet reasonableness.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, St. Paul and Protestantism: Preface. A phrase used by Arnold many times.

It is not necessary to believe things in order to reason about them. (Il n'est pas nécessaire de tenir les choses pour en raisonner.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Le Barbier de Séville. Act v, sc. 4.

He who will not reason, is a bigot; he who cannot is a fool; and he who dares not, is a slave.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Academical Question: Preface.

Let us first of all follow reason, it is the surest guide. It warns us itself of its feebleness and informs us of its own limitations.

ANATOLE FRANCE, Credo of a Sceptic, p. 79.

O Reason! when will thy long minority expire?

HAZLITT, Literary Remains. Vol. ii, p. 453.

Hearken to reason, or she will be heard.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Reason governs the wise man and cudgels the fool.

H. G. BOEHM, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 479.

If you will not hear Reason, she will surely rap your knuckles.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

Setting themselves against reason, as often as reason is against them.

THOMAS HOBBES, Tripos: Epistle Dedicatory.

We have not enough strength to follow reason absolutely. (Nous n'avons pas assez de force pour suivre toute notre raison.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 42.

We have not enough reason to use all our strength. (Nous n'avons pas assez de raison pour employer toute notre force.)

MADAME DE GRIGNAN, reversing La Rochefoucauld, to illustrate how the reverse of his maxims was often as true as the original. (MADAME DE SÉVIGNÉ, Lettres, vi, 527.)

To be rational is so glorious a thing, that two-legged creatures generally content themselves with the title.

JOHN LOCKE, Letter to Antony Collins, Esq.

Always take the short cut; and that is the rational one. Therefore say and do everything according to soundest reason.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 51. See also SENSE: COMMON SENSE.

To be pointedly rational is a greater difficulty for me than a fine delirium.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways. Ch. 1.

Indu'd With sanctity of reason.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 507.

Every extreme doth perfect reason flee,
And wishes wisdom with sobriety.

(La parfaite raison fuit toute extrémité, Et veut que l'on soit sage avec sobriété.)

MOLIERE, Le Misanthrope. Act i, sc. 1, l. 151.

What is now reason was formerly impulse. (Quod nunc ratio est, impetus ante fuit.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 10. See also INSTINCT AND REASON.

We must be fortified . . . by reason against all adversities.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 7.

The feast of reason and the flow of soul.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 1, l. 128.

- 1
Some folks dey would 'a' beat him:
Now, dat would only heat him;
I know jes' how to treat him:
You mus' reason wid a mule.
IRWIN RUSSELL, Nebuchadnezzar.
- 2
Nothing is to be done without reason. (Nihil sine ratione faciendum est.)
SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. iv, sec. 10.
- 3
And reason pandars will.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 88.
O, strange excuse,
When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse!
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 791.
- 4
But since the affairs of men rest still uncertain,
Let 's reason with the worst that may befall.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act v, sc. 1, l. 96.
- 5
Be led by reason. (Νοὺν ἡγεμόνα ποιοῦ.)
SOLON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Bk. i, sec. 60.)
- 6
The man who listens to Reason is lost: Reason enslaves all whose minds are not strong enough to master her.
BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.
The reasonable man adapts himself to the world: the unreasonable one persists in trying to adapt the world to himself. Therefore all progress depends on the unreasonable man.
BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.
- 7
Impassion'd logic, which outran
The hearer in its fiery course.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cix, st. 2.
- 8
In human affairs there is always, somehow, a slight majority on the side of reason.
HENRY VAN DYKE, attr. But Dr. van Dyke writes, "I don't think this is mine; it sounds more like Emerson."
- 9
I can stand brute force, but brute reason is quite unbearable. There is something unfair about its use. It is hitting below the intellect.
OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 3.
- 10
Abstrusest matter, reasonings of the mind
Turned inward.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. i, l. 65.

III—Reason: Its Power

- 11
Reason is the mistress and queen of all things. (Domina omnium et regina ratio.)
CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. ii, ch. 21.
And this I know, for kinde wit me taught,
That reason shall reign and realms govern.
LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus iv, l. 440.
- 12
Within the brain's most secret cells
A certain Lord Chief Justice dwells,

- Of sovereign power, whom, one and all,
With common voice, we Reason call.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iv, l. 125.
- 13
Reason and speech, which bring men together and unite them in a sort of natural society. Nor in anything are we further removed from the nature of wild beasts. (Ratio et oratio quæ . . . conciliat inter se homines, conjungitque naturali quadam societate; neque ulla re longius absumus a natura ferarum.)
CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 16, sec. 50.
A man without reason is a beast in season.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.
A man that doth not use his reason is a tame beast; a man that abuses it is a wild one.
LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 254.
A beast, that wants discourse of reason.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 150.
- 14
Reason, which is, as it were, the light and lamp of life. (Ratio . . . quasi quædam lux, lumenque vitæ.)
CICERO, Academicarum Quæstionum. Bk. i, ch. 5, sec. 8.
We walk evermore
To higher paths by brightening Reason's lamp.
GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. ii.
- 15
O Youth, alas, why wilt thou not incline
And unto rul'd reason bowe thee,
Since Reason is the very straight line
That leadeth folk into felicity?
THOMAS HOCCLEVE, La Male Regle. (1425)
- 16
We may take Fancy for a companion, but must follow Reason as our guide.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Boswell, 1774.
If but a beam of sober Reason play,
Lo, Fancy's fairy frost-work melts away!
ROGERS, Pleasures of Memory. Pt. ii, l. 427.
While Reason drew the plan, the Heart inform'd
The moral page, and Fancy lent it grace.
JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. iv, l. 262.
- 17
Nothing can be lasting when reason does not rule. (Nihil potest esse diuturnum cui non subest ratio.)
QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni, iv, 14, 19.
- 18
If you wish to subject all things to yourself, subject yourself to reason. (Si vis omnia tibi subicere, te subice rationi.)
SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. 37, sec. 4.
- 19
The will of man is by his reason sway'd.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 115.
- 20
All the tools with which mankind works upon its fate are dull, but the sharpest among them is the reason.
CARL VAN DOREN, Many Minds, p. 209.

IV—Reason: Its Weakness

1 Between craft and credulity, the voice of reason is stifled.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to the Sheriffs of Bristol.

2 Reason, which ought always to direct mankind, seldom does; but passions and weaknesses commonly usurp its seat, and rule in its stead.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Feb., 1754.

Address yourself generally to the senses, to the heart, and to the weaknesses of mankind, but very rarely to their reason.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 6 Feb., 1752.

3 Few have reason, most have eyes.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iv, l. 186.

4 Error lives

Ere reason can be born. Reason, the power To guess at right and wrong, the twinkling lamp

Of wandering life, that winks and wakes by turns,

Fooling the follower, betwixt shade and shining.

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act iii, sc. 1.

Dim as the borrow'd beams of moon and stars To lonely, weary, wand'ring travellers, Is Reason to the soul: and as on high Those rolling fires discover but the sky, Not light us here; so Reason's glimmering ray Was lent, not to assure our doubtful way, But guide us upward to a better day. And as those nightly tapers disappear, When day's bright lord ascends our hemisphere; So pale grows Reason at Religion's sight; So dies, and so dissolves in supernatural light.

DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 1.

Reason, thou vain impertinence,

Deluding hypocrite, begone! . . .

At best thou'rt but a glimmering light,

Which serves not to direct our way;

But, like the moon, confounds our sight,

And only shows it is not day.

UNKNOWN, Reason. (Miscellany Poems and Translations by Oxford Hands. 1685.)

5 All is but jest, all dust, all not worth two peason:

For why in man's matters is neither rhyme nor reason.

(Omnia sunt rusus, sunt pulvis, et omnia nil sunt:

Res hominum cunctæ, nam ratione carent.)

DEMOCRITUS, Idylls. (PUTTENHAM, Arte of English Poesie, p. 125.) See also POETRY:

REYME AND REASON.

Reason, Justice and Equity never had weight enough on the face of the earth to govern the councils of men.

THOMAS A. EDISON. (Golden Book, April, 1931.)

If ever there was a bigger lie, my dear Daddy, than any other, it is that man is a reasonable creature.

H. G. WELLS, Mr. Britling Sees It Through. Bk. ii, ch. 4, sec. 18.

6 Ah, when to the heart of man Seemed it ever less than a treason To go with the drift of things, To yield with a grace to reason And bow and accept the end Of a love, or a season? ROBERT FROST, Reluctance.

7 Reason exercises merely the function of preserving order, is, so to say, the police in the region of art. In life it is mostly a cold arithmetician summing up our follies.

HEINE, Wit, Wisdom, and Pathos: Art Notes.

8 To think that two and two are four And neither five nor three The heart of man has long been sore And long 'tis like to be. A. E. HOUSMAN, Last Poems, p. 69.

9 On human actions reason tho' you can, It may be Reason, but it is not Man. POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 25.

What Reason weaves, by Passion is undone. POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 42.

10 Who reasons wisely is not therefore wise; His pride in reas'ning, not in acting, lies. POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 117.

11 Reason perhaps teaches certain bourgeois virtues, but it does not make either heroes or saints.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 262.

<sup>2</sup> Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 203.

My reasons are both good and weighty.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 1, l. 252.

Strong reasons make strong actions.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 182.

<sup>3</sup> His reasons are as two grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff: you shall seek all day ere you find them, and when you have them, they are not worth the search.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 1, l. 115.

VI—Reason: Why and Wherefore

<sup>4</sup> Whatever Sceptic could inquire for,
For every why he had a wherefore.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 131.

REFORM AND REFORMERS

I—Reform

<sup>2</sup>
To innovate is not to reform.
EDMUND BURKE, A Letter to a Noble Lord.

<sup>3</sup>
The oyster-women lock'd their fish up,
And trudged away to cry, No Bishop.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 2, l. 537.

<sup>4</sup>
All reform except a moral one will prove unavailing.

CARLYLE, Essays: Corn Law Rhymes.

<sup>5</sup>
Every reform, however necessary, will by weak minds be carried to an excess which will itself need reforming.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 1.

<sup>6</sup>
All zeal for a reform, that gives offence
To peace and charity, is mere pretence.
COWPER, Charity, l. 533.

<sup>7</sup>
'Tis such a light as putrefaction breeds
In fly-blown flesh whereon the maggot feeds,
Shines in the dark, but, usher'd into day,
The stench remains, the lustre dies away.
COWPER, Conversation, l. 675. Of bigots and reformers.

<sup>8</sup>
Reforms are less to be dreaded than revolutions, for they cause less reaction.

CHARLES JOHN DARLING, Scintillæ Juris.

<sup>9</sup>
Every project in the history of reform, no matter how violent and surprising, is good when it is the dictate of a man's genius and constitution, but very dull and suspicious when adopted from another.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

<sup>10</sup>
Every reform is only a mask under cover of which a more terrible reform, which dares not yet name itself, advances.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. vii, p. 205.

The history of persecution is a history of endeavors to cheat nature, to make water run up hill, to twist a rope of sand.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

<sup>11</sup>
Reform is affirmative, conservatism negative; conservatism goes for comfort, reform for truth. . . . Conservatism makes no poetry, breathes no prayer, has no invention; it is all memory. Reform has no gratitude, no prudence, no husbandry.

EMERSON, *Nature, Addresses, and Lectures:
The Conservative*.

Reform kicks with hoofs; it runs to egotism and bloated self-conceit.

EMERSON, *Nature, Addresses, and Lectures:
The Conservative*.

<sup>12</sup>
Reform must come from within, not from without. You cannot legislate for virtue.

CARDINAL GIBBONS, Address, at Baltimore, 13
Sept., 1909.

Any essential reform must, like charity, begin at
home.

JOHN MACY, About Women, p. 126.

<sup>13</sup>
Reforming schemes are none of mine;
To mend the world's a vast design:
Like theirs, who tug in little boat,
To pull to them the ship afloat.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 357.

<sup>14</sup>
No True Reform has ever come to pass
Unchallenged by a Lion and an Ass.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 9.

<sup>15</sup>
It is essential to the triumph of reform that it should never succeed.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Works. Vol. xii, p. 213.

<sup>16</sup>
When we reflect how difficult it is to move or deflect the great machine of society, how impossible to advance the notions of a whole people suddenly to ideal right, we see the wisdom of Solon's remark, that no more good must be attempted than the nation can bear.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. x, p. 255.

<sup>17</sup>
Ah Love! could thou and I with Fate conspire

To grasp this sorry Scheme of Things entire,
Would not we shatter it to bits—and then
Remould it nearer to the Heart's Desire!

OMAR KHAYYÁM, Rubáiyát. St. 73. (Fitzgerald,
tr.)

BLISS CARMAN, The Joys of the Road.

4 Suspect, in general, those who remarkably affect any one virtue. . . . I say suspect them, for they are commonly impostors; but do not be sure that they are always so; for I have sometimes known saints really religious, blusterers really brave, reformers of manners really honest, and pruders really chaste.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 19 Dec., 1749.

5 He wooed the daunted odalisques,
He kissed each downcast nude;

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

The Reformer believes that there is no evil coming from Change which a deeper thought cannot correct.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

8 No man's person I hate, though his conduct
I blame;

I can censure a vice, without stabbing a name.

To amend—not reproach—is the bent of my mind;

A reproof is half lost when ill nature is joined.
Where merit appears, though in rags, I respect it,

And plead virtue's cause, should the whole world reject it.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Anvils and Hammers.

The moral bully, though he never swears,
Nor kicks intruders down his entry stairs,
Though meekness plants his backward-sloping hat,

And non-resistance ties his white cravat,
Though his black broadcloth glories to be seen
In the same plight with Shylock's gabardine,
Hugs the same passion to his narrow breast
That heaves the cuirass on the trooper's chest,
Hears the same hell-hounds yelling in his rear
That chase from port the maddened buccaneer,
Feels the same comfort while his acrid words
Turn the sweet milk of kindness into curds . . .
As the scarred ruffian of the pirate's deck,
When his long swivel rakes the staggering wreck!

I—Religion: Definitions

3 The efficacy of religion lies precisely in what is not rational, philosophic, nor eternal; its efficacy lies in the unforeseen, the miraculous, the extraordinary. Thus religion attracts more devotion according as it demands more faith—that is to say, as it becomes more incredible to the profane mind. The philosopher aspires to explain away all mysteries, to dissolve them into light. Mystery on the other hand is demanded and pursued by the religious instinct; mystery constitutes the essence of worship.

AMIEL, Journal, 5 June, 1870.

Methinks there be not impossibilities enough in Religion for an active faith.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, 9.

Religion without mystery ceases to be religion.

BISHOP WILLIAM THOMAS MANNING, Sermon, 2 Feb., 1930.

4 Religion—that voice of the deepest human experience.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Culture and Anarchy: Sweetness and Light.

5 The true religion is built upon the rock; the rest are tossed upon the waves of time.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Vicissitude of Things.

A religion that is jealous of the variety of learning, discourse, opinions, and sects, as misdoubting it may shake the foundations, or that cherisheth devotion upon simplicity and ignorance, as ascribing ordinary effects to the immediate working of God, is adverse to knowledge.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Interpretation of Nature. Ch. 25.

6 Religion—a daughter of Hope and Fear, explaining to Ignorance the nature of the Unknowable.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary.

Impiety—your irreverence toward my deity.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary.

7 The body of all true religion consists, to be sure, in obedience to the will of the Sovereign of the world, in a confidence in His declarations, and in imitation of His perfections.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

8 My altars are the mountains and the ocean,
Earth, air, stars,—all that springs from the great Whole,

Who hath produced and will receive the soul.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 104.

Each cloud-capped mountain is a holy altar;

An organ breathes in every grove;

And the full heart's a Psalter,

Rich in deep hymns of gratitude and love.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 385.

9 It is well said, in every sense, that a man's religion is the chief fact with regard to him. . . . By religion I do not mean here the church-creed which he professes. . . . This is not what I call religion, . . . but the thing a man does practically believe; the thing a man does practically lay to heart, and know for certain, concerning his vital relations to this mysterious Universe, and his duty and destiny there. . . . that is his religion.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Divinity.

A man's "religion" consists not of the many things he is in doubt of and tries to believe, but of the few he is assured of, and has no need of effort for believing.

CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 8.

10 Religion is the sense of ultimate reality, of whatever meaning a man finds in his own existence or the existence of anything else.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Come to Think of It.

11 Religion is life, philosophy is thought; religion looks up, friendship looks in. We need both thought and life, and we need that the two shall be in harmony.

JAMES FREEMAN CLARKE, Ten Great Religions, Pt. i, ch. 7, sec. 9.

1 Religion, harsh, intolerant, austere,
Parent of manners like herself severe.
COWPER, Table Talk, l. 612.

2 Sacred religion! Mother of Form and Fear!
SAMUEL DANIEL, Musophilus. St. 47.

3 Religion must always be a crab fruit; it cannot be grafted and keep its wild beauty.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

What is called religion effeminates and demoralizes.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

4 God builds his temple in the heart on the ruins of churches and religions.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

5 All the religion we have is the ethics of one or another holy person.

EMERSON, Journals, June, 1865.

The religions of the world are the ejaculations of a few imaginative men.

EMERSON, Journals.

All the popular religions in the world are made apprehensible by an array of legendary personages.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan: Preface.

6 There are at bottom but two possible religions—that which rises in the moral nature of man, and which takes shape in moral commandments, and that which grows out of the observation of the material energies which operate in the external universe.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Calvinism.

Everywhere the human soul stands between a hemisphere of light and another of darkness; on the confines of two everlasting hostile empires, Necessity and Freewill.

CARLYLE, Essays: Goethe's Works.

7 The religion which allies itself with injustice to preach down the natural aspirations of the masses is worse than atheism.

HENRY GEORGE, The Land Question, p. 96.

8 The inquiry into a dream is another dream.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 249.

Religion is the mother of dreams. Over the gray world, ruined by deluge and death, it has sought ever, and found, the arching rainbow of hope.

A. E. HAYDON, The Quest of the Ages, p. 205.

9 Religion is a stalking-horse to shoot other fowl.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

10 Religion is not a dogma, nor an emotion, but a service.

R. D. HITCHCOCK, Eternal Atonement: Doing of God's Will.

11 Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.

New Testament: James, i, 27.

12 To one man religion is his literature and his science; to another, his delight and his duty.

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 26.

The religion of one age is ever the poetry of the next.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Character.

Religion is the elder sister of Philosophy.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: David Hume and John Home.

13 A man's religion is the truth he lives habitually, subconsciously and consciously.

BENJAMIN C. LEEMING, Imagination.

14 Possibly if a true estimate were made of the morality and religions of the world, we should find that the far greater part of mankind received even those opinions and ceremonies they would die for, rather from the fashions of their countries and the constant practice of those about them than from any conviction of their reasons.

JOHN LOCKE, On Education. Sec. 146.

15 The friend of him who has no friend—Religion.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Pillow, l. 152.

16 Religion is an attempt, a noble attempt, to suggest in human terms more-than-human realities.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Religio Journalistici, 35.

17 Religion is the dominion of the soul. It is the hope of life, the anchor of safety, the deliverance of the soul.

NAPOLEON I. (O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.)

18 My own mind is my own church.

THOMAS PAINE, The Age of Reason. Ch. 1.

19 Humanity and Immortality consist neither in reason, nor in love; not in the body, nor in the animation of the heart of it, nor in the thoughts and stirrings of the brain of it;—but in the dedication of them all to Him who will raise them up at the last day.

RUSKIN, Stones of Venice. Vol. i, ch. 2.

20 Religion is not a hearsay, a presumption, a supposition; is not a customary pretension and profession; is not an affectation of any mode; is not a piety of particular fancy, consisting of some pathetic devotions, vehement expressions, bodily severities, affected anomalies, and aversion from the innocent usages of others; but consisteth in a profound humility, and a universal charity.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Sermons.

True religion doth clear the mind from all impotent and unsatiable desires, which do abuse and toss a man's soul, and make it restless and unquiet. It sets a man free from eager and impetuous loves, from vain and disappointing hopes, from lawless and exorbitant appetites, from frothy and empty joys, from dismal, presaging fears, and anxious, self-devouring cares.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Sermons.

Each is not for its own sake,
I say the whole earth and all the stars in the sky are for religion's sake.

I say no man has ever yet been half devout enough,

None has ever yet adored or worship'd half enough,

None has begun to think how divine he himself is, and how certain the future is.

I say that the real and permanent grandeur of these States must be their religion.

WALT WHITMAN, Starting from Paumanok. Sec. 7.

II—Religion: Apothegms

Nothing is so fatal to religion as indifference, which is at least, half infidelity.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to William Smith. 29 Jan., 1795.

Man is by his constitution a religious animal.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

Man has been rather defined as a religious than a rational creature.

JAMES HARRINGTON, Oceana, p. 484. (1656)

Every man, either to his terror or consolation, has some sense of religion.

JAMES HARRINGTON, Oceana, p. 484.

Politics and the pulpit are terms that have little agreement. No sound ought to be heard in the church but the healing voice of Christian charity. . . . Surely the church is a place where one day's truce ought to be allowed to the dissensions and animosities of mankind.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

When policy puts on religious cloak.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomsday: The Second Hour. St. 22.

When Kings interfere in matters of religion, they enslave instead of protecting it.

FÉNELON, Advice, to the Pretender, Son of James II of England.

They make it a principle of their religion outwardly to conform to any religion.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, on the bill for the relief of Protestant dissenters, House of Commons, 1773.

He left his old religion for an estate, and has not had time to get a new one, but stands like a dead wall between church and synagogue, or like the blank leaves between the Old and New Testament.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 3.

See also POLITICS: EXPEDIENCY.

The writers against religion, whilst they oppose every system, are wisely careful never to set up any of their own.

EDMUND BURKE, A Vindication of Natural Society: Preface.

His religion at best is an anxious wish—like that of Rabelais, a great Perhaps.

CARLYLE, Essays: Burns.

The grand perhaps.

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Bloughram's Apology.

See also RABELAIS under DEATH: LAST WORDS.

God is for men and religion for women.

JOSEPH CONRAD, Nostromo.

Religion does not censure or exclude Unnumber'd pleasures, harmlessly pursu'd.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 783.

We do ourselves wrong, and too meanly estimate the holiness above us, when we deem that any act or enjoyment good in itself, is not good to do religiously.

HAWTHORNE, The Marble Faun. Bk. ii, ch. 7.

Religion without joy,—it is no religion.

THEODORE PARKER, Ten Sermons: Of Conscious Religion.

Let us start a new religion with one commandment, "Enjoy thyself."

ISRAEL ZANGWILL, Children of the Ghetto. Bk. ii, ch. 6.

Religion should be the rule of life, not a casual incident of it.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 17.

Begin where we will, we are pretty sure in a short space to be mumbling our ten commandments.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

The religions we call false were once true.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: Character.

Time consecrates;

And what is grey with age becomes religion.

SCHILLER, Wallenstein. Act iv, sc. 4. (Coleridge, tr.)

We measure all religions by their civilizing power.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Natural Religion.

A complete nation does not import its religion.
EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Character.

1 Religion is the best armour in the world, but the worst cloak.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4011.

2 Fools make the text, and men of wit the commentaries. (Les sots font le texte, et les hommes d'esprit les commentaires.)

ABBÉ FERDINANDO GALIANI, Of Politics.

They have the texts in their favor, but I'm sorry for the texts.

ROYER-COLLARD, disapproval of the doctrine of grace by the fathers of Port-Royal.

So much the worse for the texts.

VOLTAIRE.

3 Man, without religion, is the creature of circumstances.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. Bk. i.

Educate men without religion and you make them but clever devils.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Remark.

4 Some persons, instead of making religion for their God, are content to make a god of their religion.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Brevia.

5 Religion stands on tiptoe in our land, Ready to pass to the American strand.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church Militant, l. 235.

6 Religion can bear no jesting.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Religion, credit and the eye are not to be touched.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

7 Religion's in the heart, not in the knee.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Devil's Ducat.

8 To be of no church is dangerous. Religion, of which the rewards are distant, and which is animated only by Faith and Hope, will glide by degrees out of the mind, unless it be invigorated and reimpresed by external ordinances, by stated calls to worship, and the salutary influence of example.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Milton.

9 Whoso fighteth for the religion of God, whether he be slain or be victorious, we will give him a great reward.

The Koran. Ch. 4.

10 All religions die of one disease, that of being found out.

JOHN MORLEY.

11 It is right to be religious, but one should shun religiosity. (Religentem esse oportet; religiosus ne fuas.)

NIGIDUS FIGULUS, Commentariorum Grammaticorum. Bk. xi. Quoted as from an early poet. Aulus Gellius (Noctes Atticæ, iv, 9,

1) points out that the ending "osus" always implies an excessive amount of the quality in question.

12 To be furious in religion is to be irreligiously religious.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

13 The truth of religion is in its ritual and the truth of dogma is in its poetry.

J. C. POWYS, The Complex Vision, p. 232.

17 A religious life is a struggle and not a hymn.

MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne. Bk. x, ch. 5.

18 The poor creatures . . . seated themselves on the "anxious benches."

FRANCES M. TROLLOPE, Domestic Manners of the Americans. Ch. 8. (1832)

In front of the pulpit there was a space railed off and strewn with straw, which I was told was the anxious seat, and on which sat those who were touched by their consciences.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Diary in America, 1839.

Folks got up . . . and worked their way . . . to the mourners' bench, with the tears running down their faces.

MARK TWAIN. (Century Magazine, Feb., 1885.)

19 Religion hath no landmarks.

M. F. TUPPER, Of Estimating Character.

20 I would rather think of my religion as a gamble than to think of it as an insurance premium.

STEPHEN S. WISE, Religion.

21 The crooked end obedient spirits draws,

The pointed, those rebels who spurn at Christian laws.

(Curva trahit mites, pars pungit acuta rebelles.)

UNKNOWN, On a Crosier. (BROUGHTON, Dictionary of Religions.) A crosier at Toulouse is said to bear the motto: "Curva trahit, quos virga regit, pars ultima pungit." A crosier is curved at the top and pointed at the bottom.

III—Religion: Its Virtues

1 Religion tends to speak the language of the heart, which is the language of friends, lovers, children, and parents.

EDWARD SCRIBNER AMES. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 246.)

2 The spiritual virtue of a sacrament is like light: although it passes among the impure, it is not polluted. (Spiritalis enim virtus sacramenti ita est ut lux: etsi per immundos transeat, non inquinatur.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Johannis Evang. Ch. 1, sec. 15.

3 Religion converts despair, which destroys, into resignation, which submits.

COUNTESSE OF BLESSINGTON, Commonplace Book.

There's nought, no doubt, so much the spirit calms

As rum and true religion.

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto ii, st. 34.

4 Religion, if in heav'nly truths attir'd,
Needs only to be seen to be admir'd.

COWPER, Expostulation, l. 492.

5 There is no age which religion does not become. (Nullam ætatem non decet religio.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: Pietas Puerilis.

6 Religion always sides with poverty.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church Militant, l. 252.

7 With sweet kind natures, as in honey'd cells,
Religion lives, and feels herself at home.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 308.

8 The enduring value of religion is in its challenge to aspiration and hope in the mind of man.

ERNEST M. HOPKINS. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 75.)

9 The highest flights of charity, devotion, trust, patience, bravery, to which the wings of human nature have spread themselves have been flown for religious ideals.

WILLIAM JAMES, Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 259.

10 Religion's all. Descending from the skies
To wretched man, the goddess in her left

Holds out this world, and, in her right, the next.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 550.

IV—Religion: Its Faults

11 Religion brought forth riches, and the daughter devoured the mother. (Religio peperit divitias et filia devoravit matrem.)

ST. BERNARD, Saying. (REUSNER, Ænigmatographia. Pt. i, p. 361. 1602.)

12 No priestcraft can longer make man content with misery here in the hope of compensation hereafter.

G. STANLEY HALL, Senescence, p. 483.

13 Formal religion was organized for slaves: it offered them consolation which earth did not provide.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine. Vol. xxv, p. 89.

14 Religion has reduced Spain to a guitar, Italy to a hand-organ, and Ireland to exile.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Gov. Rollin's Fast Day Proclamation.

15 What excellent fools Religion makes of men!

BEN JONSON, Sejanus. Act v.

Fanatic fools, that in those twilight times,
With wild religion cloaked the worst of crimes!

JOHN LANGHORNE, The Country Justice. Pt. iii, l. 122.

16 It is, I think, an error to believe that there is any need of religion to make life seem worth living.

SINCLAIR LEWIS. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 37.)

17 Long time men lay oppress'd with slavish fear;

Religion's tyranny did domineer. . . .

At length a mighty one of Greece began

T' assert the natural liberty of man,

By senseless terrors and vain fancies led

To slavery. Straight the conquer'd phantoms fled.

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 63. (Crech, tr.) The reference is to Epicurus.

Too often in time past religion has brought forth criminal and shameful actions. (Sæpius olim Religio peperit scelerosa atque impia facta.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 84.

How many evils has religion caused! (Tantum religio potuit suadere malorum!)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 102.

18 Religion
Hides many mischiefs from suspicion.

MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta. Act i, sc. 2.

19 I fear this iron yoke of outward conformity hath left a slavish print upon our necks.

MILTON, Prose Works. Vol. ii, p. 97.

1 Men never do evil so completely and cheerfully as when they do it from religious conviction.

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. xiv, No. 895.

2 Religion, which true policy befriends,
Designed by God to serve man's noblest ends,
Is by that old deceiver's subtle play
Made the chief party in its own decay,
And meets the eagle's destiny, whose breast
Felt the same shaft which his own feathers drest.

KATHERINE PHILIPS, On Controversies in Religion.

3 In religion
What damned error, but some sober brow
Will bless it, and approve it with a text?
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iii, sc. 2, l. 77

4 Your northern religions, harsh and bitter as your skies.

SHORTHOUSE, John Inglesant. Vol. ii, ch. 6.

5 But mark me well; Religion is my name;
An angel once, but now a fury grown,
Too often talked of, but too little known.

SWIFT, The Swan Tripe Club in Dublin.

9 I do not find that the age or country makes the least difference; no, nor the language the actors spoke, nor the religion which they professed, whether Arab in the desert, or Frenchman in the Academy. I see that sensible men and conscientious men all over the world were of one religion,—the religion of well-doing and daring.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: The Preacher.

10 I confidently expect that in the future even more than in the past, faith in an order, which is the basis of science, will not be dissevered from faith in an Ordainer, which is the basis of religion.

ASA GRAY. Inscribed beneath his bust in the Hall of Fame.

11 All religions must be tolerated, . . . for in this country every man must get to heaven his own way.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, Note, on margin of report concerning Roman Catholic schools, 22
June, 1740. (CARLYLE, Frederick the Great.)

Perhaps those simple souls might teach

R. O. CREWE-MILNES, Easter in Florence.

12 Those who obey their conscience are of my religion, and I am of the religion of all those who are brave and good.

HENRY IV OF FRANCE, Letter to Manaud de Batz.

13 We cannot make a religion for others, and we ought not to let others make a religion for us.
Our own religion is what life has taught us.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 1.)

14 I must ever believe that religion substantially good which produces an honest life, and we have been authorized by one whom you and I equally respect, to judge of the tree by its fruit.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 197.

I never told my own religion, nor scrutinized that of another. I never attempted to make a convert, nor wished to change another's creed. I have ever judged of others' religion by their lives . . . for it is from our lives and not from our words, that our religion must be read.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xv, p. 60.

On the whole we must repeat the often repeated saying, that it is unworthy a religious man to view an irreligious one either with alarm or aversion; or with any other feeling than regret, and hope, and brotherly commiseration.

CARLYLE, Essays: Voltaire.

15 Sir, I think all Christians, whether Papists or Protestants, agree to the essential articles, and that their differences are trivial, and rather political than religious.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1763.)

16 The Earl of Shaftesbury said at last . . .
"Men of sense are really but of one religion."
Upon which says the lady of a sudden, "Pray, my lord, what religion is that which men of sense agree in?" "Madam," says the Earl,
"men of sense never tell."

ARTHUR ONSLOW, Speaker of the House of Commons, Footnote to Bishop Gilbert Bur-

net's notice of the Earl of Shaftesbury, History of His Own Times, Vol. i, bk. 1, sec. 96. Froude tells a similar anecdote of Samuel Rogers (Short Studies on Great Subjects: A Plea for the Free Discussion of Theological Difficulties), but this was probably a confusion of memory on Froude's part. The saying has also been attributed to Benjamin Franklin, who probably repeated it upon some occasion.

Old Lord Shaftesbury, conferring with Major Wildman about the many sects of religion, "All wise men are of the same religion." Whereupon a lady in the room . . . demanded what that religion was, To whom Lord Shaftesbury straight replied, "Madam, wise men never tell."

JOHN TOLAND, Clidophorus.

"As for that," said Waldenshare, "sensible men are all of the same religion." "Pray, what is that?" inquired the Prince. "Sensible men never tell."

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 81. Borrowed from Lord Shaftesbury.

1 Every religion is good that teaches man to be good.

THOMAS PAINE, Rights of Man. Pt. ii, ch. v.

2 The humble, meek, merciful, just, pious and devout souls are everywhere of one religion and when death has taken off the mask, they will know one another, though the diverse liveries they wore here make them strangers.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude.

3 There is nothing wanting to make all rational and disinterested people in the world of one religion, but that they should walk together every day.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

4 Religion is like the fashion. One man wears his doublet slashed, another laced, another plain; but every man has a doublet. So every man has his religion. We differ about trimming.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Religion.

5 There is only one religion, though there are a hundred versions of it.

BERNARD SHAW, Plays Pleasant and Unpleasant: Vol. ii, Preface.

6 It was his opinion that no honest man would swerve from the principles in which he was bred, whether Turkish, Protestant or Roman.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 42.

7 There is no very important difference between a New Englander's religion and a Roman's. We both worship in the shadow of our sins: they erect the temples for us. Jehovah has no superiority to Jupiter.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 5 June, 1853.

8 We are all of the same religion without knowing it.

VOLTAIRE, Sermon by "Josias Rossette."

9 He dared not mock the Dervish whirl,
The Brahmin's rite, the Lama's spell;
God knew the heart; Devotion's pearl
Might sanctify the shell.

WHITTIER, My Namesake.

10 They who differ pole-wide serve
Perchance the common Master,
And other sheep He hath than they
Who graze one narrow pasture!

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 2.

16 Dissent, not satisfied with toleration, is not conscience, but ambition.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, on the Acts of Uniformity, House of Commons, Feb., 1772.

All Protestantism, even the most cold and passive, is a sort of dissent. But the religion most prevalent in our northern colonies is a refinement on the principle of resistance; it is the dissidence of dissent, and the Protestantism of the Protestant religion.

EDMUND BURKE, Conciliation with America.

17 Old religious factions are volcanoes burnt out.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, on the petition of the Unitarians, House of Commons, 11 May, 1792.

18 Synods are mystical Bear-gardens,

Where Elders, Deputies, Church-wardens,
And other Members of the Court,
Manage the Babylonish sport.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 3, l. 1095.

Religion spawn'd a various rout
Of petulant capricious sects,
The maggots of corrupted texts,
That first run all religion down,
And after every swarm its own.

MARTIN LUTHER.

3 Life and the Universe show spontaneity;
Down with ridiculous notions of Deity!
Churches and creeds are lost in the mists;
Truth must be sought with the Positivists.

MORTIMER COLLINS, The Positivists.

4 Men will wrangle for religion; write for it;
fight for it; die for it; anything but—live
for it.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Reflections. No. 25.

Bigotry murders Religion, to frighten fools with her ghost.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Reflections. No. 101.

5 Religion should extinguish strife,
And make a calm of human life;
But friends that chance to differ
On points which God has left at large,
How fiercely will they meet and charge,
No combatants are stiffer!

COWPER, Friendship, l. 133.

6 Against her foes Religion well defends
Her sacred truths, but often fears her friends. . . .

But most she fears the controversial pen,
The holy strife of disputatious men.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

I would not do for a Methodist preacher, for I am a poor horseman. I would not suit the Baptists, for I dislike water. I would fail as an Episcopalian, for I am no ladies' man.

JOHN HAY, Letter. (THAYER, Life and Letters of John Hay, i, 59.)

I have noticed all my life that many people think they have religion when they are troubled with dyspepsia.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 99.

10 Sects are stoves, but fire keeps its old properties through them all.

EMERSON, Journals, 1861.

Religion is the relation of the soul to God, and therefore the progress of sectarianism marks the decline of religion. Religion is as effectually destroyed by bigotry as by indifference.

EMERSON, Journals.

11 'Tis a strange thing, Sam, that among us people can't agree the whole week because they go different ways upon Sundays.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, Letter from Leyden, 15
Oct., 1700.

12 The ecclesiastical writers, who, in the heat of religious faction, are apt to despise the profane virtues of sincerity and moderation.

EDWARD GIBBON, *Decline and Fall of the Ro-

13 All sects seem to me to be right in what they assert, and wrong in what they deny.

GOETHE, Conversations with Eckermann.

14 Most men's anger against religion is as if two men should quarrel for a lady they neither of them care for.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 221.

15 The Temple is a good, a holy place,
But quacking only gives it an ill savour;
While saintly mountebanks the porch disgrace,

10
To do it no more is the truest repentance.
MARTIN LUTHER, Of Repentance.

Repentance for past crimes is just and easy;
But Sin-no-more's a task too hard for mortals.
SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Relapse. Act v, sc. 4.

11
Come, fill the Cup, and in the fire of Spring
Your Winter-garment of Repentance fling:
The Bird of Time has but a little way

To flutter—and the Bird is on the Wing.
OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubâiyât. St. 7. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

12
Sweet tastes have sour closes;
And he repents on thorns that sleeps in beds of roses.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, No. 7.
Amid the roses, fierce repentance rears
Her snaky crest: a quick-returning pang
Shoots through the conscious heart.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 999.

13
It is never too late to repent.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

He comes never late who comes repentant.

But with the morning cool repentance came.
SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 12.

But with the morning cool reflection came.
SCOTT, Chronicles of the Canongate. Ch. 4.

17
He who repents his sins is well-nigh innocent. (Quem pænitet peccasse pæne est in-nocens.)
SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 243.

Who after his transgression doth repent,
Is half, or altogether, innocent.
HERRICK, Penitence.

18
Try what repentance can; what can it not?
Yet what can it when one can not repent?
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 65.

Confess yourself to heaven;
Repent what's past; avoid what is to come.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 149.

Well, I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking; I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 5.

Well, if my wind were but long enough to say my prayers, I would repent.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iv, sc. 5, l. 105.

19
Forgive me, Valentine: if hearty sorrow

Be a sufficient ransom for offence,
I tender 't here; I do as truly suffer,
As e'er I did commit.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act v, sc. 4, l. 74.

1
The world will not believe a man repents;
And this wise world of ours is mainly right.
TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 899.

We all go astray, but the least imprudent
Is he who the earliest comes to repent.
(Chacun s'égare, et le moins imprudent Est celui-là qui plus tôt se repent.)
VOLTARE, Nanine. Act ii, sc. 10.

To err is human; but contrition felt for the crime distinguishes the virtuous from the wicked.
(D'uomo è il fallir, ma dal malvagio il buono Scerne il dolor del fallo.)

ALFIERI, Rosmunda. Act iii, sc. 1.

3 Repentance must be something more than mere remorse for sins: it comprehends a change of nature befitting heaven.

LEW WALLACE, Ben Hur. Bk. vi, ch. 2.

4
There's no repentance in the grave.
ISAAC WATTS, Solemn Thoughts.

REPUTATION

I—Reputation: Definitions

5
Where reputation is, almost every thing be-cometh; but where it is not, it must be supplied by punctilios and compliments.

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning:
Civil Knowledge. Sec. 3.

6
To disregard what the world thinks of us is not only arrogant but utterly shameless.
(Neglegere quid de se quisque sentiat, non solum arrogantis est, sed etiam omnino dissoluti.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 28, sec. 99.

The contempt of good reputation is called impudence.

THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan. Pt. i, ch. 6.

7
Reputation is the life of the mind, as breath is the life of the body.

GRACIAN, Complete Gentleman, 96. (Salkeld,
tr.)

8
The invisible thing called a Good Name is made up of the breath of numbers that speak well of you.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 37.

9
The great difficulty is first to win a reputation; the next to keep it while you live; and the next to preserve it after you die.

B. R. HAYDON, Table Talk.

REPUTATION

10
Your reputation will never correspond with the amount of your labor. (Reponsura tuo numquam est par fama labori.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 8, l. 65.

How many people live on the reputation of the reputation they might have made!

O. W. HOLMES, *The Autocrat of the Breakfast-

The blaze of a reputation cannot be blown out, but it often dies in the socket.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Mrs. Thrale, 1
May, 1780.

12
A great reputation is a great noise: the more there is made, the farther off it is heard.

NAPOLEON, Sayings. (EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon.)

13
Reputation demands words, but renown can be content with men's judgments. (Fama vocem utique desiderat, claritas potest etiam citra vocem contingere contenta judicio.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. cii, sec. 17.

14
It sometimes happens that a person, when not known, shines by a good reputation, who, when he is present, is disagreeable to them that see him.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt.
i, ch. 8.

Men . . . have their reputation by distance.

BEN JONSON, Explorata.

15
One man lies in his words and gets a bad reputation; another in his manners, and enjoys a good one.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 25 June, 1852.

II—Reputation: Apothegms

16
'Tis better never to be named than to be ill spoken of.

SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, The Basset Table. Act i.

17
And reputation bleeds in ev'ry word.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 48.

At every word a reputation dies.

POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto iii, l. 16.

I see my reputation is at stake;

My fame is shrewdly gored.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc.
3, l. 227.

Convey a libel in a frown,
And wink a reputation down.

SWIFT, Journal of a Modern Lady.

18
All reputations each age revises. Very few immutable men has history to show.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. v, p. 312.

The reputations of the nineteenth century will one day be quoted to prove its barbarism.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

1 A man has a reputation, and is no longer free, but must respect it.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

2 Many a man's reputation would not know his character if they met on the street.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. iv, p. 82.

3 Reputations, like beavers and cloaks, shall last some people twice the time of others.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Specimens of Jerrold's Wit: Reputations.

4 No man, however great, is known to everybody and no man, however solitary, is known to nobody.

GEORGE MOORE, Impressions: A Great Poet.

5 The worst of me is known, and I can say that I am better than my reputation. (Das Aergste weiss de Welt von mir, und ich Kann sagen, ich bin besser als mein Ruf.)

SCHILLER, Marie Stuart. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 208.

6 Read not my blemishes in the world's report.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 5.

7 There was worlds of reputation in it, but no money.

MARK TWAIN, A Yankee at the Court of King Arthur. Ch. 9.

8 The only way to compel men to speak good of us is to do it.

VOLTAIRE, History of Charles XII: Preliminary Discourse.

9 Associate yourself with men of good quality if you esteem your own reputation; for 'tis better to be alone than in bad company.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Rules of Civility. No. 56. See also under COMPANION.

III—Reputation: Its Value

10 A good name is better than precious ointment.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 1.

A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxii, 1.

A good name is a second life, and the groundwork of eternal existence.

BHASCARA ACHARYA, Lilawati. (LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 4.)

Good renomme is better than richesse.

ANTHONY WOODVILLE, Dictes, 64. (1477)

Good name is worth gold.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wife, l. 75. (1460)

For wise men and old seyn good name is worth gold.

UNKNOWN, Plasidas, 166. (1597)

11 A good name is better than great riches. (Mas vale el buen Nombre que muchas riquezas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 15. (1615)

A good reputation is a fair estate.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 172. (1732)

A good reputation is more valuable than money. (Bona opinio hominum tutior pecunia est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 108.

12 A good name endureth for ever.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xli, 13.

A good report

Makes men live long, although their life be short.

ROWLAND WATKYN, Flamma Sine Fumo: A Good Report.

13 It is reasonable to rejoice, as the day declines, to find that it has been spent with the approbation of mankind.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters. Vol. ii, p. 369.

14 My good name is nevertheless unstained; and so far I have lived without reproach. (Fama tamen clara est, et adhuc sine crimine vixi.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xvii, l. 17.

My good name, which was as white as a tulip.

WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act iv, sc. 1.

15 It's a fine thing to have a finger pointed at one! (At pulchrum est digito monstrari.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 28.

16 If I can only keep my good name, I shall be rich enough. (Ego si bonam famam mihi servasso, sat ero dives.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 228. (Act i, sc. 3.)

17 An honourable reputation is a second patrimony. (Honestus rumor alterum est patrimonium.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 246.

To an upright man a good reputation is the greatest inheritance. (Probo bona fama maxima est hereditas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 537.

He dying bequeathed to his son a good name, Which unsullied descended to me.

JOHN O'KEEFE, The Farmer. Act i.

18 A good name keeps its lustre in the dark.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 18.

If one's name be up, he may lie in bed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

19 I would to God, thou and I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 93.

20 Good name in man and woman, dear my lord, Is the immediate jewel of their souls:

Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;

'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;

But he that filches from me my good name
Robs me of that which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 155.

Who steals a bugle-horn, a ring, a steed,
Or such like worthless thing, has some discretion;

'Tis petty larceny: not such his deed
Who robs us of our fame, our best possession.
BERNI, Orlando Innamorata. Canto lv.

Reputation is a jewel.

VANBRUGH, The Provoked Wife. Act i, sc. 2.

1
The purest treasure mortal times afford
Is spotless reputation: that away,
Men are but gilded loam or painted clay.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 1, l. 177.

'T is better to be vile than vile esteem'd,
When not to be receives reproach of being,
And the just pleasure lost which is so deem'd
Not by our feeling, but by others' seeing.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxxi.

IV—Reputation: Its Worthlessness

2
The solar system has no anxiety about its reputation.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

3
O reputation, reputation! how many a worthless man hast thus set up on high! (Ὁ δόξα δόξα, μυρίοισι δὴ βροτῶν οὐδὲν γερῶσι βλοσυρὸν ῥγκωσας μέγαν.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 319.

4
I consider him of small account who esteems himself just as the popular breath may chance to raise him. (Ich halte nichts von dem, der von sich denkt Wie ihn das Volk vielleicht erheben möchte.)

GOETHE, Iphigenia auf Tauris. Act ii, sc. 1.

Reputation is but a synonym of popularity: dependent on suffrage, to be increased or diminished at the will of the voters.

MRS. ANNA JAMESON, Memoirs and Essays:
Washington Allston.

5
Most people judge men only by their vogue or by their fortune. (La plupart des gens ne jugent des hommes que par la vogue qu'ils ont, ou par leur fortune.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 212.

6
Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well
of you!

New Testament: Luke, vi, 26.

7
Those who have been most celebrated have not always been the most illustrious. (Illustrium alia clariora esse, alia majora.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. iii, epis. 16.

8
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 152.

Reputation is a bubble which a man bursts when he tries to blow it for himself.

EMMA CARLETON. (The Philistine, xi, 82.)

9
Cassio: Reputation! reputation! reputation!
O, I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial. . . .

Iago: Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 262.

10
To be mis-spoken and mis-seen of men,
Which is not for high-seated hearts to fear.
SWINBURNE, Bothwell. Act i, sc. 1.

V—Reputation in Women

11
Nothing is so delicate as the reputation of a woman; it is at once the most beautiful and most brittle of all human things.

FANNY BURNEY, Evelina. Letter 39.

12
The reputation of a woman may also be compared to a mirror of crystal, shining and bright, but liable to be sullied by every breath that comes near it.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, bk. iv, ch. 33.

13
Flavia, most tender of her own good name,
Is rather careless of her sister's fame.

COWPER, Charity, l. 453.

14
Must I live 'twixt spite and fear,
Every day grow handsomer,
And lose my reputation?

JOHN GAY, The Lady's Lamentation.

15
For a strolling damsel bears a doubtful reputation. (Denn ein wanderndes Mädchen ist immer von schwankendem Rufe.)

GOETHE, Hermann und Dorothea, vii, 93.

16
Her name, that was as fresh
As Dian's visage, is now begrimed and black.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 386.

VI—Reputation: Its Loss

17
Who can see worse days than he that yet living doth follow at the funeral of his own reputation?

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: On Death. Sec. 11.
(The authenticity of this essay is doubted.)

18
It is a maxim with me that no man was ever written out of reputation but by himself.

RICHARD BENTLEY. (MONK, Life of Bentley.
Vol. i, ch. 6.)

No book was ever written down by any but itself.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

1 Take away my good name and take away my life.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4306.

2 How many worthy men have we seen survive their own reputation!

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 16.

3 I have offended reputation,
A most un noble swerving.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii, sc. 11, l. 49.

4 Thy death-bed is no lesser than thy land
Wherein thou liest in reputation sick.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 95.

5 The breath
Of accusation kills an innocent name,
And leaves for lame acquittal the poor life,
Which is a mask without it.

SHELLEY, The Cenci. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 137.

6 Bankrupt in fortune and reputation.

SHERIDAN, School for Scandal. Act i, sc. 1.

VII—Reputation: Its Recovery

7 A wounded reputation is seldom cured.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, p. 304.

8 Reputation crackt is a Venice-glass broke.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4021.

Glass, China, and Reputation, are easily crack'd and never well mended.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1750.

9 A lost good name is ne'er retriev'd.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Fox at the Point of Death, l. 46.

10 An ill wound is cured, not an ill name.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

11 Who swerves from innocence, who makes divorce

Of that serene companion—a good name,
Recovers not his loss; but walks with shame,
With doubt, with fear, and haply with remorse.

WORDSWORTH, The River Duddon. Sonnet xxx.

RESEARCH

12 Those hateful persons called Original Researchers.

J. M. BARRIE, My Lady Nicotine. Ch. 14.

13 As is your sort of mind,
So is your sort of search: you'll find
What you desire.

ROBERT BROWNING, Easter-Day. Pt. vii, l. 3.

14 We are as much gainers by finding a new property in the old earth as by acquiring a new planet.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

15 Nothing can be more miserable than the man who goes through the whole round of things, and pries into the things beneath the earth. (Τὰ νέφθην γὰς ἐρευνᾶντος.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 13.

Nothing has such power to broaden the mind as the ability to investigate systematically and truly all that comes under thy observation in life.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iii, sec. 2.

16 Seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 7.

He that seeketh findeth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, i, 10.

Seek till you find and you'll not lose your labour.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 200.

17 Like following life thro' creatures you dissect,

You lose it in the moment you detect.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 29.

18 Far must thy researches go
Wouldst thou learn the world to know;
Thou must tempt the dark abyss
Wouldst thou prove what Being is;
Naught but firmness gains the prize,
Naught but fullness makes us wise,
Buried deep truth ever lies.

SCHILLER, Proverbs of Confucius. (Bowring, tr.)

19 Nothing is so difficult but that it may be found out by seeking. (Nil tam difficile est quin quaerendo investigari possiet.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 675. (Act iv, sc. 2.)

Attempt the end, and never stand to doubt;
Nothing's so hard but search will find it out.

ROBERT HERRICK, Seek and Find.

RESIGNATION

See also Patience

20 Do not kick against the pricks. (Πρὸς κέντρα μὴ λακτίζει.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1624.

It is folly to kick against the pricks. (Advorsum stimulum calces.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 78. (Act i, sc. 2.)

It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

New Testament: Acts, ix, 5.

If you strike the goads with your fists, your hands suffer most. (Si stimulos pugnīs cædis manibus plus dolet.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 54.

Take no sorrow of the thing lost which may not be recovered.

ÆSOP, Fables, ii, 270. (Caxton, tr.)

It's no use crying over spilt milk.

W. S. GILBERT, Foggarty's Fairy. Act i.

Thy will be done, though in my own undoing.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 15, conclusion.

Then let us cheerfu' acquiesce,
Nor make our scanty pleasures less,
By pining at our state.

BURNS, Epistle to Davie.

Resignation open-eyed, conscious, and informed by love, is the only one of our feelings for which it is impossible to become a sham.

JOSEPH CONRAD, A Personal Record: Preface.

To be resign'd when ills betide,
Patient when favours are denied,
And pleased with favours given;—

Dear Chloe, this is wisdom's part,
This is that incense of the heart
Whose fragrance smells to heaven.

NATHANIEL COTTON, The Fireside. St. 11.

It's over, and can't be helped, and that's one consolation, as they always say in Turkey.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 23.

Dare to look up to God and say, "Use me henceforward as Thou wilt; I am of one mind with Thee; I am Thine; I ask exemption from nothing that pleases Thee; lead me where Thou wilt; clothe me in any dress Thou choosest."

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 16, sec. 42.

What is the law of God? To guard what is his own, not to lay claim to what is not his own, but to make use of what is given him, and not to yearn for what has not been given.

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 16, sec. 28.

Give what thou canst, without thee we are poor;
And with thee rich, take what thou wilt away.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 905.

Let him give up his place like a guest well filled. (Cedat uti conviva satur.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 119.

Sinks to the grave in unperceiv'd decay,
While Resignation gently slopes the way.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 110.

(1770) In later editions, Goldsmith changed "sinks" to "bends."

An age that melts with unperceiv'd decay,
And glides in modest innocence away.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 292. (1749)

And varied life steal unperceiv'd away.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene. Act ii, sc. 7.

Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless, not my will, but thine, be done.

New Testament: Luke, xxii, 42.

It seem'd so hard at first, mother, to leave the blessed sun,

And now it seems as hard to stay, and yet His will be done!

TENNYSON, The May Queen: Conclusion.

To will what God doth will, that is the only science

That gives us any rest.

MALHERBE, Consolation. St. 7. (Longfellow, tr.)

That's best

Which God sends. 'Twas His will: it is mine.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto 6, st. 29.

Not as we wanted it,

But as God granted it.

I wait the sharpest blow.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act i, sc. 1, l. 54.

When some great sorrow, like a mighty river,
Flows through your life with peace-destroying power

And dearest things are swept from sight forever,

Say to your heart each trying hour:

"This, too, will pass away."

LANTA WILSON SMITH [?], This, Too, Will Pass Away.

God's plans, like lilies, pure and white, unfold;

We must not tear the close-shut leaves
apart—

Time will reveal the chalices of gold.

MARY LOUISE RILEY SMITH, Sometime.

1 Come wealth or want, come good or ill,
Let young and old accept their part,
And bow before the Awful Will,
And bear it with an honest heart.

THACKERAY, The End of the Play.

2 To kiss the rod.

UNKNOWN, Roman de Renart. (c. 1200. William Caxton, tr. 1481)

And presently all humble kiss the rod.

3 I will neither yield to the song of the siren nor the voice of the hyena, the tears of the crocodile nor the howling o' the Wolf.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act v, sc. 1.

His way once chose, he forward thrust outright,
Nor stepped aside for dangers or delight.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Dauidis. Bk. iv, l. 361.

4 The soldier, armed with resolution.

CIBBER, Richard III (altered). Act ii, sc. 1.

5 Be as a tower, that, firmly set,
Shakes not its top for any blast that blows.

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto v, l. 14. (Cary, tr.)

6 I am in earnest—I will not equivocate—I will not excuse—I will not retreat a single inch AND I WILL BE HEARD.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON, Salutatory of the Liberator. Vol. i, No. 1, 1 Jan., 1831.

LONGFELLOW, The Masque of Pandora. Pt. vi.

Let us, then, be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait.

LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life.

11

In life's small things be resolute and great
To keep thy muscle trained: know'st thou when Fate

Thy measure takes, or when she'll say to
thee,

"I find thee worthy; do this deed for me"?

RESPECTABILITY

20

How much of priceless life were spent

With men that every virtue decks,

And women models of their sex.

ROBERT BROWNING, Respectability.

21

In the bosom of her respectable family resided Camilla.

FANNY BURNES, Camilla. Bk. i, ch. 1.

22

Least is he marked that doth as most men do.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, The Owl.

23

Men are respectable only as they respect.

EMERSON, Lectures and Sketches: Sovereignty of Ethics.

Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time in
you?

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 3, l.
99.

I had so great a respect for the memory of Henry IV, that had a victim I was pursuing taken refuge under his statue on the Pont Neuf, I would have spared his life.

CARTOUCHE, the famous French brigand. (SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iv, ch. 30, sec. 6.)

<sup>1</sup> "Bourgeois," I observed, "is an epithet which the riff-raff apply to what is respectable, and the aristocracy to what is decent."

ANTHONY HOPE, The Dolly Dialogues. No. 17.

<sup>2</sup> Respectability is the dickey on the bosom of civilization.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

The only man to me who is not respectable is the man who consumes more than he produces.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine. Vol. xx, p. 36.

<sup>3</sup> To be respectable implies a multitude of little observances, from the strict keeping of Sunday, down to the careful tying of a cravat.

VICTOR HUGO, Toilers of the Sea. Pt. i, bk. 3, ch. 12.

<sup>4</sup> Respectable means rich, and decent means poor. I should die if I heard my family called decent.

THOMAS L. PEACOCK, Crochet Castle. Ch. 3.

<sup>5</sup> Men have to do some awfully mean things to keep up their respectability.

BERNARD SHAW, Fanny's First Play. Act iii.

We are ashamed of everything that is real about us. . . . The more things a man is ashamed of the more respectable he is.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act i.

<sup>6</sup> 'Tis the misfortune of worthy people that they are cowards. (Un des plus grands malheurs des honnêtes gens c'est qu'ils sont des lâches.)

VOLTAIRE. (EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.)

<sup>7</sup> Q. What sort of a person was Mr. Weare?

A. He was always a respectable person.

Q. What do you mean by respectable?

A. He kept a gig.

REST

See also Idleness; Leisure; Night and Rest; Quiet; Sleep

<sup>8</sup> Rest is not idleness, and to lie sometimes on the grass under the trees on a summer's day, listening to the murmur of the water, or watching the clouds float across the blue sky, is by no means a waste of time.

LORD AVEBURY, Ease of Life. Ch. 4.

<sup>9</sup> The end and the reward of toil is rest.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. ii, l. 136.

<sup>10</sup> Quietly rested under the drums and trappings of three conquests.

LAST REST, see under DEATH.

<sup>12</sup> Ah, what is more blessed than to put care aside, when the mind lays down its burden, and spent with distant travel, we come home again and rest on the couch we longed for? This, this alone, is worth all such toils. (O quid solutis est beatius curis, Cum mens onus reponit, as peregrino Labore fessi venimus larem ad nostrum Desideratoque acquiescimus lecto? Hoc est, quod unumst pro laboribus tantis.)

<sup>13</sup> Absence of occupation is not rest;

A mind quite vacant is a mind distress'd.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 623.

<sup>14</sup> Rest is not quitting The busy career,
Rest is the fitting Of self to one's sphere.

'Tis the brook's motion, Clear without strife,
Fleeing to ocean After its life.

'Tis loving and serving The Highest and Best!
'Tis onwards! unswerving, And that is true rest.

JOHN SULLIVAN DWIGHT, Rest. Sts. 4, 5, 7.
Partly a paraphrase of Goethe.

<sup>15</sup> Rest comes at length, though life be long and dreary;

The day must dawn, and darksome night be passed.

F. W. FABER, Hark, Hark, My Soul!

Time comes with the morning
And rest with the night.

LONGFELLOW, Curfew.

<sup>16</sup> Amidst these restless thoughts this rest I find,
For those that rest not here, there's rest behind.

THOMAS GATAKER, B. D., Born 4 Sept., 1574.

Old Testament: Genesis, viii, 9.

O that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away, and be at rest.

Old Testament: Psalms, lv, 6.

For too much rest itself becomes a pain.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 429. (Pope, tr.)

This hardest penal toil, reluctant rest.

WILLIAM WATSON, To a Friend.

Think not of rest; though dreams be sweet, Start up, and ply your heavenward feet.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Second Sunday in Advent.

We wish him health; he sighs for rest, And Heaven accepts the prayer.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Restoration of the Royal Family.

When Earth's last picture is painted and the tubes are twisted and dried, When the oldest colours have faded, and the youngest critic has died,

We shall rest, and, faith, we shall need it—lie down for an æon or two.

Till the Master of All Good Workmen shall put us to work anew.

RUDYARD KIPLING, When Earth's Last Picture Is Painted.

Master, I've filled my contract, wrought in Thy many lands;

Not by my sins wilt Thou judge me, but by the work of my hands.

Master, I've done Thy bidding, and the light is low in the west,

And the long, long shift is over . . . Master, I've earned it—Rest.

ROBERT W. SERVICE, Song of the Wage Slave.

Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

New Testament: Matthew, xi, 28.

Rest is sweet after strife.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. i, canto 6, st. 25.

Rest springs from strife, and dissonant chords beget

Divinest harmonies.

LEWIS MORRIS, Love's Suicide.

Night is the time for rest;

How sweet, when labours close,

To gather round an aching breast

The curtain of repose.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Night.

Take rest; a field that has rested gives a bountiful crop. (Da requiem; requietus ager bene credita reddit.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 351.

It is well to lie fallow for a while.

11

Rest, rest, perturbed spirit!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 183.

12

An old man, broken with the storms of state, Is come to lay his weary bones among ye; Give him a little earth for charity!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 21.

The cardinal, partly from the fatigues of his journey, partly from the agitation of his anxious mind, was seized with a disorder that turned into a dysentery; and he was able with some difficulty to reach Leicester Abbey. When the abbot and the monks advanced to receive him with much respect, and reverence, he told them that he had come to lay his bones among them; then he immediately took to his bed, whence he never rose more.

HUME, History of England. Ch. 30.

13

Sleep after toil, port after stormy seas,

Ease after war, death after life, does greatly please.

SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto ix, st. 40.

14

And rest, that strengthens into virtuous deeds,

Is one with prayer.

BAYARD TAYLOR, Temptation of Hassan Ben Khaled. St. 4.

foot for foot.

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xix, 21.

These be the words which Moses spake unto all Israel.

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, i, 1.

Breach for breach, eye for eye, tooth for tooth:
as he hath caused a blemish in a man, so shall it be done to him again.

Old Testament: Leviticus, xxiv, 20.

Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth: But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 38, 39. The Sermon on the Mount.

<sup>2</sup> Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed.

Old Testament: Genesis, ix, 6.

It will have blood; they say, blood will have blood.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 122.

Blood will have blood, revenge beget revenge,
Evil must come of evil.

Paræmiologia Græca, 164.)

<sup>6</sup> God's mill grinds slow, but sure.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

God's mills grind slow,
But they grind woe.

WILLIAM R. ALGER, Poetry of the Orient: Delayed Retribution.

<sup>7</sup> Though the mills of God grind slowly, yet they grind exceeding small;

Though with patience he stands waiting, with exactness grinds he all.

FRIEDRICH VON LOGAU, Sinngedichte. (Longfellow, tr. Poetic Aphorisms: Retribution.)

<sup>8</sup> The mill of God grinds late, but grinds to powder.

R. C. TRENCH, Proverbs, 140.

Kabira wept when he beheld the millstone roll;
Of that which passes 'twixt the stones, nought goes forth whole.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 100.

<sup>16</sup> And will not Jupiter call upon himself, think you? Do you imagine that he has condoned everything because, when it thunders, the sacred fire rends in twain an oak tree rather than you and your house?

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 23.

All who bring to court false cases supported by false witnesses, all who before the magistrate deny on oath their honest debts, them we note and take their names to Jove. Day by day He knows who they be that do seek evil here on earth. When the wicked here expect to win their suits by perjury, or press false claims before the judge, the case adjudged is adjudged again by Him. And the fine He fines them far exceeds their gains in courts of law.

PLAUTUS, Rudens: Prologue, l. 13.

Ah, wretch! even though one may at first conceal his perjuries, yet retribution creeps on, though late, with noiseless step. (Ah, miser! et si quis primo perjuriam celat, Sera tamen tacitis Poena venit pedibus.)

TIBULLUS, Odes. Bk. i, ode 9, l. 3.

The divine wrath is slow indeed in vengeance but it makes up for its tardiness by the severity of the punishment. (Lento quidem gradu ad vindictam divina procedit ira, sed tarditatem supplicii gravitate compensat.)

16 The thorns which I have reap'd are of the tree

I planted; they have torn me, and I bleed.
I should have known what fruit would spring from such a seed.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 10.

1 'Twas thine own genius gave the final blow,
And help'd to plant the wound that laid thee
low:

So the struck eagle, stretch'd upon the plain,
No more through rolling clouds to soar
again,

View'd his own feather on the fatal dart,
And wing'd the shaft that quiver'd in his heart.

I—Revenge: Definitions

Revenge is a kind of wild justice; which the more man's nature runs to, the more ought law to weed it out.

BACON, Essays: Of Revenge.

Vengeance is not cured by another vengeance, nor a wrong by another wrong; but each increaseth and aggreggeth the other.

CHAUCER, Melibeus. Sec. 31, l. 2475.

The noblest revenge is to forgive.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

To forget a wrong is the best revenge.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 92.

'Tis more noble to forgive, and more manly to despise, than to revenge an Injury.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1752.

Forgiveness and a smile is the best revenge.

SAMUEL PALMER, Essays on Proverbs, 81.

To revenge is no valour, but to bear.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iii, 5, 39.

Living well is the best revenge.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head.

New Testament: Romans, xii, 19, 20.

Vengeance to God alone belongs;

But, when I think on all my wrongs,

My blood is liquid flame!

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto vi, st. 7.

Call it not Revenge! thus sanctified and thus sublimed, 'Tis duty, 'tis devotion.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Roderick. Pt. iii, l. 397.

There are things Which make revenge a virtue by reflection, And not an impulse of mere anger.

BYRON, Marino Faliero. Act iv, sc. 2.

Souls made of fire, and children of the sun, With whom revenge is virtue.

YOUNG, The Revenge. Act v, sc. 2.

II—Revenge: Apothegms

Revenge in person's certainly no virtue, But then 'tis not my fault if others hurt you.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 30.

He meditates revenge who least complains.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 446.

Revenge is profitable, gratitude is expensive.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 11.

Have ye him on the hip.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt ii, ch. 5. (1546)

In fine he doth apply one special drift

Which was to get the pagan on the hip.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Bk. xlv, l. 117. (1591)

If I can catch him once upon the hip, I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear him.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 3, l. 47. (1596)

Now, infidel, I have you on the hip.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 334.

I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 314. (1604)

1 T' avenge a private, not a public wrong.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 208. (Pope, tr.)

2 Behold, on wrong Swift vengeance waits.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. viii, l. 367. (Pope, tr.)
Long trains of ill may pass unheeded, dumb,
But vengeance is behind, and justice is to come.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Stanzas to the Memory of the Spanish Patriots, l. 44.

A growing dread of vengeance at his heels.
COWPER, Truth, l. 258.

Vengeance, though it comes with leaden feet,
strikes with iron hands.

RICHARDSON, Clarissa Harlowe, iv, 120.

8 Revenge is an inhuman word. (Inhumanum verbum est ultio.)
SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 31.

Revenge is a confession of pain. (Ultio doloris confessio.)
SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 5.

9 Let's make us medicines of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 214.

10 Can vengeance be pursued further than death?

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 3, l. 55.

Vile is the vengeance on the ashes cold,
And envy base, to bark at sleeping fame.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto 8, st. 13.

11 Thus the whirligig of time brings in his revenges.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act v, sc. 1, l. 385.

The wheel is come full circle.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 174.

12 The Christless code,
Must have life for a blow.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. ii, sec. 1, st. 2.

III—Revenge: Its Sweetness

14 I love a dire revenge:
Give me the man that will all others kill,
And last himself.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Little French Lawyer. Act iv, sc. 1.

15 Too many there be to whom a dead enemy smells well, and who find musk and amber in revenge.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. iii, sec. 12. See also under ENEMY.

16 Revenge is a luscious fruit which you must leave to ripen.

ÉMILE GABORIAU, File 113. Ch. 10.

17 'Tis sweet to love; but when with scorn we meet,

Revenge supplies the loss with joys as great.
GEORGE GRANVILLE, British Enchanters. Act v, sc. 1.

18 It [revenge] is sweeter far than flowing honey. ("Ὅς τε πολὺ γλυκίων μέλιτος καταλειβομένοιο.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xviii, l. 109.

"Vengeance is good, sweeter than life itself." Yes; so say the ignorant. (At vindicta bonum vita jucundius ipsa. Nempe hoc indocti.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 180.

19 Though sweet are our friendships, our hopes, our affections,

Revenge on a tyrant is sweetest of all.
THOMAS MOORE, Avenging and Bright.

20 Vengeance is sweet.

WILLIAM PAINTER, Palace of Pleasure, ii, 35. (1566)

It is a devilish phrase in the mouth of men,
That revenge is sweet.

UNKNOWN, Whole Duty of Man: Sunday, 16. (1658)

IV—Revenge: Its Folly

2 A man that studieth revenge keeps his own wounds green, which otherwise would heal and do well.

BACON, Essays: Of Revenge.

3 No animal revenge,
No brute-like punishment of bad by worse.
ROBERT BROWNING, Luria. Act iv.

4 An act by which we make one friend and one enemy is a losing game; because revenge is a much stronger principle than gratitude.
C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

5 Revenge proves its own executioner.
JOHN FORD, The Broken Heart. Act v, sc. 2.

6 There's small revenge in words, but words may be greatly revenged.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

7 He that will venge every wrath,
The longer he liveth the less he hath.
HILL, Commonplace-Book, 140. (c. 1495)
Had I revenged been of every harm,
My coat had never kept me half so warm.
GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Posies, p. 147. (1575)

If I had revenged all wrong,
I had not worn my shirts so long.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 136.

8 Revenge, that thirsty dropsy of our souls,
Which makes us covet that which hurts us most,
Is not alone sweet, but partakes of tartness.
MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act iv, sc. 2.

9 Revenge, at first though sweet,
Bitter ere long back on itself recoils.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 171.

10 It is foolish to wish to be avenged on your neighbor by setting his house on fire. (Stultum est timere quod vitari non potest.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 659.

11 Murder's out of tune,
And sweet revenge grows harsh.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 115.

12 It costs more to revenge injuries than to bear them.

BISHOP THOMAS WILSON, Maxims. No. 303.

V—Revenge: Threats of Revenge

13 Revenge is now the cud that I do chew.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Queen of Corinth. Act iv, sc. 1.

14 I am accustomed to pay men back in their own coin. (Ich bin gewohnt in der Münze wiederzuzahlen in der man mich bezahlt.)

BISMARCK, Speech, to the Ultramontanes, 1870.
See also under PAYMENT.

15 Vengeance, deep-brooding o'er the slain,
Had locked the source of softer woe,
And burning pride and high disdain
Forbade the rising tear to flow.
SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto i, st. 9.

16 By this leek, I will most horribly revenge.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 1, l. 49.

I will have such revenges on you both
That all the world shall—I will do such things,
What they are, yet I know not; but they shall be
The terrors of the earth.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 282.

17 If a Jew wrong a Christian, what is his humility? Revenge. If a Christian wrong a Jew, what should his sufferance be by Christian example? Why, revenge. The villany you teach me, I will execute, and it shall go hard but I will better the instruction.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 71.

If it will feed nothing else, it will feed my revenge.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 56.

18 O, that the slave had forty thousand lives!
One is too poor, too weak for my revenge.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 442.

Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge
Had stomach for them all.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 74.

19 Like to the Pontic sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course
Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on
To the Propontic and the Hellespont,
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,
Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble
love,
Till that a capable and wide revenge
Swallow them up.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 453.

Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 38.

20 Material for future hatred, which he stores up in his heart, to bring it out augmented in bitterness. (Odia in longum jaciens, quæ re-conderet, auctaque promeret.)
TACITUS, Annals. Bk. i, sec. 69.

REVOLUTION

See also Rebellion

<sup>1</sup> Revolutions are not about trifles, but spring from trifles.

ARISTOTLE, Politica. Bk. v, ch. 2, sec. 8.

<sup>2</sup> The surest way to prevent seditions, if the times do bear it, is to take away the matter of them.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Seditions and Troubles.

<sup>3</sup> A reform is a correction of abuses; a revolution is a transfer of power.

EDWARD BULWER-LYTTON, Speech, House of Commons, on the Reform Bill of 1866.

<sup>4</sup> Forgive me. Some women bear children in strength,

And bite back the cry of their pain in self-scorn;

But the birth-pangs of nations will wring us at length

Into wail such as this—and we sit on forlorn

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.

Every man carries a revolution in his waist-coat pocket.

R. W. EMERSON. Referring to the inhabitants of Boston.

<sup>12</sup> The worst of revolutions is a restoration. . . . The people of England, in my opinion, committed a worse offense by the unconstitutional restoration of Charles II than even by the death of Charles I.

CHARLES JAMES FOX, Speech, House of Commons, 10 Dec., 1795.

<sup>13</sup> I am the signet which marks the page where the revolution has been stopped; but when I die it will turn the page and resume its course. (Je suis le signet qui marque la page où la révolution s'est arrêtée; mais quand je serai mort, elle tournera le feuillet et reprendra sa marche.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Remark, to Count Molé.

<sup>14</sup> Revolutions are not made: they come. A revolution is as natural a growth as an oak. It comes out of the past. Its foundations are laid far back.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, at Boston, to the Anti-Slavery Society, 28 Jan., 1852.

Insurrection of thought always precedes insurrection of arms.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, 1 Nov., 1859.

DUC DE ROCHEFOUCAULD-LIANCOURT, to Louis XVI, King of France, on the evening of 14 July, 1789, after the fall of the Bastille. He had hastened to Versailles to apprise the king of the event, and the King had exclaimed, "Mais, c'est une révolte!" (CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. 5, ch. 7.)

<sup>16</sup> I know and all the world knows, that revolutions never go backwards.

WILLIAM HENRY SEWARD, Speech: The Irrepressible Conflict, Oct., 1858.

Revolutions never go backward.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech: Progress, 17 Feb., 1861.

<sup>17</sup> Revolutions have never lightened the burden of tyranny: they have only shifted it to another shoulder.

BERNARD SHAW, Revolutionist's Handbook: Preface.

The effect of every revolt is merely to make the bonds galling.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. ii, p. 245.

We all think that Mr. Roosevelt is only the Kerensky of this revolution.

WILLIAM ALBERT WIRT, quoting, so he claimed, an unnamed "brain-truster" before the Interstate Commerce Committee of the House of Representatives, 23 March, 1934.

1 Repression is the seed of revolution.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, 1845.

REWARD

I—Reward: Definitions and Apothegms

2 Let a man contend to the uttermost

For his life's set prize, be it what it will!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Statue and the Bust.

3 'Tis an old lesson; Time approves it true,
And those who know it best, deplore it most;

When all is won that all desire to woo,
The paltry prize is hardly worth the cost.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 35.

The prize is not without dust. (Palma non sine pulvere.)

a riposte, Nous l'avons eu, Votre Rhin Allemand (We have had it, your German Rhine), which appeared in the Athenæum, 13 Aug., 1870.

13

Majestic Rhine, . . .

A blending of all beauties,—streams and dells,
Fruit, foliage, crag, wood, corn-field, mountain, vine,
And chiefless castles breathing stern farewells.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 46.

The castled crag of Drachenfels
Frowns o'er the wide and winding Rhine,
Whose breast of waters broadly swells
Between the banks which bear the vine;
And hills all rich with blossom'd trees,
And fields which promise corn and wine,
And scatter'd cities crowning these,
Whose far white walls along them shine.

(Am Rhein, am Rhein, da wachsen uns're Reben.)

MATTHEIAS CLAUDIUS, Rheinweinlied.

16 In Köhln, a town of monks and bones,
And pavements fang'd with murderous stones
And rags and hags, and hideous wenches;
I counted two and seventy stenchs,
All well defined, and several stinks!
Ye Nymphs that reign o'er sewers and sinks,
The river Rhine, it is well known,
Doth wash your city of Cologne;
But tell me, Nymphs, what power divine
Shall henceforth wash the river Rhine?

COLERIDGE, Cologne.

17 The Rhine! the Rhine! a blessing on the Rhine!

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. i, ch. 2.

Beneath me flows the Rhine, and, like the stream of Time, it flows amid the ruins of the Past.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. i, ch. 3.

18 The Rhine, the Rhine, the German Rhine!
Who guards today my stream divine?
(Zum Rhein, zum Rhein, zum deutschen Rhein!

Wer will des Stromes Hüter sein?)

MAX SCHNECKENBURGER, Die Wacht am Rhein.

I—Riches: Definitions

19

Riches are the baggage of virtue; they cannot be spared, nor left behind, but they hinder the march.

FRANCIS BACON, Baconiana, p. 65.

1 Surplus wealth is a sacred trust which its possessor is bound to administer in his lifetime for the good of the community.

ANDREW CARNEGIE, The Gospel of Wealth.

2 Communism is a hateful thing. . . . But the communism of combined wealth and capital . . . is not less dangerous than the communism of oppressed poverty and toil.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Annual Message, 1888.

3 Wealth is an application of mind to nature; and the art of getting rich consists not in industry, much less in saving, but in a better order, a timeliness, in being at the right spot.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth.

It is the perpetual tendency of wealth to draw on the spiritual class, not in this coarse way, but in plausible and covert ways.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: The Man of Letters.

4 The ideal social state is not that in which each gets an equal amount of wealth, but in which each gets in proportion to his contribution to the general stock.

HENRY GEORGE, Social Problems. Ch. 6.

5 It cannot be repeated too often that the safety of great wealth with us lies in obedience to the new version of the Old World axiom—Richesse oblige.

HOLMES, A Mortal Antipathy: Introduction.

6 Know from the bounteous heavens all riches flow;
And what man gives, the gods by man bestow.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xviii, l. 26. (Pope, tr.)

7 It is great riches to a man to live sparingly with an even mind. (Divitiæ grandes homini sunt, vivere parce Æquo animo.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. v, l. 1117.
See also under MODERATION.

8 Riches, the incentives to evil, are dug out of the earth. (Effodiuntur opes, irritamenta malorum.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 140.

9 Usefulness is value in the hands of the valiant. Wealth is the possession of the valuable by the valiant.

RUSKIN, Ad Valorem.

10 The people of this country are not jealous of fortunes, however great, which have been built up by the honest development of great enterprises, which have been actually earned by business energy and sagacity; they are jealous only of speculative wealth, of the wealth which has been piled up by no effort at all, but only by shrewd wits playing on the credulity of others. . . . This is "predatory wealth," and is found in stock markets.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, N. Y., 13 April, 1908.

It is almost as difficult to reconcile the principles of republican society with the existence of billionaires as of dukes.

THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON.

II—Riches: Apothegms

11 No man's fortune can be an end worthy of his being.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

12 The man who dies rich dies disgraced.

ANDREW CARNEGIE, The Gospel of Wealth.

The amassing of wealth is one of the worst species of idolatry, no idol more debasing.

ANDREW CARNEGIE, Memorandum, made in 1868, and found among his papers after his death.

Malefactors of great wealth.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Provincetown, Mass., 20 Aug., 1907.

13 As rich as Cræsus. (Superare Crassum divitiis.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Atticum. Bk. i, ch. 4, fin.

14 An Embarrassment of Riches. (Embarras de Richesse.)

D'ALLAINVAL, Title of comedy, 1726. Often quoted, "Embarass des richesses." Played at the Haymarket, London, in a translation by John Ozell, 9 Oct., 1738.

15 A rich man is an honest man, no thanks to him, for he would be a double knave to cheat mankind when he had no need of it.

DANIEL DEFOE, Serious Reflections.

16 Riches are gotten with care, kept with pain, and lost with grief.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4043.

17 The house laughs with silver. (Ridet argento domus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 11, l. 6.

Knowledge makes one laugh, but wealth makes one dance.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

18 If every man who wears a laced coat (that he can pay for) was extirpated, who would miss them?

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. i, p. 253.

19 I come to see what riches thou bearest in thy breeches.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act i, sc. 1.

20 Infinite riches in a little room.

MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta. Act i, l. 72.

1 Excess of wealth is cause of covetousness.
MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta. Act i, l. 356.
See also under AVARICE.

2 I am rich beyond the dreams of avarice.
EDWARD MOORE, The Gamester. Act ii, sc. 2.
(1753)

We are not here to sell a parcel of boilers and vats, but the potentiality of growing rich beyond the dreams of avarice.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Remark, at the sale of Thrale's brewery. He was one of the executors of the estate, and at the sale, as Boswell says, was "bustling about like an excise-man." (BOSWELL, Life, 1781)

3 And all your fortune lies beneath your hat.
JOHN OLDHAM, Lines to a Friend About to Leave the University.

4 He heapeth up riches, and knoweth not who shall gather them.
Old Testament: Psalms, xxxix, 6.

5 No man was ever as rich as all men ought to be.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

6 A golden bit does not make a better horse.
(Non faciunt meliorem equum aurei freni.)
SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xli, 6.

7 We must spurn riches, the diploma of slavery.
(Spernendæ opes: auctoramenta sunt servitutum.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, 34.

Dare, my guest, to despise riches. (Aude, hospes, contemnere opes.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. viii, l. 364.

8 Rich men without convictions are more dangerous in modern society than poor women without chastity.

BERNARD SHAW, Plays, Pleasant and Unpleasant: Preface.

9 He that is proud of riches is a fool. For if he be exalted above his neighbours because he hath more gold, how much inferior is he to a gold mine!

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living: Of Humility.

10 Superfluous wealth can buy superfluities only. Money is not required to buy one necessary of the soul.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

11 A rich person ought to have a strong stomach.

WALT WHITMAN, Collect, p. 324.

III—Riches: Their Acquisition

12 He may love riches that wanteth them, as much as he that hath them.

RICHARD BAXTER, Christian Ethics.

13 The Gospel of Wealth advocates leaving free the operation of laws of accumulation.

ANDREW CARNEGIE, The Gospel of Wealth: Advantages of Poverty.

14 If the search for riches were sure to be successful, though I should become a groom with whip in hand to get them, I will do so. As the search may not be successful, I will follow after that which I love.

CONFUCIUS. (EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.)

15 There are only three ways by which any individual can get wealth—by work, by gift, or by theft. And, clearly, the reason why the workers get so little is that the beggars and thieves get so much.

HENRY GEORGE, Social Problems, p. 84.

16 Base wealth preferring to eternal praise.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiii, l. 368. (Pope, tr.)

The ungovernable passion for wealth. (Opum furiosa cupido.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 211.

17 He who wants riches, wants them at once.
(Dives qui fieri vult, et cito vult fieri.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 176.

18 No just man ever became rich all at once.
(Οὐδείς ἐπλούτησε ταχέως δίκαιος ὢν.)

MENANDER, Fragment.

No good man ever became suddenly rich.
(Repente dives nemo factus est bonus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 837.

19 If at great things thou would'st arrive,
Get riches first, get wealth, and treasure heap.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. ii, l. 426.

See also MONEY: MAKING MONEY.

20 The man who gets rich quickly must economize quickly, or he'll go hungry quickly.
(Qui homo mature quæsit pecuniam, Nisi eam mature parsit, mature esurit.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 380. (Act iii, sc. 1.)

21 He that maketh haste to be rich shall not be innocent.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxviii, 20.

22 The shortest way to riches is by contempt of riches. (Brevissima ad divitias per contemptum divitiarum via est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxii, 3.

23 Knowing how to make money and also how to keep it; either one of these gifts might make a rich man.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, 3.

<sup>1</sup> Riches are for spending.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Expense.

<sup>2</sup> Be not penny-wise; riches have wings, and sometimes they fly away of themselves, sometimes they must be set flying to bring in more.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Riches.

Penny wise and pound foolish.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 330. (1605);

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader, p. 35. (1621)

Riches have wings, and grandeur is a dream.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 263.

Riches, like insects, when conceal'd they lie, Wait but for wings, and in their season fly.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 169.

Riches certainly make themselves wings; they fly away as an eagle toward heaven.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 5.

"What is wealth?" the king would say,

"Even this shall pass away."

THEODORE TILTON, All Things Shall Pass Away.

Riches abuse them that know not how to use them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4040.

<sup>5</sup> What good to you is a vast weight of silver and gold, if in terror you stealthily bury it in a hole in the ground? (Quid juvat im-mensum te argenti pondus et auri Fur-tim de-fossa timidum deponere terra?)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 41.

<sup>6</sup> Wealth is not his who has it, but his who enjoys it.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, Ital.-Eng., 12;

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1736.

<sup>7</sup> It is better to live rich than to die rich.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1773.)

Life is short. The sooner that a man begins to enjoy his wealth the better.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1773.)

<sup>8</sup> The shade of the rich man will carry nothing to his abode in the other world. (Nil feret ad manes divitis umbra suos.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 14, l. 12.

You are wealthy. And what is the end of it? When you depart, do you trail your riches after you as you are being pulled to your tomb? You gather wealth by spending time, but you cannot pile up a heavier measure of life.

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 60.)

If your riches are yours, why don't you take them with you to t'other world?

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1751.

They'll make no pocket in my shroud.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Dead Millionaire.

<sup>9</sup> They who know all the wealth they have, are poor;

He's only rich that cannot tell his store.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Against Fruition.

Not he that knows the wealth he has is poor, But he that dares not touch, nor use, his store.

EDMUND WALLER, In Answer to Suckling's Verses.

<sup>10</sup> Riches get their value from the mind of their possessor; they are blessings to those who know how to use them, curses to those who do not. (Atque hæc perinde sunt ut illius animust qui ea possidet; Qui uti scit ei bona; illi qui non utitur recte mala.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 195. (Act i, sc. 2.)

V—Riches: Master and Servant

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. 6, Divitiæ.

<sup>12</sup> If we command our wealth, we shall be rich and free; if our wealth commands us, we are poor indeed.

EDMUND BURKE, Letters on a Regicide Peace.

<sup>13</sup> [The rich] are indeed rather possessed by their money than possessors.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 12.

<sup>14</sup> Riches serve a wise man, but command a fool.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4047.

<sup>15</sup> Riches either serve or govern the possessor. (Imperat aut servit collecta pecunia cuique.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10, l. 47.

VI—Riches: Their Power

16 Great wealth always supports the party in power, no matter how corrupt it may be. It never exerts itself for reform, for it instinctively fears change.

HENRY GEORGE, Social Problems, p. 85.

17 Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey, Where wealth accumulates, and men decay.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 51.

18 Riches oft bring harm and ever fear.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12.

1 As money grows, care and greed for greater riches follow after. (Crescentem sequitur cura pecuniam Majorumque fames.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 16, l. 17.

2 Wealth first, the ready pander of all sin,
Brought foreign manners, foreign vices in.

4 Great wealth implies great loss.

LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way. No. 44.

5 The rich man's son inherits cares;
The bank may break, the factory burn,
A breath may burst his bubble shares,
And soft white hands could hardly earn
A living that would serve his turn.

J. R. LOWELL, The Heritage.

6 It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

New Testament: Matthew, xix, 24.

It is as hard to come as for a camel
To thread the postern of a small needle's eye.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 5, l. 16.

How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!

New Testament: Luke, xviii, 24; Mark, x, 24.

Remember that sore saying spoken once
By Him that was the truth, "How hard it is
For the rich man to enter into heaven!"
Let all rich men remember that hard word.

TENNYSON, Queen Mary. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 134.

7 The greater your fortune, the greater your cares. (Plus est sollicitus magis beatus.)

PERIANDER. (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententiæ, l. 23.)

He who multiplies Riches multiplies Cares.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1744.

As the carle riches, he wretches.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

8 Riches are a cause of evil, not because, of themselves, they do any evil, but because they goad men on to evil. (Divitias esse causam malorum, non quia ipsæ faciunt aliquid, sed quia facturos irritant.)

POSIDONIUS. (SENECA, Epistolæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxvii, sec. 31.)

9 A great fortune is a great slavery. (Magna servitus est magna fortuna.)

SENECA, Ad Polybium de Consolatione. Sec. 26.

Gilded ceilings disturb men's rest, and purple robes cause watchful nights. Oh, if the hearts of rich men were laid bare, what fears would be seen therein!

SENECA, Hercules Œtæus, l. 646.

10 It is the wretchedness of being rich that you have to live with rich people.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts.

11 Wealth breeds satiety, satiety outrage.

SOLON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Sec. 15.)

12 The rich man's wealth is most enemy unto his health.

GEORGE WHETSTONE, The English Myrror, 14. (1586)

RIDDLE

13 If ye had not ploughed with my heifer, ye had not found out my riddle.

Old Testament: Judges, xiv, 18.

Riddle me, riddle me ree.

UNKNOWN. Old saying, meaning read my riddle correctly.

It may well be doubted whether human ingenuity can construct an enigma of the kind which human ingenuity may not, by proper application resolve.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Gold Bug.

14 What animal goes on four legs in the morning, two at noon, and three in the evening?

The riddle of the Sphinx. The Sphinx, in Greek legend, was a monster with the head and breasts of a woman, the body of a dog, the tail of a serpent, the paws of a lion, and a human voice. It frequented the neighborhood of Thebes, propounded riddles and devoured the people who could not solve them. The Thebans had been told by an oracle that the Sphinx would destroy herself if her riddle was solved, so the king promised his crown and his sister Jocasta to whoever should answer it. This was done by Œdipus, who observed that a man walked on all fours when a child, erect in the noon of life, and supported by a stick in old age. The Sphinx, on hearing the answer, dashed her head against a rock.

The Sphinx must solve her own riddle.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.

As that Theban monster that propos'd her riddle,
And him, who solv'd it nor devour'd.

MILTON.

I am plain Davus, not Œdipus [the solver of riddles.] (Davus sum, non Œdipus.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 194. (Act i, sc. 2.)

15 All that we caught, we left behind, and carried away all that we did not catch. ("Ὅσ' ἐλομεν λιπόμεσθ', ὅσα δ' οὐχ ἐλομεν φερομεσθα.")

The riddle, as recorded by PLUTARCH, and in The Contest of Homer and Hesiod, which caused the death of Homer, through vexation at his inability to solve it. It was propounded by some boys whom Homer met as they were returning from fishing, when he asked them if they had caught anything. They referred to fleas or lice, not to fish.

Beware of the riddle of the young boys. ('ἄλλὰ νέων παίδων αἰνίγμα φύλαξαι.)

UNKNOWN. Oracle given to Homer. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xiv, No. 65.)

In Ios the boys, weaving a riddle at the bidding of the Muses, vexed to death Homer, the singer of heroes.

ALCÆUS OF MESSENE, On Homer. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 1.)

Hereupon Homer remembered the oracle and, perceiving that the end of his life had come, composed his own epitaph. And while he was retiring from that place, he slipped in a clayey place and fell upon his side, and died, it is said, the third day after.

ALCIDAMUS, The Contest of Homer and Hesiod. Sec. 326.

There was a man bespake a thing,
Which when the owner home did bring,
He that made it did refuse it:
And he that brought it would not use it,
And he that hath it doth not know
Whether he hath it yea or no.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Riddle Upon a Coffin.

2
Much upon this riddle runs the wisdom of the world.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 242.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act i, sc. 1, l. 209.

4
A handless man had a letter to write,
And he who read it had lost his sight;
The dumb repeated it word for word,
And deaf was the man who listened and heard.

WILLIAM WHEWELL, A Riddle.

A handless man a letter did write,
A dumb dictated it word for word;
The person who read it had lost his sight,
And deaf was he who listened and heard.
GEORGE BORROW, The Bible in Spain. A more accurate translation of an old Spanish riddle than that of Whewell.

5
'Twas whispered in heaven, 'twas muttered in hell.

HORACE SMITH, A Riddle on the Letter H.

'Twas in heaven pronounced, and 'twas muttered in hell,
And echo caught faintly the sound as it fell;
On the confines of earth 'twas permitted to rest,
And the depth of the ocean its presence confessed . . .

Yet in shade let it rest, like a delicate flower,
Ah, breathe on it softly,—it dies in an hour.

CATHARINE FANSHAW, A Riddle on the Letter H. Often wrongly credited to Lord Byron.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 628.

II—Ridicule: The Test of Truth

5 Jane borrow'd maxims from a doubting school,

And took for truth the test of ridicule;

Lucy saw no such virtue in a jest,

Truth was with her of ridicule the test.

CRABBE, Tales of the Hall. Bk. viii, l. 126.

6 Ridicule is the test of truth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

7 Truth, 'tis supposed, may bear all lights; and one of those principal lights or natural mediums by which things are to be viewed in order to a thorough recognition is ridicule itself.

LORD SHAFTESBURY, Essay on the Freedom of Wit and Humour. Pt. i, sec. 1.

How comes it to pass, then, that we appear such cowards in reasoning, and are so afraid to stand the test of ridicule?

LORD SHAFTESBURY, Characteristics: A Letter Concerning Enthusiasm.

We have oftener than once endeavoured to attach some meaning to that aphorism, vulgarly imputed to Shaftesbury, which however we can find nowhere in his works, that "ridicule is the test of truth."

CARLYLE, Essays: Voltaire.

It is commonly said, and more particularly by Lord Shaftesbury, that ridicule is the best test of truth.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 6 Feb., 1752.

RIDICULOUSNESS

8 They that are serious in ridiculous things will be ridiculous in serious affairs.

CATO THE ELDER. (PLUTARCH, Roman Apothegms.)

9 I distrust those sentiments that are too far removed from nature, and whose sublimity is blended with ridicule; which two are as near one another as extreme wisdom and folly.

DESLANDES, Réflexions sur les Grands Hommes qui Sont Morts en Plaisantant.

10 There is nothing one sees oftener than the ridiculous and magnificent, such close neighbors that they touch. (L'on ne saurait mieux faire voir que le magnifique et le ridicule sont si voisins qu'ils se touchent.)

FONTENELLE, Dialogues des Morts. (1683)

11 The ridiculous usually touches the sublime. (En général, le ridicule touche au sublime.)

MARMONTEL, Œuvres Complètes. Vol. v, p. 188.

12 From the sublime to the ridiculous is but a step. (Du sublime au ridicule il n'y a qu'un pas.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, to the Abbé du Pradt, on his return from Russia, referring to the retreat from Moscow. (DU PRADT, Histoire de l'Ambassade dans la Grande Duché de Varsovie, p. 215.) The saying has been attributed also to Talleyrand.

There is but one step from triumph to ruin.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. (LOCKHART, Life.)

13 The sublime and the ridiculous are so close that they touch.

EDWARD LORD OXFORD, Commonplace-Book.

14 The sublime and the ridiculous are often so nearly related that it is difficult to class them separately. One step above the sublime makes the ridiculous, and one step above the ridiculous makes the sublime again.

THOMAS PAINE, The Age of Reason. Pt. ii.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Second Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1865.

They say that if you do this you will be standing with the Abolitionists. I say stand with anybody that stands right. Stand with him while he is right and part with him when he goes wrong.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, Peoria, Ill., 16 Oct., 1854. The following, attributed to Lincoln, but not found, is probably based upon the above speech: "I am not bound to win, but I am bound to be true. I am not bound to succeed, but I am bound to live up to what light I have. I must stand with anybody that stands right; stand with him while he stands right, and part company with him when he goes wrong."

13 They are slaves who dare not be
In the right with two or three.

J. R. LOWELL, Stanzas on Freedom.

14 No one can have a true idea of right until he does it; any genuine reverence for it until he has done it often and with cost; any peace ineffable in it, till he does it always and with alacrity.

And it is the early bird, as the saying goes, that gets the rations.

R. L. STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch. 30.

The early bird gets the late one's breakfast.

CHAMBERLAIN, West Worcester Words, 39.

The early tire gits the roofin' tack.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 118.

At grammar-school I learned a verse, that is this: Sanat, sanctificat et ditat surgere mane. That is to say, Early rising maketh a man holy in body, holier in soul, and richer in goods.

SIR ANTHONY FITZHERBERT, Husbandry, 101. (1523)

Rise you early in the morning, for it hath properties three:

Holiness, health, and happy wealth, as my father taught me.

HUGH RHODES, Boke of Nurture, 72. (1577)

Early to bed and early to rise,

Makes a man healthy and wealthy and wise.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 38. (1670)

Who riseth late must trot all the day.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, The Way to Wealth.

He that will thrive must rise at five;

He that hath thriven may lie till seven;

He that will never thriven may lie till eleven.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, 102. (c. 1590)

Cock crows in the morning to tell us to rise,

And he who lies late will never be wise;

For early to bed and early to rise

Is the way to be healthy and wealthy and wise.

UNKNOWN. Old Nursery Rhyme.

He that riseth first is first dressed.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

He that hath the name to be an early riser may sleep till noon.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 11. (1659)

Go to bed with the lamb and rise with the lark.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England.

To rise with the lark and go to bed with the lamb.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Court and Country.

Rise with the lark, and with the lark to bed.

JAMES HURDIS, The Village Curate.

Awake, the morning shines, and the fresh field Calls us; we lose the prime, to mark how spring

Our tended plants, how blows the citron grove, What drops the myrrh, and what the balmy reed,

How nature paints her colours, how the bee Sits on the bloom, extracting liquid sweet.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 20.

An early stirrer, by the rood!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 3.

I am glad I was up so late; for that's the reason I was up so early.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 37.

Not to be abed after midnight is to be up betimes.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 1.

Yet never sleep the sun up. Prayer shou'd

Dawn with the day. There are set, awful hours

'Twixt heaven and us. The manna was not good

After sun-rising; far day sullies flowers.

Rise to prevent the sun; sleep doth sin glut, And heaven's gate opens when the world's is shut.

HENRY VAUGHAN, Silex Scintillans: Rules and Lessons. St. 2.

II—Rising Early: Its Drawbacks

Oh! How I hate to get up in the morning,

Oh! How I'd love to remain in bed;

For the hardest blow of all

Is to hear the bugler call,

"You've got to get up, You've got to get up,

You've got to get up this morning!"

IRVING BERLIN, Oh! How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning. Written at Camp Upton in 1917.

Heaven's help is better than early rising.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 34.

Prone on my back I greet arriving day,

A day no different than the one just o'er;

When I will be, to practically say,

Considerable like I have been before.

Why then get up? Why wash, why eat, why pray?

—Oh, leave me lay!

I hadn't ought to want things different

To what transpires every single day;

But I keep wishing that I could of went

From this heart-rendering dulness quite away.

And yet, why move? there's always rent to pay.

—Oh, leave me lay!

ELEANOR PRESCOTT HAMMOND, Oh, Leave Me Lay. Published anonymously in the Contributors' Column of the Atlantic Monthly for August, 1922, as "by a well-known scholar."

They were early up, and never the nearer.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546)

Wherein the poet's fortune is, I fear,

Still to be early up, but ne'er the near.

BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub: Epilogue. (1633)

Let Taylor preach, upon a morning breezy, How well to rise while night and larks are flying—

For my part, getting up seems not so easy By half as lying.

THOMAS HOOD, Morning Meditations.

Wherefore should master rise before the hens

Have laid the eggs?
THOMAS HOOD, Morning Meditations.

A man that's fond precociously of stirring,
Must be a spoon!
THOMAS HOOD, Morning Meditations.

1 Yonder see the morning blink:
The sun is up, and up must I,
To wash and dress and eat and drink
And look at things and talk and think
And work, and God knows why.
A. E. HOUSMAN, Last Poems. No. 11.

2 Many a good man has caught his death of cold getting up in the middle of the night to go home.
LUKE MCLUKE, Epigram.

3 He that blesseth his friend with a loud voice, rising early in the morning, it shall be counted
a curse to him.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 14.

4 Yes; bless the man who first invented
sleep, . . .
But blast the man with curses loud and
deep, . . .
Who first invented, and went round advertis-
ing,
That artificial cut-off—Early Rising.
JOHN GODFREY SAXE, Early Rising.

III—Rising: Exhortations

5 Up rose the sun, and up rose Emelye.
CHAUCER, The Knights Tale, l. 1415.

6 Waste not these hours so fresh and gay;
Leave thy soft couch and haste away.
JOANNA BAILLIE, Wake, Lady.

7 Arise! come down! and, heart to heart,
Love, let me clasp in thee all these—
The sunbeam, of which thou art part,
And all the rapture of the breeze!—
Arise! come down! loved that thou art!
MADISON CAWEIN, Morning Serenade.

8 Awake thee, my lady love, wake thee and rise!
The sun through the bower peeps into thine
eyes!
GEORGE DARLEY, Sylvia: Serenade.

9 Awake, awake, the morn will never rise,
Till she can dress her beauty at your eyes.
WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Morning.

10 All want day till thy beauty rise;
For the grey morn breaks from thine eyes.
NATHANIEL FIELD, Matin Song.

11 O swan of slenderness, Dove of tenderness,
Jewel of joys, arise!
ALFRED PERCEVAL GRAVES, The Little Red Lark.

12 Pack, clouds, away, and welcome, day,
With night we banish sorrow.
Sweet air, blow soft; mount, lark, aloft
To give my Love good-morrow!
THOMAS HEYWOOD, Matin Song.

13 And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes:
With everything that pretty bin,
My lady sweet, arise.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 26.

14 I arise from dreams of thee
In the first sweet sleep of night.
SHELLEY, Lines to an Indian Air.

RIVALRY

15 The earth cannot brook two suns, nor Asia
two masters.
ALEXANDER THE GREAT, to Darius. (PLUTARCH, Apothegms.)

We could not stall together
In the whole world.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 39.

Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere;
Nor can one England brook a double reign.
SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 65.

There was a Brutus once that would have brook'd
The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome
As easily as a king.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 159.

For monarchs ill can rivals brook,
Even in a word, or smile, or look.
SCOTT, Marmion. Canto v, st. 13.

16 Rival and imitator of my studies. (Æmulo atque imitatore studiorum.)
CICERO, Pro Marcello. Ch. i, sec. 2.

17 Sternhold himself he out-Sternholded.
JOHN GAY, Verses to be Placed Under the Picture of Sir Richard Blackmore.

18 No man keeps such a jealous lookout as a rival.
J. C. AND W. A. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

19 Rivalry is good for mortals. (Ἀγαθὴ δ' ἔστι ἡδε βροτοῖσιν.)
HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 24.

20 Without rivals thou lovest alone thyself and thine. (Sine rivali teque et tua solus amares.)
HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 444.

A man who loved himself without having any rivals. (Un homme qui s'aimait sans avoir de rivaux.)
LA FONTAINE, Rochejoucauld.

21 Whoever strives, O Julius, to rival Pindar, relies on wings fastened with wax by Dædalean craft, and is doomed to give his name to some crystal sea.

(Pindarum quisquis studet æmulari,
Jule, ceratis ope Dædalea

Nititur pinnis vitreo daturus Nomina ponto.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 2, l. 1. Horace is alluding to the story of Icarus, who fell into the sea, afterwards called Icarian.

1 Endure a rival with patience. (Rivalem patienter habe.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 539.

2 In arms and science 'tis the same;
Our rival's hurts create our fame.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto i, l. 196.

3 Nothing is ever done beautifully which is done in rivalry, nor nobly which is done in pride.

JOHN RUSKIN, Ethics of the Dust.

4 And each upon his rival glared,
With foot advanced, and blade half bared.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto ii, st. 34.

The obligation of our blood forbids
A gory emulation 'twixt us twain.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 122.

5 "Rivals" in the primary sense of the word, are those who dwell on the banks of the same river. . . . There is no such fruitful source of contention as a water-right.

RICHARD CHENEVIX TRENCH, The Study of Words. Lecture 7.

RIVER

I—Rivers: Apothegms

6 A river is the cosiest of friends. You must love it and live with it before you can know it.

G. W. CURTIS, Lotus-Eating: Hudson and Rhine.

7 A thousand years hence, the river will run as it did.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 436.

8 Two ways the rivers
Leap down to different seas, and as they roll
Grow deep and still, and their majestic presence

Becomes a benefaction to the towns
They visit.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. v.

9 Men travel far to see a city, but few seem curious about a river. Every river has, nevertheless, its individuality, its great silent interest. Every river has, moreover, its influence over the people who pass their lives within sight of its waters.

H. S. MERRIMAN, The Sowers. Ch. 2.

10

He that had never seen a river imagined the first he met to be the sea.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 26.

11

Rivers are roads that move and carry us whither we wish to go. (Les rivières sont des chemins qui marchant et qui portent où l'on veut aller.)

PASCAL, Pensées. No. 17.

12

He who knows not the way to the sea, should seek a river for companion. (Viam qui nescit, qua deveniat ad mare, Eum oportet amnem quærere comitem sibi.)

PLAUTUS, Pænulus, l. 627. (Act iii, sc. 3.)

Follow the river and you will find the sea.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

13

The deepest rivers flow with the smallest noise. (Altissima quæque flumina minimo sono labuntur.)

QUINTUS CURTIS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni. See also WATER: STILL WATERS.

14

Rain added to a river that is rank
Perforce will force it overflow its bank.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 71.

15

The river glideth at his own sweet will.

WORDSWORTH, Sonnet: Earth Has Not Anything.

II—Rivers: Their Source

16

Ye rivers, backwards run! (Redite sursum flumina!)

AUSONIUS, Epistles. Frag. 35.

17

Upward to their fountains the sacred rivers run. ("Ἄνω ποταμῶν ἱερῶν χωροῦσι παρὰ.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 410. Meaning that things are upside down.

18

The soul aspiring pants its source to mount,
As streams meander level with their fount.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY, The Omnipresence of the Deity. Pt. i.

We take this on the whole to be the worst similitude in the world. In the first place, no stream meanders or can possibly meander level with the fount. In the next place, if streams did meander level with their founts, no two motions can be less like each other than that of meandering level and that of mounting upwards.

MACAULAY, Review of Montgomery's Poems. (Edinburgh Review, April, 1830.) Montgomery evidently thought Macaulay's criticism well founded, for these lines were omitted from subsequent editions of the poem.

19

Your mountains shall bend
And your streams ascend,
Ere Margaret be our foeman's bride!

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto i, st. 18.

1
Of nothing comes nothing: springs rise not above

Their source in the far-hidden heart of the mountains:

Whence then have descended the Wisdom and Love

That in man leap to light in intelligent fountains?

J. T. TROWBRIDGE, The Missing Leaf. St. 11.

III—Rivers: Description

2
And see the rivers how they run
Through wood and mead, in shade and sun,
Sometimes swift, sometimes slow,
Wave succeeding wave, they go
A various journey to the deep.
Like human life to endless sleep.

JOHN DYER, Grongar Hill, l. 93.

See the rivers, how they run,
Changeless toward a changeless sea.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act ii,
sc. 2.

3
Like streams that keep a summer mind
Snow-hid in Jenooary.

J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'.

4
By shallow rivers, to whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, The Passionate Shepherd to His Love. Included in The Passionate Pilgrim, 1599; quoted by Shakespeare, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 17. 1600.

5
There is a river in Macedon; and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth; . . . and there is salmons in both.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 28.

6
The current that with gentle murmur glides,
Thou know'st, being stopp'd, impatiently doth
rage;

But when his fair course is not hindered,
He makes sweet music with the enamell'd
stones,

Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge
He overtaketh in his pilgrimage.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act ii, sc. 7, l. 25.

7
I chatter, chatter, as I flow
To join the brimming river,

For men may come and men may go,
But I go on for ever.

TENNYSON, The Brook, l. 47.

8
No check, no stay, this streamlet fears:
How merrily it goes.

'Twill murmur on a thousand years
And flow as now it flows.

WORDSWORTH, The Fountain. St. 6.

A sea-green river, proud to lave,
With current swift and undefiled,
The towers of old Lucerne.

WORDSWORTH, Memorials of a Tour on the Continent. No. 33.

IV—Rivers: Individual Rivers

9
Flow gently, sweet Afton, among thy green
braes,

Flow gently, I'll sing thee a song in thy praise.
BURNS, Flow Gently, Sweet Afton.

10
In Xanadu did Kubla Khan
A stately pleasure-dome decree;
Where Alph, the sacred river ran,
Through caverns measureless to man
Down to a sunless sea.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Kubla Khan.

11
Ayr, gurgling, kiss'd his pebbled shore,
O'erhung with wild woods thickening green;
The fragrant birch and hawthorn hoar
Twin'd amorous round the raptur'd scene.
BURNS, Thou Lingering Star. St. 3.

Farewell, the bonnie banks of Ayr.
BURNS, The Banks of Ayr.

12
Yet I will look upon thy face again,
My own romantic Bronx, and it will be
A face more pleasant than the face of men.
Thy waves are old companions. I shall see
A well-remembered form in each old tree
And hear a voice long loved in thy wild minstrelsy.

JOSEPH RODMAN DRAKE, The Bronx.

13
In those fair fields where sacred Isis glides,
Or else where Cam his winding vales divides.
POPE, Pastorals: Summer, l. 25.

14
Out of the hills of Habersham,
Down the valleys of Hall,
I hurry amain to reach the plain;
Run the rapid and leap the fall,
Split at the rock, and together again
Accept my bed, or narrow or wide,
And flee from folly on every side
With a lover's pain to attain the plain,
Far from the hills of Habersham,
Far from the valleys of Hall.
SIDNEY LANIER, The Song of the Chattahoochee.

15
How sweet to move at summer's eve
By Clyde's meandering stream,
When Sol in joy is seen to leave
The earth with crimson beam.

ANDREW PARK, The Banks of Clyde.

16
From the heart of the mighty mountains strong-souled for my fate I came,

My far-drawn track to a nameless sea through a land without a name; . . .

I stayed not, I could not linger; patient, resistless, alone,

I hewed the trail of my destiny deep in the hindering stone.

SHARLOT M. HALL, Song of the Colorado.

1 Then I saw the Congo, creeping through the black,

Cutting through the jungle with a golden track.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Congo.

2 Flow on, lovely Dee, flow on, thou sweet river, Thy banks' purest stream shall be dear to me
ever.

JOHN TAIT, The Banks of the Dee.

O Mary, go and call the cattle home, . . .
Across the sands o' Dee.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Sands o' Dee.

3 Ye banks and braes o' bonny Doon,
How can ye bloom sae fresh and fair!

BURNS, The Banks o' Doon.

4 On Linden, when the sun was low,
All bloodless lay the untrodden snow,
And dark as winter was the flow
Of Iser, rolling rapidly.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hohenlinden.

5 Thou soft-flowing Keedron, by thy silver stream

Our Saviour at midnight, when Cynthia's pale beam

Shone bright on the waters, would oftentimes stray,

And lose in thy murmurs the toils of the day.

MARIA DE FLEURY, Thou Soft-Flowing Kee-dron.

6 On this I ponder

Where'er I wander,

And thus grow fonder,

Sweet Cork, of thee,—

With thy bells of Shandon,

That sound so grand on

The pleasant waters

Of the river Lee.

FRANCIS SYLVESTER MAHONY (FATHER PROUT),
The Bells of Shandon.

7

On Leven's banks, while free to rove,

And tune the rural pipe to love,

I envied not the happiest swain

That ever trod the Arcadian plain.

Pure stream! in whose transparent wave

My youthful limbs I wont to lave;

No torrents stain thy limpid source,

No rocks impede thy dimpling course,

That sweetly warbles o'er its bed,

With white, round, polish'd pebbles spread.
TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Ode to Leven Water.

8

Slowly it moves, and in a mystic silence,

It draws me wondering,

Out through its shadowy portals to the ocean

Where sails are blossoming.

MARY SINTON LEITCH, The River. The Lynnhaven.

9

Ol' man river, dat ol' man river,

He must know sumpin', but don't say nothin',

He just keeps rollin', he keeps on rollin' along.

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN 2d, Ol' Man River.

(1927) Referring to the Mississippi.

Rasselas was the fourth son of the mighty emperor in whose dominions the Father of Waters begins his course.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Dr. Johnson refers to the Nile. The Mississippi has also been called the Father of Waters. Its name is from the Algonquin for Great Water.

10

Or lose thyself in the continuous woods

Where rolls the Oregon, and hears no sound,

Save his own dashings.

W. C. BRYANT, Thanatopsis.

11

And Potomac flowed calmly, scarce heaving her breast,

With her low-lying billows all bright in the
west,

For a charm as from God lulled the waters to rest

Of the fair-rolling river.

PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, Beyond the Potomac.

12

By the blue rushing of the arrowy Rhone.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 71.

13

Alone by the Schuylkill a wanderer rov'd,

And bright were its flowery banks to his
eye;

But far, very far, were the friends that he lov'd,

And he gaz'd on its flowery banks with a sigh.

THOMAS MOORE, Lines Written on Leaving Philadelphia.

14

On the gentle Severn's sedgy bank.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 98.

Swift Severn's flood;

Who then, affrighted with their bloody looks,
Ran fearfully among the trembling reeds.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 103.

15

Way down upon de Swanee ribber,

Far, far away,

Dere's wha my heart is turning ebber,

Dere's wha de old folks stay.

STEPHEN COLLINS FOSTER, Old Folks at Home.

16

Those graceful groves that shade the plain,
Where Tiber rolls majestic to the main,

And flattens, as he runs, the fair campagne.

1 Says Tweed to Till—

"What gars ye rin sae still?"

Says Till to Tweed—

"Though ye rin with speed

And I rin slaw,

For ae man that ye droon

I droon twa."

UNKNOWN, Two Rivers.

2 From Stirling Castle we had seen
The mazy Forth unravelled;

Had trod the banks of Clyde and Tay,

And with the Tweed had travelled;

And when we came to Clovenford,

Then said my "winsome Marrow," "Whate'er betide, we'll turn aside,

And see the Braes of Yarrow."

WORDSWORTH, Yarrow Unvisited. St. 1.

3 O lovely river of Yvette!

O darling river! like a bride,

Some dimpled, bashful, fair Lisette,

Thou goest to wed the Orge's tide. . . .

O lovely river of Yvette!

O darling stream! on balanced wings

The wood-birds sang the chansonette

That here a wandering poet sings.

LONGFELLOW, To the River Yvette.

ROAD

See also Wanderlust

4 On the beaten road there is tolerable travelling; but it is sore work, and many have to perish, fashioning a path through the impassable!

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

I will find a way or make one. (Viam inveniam aut faciam.)

HANNIBAL. Referring to the passage of the Alps.

It was a noble Roman

In Rome's imperial day,

Who heard a coward croaker

Before the battle say:

"They're safe in such a fortress;

There is no way to shake it!"—

"On, on!" exclaimed the hero,

"I'll find a way, or make it!"

UNKNOWN, On Fort Sumter.

5 Before the Roman came to Rye or out to Severn strode,

The rolling English drunkard made the rolling English road.

A reeling road, a rolling road, that rambles round the shire,

And after him the parson ran, the sexton and the squire.

A merry road, a mazy road, and such as we did tread

That night we went to Birmingham by way of Beachy Head.

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Rolling English Road.

6 This road is not passable,
Not even jackassable.

JESSE DOUGLAS, Epigram. Referring to an Indiana road in 1839.

7 The rule of the road is a paradox quite,
Both in riding and driving along;

If you keep to the left, you are sure to be right,

If you keep to the right you are wrong;

But in walking the streets 'tis a different case,
To the right it is right you should bear;

Whereas to the left should be left enough space

For those whom you chance to meet there.

HENRY ERSKINE, The Rule of the Road. (Notes and Queries, 27 Aug., 1910.)

8 Any road leads to the end of the world.
EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius, 86.

9 Great roads the Romans built that men might meet,

And walls to keep strong men apart, secure.

Now centuries are gone, and in defeat

The walls are fallen, but the roads endure.

ALFRED NOYES, The Highwayman.

15 The way to rest is pain;
The road to resolution lies by doubt;
The next way home's the farthest way about.
FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. iv, No. 2. See also WAY under PROVERBS.

16 What is the use of running when you are on the wrong road?

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>1</sup> I like a road that leads away to prospects bright and fair,
A road that is an ordered road, like a nun's
evening prayer;
But best of all I love a road that leads to God knows where.

CHARLES HANSON TOWNE, The Best Road of All.

<sup>2</sup> Here is the place where the road divides into two parts. (Hic locus est partes ubi se via

You would lift both your hands and bless
General Wade.

UNKNOWN, The Highland Road. The reference is to General George Wade, who, in 1726-29, employed 500 soldiers in roadmaking in the Highlands. (See J. P. ANDREW, Anecdotes.)

ROBIN

<sup>4</sup> Robin, Robin Redbreast,
O Robin dear!

And a crumb of bread for Robin,
His little heart to cheer.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Robin Redbreast.

<sup>5</sup> A robin redbreast in a cage
Puts all heaven in a rage.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence.

<sup>6</sup> The robin is the one
That speechless from her nest
Submits that home and certainty
And sanctity are best.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. ii, No. 6.

<sup>7</sup> Sweet Robin, I have heard them say
That thou wert there upon the day
The Christ was crowned in cruel scorn,
And bore away one bleeding thorn;
And so the blush upon thy breast,
In shameful sorrow, was impressed;
And thence thy genial sympathy
With our redeemed humanity.

GEORGE WASHINGTON DOANE, Robin Redbreast.

Bearing His cross, while Christ passed forth forlorn,

His God-like forehead by the mock crown torn,
A little bird took from that crown one thorn.
To soothe the dear Redeemer's throbbing head:
That bird did what she could; His blood, 'tis
said,

Down dropping, dyed her tender bosom red.

HOSKYNS-ABRAHAM, The Redbreast: A Bréton Legend.

On fair Britannia's isle, bright bird,

A legend strange is told of thee,—

'Tis said thy blithesome song was hushed

While Christ toiled up Mount Calvary, . . .

'Twas then, dear bird, the legend says,

That thou, from out His crown, didst tear

The thorns, to lighten the distress,

And ease the pain that He must bear,

While pendant from thy tiny beak

The gory points thy bosom pressed,

And crimsoned with thy Saviour's blood

The sober brownness of thy breast.

DELLE W. NORTON, To the Robin Redbreast.

<sup>8</sup> The household bird, with the red stomacher.

JOHN DONNE, Epithalamion on The Lady Elizabeth and Count Palatine, l. 8.

<sup>9</sup> You have learned . . . to relish a love-song, like a robin-redbreast.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 19.

<sup>10</sup> The Redbreast, sacred to the household gods.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 246.

<sup>11</sup> Call for the robin-redbreast and the wren,
Since o'er shady groves they hover,
And with leaves and flowers do cover
The friendless bodies of unburied men.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil.

<sup>12</sup> Art thou the bird whom Man loves best,
The pious bird with the scarlet breast,
Our little English Robin;

The bird that comes about our doors

When Autumn-winds are sobbing?

Art thou the Peter of Norway Boors?

Their Thomas in Finland,

And Russia far inland?

The bird that, by some name or other

All men who know thee call their brother?

WORDSWORTH, The Redbreast Chasing the Butterfly, l. 1.

ROMANCE

<sup>13</sup> All's cold and grey without it [romance].

They that have had it have slipped in and out of heaven.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows.
Act ii.

<sup>14</sup> Parent of golden dreams, Romance!

Auspicious queen of childish joys,

Who lead'st along, in airy dance,

Thy votive train of girls and boys.

BYRON, To Romance.

<sup>15</sup> Romance, like a ghost, eludes touching. It is always where you were, not where you are.

G. W. CURTIS, Lotus-Eating: Saratoga.

<sup>16</sup> Every form of human life is romantic.

T. W. HIGGINSON, A Plea for Culture.

1
"Farewell, Romance!" the Cave-men said:
"With bone well carved he went away.
Flint arms the ignoble arrowhead,
And jasper tips the spear to-day.
Changed are the Gods of Hunt and Dance,
And He with these. Farewell, Romance!" . . .
Confound Romance! . . . And all unseen
Romance brought up the nine-fifteen.
RUDYARD KIPLING, The King.

2
He loved the twilight that surrounds
The borderland of old romance.
LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Prelude.

3
The young who avoid that region [romance] escape the title of fool at the cost of a celestial crown.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways.
Ch. 1.

4
Apes and ivory, skulls and roses, in junks of old Hong-Kong,
Gliding over a sea of dreams to a haunted
shore of song.
ALFRED NOYES, Apes and Ivory.

5
To romance we owe the spirit of adventure, the code of honour, both masculine and feminine.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, The Genteel Tradition at Bay.

6 Tradition wears a snowy beard. Romance is always young.

WHITTIER, Mary Garvin, l. 16.

7
Romance should never begin with sentiment.
It should begin with science and end with a settlement.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act iii.

The worst of having a romance of any kind is that it leaves one so unromantic.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 1.

8
When one is in love, one always begins by deceiving oneself, and one always ends by deceiving others. That is what the world calls a romance.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 4.

In love, one first deceives oneself and then others
—and that is what is called romance.

JOHN L. BALDERSTON, Berkeley Square. p. 63.

Places*. No. 4, l. 37.

ROME

I—Rome: Apothegms

10
A thousand roads lead men forever to Rome.
ALAIN DE LILLE, Liber Parabolarum, l. 591.
(1175)

Right as diverse paths lead diverse folk the right way to Rome.

CHAUCEY, A Treatise on the Astrolabe, l. 44.
(c. 1380)

All roads lead to Rome, but our antagonists
Think we are able to choose different paths.
(Tous chemins vont à Rome; ainsi nos concur-rents

Crurent pouvoir choisir des sentiers différents.)
LA FONTAINE, Fables. Fable xii.

11
All roads take to Rome.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth.
Ch. 24.

12
I found Rome brick and left it marble. (Ur-bam marmoream se relinquere, quam latericiam accepisset.)

CÆSAR AUGUSTUS. (SUETONIUS, *De Vita
Cæsarum: Divus Augustus*. Bk. ii, ch. 28, sec. 3.) This saying is given another meaning by Dion Cassius (lvi, 589), who applies it to Cæsar's consolidation of the government, in the following form: "That Rome, which I found built of mud, I shall leave you firm as a rock." It should be noted that "latericium" means strictly "of sun-dried brick." (See under Law for Lord Brougham's fine use of the saying.)

13
To Rome for everything. (À Roma por todo.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 52.

Every one soon or late comes round by Rome.
ROBERT BROWNING, Ring and the Book. Bk. v,
l. 296.

14
I am a Roman citizen. (Civis Romanus sum.)
CICERO, In Verrem. No. vi, sec. 57. Describing the case of Publius Gavius, beaten with rods in the forum of Messina, "while in the meantime no groan was heard, no cry amid all this pain and between the sound of the blows, except the words, 'I am a Roman citizen.'"

As the Roman in days of old held himself free from indignity when he could say Civis Romanus sum, so also a British subject shall feel confident that the watchful eye and strong arm of England will protect him against injustice and wrong.

LORD PALMERSTON, Speech, House of Commons, 25 June, 1850.

I would have the English republic respected as ever the Roman commonwealth was.

OLIVER CROMWELL. (CARLYLE, Life.)

By the terror of the Roman name. (Terrore nom-inis Romani.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 24.

15
Butchered to make a Roman holiday.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 141.

16
O happy Fate for the Roman State
Was the date of my great Consulate!
(O fortunatam natam me consule Romam.)

CICERO. (JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 122.) A line ridiculed for its egoism and its cacophony.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 41.

I cannot abide, O Roman citizens, a Rome of Greeks. (Non possum ferre, Quirites, Græcam urbem.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 60.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 183.

All things are saleable at Rome. (Omnia venalia Romæ.)

SALLUST, Jugurtha, ch. 8, sec. 1.

See also PRICE: ALL MEN HAVE THEIR PRICE.

<sup>3</sup> It appears to me that nothing romantic or poetical can coexist with what is Roman. . . . The Romans were a blunt, flat people.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Letter to Southey, 30 Nov., 1809.

<sup>4</sup> It is the nature of a Roman to do and suffer bravely. (Et facere et pati fortiter Romanum est.)

LIVY, History. Bk. ii, sec. 12.

<sup>5</sup> The Romans were like brothers
In the brave days of old.

MACAULAY, Horatius. St. 32.

PIETRO ANGELO MANZOLLI (Palingenius, pseud.), Zodiacus Vitæ. Bk. xii, l. 460.

Rome was not built in a day.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 71; BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Little French Lawyer. Act i, sc. 3, etc.

<sup>7</sup> Let's do it after the high Roman fashion.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv, sc. 15, l. 87.

I am more an antique Roman than a Dane.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 352.

<sup>8</sup> Not that I loved Cæsar less, but that I loved Rome more.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 23.

I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 27.

<sup>9</sup> This was the noblest Roman of them all.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act v, sc. 5, l. 68.

Thou sleepest, Brutus, and yet Rome is in chains.
(Tu dors, Brutus, et Rome est dans les fers.)

<sup>10</sup> Thou art a Roman; be not barbarous.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 378.

<sup>11</sup> The last of the Romans. (Romanorum ultimus.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 34. Referring to Caius Cassius.

The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act v, sc. 3, l. 99.

<sup>12</sup> Not yet had Romulus traced the walls of the Eternal City. (Romulus æternæ nondum formaverat urbis Mœnia.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 5, l. 23.

You cheer my heart, who build as if Rome would be eternal.

AUGUSTUS CÆSAR to Piso. (PLUTARCH, Apotheisms.)

<sup>13</sup> The walls of lofty Rome. (Altæ mœnia Romæ.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 7.

<sup>14</sup> So great a labor was it to found the Roman race. (Tantæ molis erat Romanam condere gentem.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 33.

<sup>15</sup> Neither holy, nor Roman, nor Empire.

VOLTAIRE, Essay on the Morals of the Holy Empire of the Hapsburgs.

<sup>16</sup> Rare are the buttons of a Roman's breeches,
In antiquarian eyes surpassing riches.

JOHN WOLCOT, Peter's Prophecy.

The motto of Rome, denoted on Roman banners, coins, etc., by the letters, S. P. Q. R. Rabelais (Works, bk. iii, ch. 32) explains them as meaning, "Si Peu Que Rien," So little as to be nothing.

II—Rome: In Rome Do as the Romans Do

<sup>18</sup> When I am here [at Milan] I do not fast on Saturday; when I am at Rome, I fast on a Saturday. (Quando hic sum, non jejuno Sabato; quando Romæ sum, jejuno Sabbato.)

ST. AMBROSE, Advice to St. Augustine.

When you are in Rome, live in the Roman style; when you are elsewhere, live as they live there. (Cum fueris Romæ, Romano vivito more; cum fueris alibi, vivito sicut ibi.)

ST. AMBROSE. As quoted by Jeremy Taylor, Ductor Dubitantium. Bk. i, ch. 1, sec. 5.

<sup>19</sup> My mother, having joined me at Milan, found that the church there did not fast on Saturdays as at Rome, and was at a loss what to do. I consulted St. Ambrose, of holy memory, who replied, "When I am at Rome, I fast on a Saturday; when I am at Milan, I do not. Follow the custom of the church where you are."

ST. AUGUSTINE, Epistle to Januarius. (Epis. ii, sec. 18.) Also Epistle to Casaluanus. (Epis. xxxvi, sec. 32.)

<sup>1</sup> When they are at Rome, they do there as they see done.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iv, mem. 2, subs. 1.

When thou art at Rome, do as thou shalt see. (Quando á Roma fueres, Haz como vieres.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 54.

<sup>2</sup> Isocrates adviseth Demonicus, when he came to a strange city, to worship by all means the gods of the place.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iv, mem. 1, subs. 5.

Good-breeding, as it is called, . . . is different in almost every country, and merely local; and every man of sense imitates and conforms to that local good-breeding of the place he is at.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 2 Oct., 1747.

When you are abroad, live in the manner of the place. (Cum fueris alibi, vivito more loci.)

Quoted by Don Diego, as warrant for following Henry VIII.'s religion while in England.

Aristo Punico ingenio inter pœnas usus.

LIVY, History. Bk. xxxiv, sec. 61.

<sup>3</sup> That is to say, if your religion's Roman,

And you at Rome would do as Romans do,

According to the proverb,—although no man,

If foreign, is obliged to fast; and you,

If Protestant, or sickly, or a woman,

Would rather dine in sin on a ragout—

Dine, and be d—d! I don't mean to be coarse,

But that's the penalty, to say no worse.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 9.

<sup>4</sup> When thou art at Rome, do after the dome;

When thou art elsewhere, do as they do there.

HILL, Commonplace Book, 130. (c. 1490)

<sup>5</sup> You may not sit in Rome and strive with the Pope.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>6</sup> "When in Rome do as the Romans do" is the surest road to success.

BERNARD SHAW, Radio Address, 11 July, 1932.

III—Rome: Her Greatness

<sup>7</sup> First among cities, the home of gods, is golden Rome. (Prima urbes inter, divum domus, aurea Roma.)

AUSONIUS, Ordo Urbium Nobilium, l. 1.

That queen of nations, absolutely great.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomsday: The Sixth Hour. St. 77.

<sup>8</sup> A city greater than any upon earth, whose amplitude no eye can measure, whose beauty

no imagination can picture, who raises a golden head amid the neighboring stars and with her seven hills imitates the seven regions of heaven, mother of arms and of law, who extends her sway over all the earth and was the earliest cradle of justice, this is the city which, sprung from humble beginnings, has stretched to either pole, and from one small place extended its power so that upon it the sun never sets. (In geminos axes parvâque a sede profecta Dispersit cum sole manus.)

CLAUDIAN, De Consulatu Stilichonis. Bk. iii, l. 130. See also under ENGLAND, SPAIN.

She alone among nations has received into her bosom those whom she has conquered, and has cherished all humanity as her sons, and not as her slaves.

CLAUDIAN, De Consulatu Stilichonis. Bk. iii, l. 150.

JOACHIM DU BELLAY, Ruins of Rome. St. 2. (Spenser, tr.)

Rome only might to Rome comparèd be, And only Rome could make great Rome to tremble.

JOACHIM DU BELLAY, Ruins of Rome. St. 6. (Spenser, tr.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 29, l. 11.

<sup>11</sup> In tears I tossed my coin from Trevi's edge. A coin unsordid as a bond of love—

And, with the instinct of the homing dove,

I gave to Rome my rendezvous and pledge.

And when imperious Death

Has quenched my flame of breath,

Oh, let me join the faithful shades that throng that fount above.

ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON, Italian Rhapsody.

<sup>12</sup> The grandeur that was Rome.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, To Helen.

<sup>13</sup> On this foundation would I build my fame,

And emulate the Greek and Roman name.

<sup>14</sup> Imperial diadem of Rome.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1, 6.

Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds!

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1, 70.

<sup>15</sup> 'Twas glory once to be a Roman;

She makes it glory, now, to be a man.

BAYARD TAYLOR, The National Ode.

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 282.

Remember, O Roman, these shall be thy arts; to rule the nations with thy sway, to crown Peace with Law, to spare the humble and to tame the proud. (Tu regnere imperio populos, Romane, memento (Hæc tibi erunt artes) pacique imponere morem, Parcere subjectis et debellare superbos.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 851.

<sup>1</sup> The city, Melibœus, which they call Rome, I, fool that I am, imagined to be like this town of ours. (Urbem quam dicunt Romam, Melibœe, putavi Stultus ego, huic nostræ similem.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. i, l. 20.

This city has reared her head as high among all other cities as cypresses oft do among the bending osiers. (Verum hæc tantum alias inter caput extulit urbes, Quantum lenta solent inter viburna cupressi.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. i, l. 24.

IV—Rome: Her Ruin

<sup>2</sup> Oh Rome! my country! city of the soul! The orphans of the heart must turn to thee, Lone mother of dead empires!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 78.

The Niobe of nations! there she stands, Childless and crownless, in her voiceless woe; An empty urn within her wither'd hands, Whose holy dust was scatter'd long ago.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 79.

"While stands the Coliseum, Rome shall stand; When falls the Coliseum, Rome shall fall; And when Rome falls—the world."

From our own land Thus spake the pilgrims o'er this mighty wall In Saxon times.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 145.

<sup>3</sup> I've stood upon Achilles' tomb, And heard Troy doubted; time will doubt of Rome.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 101.

<sup>4</sup> What was built by the toil of countless leaders, knit together through so many years by Roman hands, one coward traitor instantly overthrew. (Quod mille ducum peperere labores, Quod tantis Romana manus contexit annis, Proditor unus iners angusto tempore vertit.)

CLAUDIAN, In Rufinum. Bk. ii, l. 51.

<sup>5</sup> All the incongruous things of past incompatible ages

Seem to be treasured up here to make fools of present and future.

CLOUGH, Amours de Voyage. Canto i, sec. 1.

<sup>6</sup> Now conquering Rome doth conquered Rome inter,
And she the vanquished is, and vanquisher.

To show us where she stood there rests alone Tiber; and that too hastens to be gone. Learn, hence what fortune can. Towns glide away;

And rivers, which are still in motion, stay.

JOACHIM DU BELLAY, Ruins of Rome. St. 3. (William Browne, tr.)

Rome now of Rome is th' only funeral, And only Rome of Rome hath victory; Nor aught save Tiber hast'ning to his fall Remains of all: O world's inconstancy. That which is firm doth flit and fall away, And that is fitting doth abide and stay.

JOACHIM DU BELLAY, Ruins of Rome. St. 3. (Edmund Spenser, tr.)

<sup>7</sup> The barbarians who broke up the Roman empire did not arrive a day too soon.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

<sup>8</sup> A city for sale, and doomed to speedy destruction, if it finds a purchaser. (Urbem venalem et mature perituram, si emptorem invenerit!)

JUGURTHA, looking back at Rome, as he left it. (SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. 35, sec. 10.)

<sup>9</sup> Though Cato lived, though Tully spoke, Though Brutus dealt the godlike stroke, Yet perished fated Rome.

R. C. NUGENT, Epistle to a Lady.

<sup>10</sup> The man who first ruined the Roman people was he who first gave them treats and gratuities.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Coriolanus. Ch. 14, sec. 3. Quoted as a wise remark.

<sup>11</sup> See the wild waste of all-devouring years; How Rome her own sad sepulchre appears! With nodding arches, broken temples spread, The very tombs now vanish'd like their dead!

Imperial wonders rais'd on nations spoil'd, Where mix'd with slaves the groaning martyrs toil'd.

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 13, l. 60.

<sup>13</sup> Go thou to Rome,—at once the Paradise, The grave, the city, and the wilderness.

SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 49.

<sup>14</sup> O weakness of the Great! O folly of the Wise! Where now the haughty Empire that was spread

With such fond hope? Her very speech is dead.

WORDSWORTH, Memorials of a Tour in Italy. No. 28, l. 64.

V—Rome: The Church of Rome

1 Rome has spoken; the case is concluded.
(Roma locuta est; causa finita est.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Sermons. No. cxxxi, sec. 10.
The context is: "The case is finished; would that heresy might sometime come to an end as well!" (Causa finita est; utinam aliquando error finiatur!)

2 Outside of the Catholic church everything may be had except salvation. (Extra Ecclesiam Catholicam totum potest præter salutem.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Works. Vol. ix, p. 122. The context is: "You may have Orders and Sacraments, you may sing Alleluia and answer Amen, you may hold the Gospel and have and preach the faith in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; but nowhere except in the Catholic Church can salvation be found."

Outside the Church there is no salvation. (Extra Ecclesiam nulla salus.)

ST. CYPRIAN, Epistles. No. iv, sec. 4; No. lxii, sec. 18.

3 It is the Mass that matters.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, What, Then, Did Happen at the Reformation? (Nineteenth Century, April, 1896.)

4 Though Rome's gross yoke
Drops off, no more to be endured,
Her teaching is not so obscured
By errors and perversities
That no truth shines athwart the lies.

6 St. Peter is very well at Rome. (Bien se está San Pedro á Roma.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 41, 53, 59.

7 The church of Rome,
Mixing two governments that ill assort,
Hath missed her footing, fallen into the mire,
And there herself and burden much defiled.

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto xvi, l. 129. (Cary, tr.)

8 Defoe says there were a hundred thousand stout country-fellows in his time ready to fight to the death against popery, without knowing whether popery was a man or a horse.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Sketches, p. 101.

No popery!

Cry of the mob at the doors of the House of Commons, 2 June, 1780. (HUME, History of England. Ch. 21.)

No popery, no slavery!

Motto woven in ribbons worn in 1681 when a new parliament was summoned at Oxford. (HUME, History of England. Ch. 25.)

9 The Papacy is no other than the ghost of the deceased Roman Empire, sitting crowned upon the grave thereof.

THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan. Pt. iii, ch. 42.

10 Religion went to Rome, subduing those,
Who, that they might subdue, made all their foes.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church Militant, l. 61.

11 Why leave a serious, moral, pious home,
Scotland, renown'd for sanctity of old,
Far distant Catholics to rate and scold
For—doing as the Romans do at Rome?

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 243.

12 Well has the name of Pontifex been given Unto the Church's head, as the chief builder
And architect of the invisible bridge
That leads from earth to heaven.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. v.

13 The Catholic Church . . . was great and respected before the Saxon had set foot on Britain. . . . And she may still exist in undiminished vigour when some traveller from New Zealand shall, in the midst of a vast solitude, take his stand on a broken arch of London Bridge to sketch the ruins of St. Paul's.

MACAULAY, Essays: Ranke's History of the Popes. Often referred to as Macaulay's New Zealander. First published in the Edinburgh Review, Oct., 1840. See also under Greece the quotation from his essay on Mitford's Greece.

There is not, and there never was on this earth, a work of human policy so well deserving of examination as the Roman Catholic Church. . . . No other institution is left standing which carries the mind back to the times when the smoke of sacrifice rose from the Pantheon, and when camelopards and tigers abounded in the Flavian Amphitheatre.

MACAULAY, Essays: Ranke's History of the Popes.

The proudest royal houses are but of yesterday, when compared with the line of the Supreme Pontiffs. That line we trace back in an unbroken series from the pope who crowned Napoleon in the nineteenth century to the pope who crowned Pepin in the eighth; and far beyond the time of Pepin the august dynasty extends, till it is lost in the twilight of fable.

ROOSEVELT, THEODORE

I—Roosevelt: Apothegms

7 You called me a megalomaniac—
I called you a Serpent's Tooth.

FRANKLIN P. ADAMS, T. R. to W. H. T. (Theodore Roosevelt to William H. Taft.)

At three o'clock Thursday afternoon, Theodore Roosevelt will walk on the waters of Lake Michigan.

UNKNOWN. Text of poster distributed by an unknown humorist in Chicago, 17 June, 1912, on the eve of the Republican convention which nominated Taft.

8 If I was him I'd call the book "Alone in Cubia."

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, referring to Roosevelt's
The Rough Riders, a history of his campaign in Cuba during the Spanish-American war. "Rough Riders" was the popular name of the regiment, composed largely of cowboys, which Roosevelt had raised, and of which he was second in command, under Colonel Leonard Wood.

9 Now look, that damned cowboy is President of the United States.

ROSE

I—Rose: Apothegms

8 It was roses, roses all the way.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Patriot.

9 Oh, no man knows
Through what wild centuries
Roves back the rose.

WALTER DE LA MARE, All That's Past.

10 You with your roses, rosy is your charm; but what do you sell, yourself or the roses, or both? (Ἥτα ῥόδα, ῥοδόεσαν ἔχεις χάριν.)

DIONYSIUS THE SOPHIST. (Greek Anthology.
Bk. v, epig. 81.)

Poor Peggy hawks nosebags from street to street
Till—think of that who find life so sweet!—
She hates the smell of roses.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Birth.

11 The said questions were asked with licence, and that it should remain under the rose.
(Sub rosa.)

SIR ROBERT DYMOKE, Letter to Stephen Vaughan, 1546. (State Papers, Henry VIII, ii, 200.) The phrase, "sub rosa," meaning secretly, is of unknown origin. With the ancients the rose was emblematic of secrecy, and when a host hung a rose above his tables, his guests understood that all words spoken under it were to remain secret. Later, roses were carved as decorations on the ceilings of council chambers and confessionals, with the same significance.

The rose is the flower of Venus; and Love, in order that her sweet dishonesties might be hidden, dedicated this gift of his mother to Harpocrates, the god of silence. Hence the host hangs the rose over his friendly tables, that his guests may know that beneath it what is said will be regarded as secret.

(Est rosa flos veneris; quo dulcia furta laterent, Harpocrati matris dona dicavit amor. Inde rosam mensis hospes suspendit amicis, Convivæ ut sub ea dicta tacenda sciant.)

UNKNOWN, Rosa Flos Veneris.

We all love a pretty girl—under the rose.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, Love in a Village, ii, 2.

Under the rose, since here are none but friends,
(To own the truth) we have some private ends.

SWIFT, Epilogue to a Benefit Play for the Distressed Weavers.

12 It never will rain roses: when we want
To have more roses we must plant more trees.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iii.

13 Then in that Parly, all those powers
Voted the Rose the Queen of flowers.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Parliament of Roses.

14 What would the rose with all her pride be
worth,

Were there no sun to call her brightness
forth?

THOMAS MOORE, Love Alone. St. 2.

<sup>1</sup> Rose of the Desert! thus should woman be Shining uncourted, lone and safe, like thee.

THOMAS MOORE, Rose of the Desert.

Rose of the Garden! such is woman's lot—Worshipp'd while blooming—when she fades, forgot.

THOMAS MOORE, Rose of the Desert.

<sup>2</sup> As rich and purposeless as is the rose:
Thy simple doom is to be beautiful.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Marpessa, l. 51.

<sup>3</sup> I shall never be friends again with roses.
SWINBURNE, The Triumph of Time. St. 45.

<sup>4</sup> And is there any moral shut
Within the bosom of the rose?

TENNYSON, The Day-Dream: Moral.

<sup>5</sup> Let us crown ourselves with rosebuds before they be withered.

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, ii, 8. See also TIME: GATHER YE ROSEBUDS.

<sup>6</sup> Far off, most secret, and inviolate Rose,
Enfold me in my hour of hours.

WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS, The Secret Rose.

Red Rose, proud Rose, sad Rose of all my days!
Come near me, while I sing the ancient ways.

W. B. YEATS, To the Rose upon the Rood of Time.

Rose of all Roses, Rose of all the World!

W. B. YEATS, The Rose of Battle.

II—Rose: Its Beauty

<sup>7</sup> The rose that all are praising,
Is not the rose for me;

Too many eyes are gazing
Upon the faultless tree.

But there's a rose in yonder glen
That scorns the gaze of other men;

For me its beauty saving,—
Oh! that's the rose for me.

T. H. BAYLY, The Rose that All are Praising.

<sup>8</sup> "For if I wait," said she,
"Till time for roses be,

For the moss-rose and the musk-rose,
Maiden-blush and royal-dusk rose,

What glory then for me
In such a company?—

Roses plenty, roses plenty,
And one nightingale for twenty!"

E. B. BROWNING, A Lay of the Early Rose.

<sup>9</sup> Yon rose-buds in the morning dew,
How pure among the leaves sae green!

BURNS, To Chloris.

While rose-buds scarcely show'd their hue,
But coyly linger'd on the thorn.

MONTGOMERY, The Adventures of a Star.

<sup>10</sup> He came and took me by the hand
Up to a red rose tree,

He kept His meaning to Himself,
But gave a rose to me.

I did not pray Him to lay bare
The mystery to me;

Enough the rose was Heaven to smell,
And His own face to see.

RALPH HODGSON, The Mystery.

<sup>11</sup> It was not in the winter
Our loving lot was cast:

It was the time of roses,
We plucked them as we passed.

THOMAS HOOD, Ballad.

<sup>12</sup> The roses that in yonder hedge appear Outdo our garden buds which bloom within;
But since the hand may pluck them every
day,

Unmarked they bud, bloom, drop, and drift away.

JEAN INGELOW, The Four Bridges. St. 61.

<sup>13</sup> A Rose is sweeter in the bud than full blown.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 314.

The rose is fairest when 't is budding new,
And hope is brightest when it dawns from fears;

The rose is sweetest washed with morning dew,
And love is loveliest when embalmed in tears.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto iv, st. 1.

The budding rose above the rose full blown.
WORDSWORTH, The Prelude. Bk. xi, l. 121.

Blinded alike from sunshine and from rain,
As though a rose should shut, and be a bud again.

JOHN KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 27.

<sup>14</sup> A root in the right soil,
Sun, rain, and a man's toil;

That, as a wise man knows,
Is all there is to a rose.

ORGILL MACKENZIE, Whitegates.

<sup>15</sup> Sweet as the rose that died last year is the rose that is born to-day.

COSMO MONKHOUSE, A Dead March.

<sup>16</sup> Rose, thou art the sweetest flower
That ever drank the amber shower;

Rose, thou art the fondest child
Of dimpled Spring, the wood-nymph wild.

THOMAS MOORE, Odes of Anacreon. Ode xlv.

O rose! the sweetest blossom,
Of spring the fairest flower;

O rose! the joy of heaven.

JAMES GATES PERCIVAL, Anacreontic.

Sometimes, when on the Alpine rose,
The golden sunset leaves its ray,

So like a gem the flow'et glows,
We thither bend our headlong way;
And though we find no treasure there,
We bless the rose that shines so fair.
THOMAS MOORE, The Crystal-Hunters.

1 And the rose, like a nymph to the bath address,
Which unveiled the depth of her glowing
breast,
Till, fold after fold, to the fainting air,
The soul of her beauty and love lay bare.
SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. i, l. 29.

2 Roses all that's fair adorn;
Rosy-fingered is the morn;
Rosy-armed the nymphs are seen;
Rosy-skinned is Beauty's queen.
CHARLES WESLEY, Anacreontic.

3 You violets that first appear,
By your pure purple mantles known,
Like the proud virgins of the year,
As if the spring were all your own,
What are you when the rose is blown?
SIR HENRY WOTTON, To His Mistress, Elizabeth of Bohemia.

III—Rose and Thorn

4 Thus to the Rose, the Thistle:
Why art thou not of thistle-breed?
Of use thou'dst, then, be truly,
For asses might upon thee feed.
F. M. BODENSTEDT, The Rose and Thistle.
(Frederick Ricord, tr.)

5 But ne'er the rose without the thorn.
ROBERT HERRICK, The Rose.

No rose without a thorn.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

The sweetest rose hath his prickles.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 33. (1579)
I took her for a rose, but she breedeth a burr.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10.

6 But the rose leaves herself upon the briar,
For winds to kiss and grateful bees to feed.
KEATS, On Fame, l. 9.

7 Flowers of all hue, and without thorn the
rose.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 256.

8 When the rose perishes, the hard thorn is left behind. (Riget amissa spina relictâ rosa.)
OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 116.

9 The prickly thorn often bears soft roses.
(Sæpe creat molles aspera spina rosas.)
OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 34.

Often is the nettle nearest to the rose. (Urticæ proxima sæpe rosa est.)
OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 46.

10 There is no gathering the rose without being pricked by the thorns.

PILPAY, Fables: The Two Travellers.
He that plants thorns must never expect to gather roses.

PILPAY, Fables: The Ignorant Physician.
See also under RETRIBUTION.

11 Better be stung by a nettle than pricked by a rose.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

12 The rose does not bloom without thorns; would that the thorns did not outlive the
rose.

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 105.

13 The rose saith in the dewy morn,
I am most fair;
Yet all my loveliness is born
Upon a thorn.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Consider the Lilies of the Field.

14 The rose and thorn, the treasure and dragon, joy and sorrow, all mingle into one.

SAADI, The Gulistan: Ch. vii, Apologue xxi.

15 From off this brier pluck a white rose with me.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 30.

But, alack, my hand is sworn
Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv,
sc. 3, l. 111.

16 I am the one rich thing that morn
Leaves for the ardent noon to win;
Grasp me not, I have a thorn,
But bend and take my being in.
HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD, The Rose.

17 This world that we're a-livin' in
Is mighty hard to beat;
You git a thorn with every rose,
But ain't the roses sweet!
FRANK L. STANTON, This World.

18 The thorns he spares when the rose is taken;
The rocks are left when he wastes the plain;

The wind that wanders, the weeds wind-shaken,
These remain.

SWINBURNE, A Forsaken Garden. St. 3.

19 The best rose-bush, after all, is not that which has the fewest thorns but that which bears the finest roses.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Fisherman's Luck. Ch. viii.

IV—Rose: Its Frailty

20 As long as is one day, so long is the rose's life;

Her brief youth and age go hand in hand.
(Quam longa una dies, ætas tam longa rosarum:

Cum pubescenti juncta senecta brevis.)

AUSONIUS, De Rosis Nascentibus, l. 43.

<sup>1</sup> The bloom of a rose passes quickly away,
And the pride of a Butterfly dies in a day.

JOHN CUNNINGHAM, The Rose and the Butterfly.

<sup>2</sup> All June I bound the rose in sheaves,
Now, rose by rose, I strip the leaves.

ROBERT BROWNING, One Way of Love.

<sup>3</sup> Loveliest of lovely things are they
On earth that soonest pass away.
The rose that lives its little hour
Is prized beyond the sculptured flower.

BRYANT, A Scene on the Banks of the Hudson.

<sup>4</sup> Great is the rose Infected by the tomb,
Yet burgeoning
Indifferent to death.

Great is the rose
That challenges the crypt,
And quotes millenniums
Against the grave.

NATHALIA CRANE, Song from Tadmor.

<sup>5</sup> The fairest and the sweetest rose
In time must fade and beauty lose.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, 105.

<sup>6</sup> Because the rose must fade,
Shall I not love the rose?

RICHARD WATSON GILDER, Song.

<sup>7</sup> It is written on the rose
In its glory's full array:
Read what those buds disclose—
"Passing away."

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Passing Away.

Sweet rose, whose hue, angry and brave,
Bids the rash gazer wipe his eye,
Thy root is ever in its grave,
And thou must die.

GEORGE HERBERT, Virtue.

She bloomed on earth, where the loveliest things
Have the saddest dower;
And Rose, she lived as the roses live,
For the space of an hour.
(Mais elle était du monde, où les plus belles choses

Ont le pire destin;

Et Rose, elle e vécu ce que vivent les roses,
L'espace d'un matin.)

FRANÇOIS DE MALHERBE, Rose. In a letter of condolence to M. du Perrier on the loss of his daughter, Rose.

<sup>8</sup> Roses are beauty, but I never see

Those blood drops from the burning heart of June

Glowing like thought upon the living tree,

Without a pity that they die so soon,

Die into petals, like those roses old,

Those women, who were summer in men's hearts

Before the smile upon the Sphinx was cold.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Sonnets. No. 18.

<sup>9</sup> 'Tis the last rose of summer,

Left blooming alone;

All her lovely companions

Are faded and gone;

No flower of her kindred,

No rose-bud is nigh,

To reflect back her blushes,

Or give sigh for sigh.

THOMAS MOORE, The Last Rose of Summer.

<sup>10</sup> Each Morn a thousand Roses brings, you say;
Yes, but where leaves the Rose of Yesterday?

OMAR KHAYYÁM, Rubáiyát. St. 9. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

The roses of seven hundred years

Have flamed and passed away

Since Omar steeped in golden tears

The Rose of Yesterday.

ADAM LINDSAY GORDON, The Rose of Yesterday.

<sup>11</sup> When I have pluck'd the rose,
I cannot give it vital growth again,
It needs must wither: I'll smell it on the tree.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 13.

<sup>12</sup> Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd, soon vaded,

Pluck'd in the bud, and vaded in the spring!

SHAKESPEARE [?], Passionate Pilgrim, l. 131.

<sup>13</sup> De rose is sweet, but de rose can't stay,
But I'm mighty glad when it blooms my way;

De night fall dark but de Lawd send day,
An' de good Lawd know my name.

FRANK L. STANTON, De Good Lawd Know My Name.

<sup>14</sup> The year of the rose is brief;
From the first blade blown to the sheaf,
From the thin green leaf to the gold,
It has time to be sweet and grow old,
To triumph and leave not a leaf.

SWINBURNE, The Year of the Rose.

<sup>15</sup> The fairest things have fleetest end:
Their scent survives their close,

But the rose's scent is bitterness

To him that loved the rose!

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Daisy. St. 10.

V—Rose: Its Perfume

1 I'll pu' the budding rose, when Phœbus peeps in view,
For it's like a baummy kiss o' her sweet bonie
mou.

BURNS, The Posie.

2 I am not the rose, but I have lived near the rose. (Je ne suis pas la rose, mais j'ai vécu pres d'elle.)

H. B. CONSTANT. (HAYWARD, Letters of Mrs. Piozzi: Introduction.) In his Gulistan, Sadi represents a lump of clay still perfumed by the petals fallen from the rose-trees.

Yet, O thou beautiful Rose!
Queen rose, so fair and sweet,
What were lover or crown to thee
Without the Clay at thy feet?

JULIA C. R. DORR, The Clay to the Rose.

3 The jar will long keep the fragrance of what it was steeped in when new. (Quo semel est imbuta recens, servabit odorem Testa diu.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 69.

You may break, you may shatter the vase, if you will,
But the scent of the roses will hang round it
still.

THOMAS MOORE, *Farewell!—But Whenever
You Welcome the Hour*.

You may break, you may shatter Watkins if you will, but the scent of the Roederer will hang round him still.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Marjorie Daw.

4 And the rose herself has got Perfume which on earth is not.
KEATS, Bards of Passion and of Mirth, l. 15.

5 And sweeten'd every musk-rose of the dale.
MILTON, Comus, l. 496.

6 The rose distils a healing balm
The beating pulse of pain to calm.

THOMAS MOORE, Odes of Anacreon. Ode lv.

There was never a daughter of Eve but once, ere the tale of her years be done,
Shall know the scent of the Eden Rose, but once
beneath the sun;
Though the years may bring her joy or pain,
fame, sorrow or sacrifice,
The hour that brought her the scent of the Rose,
she lived it in Paradise.

SUSAN K. PHILLIPS, The Eden-Rose. (Published anonymously in St. Louis Globe Democrat, 13 July, 1878. Quoted by Kipling in Mrs. Hauksbee Sits Out.)

7 Fell on the upturn'd face of these roses
That gave out, in return for the love-light,
Their odorous souls in an ecstatic death.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, To Helen, l. 11.

8 Die of a rose in aromatic pain.
POPE, Essay on Man, epis. i, l. 200.

9 The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem
For that sweet odour which doth in it live.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. liv.

How fair is the Rose! what a beautiful flower!
The glory of April and May!
But the leaves are beginning to fade in an hour,
And they wither and die in a day.

Yet the Rose has one powerful virtue to boast,
Above all the flowers of the field:
When its leaves are all dead, and fine colours are lost,

Still how sweet a perfume it will yield!
ISAAC WATTS, The Rose.

VI—Rose: Red and White

10 Red as rose of Harpocrate.
E. B. BROWNING, Isobel's Child, l. 32.

A white rosebud for a guerdon.
E. B. BROWNING, *The Romance of the Swan's
Nest*. St. 12.

11 Ah, ah, Cytherea! Adonis is dead.
She wept tear after tear with the blood
which was shed,
And both turned into flowers for the earth's garden-close,
Her tears, to the windflower; his blood, to the rose.

E. B. BROWNING, A Lament for Adonis. St. 6.
12 Red as a rose is she.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. i,
st. 9. Used by Rhoda Broughton as title for a novel.

13 In Heaven's happy bowers
There blossom two flowers,
One with fiery glow
And one as white as snow;
While lo! before them stands,
With pale and trembling hands,
A spirit who must choose
One, and one refuse.
R. W. GILDER, The White and Red Rose.

14 Roses at first were white,
Till they co'd not agree
Whether my Sappho's breast,
Or they more white shod'd be.
But being vanquish'd quite,
A blush their cheeks bespread:
Since which (believe the rest)
The Roses first came red.

ROBERT HERRICK, How Roses Came Red.

15 Rose of the desert, thou art to me
An emblem of stainless purity,—
Of those who, keeping their garments white,
Walk on through life with steps aright.

DAVID M. MORR, The White Rose.

<sup>1</sup>
Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose,
With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfumed.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 254.

Hoary-headed frosts

Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson rose.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.

Act ii, sc. 1, l. 107.

The red rose on triumphant brier.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.

Act iii, sc. 1, l. 96.

<sup>2</sup>
Rosebuds, yellow and red,
Done in a prim, straight row,
Just on the edge of the thread,
Neither above nor below;
Each one shaded the same—
With all the art that she knew—
Making her cross-stitched name,
Ann Elizabeth Drew.
UNKNOWN, The Sampler.

VII—Rose and Love

<sup>3</sup>
She wore a wreath of roses,
The night that first we met.
T. H. BAYLY, She Wore a Wreath of Roses.
He wore, I think, a chasuble, the day when first we met.
BRET HARTE, The Ritualist.

<sup>4</sup>
O Rose, who dares to name thee?
No longer roseate now, nor soft, nor sweet,
But pale and hard and dry as stubble wheat,— Kept seven years in a drawer, thy titles shame thee.

E. B. BROWNING, A Dead Rose.

It was nothing but a rose I gave her,—
Nothing but a rose
Any wind might rob of half its savor,
Any wind that blows. . . .

Withered, faded, pressed between these pages,
Crumpled, fold on fold,—
Once it lay upon her breast, and ages
Cannot make it old!

HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD, A Sigh.

<sup>5</sup>
You smell a rose through a fence:
If two should smell it, what matter?
E. B. BROWNING, Lord Walter's Wife, l. 9.

<sup>6</sup>
The morning was beautiful, mild and serene,
All nature had waked from repose;
Maternal affection came silently in
And placed in my bosom a rose.

MARY ANN BUTLER, Whitsuntide Rose.
(WHITE, Life of Mrs. Ann Seton, p. 477.)

<sup>7</sup>
When love came first to Earth, the Spring
Spread rose-beds to receive him.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, When Love Came First.

And I will make thee beds of roses,

And a thousand fragrant posies.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, The Passionate Shepherd to his Love. St. 3. (1599)

There will we make our beds of roses,
And a thousand fragrant posies.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iii, sc. 1, l. 19. (1600)

<sup>8</sup>
Or risen from play at your pale raiment's hem

God, grown adventurous from all time's repose,

Of your tall body climbed the ivory Tower
And kissed upon your mouth the mystic
Rose.

G. K. CHESTERTON, A Little Litany.

Till the roses' lips grew pale with her sighs.

ROSE TERRY COOKE, Rêve du Midi.

<sup>9</sup>
A rose I marked, and might have plucked;
but she

Blushed as she bent, imploring me to spare
her,

Nor spoil her beauty by such rivalry.

AUBREY DE VERE, Flowers I Would Bring.

<sup>10</sup>
She's just like a rose with a broken stem,
That is plucked and then cast aside;

The garden of love has no place for them,
When their fragrance and perfume have died.

For you can't take the stain from a woman's name,

Nor a flaw from the purest gem,

She chooses her path and must bear the blame—

She's a rose with a broken stem.

CARROLL FLEMING, A Rose with a Broken Stem.
(1901)

<sup>11</sup>
If you were a white rose Columbine,
And I were a Harlequin,

I'd leap and sway on my spangled hips,
And blow you a kiss with my finger tips,
And woo a smile to your petal lips

With every glittering spin.

CROSBIE GARSTIN, A Fantasy.

<sup>12</sup>
Oh, raise your deep-fringed lids that close
To wrap you in some sweet dream's thrall;

I am the spectre of the rose

You wore but last night at the ball.

THÉOPHILE GAUTIER, The Spectre of the Rose.

<sup>13</sup>
I sent my love two roses,—one

As white as driven snow,

And one a blushing royal red,

A flaming Jacqueminot. . . .

My heart sank when I met her: sure
I had been overbold,

For on her breast my pale rose lay

In virgin whiteness cold.

Yet with low words she greeted me,
 With smiles divinely tender;
 Upon her cheek the red rose dawned,—
 The white rose meant surrender.
 JOHN HAY, The White Flag.

Should this fair rose offend thy sight,
 Placed in thy bosom bare,
 'Twill blush to find itself less white,
 And turn Lancastrian there.
 JAMES SOMERVILLE, The White Rose.

1
 The sweetest flower that blows,
 I give you as we part
 For you it is a rose
 For me it is my heart.
 FREDERICK PETERSON, At Parting.

2
 I saw the rose-grove blushing in pride,
 I gathered the blushing rose—and sigh'd—
 I come from the rose-grove, mother,
 I come from the grove of roses.
 GIL VICENTE, I Come from the Rose-grove, Mother. (John Bowring, tr.)

3
 Go, lovely rose—
 Tell her that wastes her time and me,
 That now she knows,
 When I resemble her to thee,
 How sweet and fair she seems to be.
 EDMUND WALLER, Go, Lovely Rose.
 Yet, though thou fade,
 From thy dead leaves let fragrance rise;
 And teach the maid
 That goodness Time's rude hand defies,
 That virtue lives when beauty dies.
 HENRY KIRKE WHITE, Additional Stanza to Waller's "Go, Lovely Rose."

RUIN

I—Ruin: Apothegms

4
 A ruin—yet what ruin! from its mass
 Walls, palaces, half-cities, have been rear'd.
 BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 143. Referring to the Coliseum at Rome.

Tully was not so eloquent as thou,
 Thou nameless column with the buried base!
 BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto v, st. 110.

5
 There is a temple in ruin stands,
 Fashion'd by long-forgotten hands;
 Two or three columns, and many a stone,
 Marble and granite, with grass o'ergrown!
 Out upon time! it will leave no more
 Of the things to come than the things before!

BYRON, The Siege of Corinth. St. 18.

While in the progress of their long decay,
 Thrones sink to dust, and nations pass away.
 EARL OF CARLISLE, On the Ruins of Pæstum.
 See also under OBLIVION.

Crumpling a pyramid, humbling a rose,
 The dust has its reasons wherever it goes.
 NATHALIA CRANE, The Dust.

6
 Men moralise among ruins.
 BENJAMIN DISRAËLI, Tancred. Bk. v, ch. 5.

There's a fascination frantic
 In a ruin that's romantic.
 W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii.

7
 So many great nobles, things, administrations,
 So many high chieftains, so many brave nations,
 So many proud princes, and power so splendid,
 In a moment, a twinkling, all utterly ended.
 JACOPONE, De Contemptu Mundi. (Coles, tr., Old Gems in New Settings, p. 75.)

One minute gives invention to destroy;
 What to rebuild, will a whole age employ.
 CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act i, sc. 3.

8
 With ruin upon ruin, rout on rout.
 MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 996.

Havoc, and spoil, and ruin are my gain.
 MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 1009.

9
 Prostrate the beauteous ruin lies; and all
 That shared its shelter, perish in its fall.
 WILLIAM PITT THE YOUNGER. (Poetry of the Anti-Jacobin. No. 36.)

10
 Remains of rude magnificence.
 SCOTT, Marmion. Canto iv, st. 11.

A fairer sight perchance than when it frown'd in power.
 ROBERT SOUTHBY, The Poet's Pilgrimage to Waterloo. Pt. i, canto 4, st. 30.

11
 To build up cities an age is needed, but an hour destroys them. A forest is long in growing, but in a moment is reduced to ashes.
 (Urbes constituit ætas: hora dissolvit: momentum fit cinis: diu sylva.)
 SENECA, Naturales Questiones. Bk. iii, sec. 27.

12
 We two will sink on the wild waves of ruin,
 Even as a vulture and a snake outspent
 Drop twisted in inextricable fight,
 Into a shoreless sea.

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act iii, sc. 1.

13
 Red ruin, and the breaking up of laws.
 TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 423.

14
 It gathers ruin as it rolls along.

JAMES THOMSON, Britannia, l. 215.

 Lovely in death the beauteous ruin lay;
 And if in death still lovely, lovelier there;
 Far lovelier! pity swells the tide of love.
 YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 104.

16
 Final ruin fiercely drives
 Her ploughshare o'er creation!
 YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 167.

Stern ruin's ploughshare drives elate
Full on thy bloom.

BURNS, To a Mountain Daisy.

II—Ruin: Babylon and London

<sup>1</sup> Babylon is fallen, is fallen.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxi, 9.

Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen.

New Testament: Revelation, xviii, 2.

Babylon,

Learned and wise, hath perished utterly,
Nor leaves her speech one word to aid the sigh
That would lament her.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. i, No. 25.

It [Tyre] shall be a place for the spreading of nets in the midst of the sea.

Old Testament: Ezekiel, xxvi, 5.

<sup>2</sup> And when 'midst fallen London they survey
The stone where Alexander's ashes lay,
Shall own with humble pride the lesson just
By Time's slow finger written in the dust.

ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, Eighteen Hundred and Eleven. (1811) The original of Macaulay's New Zealander.

She may still exist in undiminished vigour, when some traveller from New Zealand shall, in the midst of a vast solitude, take his stand on a broken arch of London Bridge to sketch the ruins of St. Paul's.

MACAULAY, Essays: Ranke's History of the Popes. (Edinburgh Review, Oct., 1840.)

Referring to the Roman Catholic Church.

See also ROME: THE CHURCH OF ROME.

<sup>3</sup> What cities, as great as this, have . . . promised themselves immortality! Posterity can hardly trace the situation of some. The sorrowful traveller wanders over the awful ruins of others. . . . Here stood their citadel, but now grown over with weeds; there their senate-house, but now the haunt of every noxious reptile; temples and theatres stood here, now only an undistinguished heap of ruins.

GOLDSMITH, The Bee: No. iv, *A City Night-
Piece*. (27 Oct., 1759.)

When London shall be a habitation of bitterns, when St. Paul and Westminster Abbey shall stand shapeless and nameless ruins in the midst of an unpeopled marsh, when the piers of Waterloo Bridge shall become the nuclei of islets of reeds and osiers, and cast the jagged shadows of their broken arches on the solitary stream, some Transatlantic commentator will be weighing in the scales of some new and now unimagined system of criticism the respective merits of the Bells and the Fudges and their historians.

SHEELLEY, Peter Bell the Third: Dedication.
(1819)

At last, some curious traveller from Lima will visit England, and give a description of the ruins of St. Paul's, like the editions of Balbec and Palmyra.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Horace Mann. 24
Nov., 1774.

When I have been indulging this thought I have,
in imagination, seen the Britons of some future century, walking by the banks of the Thames, then overgrown with weeds and almost impassable with rubbish. The father points to his son where stood St. Paul's, the Monument, the Bank, the Mansion House, and other places of the first distinction.

UNKNOWN, Humorous Thoughts on the Removal of the Seat of Empire and Commerce.
(London Magazine, 1745.)

<sup>4</sup> Who knows but that hereafter some traveller like myself will sit down upon the banks of the Seine, the Thames, or the Zuyder Zee, where now, in the tumult of enjoyment, the heart and the eyes are too slow to take in the multitude of sensations,—who knows but that he will sit down solitary amid silent ruins, and weep a people inurned, and their greatness changed into an empty name?

CONSTANTIN CHASSEBŒUF, COMTE DE VOL-
NEY, Ruines. Ch. 2. (1791)

<sup>5</sup> Where now is Britain? . . .
Even as the savage sits upon the stone
That marks where stood her capitols, and hears

The bittern booming in the weeds, he shrinks
From the dismaying solitude.

HENRY KIRKE WHITE, Time. (1803)

<sup>6</sup> The state of England and the once prosperous city of London, [described] in a letter from an American Traveller, dated from the ruinous portico of St. Paul's, in the year 2199, to a friend settled in Boston,
the metropolis of the Western Empire.

Subtitle of *Poems by a Young Nobleman
Lately Deceased* [the second Lord Lyttelton] published at London in 1780.

III—Ruin: Personal

<sup>7</sup> All men that are ruined, are ruined on the side of their natural propensities.

BURKE, On a Regicide Peace.

So fond are mortal men
Fall'n into wrath divine,
As their own ruin on themselves to invite.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1682.

<sup>8</sup> He's undone, horse and man.

<sup>9</sup> The road to ruin is always in good repair;
the travellers pay the expense of it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

<sup>10</sup> Ruin seize thee, ruthless king!

Confusion on thy banners wait!

THOMAS GRAY, The Bard. Pt. i, st. i, l. 1.

1
Going to ruin is silent work.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

2
Rejoicing that he has made his way by ruin.
(Gaudensque viam fecisse ruina.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 150. Referring to Julius Cæsar.

3
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man
That ever lived in the tide of times.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 256.

4
It's all up, all over, you're done for. (Actumst, ilicet, peristi.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 54. (Act i, sc. 1.)

Truly, sir, when a man is ruined, 'tis but the duty of a Christian to tell him of it.

FARQUHAR, The Twin Rivals. Act i, sc. 1.

RULE

5
No rule is so general, which admits not some exception.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. ii, mem. 2, subs. 3. (1621)

There is no rule without an exception.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 18.

The exception proves the rule.

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats: To the Reader.
(1664)

Exceptions only prove the rule.

BYRON, Letters and Journals. Vol. i, p. 204.

6
For nothing goes for sense or light,
That will not with old rules jump right.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 3, l. 135.

7
I don't see the use in drawin' hard and fast rules. You only have to break 'em.

JOHN GALSWORTHY, Eldest Son. Act i, sc. 2.

8
Rules and models destroy genius and art.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, On Taste.

9
Obtruding false rules pranked in reason's garb.

MILTON, Comus, l. 759.

10
Rules and precepts are of no value without natural capacity. (Nihil præcepta arque artes valere nisi adjuvante natura.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria: Præfa-tio. Sec. 26.

11
I have not kept my square; but that to come
Shall all be done by the rule.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 3, l. 6.

RULER

12
Who made thee a ruler and a judge over
us?

New Testament: Acts, vii, 27.

13
He who is to be a good ruler must have first been ruled, as the saying is. (Τόν τε γὰρ μέλλοντα καλῶς ἄρχειν ἀρχθῆναι φασὶ δειν πρώτον.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. vii, ch. 13, sec. 4. See also OBEDIENCE AND COMMAND.

14
'Tis a very fine thing to be father-in-law
To a very magnificent three-tailed bashaw.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Blue Beard.
Act iii, sc. 4.

A Pooh-Bah paid for his services!

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i.

15
Resolv'd to ruin or to rule the state.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 174.

16
Lord of human kind.

DRYDEN, The Spanish Friar. Act ii, sc. 1.

Pride in their port, defiance in their eye,
I see the lords of humankind pass by.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 327.

The Lords of creation men we call.

EMILY ANNE SHULDHAM, Lords of Creation.

The demi-Atlas of this earth.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i,
sc. 5, l. 23.

17
To manage men one ought to have a sharp mind in a velvet sheath.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola. Bk. i, ch. 39.

Iron hand in a velvet glove.

Attributed to CHARLES V, and used also by Napoleon. (CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 11.)

Gentle of speech, but absolute of rule.

LONGFELLOW, Emma and Eginhard, l. 20.

18
His fair large front and eye sublime declar'd
Absolute rule.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk iv, l. 300.

19
Let the ruler be slow in punishing, swift in rewarding. (Piger ad poenas princeps, ad præmia velox.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 121.

20
He shall rule them with a rod of iron.

New Testament: Revelation, ii, 27; xii, 5; xix, 15.

Unjust rule never endures perpetually. (Iniqua numquam regna perpetuo manent.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 196.

22
He who fears odium over much, does not know how to rule. (Odia qui nimium timet, Regnare nescit.)

SENECA, Œdipus, l. 703.

23
Each would the sweets of sov'reign rule devour,

While discord waits upon divided power.

STATIUS, Thebais. Bk. i, l. 182. (Pope, tr.)

1 Which shall to all our nights and days to come Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 5, l. 70.

2 The desire to rule is more vehement than all the passions. (Cupido dominandi cunctis affectibus flagrantior est.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xv, sec. 53.

3 He that only rules by terror
Doeth grievous wrong.

Deep as hell I count his error.

Let him hear my song.

TENNYSON, The Captain, l. 1.

4 We shall exult, if they who rule the land
Be men who hold its many blessings dear,
Wise, upright, valiant; not a servile band
Who are to judge of danger which they fear,
And honour which they do not understand.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. i, No. 27.

5 Whatsoever ye brag or boast,
My master yet shall rule the roast.

UNKNOWN, Carpenter's Tools. (c. 1400) (HAL-LIWELL, Nugæ Poeticæ, 17.)

He ruleth all the roast
With bragging and with boast.

JOHN SKELTON, Why Come Ye Not to Court?
(c. 1520) Of Cardinal Wolsey.

Nay, if riches might rule the roast,
Behold what cause I have to boast!

JOHN HEYWOOD, Four Plays. (c. 1540) (HAZ-LITT, Old Plays, i, 361.)

She doth rule the roast, she wears the keys.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence. (1564)

Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roast.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 109.
(1590)

I never strove to rule the roast,
She ne'er refused to pledge my toast.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Turtle and Sparrow. (1719)

RUMOR

See also Scandal

6 Avoid the talk of men. For talk is mischievous, light, and easily raised, but hard to bear and difficult to escape. Talk never wholly dies away when voiced by many people.

HESEDON, Works and Days, l. 760.

7 I believe there is nothing amongst mankind swifter than rumor. (Nullam rem citiorem apud homines esse, quam famam, reor.)

PLAUTUS, Fragment. From a lost play.

Enemies carry a report in form different from the original. (Nam inimici famam non ita ut nata est ferunt.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 351. (Act iii, sc. 1.)

8 The flying rumours gather'd as they roll'd,
Scarce any tale was sooner heard than told;
And all who told it added something new,
And all who heard it made enlargements too.

POPE, The Temple of Fame, l. 468.

What some invent the rest enlarge.

SWIFT, Journal of a Modern Lady.

9 In calamity any rumor is believed. (Ad calamitatem quilibet rumor valet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 17.

Idle rumors were also added to reasonable apprehensions. (Vana quoque ad veros accessit fama timores.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 469.

Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo,
The numbers of the fear'd.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 97.

10 Rumour is a great traveller.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

11 I cannot tell how the truth may be;
I tell the tale as 'twas said to me.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto ii, st. 22.

I tell the tale as 'twas told to me.

BRET HARTE, A Newport Romance, l. 2. A popular misquotation of Scott's line.

12 I from the orient to the drooping west,
Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold
The acts commenced on this ball of earth:
Upon my tongues continual slanders ride,
The which in every language I pronounce,
Stuffing the ears of men with false reports.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV: Induction, l. 3.

Rumour is a pipe
Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV: Induction, l. 15.

We hold rumour
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear,
But float upon a wild and violent sea
Each way and move.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 19.

13 Rumor does not always err; it sometimes even elects a man. (Haud semper erret fama; aliquando et elegit.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 9.

14 To scatter dark rumors amongst the crowd. (Spargere voces In vulgum ambiguas.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 98.

Rumor, of all evils the most swift. Speed lends her strength, and she gains vigor as she goes; small at first through fear, soon she mounts to heaven, and walks the ground with head hidden in the clouds. (Fama, malum qua non aliud velocius ullum, Obilitate viget virisque adquiret eundo; Parva metu primo, mox sese attollit in auras Ingrediturque solo et caput inter nubila condit.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iv, l. 174.

The rumor forthwith flies abroad throughout the little town. (Fama volat parvam subito volgata per urbem.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. viii, l. 554.

A hundred tongues, a hundred mouths, a voice of iron. (Linguae centum sint, oraque centum Ferrea vox.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 44.

RUST

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, BISHOP OF PETERBOROUGH, when a friend told him that he would wear himself out by his incessant labors. (BOSWELL, Tour to the Hebrides, p. 18, note; HORNE, Sermon on the Duty of Contending for the Truth.) The saying was attributed to George Whitefield, the famous

Methodist preacher, by Southey. (Life of Wesley. Vol. ii, l. 170.)

If I rest, I rust. (Rast' ich, so rost' ich.)

MARTIN LUTHER, Maxims.

<sup>2</sup> There is rust upon locks and hinges,
And mould and blight on the walls,
And silence faints in the chambers,
And darkness waits in the halls.

LOUISE C. MOULTON, The House of Death.

<sup>3</sup> I were better to be eaten to death with a rust than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 245.

<sup>4</sup> How dull it is to pause, to make an end,
To rust unburnish'd, not to shine in use.

TENNYSON, Ulysses, l. 22.

The brightest blades grow dim with rust.

O. W. HOLMES, Chanson without Music.

SABBATH

I—Sabbath: Its Observance

<sup>5</sup> Sunday clears away the rust of the whole week.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 112.

<sup>6</sup> I sing the sabbath of eternal rest.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomsday: The First Hour. St. 1.

<sup>7</sup> There are many people who think that Sunday is a sponge to wipe out all the sins of the week.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

<sup>8</sup> Of all the days that 's in the week

I dearly love but one day—

And that 's the day that comes betwixt

A Saturday and Monday;

For then I'm drest all in my best

To walk abroad with Sally;

She is the darling of my heart,

And she lives in our alley.

HENRY CAREY, Sally in Our Alley.

<sup>9</sup> 'Tis sweet to him, who all the week

Through city-crowds must push his way,

To stroll alone through fields and woods,

And hallow thus the Sabbath-day.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Home-Sick. St. 1.

<sup>10</sup> How still the morning of the hallow'd day!
Mute is the voice of rural labour, hush'd
The ploughboy's whistle, and the milkmaid's song.

JAMES GRAHAME, The Sabbath.

Hail Sabbath! thee I hail, the poor man's day.

JAMES GRAHAME, The Sabbath.

Yes, child of suffering, thou may'st well be sure
He who ordained the Sabbath loves the poor!

O. W. HOLMES, Urania, l. 325.

<sup>11</sup> Gently on tiptoe Sunday creeps,
Cheerfully from the stars he peeps,
Mortals all are asleep below,
None in the village hears him go;
Even chanticleer keeps very still,
For Sunday whispered, 'twas his will.

JOHN PETER HEBEL, Sunday Morning.

<sup>12</sup> Sundays observe: think when the bells do chime

'Tis angels' music.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 65.

A Sabbath well spent brings a week of content,
And health for the toils of the morrow;

But a Sabbath profan'd,

Whatso'er may be gain'd,

Is a certain forerunner of sorrow.

SIR MATTHEW HALE, Golden Maxim. Said to be "a poetical rendering of a passage in a letter to his children."

<sup>13</sup> O day most calm, most bright,
The fruit of this, the next world's bud, . . .
The week were dark, but for thy light:

Thy torch doth show the way.

GEORGE HERBERT, Sunday, l. 1.

The other days and thou
Make up one man; whose face thou art
Knocking at heaven with thy brow:
The worky-days are the back-part;
The burden of the week lies there.

GEORGE HERBERT, Sunday, l. 8.

The Sundays of man's life,
Threaded together on time's string,
Make bracelets to adorn the wife
Of the eternal glorious King.
On Sunday heaven's gate stands ope;
Blessings are plentiful and rife,
More plentiful than hope.

GEORGE HERBERT, Sunday, l. 29.

Thou art a day of mirth,
And, where the week-days trail upon the ground,
Thy flight is higher.

GEORGE HERBERT, Sunday, l. 57.

Day of the Lord, as all our days should be!
LONGFELLOW, John Endicott. Act ii, sc. 2.

Take the Sunday with you through the week,
And sweeten with it all the other days.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. i, st. 5.

So sang they, and the empyrean rung
With Hallelujahs: Thus was Sabbath kept.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 633.

See Christians, Jews, one heavy sabbath keep,
And all the western world believe and sleep!

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 99.

No place is sacred, not the church is free,
Ev'n Sunday shines no Sabbath-day to me.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 11.

Now once a week, upon the Sabbath day,
It is enough to do our small devotion,
And then to follow any merrie motion.

SPENSER, Mother Hubberds Tale, l. 456.

The Sabbaths of Eternity,
One Sabbath deep and wide.

TENNYSON, St. Agnes' Eve. St. 3.

II—Sabbath: The Blue Sabbath

We have it on good authority that it is lawful to pull an ass out of the pit on the Sabbath day. Well, there never was a bigger ass, nor a deeper pit.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, to his attorneys, who came to consult him one Sunday, during the Tilton-Beecher trial, in the fall of 1874. (Dict. of Amer. Biog., ii, 134.)

Golf may be played on Sunday, not being a game within view of the law, but being a form of moral effort.

STEPHEN BUTLER LEACOCK, Why I Refuse to Play Golf.

To Banbury came I, O profane one!
Where I saw a Puritane one
Hanging of his cat on Monday,
For killing of a mouse on Sunday.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, Barnabee's Journal. (1638) "Banbury Saint" was slang for an over-strained Puritan.

Reforming saints! too delicately nice!
By whose decrees, our sinful souls to save,

No Sunday tankards foam, no barbers shave;
And beer undrawn, and beards unmown, display

Your holy reverence for the sabbath-day.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 633.

Sunday shaven, Sunday shorn,
Better hadst thou ne'er been born!

UNKNOWN. (HENDERSON, Folk Lore, 18.)

The Sabbath, as now recognized and enforced, is one of the main pillars of Priestcraft and Superstition, and the stronghold of a merely ceremonial Religion.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON. (Life. Vol. iii, p. 224.)

Who backs his rigid Sabbath, so to speak,
Against the wicked remnant of the week.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 183.

The Saints!—the aping Fanatics that talk
All cant and rant, and rhapsodies high-flown—
That bid you baulk A Sunday walk,
And shun God's work as you should shun your own.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 357.

Now really, this appears the common case,
Of putting too much Sabbath into Sunday—
But what is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

THOMAS HOOD, An Open Question.

For MRS. GRUNDY see SOCIETY: CONVENTION.

And he said unto them, The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath.

New Testament: Mark, ii, 27.

For, bless the gude mon, gin he had his ain way,

He'd na let a cat on the Sabbath say
"mew,"

Nae birdie maun whistle, nae lambie maun play,

An' Phœbus himsel' could na travel that day,

As he'd find a new Joshua in Andie Agnew.

THOMAS MOORE, Sunday Ethics. St. 3.

SAFETY

He who goes the lowest builds the safest.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.

Often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 19.

Safe shall be my going,
Secretly armed against all death's endeavour;

Safe though all safety's lost; safe where men fall;

And if these poor limbs die, safest of all.
RUPERT BROOKE, 1914: Safety.

<sup>1</sup> Oh! are they safe? we ask not of success.
BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 5.

<sup>2</sup> Who can hope to be safe? who sufficiently cautious?

Guard himself as he may, every moment's an ambush.

(Quid quisque vitet, nunquam homini satis
Cautum est in horas.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 13, l. 13. (Lytton,
tr.)

<sup>3</sup> The strongest tower has not the highest wall.

Think well of this, when you sit safe at
home.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: The Story of Cupid and Psyche, l. 896.

<sup>4</sup> Let others seek what is safe. Utter misery is safe; for the fear of any worse event is taken away. (Tuta petant alii: fortuna miserrima tuta est, Nam timor eventus deterioris abest.)

OVID, Epistolæ ex Ponto. Bk. ii, eleg. 2, l. 31.

<sup>5</sup> Safety lies in the middle course. (Medio tutissimus ibis.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 137. See also under MODERATION.

<sup>6</sup> I will both lay me down in peace, and sleep:
for thou, Lord, only makest me dwell in safety.

Old Testament: Psalms, iv, 8.

<sup>7</sup> He is safe from danger who is on guard even when safe. (Caret periculo qui etiam tutus cavet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 127.

He that's secure is not safe.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1748.

The way to be safe is never to be secure.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4820.

Be wary, then; best safety lies in fear.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 43.

Security Is mortals' chiefest enemy.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 32.

<sup>8</sup> Better ride safe in the dark, says the proverb, than in daylight with a cut-throat at your elbow.

SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. viii.

<sup>9</sup> Out of this nettle, danger, we pluck this flower, safety.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 11.

<sup>10</sup> I would give all my fame for a pot of ale and safety.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 13.

<sup>11</sup> What is safe is distasteful; in rashness there is hope. (Ingrata quæ tuta; ex temeritate spes.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iii, sec. 26.

There is always safety in valor.

EMERSON, English Traits: The Times.

In ourselves,

In our own honest hearts and chainless hands,
Will be our safeguard.

THOMAS NOON TALFOURD, Ion.

<sup>12</sup> The only safety for the conquered is to expect no safety. (Una salus victis nullam sperare salutem.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 354.

<sup>13</sup> It is man's perdition to be safe when he ought to die for the truth.

RICHARD VINES, Sermon, preached at St. Margaret's, Westminster, before the House of Commons, 30 Nov., 1642.

Though love repine, and reason chafe,

There came a voice without reply,—

"'Tis man's perdition to be safe,
When for the truth he ought to die."

EMERSON, Quatrains: Sacrifice.

A ship in harbor is safe, but that is not what ships are built for.

JOHN A. SHEED, Salt from My Attic, p. 20.

SAINT

<sup>14</sup> Saint: a dead sinner revised and edited.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary.

<sup>15</sup> There are many (questionless) canonised on earth, that shall never be Saints in Heaven.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec.
34.

All are not saints that go to church.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin Almanac, 1687.

<sup>16</sup> The soberest saints are more stiff-neckèd
Than th' hottest-headed of the wicked.

BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 306.

The rigid saint, by whom no mercy's shown
To saints whose lives are better than his own.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Epistle to Hogarth, l. 25.

<sup>17</sup> Sacred on earth; designed a saint above!

SAMUEL DANIEL, Sonnets to Delia. No. vi.

Saints, to do us good, Must be in heaven.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book.
Pt. vi, l. 176.

<sup>18</sup> Every saint, as every man, comes one day to be superfluous.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

A saint is a sceptic once in every twenty-four hours.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

<sup>1</sup> I don't like your way of conditioning and contracting with the saints. Do this and I'll do that! Here's one for t'other. Save me and I'll give you a taper or go on a pilgrimage.

ERASMUS, The Shipwreck.

<sup>2</sup> The saint who works no miracles has few pilgrims.

<sup>3</sup> To every saint his own candle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Like saint, like offering.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>4</sup> The tears of Saints more sweet by far Than all the songs of sinners are.

ROBERT HERRICK, Tears.

<sup>5</sup> Those Saints, which God loves best, The Devil tempts not least.

ROBERT HERRICK, Temptation.

<sup>6</sup> The greatest saint may be a sinner that never got down to "hard pan."

O. W. HOLMES, The Guardian Angel. Ch. 30.

<sup>7</sup> A black-leg saint, a spiritual hedger.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 180.

<sup>8</sup> The way of this world is to praise dead saints and persecute living ones.

NATHANIEL HOWE, Sermon.

<sup>9</sup> Look in, and see Christ's chosen saint In triumph wear his Christ-like chain; No fear lest he should swerve or faint; "His life is Christ, his death is gain."

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Saint Luke.

<sup>10</sup> Would you enjoy soft nights and solid dinners?

Faith, gallants, board with saints and bed with sinners.

POPE, Epilogue to Mr. Rowe's Jane Shore, l. 23.

<sup>11</sup> A saint in crape is twice a saint in lawn.

<sup>12</sup> Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxvi, 15.

<sup>13</sup> A young Saint an old Devil, (mark this, an old saying, and as true a one, as a young Whore an old Saint.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 64. See also AGE AND YOUTH.

It is easier to make a saint out of a libertine than out of a prig.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 253.

<sup>14</sup> A saint may be defined as a person of heroic virtue whose private judgment is privileged.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan: Preface.

<sup>15</sup> Thou hast damnable iteration and art indeed able to corrupt a saint.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 101.

Such an injury would vex a very saint.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 28.

'Twould a saint provoke.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 246.

<sup>16</sup> I hold you as a thing ensky'd and sainted.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i, sc. 4, l. 34.

<sup>17</sup> O cunning enemy, that, to catch a saint, With saints dost bait thy hook!

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 180.

<sup>18</sup> The only difference between the saint and the sinner is that every saint has a past and every sinner has a future.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

UNKNOWN. A French proverb. See also DEVIL: SICK AND WELL.

SALT

<sup>20</sup> Salt of truth.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 708.

<sup>21</sup> I could sit at rich men's tables,—though the courtesies that raised me, Still suggested clear between us the pale spectrum of the salt.

E. B. BROWNING, Lady Geraldine's Courtship. St. 9.

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. xix, sec. 67. Referred to as a well-known adage.

It is a true saying that a man must eat a peck of salt with his friend before he knows him.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 1.

<sup>23</sup> Trust no one until you have eaten much salt with him. (Nemini fidas, nisi cum quo prius multos medios salis absumpseris.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Pt. xix, sec. 67.

Before you trust a man, eat a peck of salt with him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

<sup>24</sup> Salt seasons all things.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, 53.

Of all tastes, salt.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

1 His [Lot's] wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt.

Old Testament: Genesis, xix, 26.

This would make a man a man of salt.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 199.

2 Help me to salt, help me to sorrow.

JOHN GLYDE, JR., Norfolk Garland, 44.

3 It is a foolish bird that stayeth the laying of salt on her tail.

JOHN LYLX, Euphues and His England, p. 327. (1580)

As boys catch sparrows by flinging salt upon their tails.

SWIFT, Tale of a Tub. Sec. 8.

4 Salt is good: but if the salt have lost his saltness, wherewith will ye season it? Have salt in yourselves.

New Testament: Mark, ix, 50.

Ye are the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted?

New Testament: Matthew, v, 13.

5 It is a covenant of salt for ever before the Lord unto thee and to thy seed with thee.

Old Testament: Numbers, xviii, 19.

I have eaten your bread and salt,

I have drunk your water and wine.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Departmental Ditties: Dedication.

6 Not worth his salt. (Non valet lotium suum.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 57.

7 Attic salt. (Sal Atticum.)

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xxxi, ch. 7, sec. 41. A term for refined wit.

A turn for punning, call it Attic salt.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 68.

8 A grain of salt being added. (Addito salis grano.)

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xxiii, sec. 8. He is telling the story of Pompey, who, when he took the palace of Mithridates, discovered the antidote against poison, "to be taken fasting, a grain of salt being added." Hence "cum grano salis," with a grain of salt.

9 Spilt salt is never all gathered.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

The salt is spilt.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 50.

As salt as wolves in pride.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 404.

SALVATION

13 What must I do to be saved?

New Testament: Acts, xvi, 30.

Despair of being saved, "except thou be born again."

This kind of despair is one of the first steps to heaven.

RICHARD BAXTER, Saint's Rest. Ch. 6.

For my salvation must its doom receive,
Not from what others, but what I believe.

DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 303.

No one can be redeemed by another. No God and no saint is able to shield a man from the consequences of his evil doings. Every one of us must become his own redeemer.

SUBHADRA BHIKSHU, A Buddhist Catechism.

Salvation is from God only. (Solo Deus salus.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin motto.

14 The elect are those who will; the non-elect are those who won't.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

15 The fearless man is his own salvation.

18 The knowledge of sin is the beginning of salvation. (Initium est salutis notitia peccati.)

EPICURUS, Fragments. Frag. 522. (SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xxviii, sec. 9.)

19 I know that my redeemer liveth.

Old Testament: Job, xix, 25.

<sup>1</sup> I am the door [bâb] : by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved.

New Testament: John, x, 9. Bâbism was founded by Mirza Ali Mohammed, who told the people that he was the bâb or door through which all must pass to enter Paradise.

Which of ye will be mortal to redeem
Man's mortal crime, and just th' unjust to save?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 213.

And now without redemption all mankind
Must have been lost, adjudg'd to Death and Hell
By doom severe.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 222.

<sup>3</sup> The will to be saved means a great deal.
(Hoc multum est, velle servari.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. iii, sec. 3.

A man may be damned for despairing to be saved.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living, p. 259.

<sup>4</sup> It were pity but they should suffer salvation, body and soul.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 3.

<sup>5</sup> And for a helmet, the hope of salvation.

New Testament: I Thessalonians, v, 8. (Galea spes salutis.—Vulgate.)

<sup>6</sup> Salvation by the cross. (In cruce salus.)
THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. ii, ch. 2.

With crosses, relics, crucifixes,
Beads, pictures, rosaries, and pixes,—
The tools of working our salvation
By mere mechanic operation.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto 1, l. 1495.

<sup>7</sup> There is no expeditious road
To pack and label men for God,
And save them by the barrel-load.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, A Judgement in Heaven: Epilogue.

<sup>8</sup> He that hath a satirical vein, as he maketh others afraid of his wit, so he had need be afraid of others' memory.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Discourse.

When there's more Malice shown than Matter,
On the Writer falls the Satyr.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1747.

<sup>9</sup> Level at beauty and at wit,

The fairest mark is easiest hit.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 1, l. 663.

<sup>10</sup> I'll publish, right or wrong:
Fools are my theme, let Satire be my song.
BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 5.

Strange! that a Man who has wit enough to write a Satire should have folly enough to publish it.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1742.

<sup>11</sup> And that sarcastic levity of tongue,
The stinging of a heart the world hath stung.
BYRON, Lara. Canto i, st. 5.

<sup>12</sup> Sarcasm I now see to be, in general, the language of the devil.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 4.

<sup>13</sup> When satire flies abroad on falsehood's wing,
Short is her life, and impotent her sting;
But when to truth allied, the wound she gives

Sinks deep, and to remotest ages lives.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Author, l. 217.

Why should we fear; and what? the laws?
They all are arm'd in virtue's cause;
And aiming at the self-same end,
Satire is always virtue's friend.

CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iii, l. 943.

<sup>14</sup> Satire is a lonely and introspective occupation, for nobody can describe a fool to the life without much patient self-inspection.

FRANK MOORE COLBY, Simple Simon.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 26.

And I must twist my little gift of words
Into a scourge of rough and knotted cords
Unmusical, that whistle as they swing
To leave on shameless backs their purple sting.
J. R. LOWELL, Epistle to George William Curtis.

<sup>16</sup> Unless a love of virtue light the flame,
Satire is, more than those he brands, to blame;

He hides behind a magisterial air
His own offences, and strips others bare.

COWPER, Charity, l. 491.

When scandal has new minted an old lie,
Or tax'd invention for a fresh supply,
'Tis call'd a satire.

COWPER, Charity, l. 513.

<sup>17</sup> Satire has always shone among the rest,
And is the boldest way, if not the best,
To tell men freely of their foulest faults;
To laugh at their vain deeds and vainer thoughts.

DRYDEN, Essay Upon Satire, l. 11.

<sup>1</sup> The arrows of sarcasm are barbed with contempt. . . . It is the sneer of the satire, the ridicule, that galls and wounds.

WASHINGTON GLADDEN, Things Old and New: Taming the Tongue.

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 483.

<sup>4</sup> Satire should, like a polished razor keen, Wound with a touch that's scarcely felt or seen.

Thine is an oyster knife, that hacks and hews;

The rage, but not the talent, to abuse.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, To the Imitator of the First Satire of Horace. [Pope.]

<sup>5</sup> I wear my Pen as others do their Sword. To each affronting sot I meet, the word Is Satisfaction: straight to thrusts I go, And pointed satire runs him through and through.

JOHN OLDEHAM, Satire upon a Printer, l. 35.

<sup>6</sup> I have never put anyone on the rack by a biting poem, nor does my verse denounce any man's crimes. (Non ego mordaci distrinxi carmine quemquam; Nec meus ullius crimina versus habet.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 563.

Who, for the poor renown of being smart, Would leave a sting within a brother's heart?

EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 113.

<sup>7</sup> Satire or sense, alas! can Sporus feel? Who breaks a butterfly upon a wheel?

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 307. ["Sporus," Lord John Hervey.]

For who would be satirical Upon a thing so very small?

SWIFT, Dr. Delany's Villa.

<sup>8</sup> There are to whom my satire seems too bold;

Scarce to wise Peter complaisant enough, And something said of Chartres much too rough.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 1, l. 2.

Satire's my weapon, but I'm too discreet To run amuck, and tilt at all I meet.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 1, l. 69.

<sup>9</sup> The flash of that satiric rage, Which, bursting on the early stage,

Branded the vices of the age, And broke the keys of Rome.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto iv, st. 7.

<sup>10</sup> That is some satire, keen and critical.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act v, sc. 1, l. 54.

<sup>11</sup> I'll tell thee what, prince; a college of wit-crackers cannot flout me out of my humour. Dost thou think I care for a satire or an epigram?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 4, l. 101.

<sup>12</sup> Let there be gall enough in thy ink, though thou write with a goose-pen, no matter.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 52.

<sup>13</sup> Satire is a sort of glass wherein beholders do generally discover everybody's face but their own, which is the chief reason for that kind reception it meets with in the world.

SWIFT, The Battle of the Books: Preface.

Each line shall stab, shall blast, like daggers and like fire.

SWIFT, Ode: Dr. William Sancroft.

VOLTAIRE, Lettre à Bordes, 10 Jan., 1769.

<sup>15</sup> N. B.—This is rote Sarcastikul.

ARTEMUS WARD, A Visit to Brigham Young.

SAVAGERY

<sup>16</sup> They led their wild desires to woods and caves,

And thought that all but savages were slaves.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 55.

<sup>17</sup> Ere the base laws of servitude began, When wild in woods the noble savage ran.

DRYDEN, Conquest of Grenada. Act i, sc. 1.

When in a barbarous age, with blood defiled, The human savage roam'd the gloomy wild.

FALCONER, The Shipwreck. Canto iii, l. 1.

<sup>18</sup> Savages, who have only what is necessary, converse in figures.

EMERSON, Nature, Studies and Addresses: Language.

Dirty savages, extemporizing from hand to mouth.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education.

<sup>19</sup> A rude and savage man of Ind.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 222.

<sup>1</sup> This is the bloodiest shame, the wildest savagery.

<sup>2</sup> Savageness begets savageness.

HERBERT SPENCER, Education. Ch. 3.

<sup>3</sup> I will take some savage woman, she shall rear my dusky race.

Iron-jointed, supple-sinew'd, they shall dive, and they shall run,

Catch the wild goat by the hair, and hurl their lances in the sun;

Whistle back the parrot's call, and leap the rainbows of the brooks,

Not with blinded eyesight poring over miserable books.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 168.

I—Scandal: Definitions

<sup>4</sup> In things that a man would not be seen in himself, it is a point of cunning to borrow the name of the world; as to say, "The world says," or "There is a speech abroad."

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning.

Everybody says it, and what everybody says must be true.

J. FENIMORE COOPER, Miles Wallingford. Ch. 30.

<sup>5</sup> That abominable tittle-tattle,
Which is the cud eschew'd by human cattle.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 43.

<sup>6</sup> Gossip is a sort of smoke that comes from the dirty tobacco-pipes of those who diffuse it; it proves nothing but the bad taste of the smoker.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Bk. ii, ch. 13.

<sup>7</sup> Gossip is vice enjoyed vicariously.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine. Vol. xix, p. 104.

<sup>8</sup> The opposite of gossip about men and affairs is often the truth. (Le contraire des bruits qui courent des affaires ou des personnes est souvent la vérité.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. xii.

<sup>9</sup> Gossips are people who have only one relative in common, but that relative the highest possible; namely God.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Religio Journalistici, 13.

<sup>10</sup> Gossip is charming! History is merely gossip. But scandal is gossip made tedious by morality.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act iii.

II—Scandal: Apothegms

<sup>11</sup> That which passes out of one mouth passes into a hundred ears.

ERNEST BRAMAH, Kai Lung's Golden Hours.

<sup>12</sup> Dead scandals form good subjects for dissection.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 31.

And dye conjecture with a darker hue.

BYRON, Lara. Canto ii, st. 6.

<sup>13</sup> In the case of scandal, as in that of robbery, the receiver is always thought as bad as the thief.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 19 Oct., 1748.

Seem always ignorant of all matters of private scandal and defamation, though you should hear them a thousand times; for the parties affected always look upon the receiver to be almost as bad as the thief.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

<sup>14</sup> The words she spoke of Mrs. Harris, lambs could not forgive . . . nor worms forget.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 40.

<sup>15</sup> The more you are talked about, the less powerful you are.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 36.

<sup>16</sup> For a bird of the air shall carry the voice.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, x, 20. See under BIRD: APOTHEGMS.

<sup>17</sup> Gossip speaks ill of all and all of her.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 186.

<sup>18</sup> Scandal will rub out like dirt when it is dry.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4076.

Knowing, what all experience serves to show,
No mud can soil us but the mud we throw.

J. R. LOWELL, Epistle to George William Curtis.

<sup>19</sup> Common fame is mostly to blame.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6120.

Common fame is seldom to blame.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

"Common fame is seldom to blame," is the baser proverb.

R. C. TRENCH, Proverbs, 13.

<sup>20</sup> I shall make a song of the Queen of Crete
Who had nine panthers at her feet,
Who wore bright brooches in her hair—
And her private life was her own affair.

JOHN GRIMES, The Queen of Crete.

<sup>21</sup> Gossips are frogs—they drink and talk.

<sup>22</sup> It's merry when gossips meet.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News: Induction.

1 It is at home, not in public, one washes one's dirty linen. (C'est en famille, ce n'est pas en publique, qu'on lave son linge sale.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Speech, to the French Legislative Assembly, on his return from Elba in 1815.

The king has sent me some of his dirty linen to wash; I will wash yours another time.

VOLTAIRE, Reply to General Manstein, referring to Frederick the Great.

2 The chameleon, who is said to feed upon nothing but air, has of all animals the nimblest tongue.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

3 You do not know it but you are the talk of all the town. (Fabula, nec sentis, tota jactaris in urba.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 1, l. 21.

He shall mourn, and shall be marked out for the gossip of the whole town. (Flebit et insignis tota cantabitur urbe.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 1, l. 46.

We in the world's wide mouth
Live scandalized and foully spoken of.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 153.

4 Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon.

Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 20.

5 For greatest scandal waits on greatest state.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1006.

Never yet

Was noble man but made ignoble talk.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1080.

No scandal about Queen Elizabeth, I hope?

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act ii, sc. 1.

6 Well, for my part, I believe there never was a scandalous tale without some foundation.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act ii, sc. 2.

The basis of every scandal is an absolutely immoral certainty.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act i.

How awful to reflect that what people say of us is true.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts.

7 Swift flies each tale of laughter, shame or folly,

Caught by Paul Pry, and carried home to Polly.

CHARLES SPRAGUE, Curiosity, l. 329.

8 There is nothing that can't be made worse by telling. (Nil est Quin male narrando posit depravarier.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 696. (Act iv, sc. 4.)

9 There is only one thing in the world worse than being talked about, and that is not being talked about.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 1.

10 They say. What do they say? Let them say. (Λέγουσιν ἃ θέλουσιν. Δεγέρωσαν. Οὐ μελεῖ μὲν.)

UNKNOWN. Greek inscription on rings found at Pompeii. Used by Bernard Shaw as a motto over his fireplace, as taken from "an ancient Frenchman."

They say. Quhat say they? Let thame say.

Charm inscribed over doors of houses in Scotland during the sixteenth century; also the motto of the Scottish Earls Marischal, given by them to Marischal College.

"They say" is half a lie.

PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 261.

Have you heard of the terrible family They,
And the dreadful venomous things They say?

Why, half the gossip under the sun,

If you trace it back, you will find begun

In that wretched House of They.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, "They Say."

III—Scandal: Its Baseness

11 To converse with Scandal is to play at Losing Loadum; you must lose a good name to him, before you can win it for yourself.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act i, sc.

2. In "Losing Loadum" the game is to lose tricks.

12 Whoever keeps an open ear

For tattlers will be sure to hear

The trumpet of contention;

Aspersions is the babblers' trade,

To listen is to lend him aid,

And rush into dissension.

COWPER, Friendship, l. 97.

13 In a contempt for the gabble of today's opinions the secret of the world is to be learned.

EMERSON, Nature, Studies and Addresses: Literary Ethics.

14 And there's a lust in man no charm can tame

Of loudly publishing his neighbor's shame;
On eagles' wings immortal scandals fly,

While virtuous actions are but born and die.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ix, l. 102. (Stephen Harvey, tr.)

Assail'd by scandal and the tongue of strife,
His only answer was, a blameless life;
And he that forg'd, and he that threw, the dart,
Had each a brother's int'rest in his heart!

COWPER, Hope, l. 576.

15 All the wickedness I know of any in our convent

I cough up in our cloisters and all the world hears it.

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman: Seven Sins.

<sup>1</sup> The rolling fictions grow in strength and size,
Each author adding to the former lies.

OVID, Metamorphoses, xii, 56. (Swift, tr.)

A cruel story runs on wheels, and every hand oils the wheels as they run.

OUDDA, Wisdom, Wit and Pathos: Moths.

<sup>2</sup> To babble and to talk is most tolerable and not to be endured.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iii, sc. 3, l. 36.

<sup>3</sup> Ye think the rustic cackle of your bourg
The murmur of the world!

TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 276.

Below me, there, is the village, and looks how quiet and small!

And yet bubbles o'er like a city, with gossip, scandal, and spite.

TENNYSON, Maud, l. 108.

IV—Scandal Mongers

<sup>4</sup> I doubt if he bathed before he dressed.

A brasier?—the pagan, he burned perfumes!

You see it is proved what the neighbours guessed:

His wife and himself had separate rooms.

ROBERT BROWNING, House.

<sup>5</sup> The mair they talk I'm kend the better;
E'en let them clash!

BURNS, *The Poet's Welcome to His Love-
Begotten Daughter*. St. 2.

<sup>6</sup> Now, the best way to do is to do as you
please,

For your mind, if you have one, will then be at ease.

Of course you will meet with all sorts of abuse,

But don't try to stop it, it is of no use,
For people will talk.

SAMUEL DODGE, People Will Talk.

<sup>7</sup> Do not be so impatient to set the town right concerning the unfounded pretensions and the false reputation of certain men of standing. They are laboring harder to set the town right concerning themselves, and will certainly succeed.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

The commanding eye of his neighborhood, which held him to decorum. . . . But . . . the censors of action are as numerous and as near in Paris, as in Littleton or Portland; the gossip is as prompt and vengeful.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

<sup>8</sup> Pleasant as it is to hear Scandal tickling in our ear

Ev'n of our own mothers;
In the chit-chat of the day,
To us is pay'd, when we're away,
What we lent to others.

JOHN GAY, The Lady's Lamentation.

<sup>9</sup> And though you duck them ne'er so long,
Not one salt drop e'er wets their tongue;
'Tis hence they scandal have at will,
And that this member ne'er lies still.

JOHN GAY, The Mad Dog. Last lines.

<sup>10</sup> Fierce to invent some sort of scandal against anyone. (Quælibet in quemvis opprobria fingere sævus.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 15, l. 30.

Talk of unusual swell of waist
In maid of honour loosely laced.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 188.

<sup>11</sup> He's gone, and who knows how he may report

Thy words by adding fuel to the flame?

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1350.

<sup>12</sup> The mind conscious of innocence despises false reports: but we are a set always ready to believe a scandal. (Conscia mens recti famæ mendacia risit, Sed nos in vitium cre-dula turba sumus.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iv, l. 311.

<sup>13</sup> To John I owed great obligation;
But John unhappily thought fit

To publish it to all the nation;

Sure John and I are more than quit.

MATTHEW PRIOR, An Epigram.

<sup>14</sup> How hard soe'er it be to bridle wit,
Yet memory oft no less requires the bit.

How many hurried by its force away,

Forever in the land of gossips stray.

BENJAMIN STILLINGFLEET, Essay on Conversation.

<sup>15</sup> Tattlers also, and busybodies, speaking things which they ought not.

New Testament: I Timothy, v, 13.

Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight, some Dick.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 464.

<sup>16</sup> The serpent's tongue.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 440.

She is not old, she is not young,
The Woman with the Serpent's Tongue.
The haggard cheek, the hungry eye,
The poisoned words that wildly fly,
The famished face, the fevered hand—
Who slights the worthiest in the land,
Sneers at the just, contemns the brave,

And blackens goodness in its grave.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Woman with the Serpent's Tongue.

To think that such as she can mar
Names that among the noblest are!
That hands like hers can touch the springs
That move who knows what men and things!
That on her will their fates have hung!
The Woman with the Serpent's Tongue.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Woman with the Serpent's Tongue. Richard Le Gallienne wrote a réplique to this poem, "The poet with the coward's heart."

Skill'd by a touch to deepen scandal's tints
With all the kind mendacity of hints,
While mingling truth with falsehood—sneers with smiles—

A thread of candour with a web of wiles;
A plain blunt show of briefly-spoken seeming,
To hide her bloodless heart's soul-harden'd scheming;

A lip of lies; a face form'd to conceal;
And, without feeling, mock at all who feel;
With a vile mask the Gorgon would disown,—
A cheek of parchment, and an eye of stone.

BYRON, A Sketch from Private Life, l. 55.

Her mouth is a honey-blossom,
No doubt, as the poet sings;
But within her lips, the petals,
Lurks a cruel bee that stings.

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS, The Sarcastic Fair.

1 He rams his quill with scandal, and with scoff,

But 'tis so very foul, it won't go off.
YOUNG, Epistles to Pope. Epis. i, l. 199.

V—Scandal and Women

2 Nut while the two-legged gab-machine's so plenty.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers, Ser. ii, No. 11.

3 From loveless youth to unrespected age,
No passion gratified except her rage:
So much the Fury still outran the Wit,
The pleasure miss'd her, and the scandal hit.
Who breaks with her provokes revenge from Hell,

But he's a bolder man who dares be well.
POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 125.

4 Her tea she sweetens, as she sips, with scandal.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Written to be Spoken by Mrs. Siddons.

Love and scandal are the best sweeteners of tea.
FIELDING, Love in Several Masques. Act iv, sc. 2.

Scandal's the sweetener of a female feast.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 353.

5 Nor do they trust their tongues alone,
But speak a language of their own;
Can read a nod, a shrug, a look,
Far better than a printed book;

Convey a libel in a frown,
And wink a reputation down;
Or, by the tossing of a fan,
Describe the lady and the man.

SWIFT, Journal of a Modern Lady, l. 188.

Ladies, your most obedient.—Mercy on me! here is the whole set! a character dead at every word, I suppose.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act ii, sc. 2.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: The Man of Letters.

9 Every man is a scholar potentially, and does not need any one good so much as this of right thought.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: The Man of Letters.

Shall I tell you the secret of the true scholar? It is this: Every man I meet is my master in some point, and in that I learn of him.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Greatness.

10 The office of the scholar is to cheer, to raise, to guide men by showing them facts and appearances.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: The American Scholar.

The scholar is the student of the world; and of what worth the world is, and with what emphasis it accosts the soul of man, such is the worth, such is the call of the scholar.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Literary Ethics.

<sup>1</sup> The scholar must be a solitary, modest, and charitable soul. He must embrace solitude as a bride . . . that he may become acquainted with his thoughts.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Literary Ethics.

To talk in public, to think in solitude, to read and to hear, to inquire and to answer inquiries, is the business of a scholar.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 8.

Where should the scholar live? In solitude, or in society? in the green stillness of the country, where he can hear the heart of Nature beat, or in the dark, gray town, where he can hear and feel the throbbing heart of man?

<sup>7</sup> He is yet a scholar, than which kind of man there is nothing so simple, so sincere, none better.

PLINY, of Isæus, the Greek sophist. (BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, i, ii, 3, 15.)

<sup>8</sup> Love seldom haunts the breast where learning lies,

And Venus sets ere Mercury can rise.

Those play the scholars who can't play the men,

And use that weapon which they have, their pen.

POPE, The Wife of Bath: Prologue, l. 369.

<sup>9</sup> He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one; Exceeding wise, fair-spoken and persuading: Lofty and sour to them that loved him not, But to those men that sought him sweet as summer.

To waft us home the message of despair?

CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 325.

When Science from Creation's face

Enchantment's veil withdraws,

What lovely visions yield their place

To cold material laws!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, To the Rainbow.

3 Why does this magnificent applied science which saves work and makes life easier bring us so little happiness? The simple answer runs: Because we have not yet learned to make sensible use of it.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, Address, California Institute

SCOTLAND AND THE SCOTCH

I—Scotland: Apothegms

16 God's will be done. It came with a lass and will go with a lass.

JAMES V OF SCOTLAND, on his death-bed, when informed of the birth of a daughter. The Scottish crown was brought into the Stuart family through Margery Bruce, daughter of Robert Bruce, who married Walter Stuart.
The daughter born to James V was Mary Queen of Scots, whose son James removed to England and called himself James I of England and VI of Scotland.

17 Peebles Body (to townsman supposed to be in London): E-eh Mac! you're sune hume
again.

Mac: E-eh, it's just a ruinous place that!
Mun, a had na' been there abune two hoours
when Bang went saxpence.

BIRKET FOSTER. A joke published in Punch,
5 Dec., 1868, with a drawing by Charles Keene. The story had been communicated to Keene by Foster, who had it from Sir John Gilbert.

18 The Campbells are comin'.

ROBERT T. S. LOWELL, The Relief of Lucknow.

The warpipes are pealing, "The Campbells are coming."

They are charging and cheering. O dinna ye hear it?

ALEXANDER MACLAGAN, Jennie's Dream.

But the Gordons know what the Gordons dare,
When they hear the pipers playing.

HENRY NEWBOLT, The Gay Gordons.

These are Clan-Alpine's warriors true;
And, Saxon,—I am Roderick Dhu!

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto v, st. 9.

The plaided warriors of the North.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto vi, st. 19.

1 Mutton old and claret good were Caledonia's forte, Before the Southron taxed her drink and poisoned her with port.

CHARLES NEAVES, Beef and Potatoes.

Firm and erect the Caledonian stood;
Sound was his mutton, and his claret good;
"Let him drink port!" the English statesman cried:

He drank the poison, and his spirit died.

UNKNOWN. (DODD, Epigrammatists.)

2 Stands Scotland where it did?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 164.

3 I look upon Switzerland as an inferior sort of Scotland.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Lord Holland, 1815.

4 'Twould better heat a man

Than two Bath faggots or Scotch warming-pan.

SAMUEL WESLEY, Maggots, 36. "Scotch warming-pan" derives from the story of the traveller who asked to have his bed warmed, and the maid-servant immediately undressed and lay down in it.

Expecting all the welcome of a lover.

(A "Highland welcome" all the wide world over).

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 13.

5 There grows a bonnie brier bush in our kail-yard.

UNKNOWN. Line from a Scottish Jacobite song used by Ian Maclaren as a motto for his story, Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush, 1894. Hence, "kailyard school." A kailyard is a cabbage garden or kitchen garden attached to a small cottage.

II—Scotland: Praise

6 Give me but one hour of Scotland,—
Let me see it ere I die!

W. E. AYTOUN, Charles Edward at Versailles, l. 211.

It was a' for our rightfu' king
We left fair Scotland's strand.

BURNS, It Was A' for Our Rightfu' King.

It's guid to be merry and wise,

It's guid to be honest and true,

It's guid to support Caledonia's cause

And bide by the buff and the blue.

BURNS, Here's a Health to Them that's Awa.

7 O Scotia! my dear, my native soil!

For whom my warmest wish to Heaven is sent!

Long may thy hardy sons of rustic toil

Be blest with health, and peace, and sweet content!

BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night, l. 172.

8 Scotland, thy mountains, thy valleys and fountains

Are famous in story—the birth-place of song.

ALEXANDER CRAWFORD, Scotland.

9 From the lone shieling of the misty island
Mountains divide us, and the waste of seas,
Yet still the blood is strong, the heart is Highland,

And we in dreams behold the Hebrides.

JOHN GALT, Canadian Boat Song. (Blackwood's Magazine, Sept., 1829; Noctes Ambrosianæ. No. 46.) The poem is introduced into the Noctes Ambrosianæ by Christopher North (John Wilson), as "from a friend of mine now in upper Canada," where Galt had been serving as secretary to a land-purchase company. It has been attributed both to Wilson and to John G. Lockhart, and also to Hugh Montgomerie, twelfth Earl of Eglinton. "Shieling" is Scotch for a small hut or dwelling.

Then Scotland's right and Scotland's might,

And Scotland's hills for me;

We'll drink a cup to Scotland yet,

Wi' a' the honours three.

HENRY SCOTT RIDDELL, Scotland Yet.

10 O Caledonia, stern and wild,

Meet nurse for a poetic child!

Land of brown heath and shaggy wood,

Land of the mountain and the flood,

Land of my sires! what mortal hand

Can e'er untie the filial band,

That knits me to thy rugged strand!

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto vi, st. 2.

Where's the coward that would not dare

To fight for such a land!

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto iv, st. 30.

Still from the sire the son shall hear

Of the stern strife and carnage drear

Of Flodden's fatal field,

When shivered was fair Scotland's spear

And broken was her shield!

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto vi, st. 34.

Stand to your arms, then, and march in good order;

England shall many a day

Tell of the bloody fray,

When the Blue Bonnets came over the Border.

SCOTT, Border Song. (The Monastery. Ch. 25.)

11

There is not such a word

Spoke of in Scotland as this term of fear.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 84.

<sup>1</sup> Mourn, hapless Caledonia, mourn
Thy banished peace, thy laurels torn!
SMOLLETT, The Tears of Scotland.

What foreign arms could never quell
By civil rage and rancour fell.

<sup>2</sup> My heart's in the Highlands, my heart is not here;
My heart's in the Highlands a-chasing the deer.

UNKNOWN, The Strong Walls of Derry. Robert Burns used these lines from this old song for his own song, My Heart's in the Highlands.

III—Scotland: Some Gibes

<sup>3</sup> Caledonia's ours.
And well I know within that bastard land
Hath Wisdom's goddess never held command;
A barren soil, where Nature's germs, confined
To stern sterility, can stint the mind;
Whose thistle well betrays the niggard earth,
Emblem of all to whom the land gives birth;
Each genial influence nurtured to resist;
A land of meanness, sophistry, and mist.
BYRON, The Curse of Minerva, l. 130.

<sup>4</sup> Treacherous Scotland, to no int'rest true.
DRYDEN, On the Death of Cromwell. St. 17.
That garret of the earth—that knuckle-end of England—that land of Calvin, oat-cakes, and sulphur.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Ch.
2.)

<sup>5</sup> In my youth, a Highland gentleman measured his importance by the number of men his domain could support. After some time the question was, to know how many great cattle it would feed. Today we are come to count the number of sheep. I suppose posterity will ask how many rats and mice it can feed.

EMERSON, *Lectures and Biographical Sketches:
The Man of Letters*. Quoting "a Scotch mountaineer."

<sup>6</sup> If the Scotch knew enough to go in when it rained, they would never get any outdoor exercise.

SIMEON FORD, My Trip to Scotland.

<sup>7</sup> Oats,—a grain which is generally given to horses, but in Scotland supports the people.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, *Dictionary of the English
Language*.

Joh. Mayor, in the first book of his History of Scotland, contends much for the wholesomeness of oaten bread: it was objected to him, then living at Paris in France, that his countrymen fed on oats, and base grain. . . . And yet Wecker out of Galen calls it horse-meat, and fitter for juments than men to feed on.

<sup>8</sup> We cultivate literature on a little oatmeal.
(Tenui musam meditamur avena.)

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir.
Vol. i.)

The motto I proposed for the [Edinburgh]
Review was, "Tenui musam meditamur avena";
but this was too near the truth to be admitted;
so we took our present grave motto from Pub-lius Syrus, of whom none of us, I am sure, had read a single line.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir.

IV—Scotland: The Scotch

<sup>10</sup> Nowhere beats the heart so kindly
As beneath the tartan plaid!

W. E. AYTOUN, Charles Edward at Versailles,
l. 219.

As Dr. Johnson never said, is there any Scotsman without charm?

J. M. BARRIE, Address, Edinburgh University.

<sup>11</sup> There are few more impressive sights in the world than a Scotsman on the make.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows.
Act ii.

A young Scotsman of your ability, let loose upon the world with three hundred pounds, what could he not do? It's almost appalling to think of; especially if he went among the English.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows.
Act i.

<sup>12</sup> I've sometimes thought that the difference between the Scotch and the English is that the Scotch are hard in all other respects but soft with women, and the English are hard with women and soft in all other respects.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows.
Act ii.

The ardent disposition of the Scotch. (Perfidium ingenium Scotorum.)

A proverb of unknown origin.

<sup>1</sup> You've forgotten the grandest moral attribute of a Scotsman, Maggie, that he'll do nothing which might damage his career.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows. Act ii.

<sup>2</sup> Trust yow no Skott.

ANDREW BOORD, Letter to Thomas Cromwell, 1 April, 1536.

<sup>3</sup> But bring a Scotsman frae his hill,
Clap in his cheek a Highland gill,
Say, such is royal George's will,
And there's the foe!

CAMPBELL, The Pilgrim of Glencoe, l. 14.

<sup>5</sup> Only a few industrious Scots perhaps, who indeed are dispersed over the face of the whole earth. But as for them, there are no greater friends to Englishmen and England, when they are out on't, in the world, than they are. And for my own part, I would a hundred thousand of them were there [Virginia] for we are all one countrymen now, ye know, and we should find ten times more comfort of them there than we do here.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act iii, sc. 2.
James I was offended at this reflection on his countrymen and compelled its deletion, threatening the authors, Chapman, Jonson, and Marston, with imprisonment.

CHURCHILL, The Prophecy of Famine, l. 195.

<sup>7</sup> Your proper child of Caledonia believes in his rickety bones that he is the salt of the earth. . . . He is the one species of human animal that is taken by all the world to be fifty per cent cleverer and pluckier and honester than the facts warrant. SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 7.

Yet a tailor might scratch her where'er she did itch.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 55.

I would thou didst itch from head to foot and I had the scratching of thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 30.

UNKNOWN. A humorous phrase supposed to be addressed to Scotchmen when they scratch themselves. The story goes that the Duke of Argyle erected posts on his estates for his cattle to rub themselves against, and his herdsman, as they rubbed their own itching backs against the posts, uttered the above blessing.

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 89. (De Quincey, tr.)

Ye waves
That o'er the interminable ocean wreath
Your crisped smiles.
ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 89.

The many-twinkling smile of ocean.
JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Second Sunday after Trinity.

<sup>3</sup> Old ocean's gray and melancholy waste.
BRYANT, Thanatopsis, l. 44.

The wavy waste.
THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 7.

<sup>4</sup> Roll on, thou deep and dark-blue Ocean, roll!
Ten thousand fleets sweep over thee in vain;
Man marks the earth with ruin, his control
Stops with the shore; upon the watery plain
The wrecks are all thy deed, nor doth remain
A shadow of man's ravage.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 179.

Dark-heaving;—boundless, endless, and sublime—

The image of Eternity—the throne
Of the Invisible; even from out thy slime
The monsters of the deep are made; each zone
Obeys thee; thou goest forth, dread, fathomless,
alone.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 183.

<sup>5</sup> Unchangeable save to thy wild waves' play;
Time writes no wrinkle on thine azure brow;
Such as creation's dawn beheld, thou rollest
now.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 182.

And Thou, vast Ocean! on whose awful face
Time's iron feet can print no ruin trace.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY, The Omnipresence of the Deity. Pt. i, st. 20.

The sea appears today just as it did on the first day of creation. (La mer reparait telle qu'elle fut au premier jour de la création.)

MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne. Bk. i, ch. 4.

<sup>6</sup> And I have loved thee, Ocean! and my joy
Of youthful sports was on thy breast to be Borne, like thy bubbles, onward. From a boy
I wanton'd with thy breakers, . . .
And trusted to thy billows far and near,

And laid my hand upon thy mane—as I do
here.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 184.

I'll bid him welcome, clap his mane,
And hug his breakers to my breast.

GEORGE GRAY, The Storm.

He laid his hand upon "the Ocean's mane,"
And played familiar with his hoary locks.

POLLOCK, The Course of Time. Bk. iv, l. 689.

<sup>7</sup> Behold the Sea,
The opaline, the plentiful and strong,
Yet beautiful as is the rose in June,
Fresh as the trickling rainbow of July;
Sea full of food, the nourisher of kinds,
Purger of earth, and medicine of men;
Creating a sweet climate by my breath,
Washing out harms and griefs from memory,
And, in my mathematic ebb and flow,
Giving a hint of that which changes not.
EMERSON, Sea-Shore.

<sup>8</sup> The sea, unmated creature, tired and lone,
Makes on its desolate sands eternal moan.
F. W. FABER, The Sorrowful World.

It keeps eternal whisperings around Desolate shores.

KEATS, Sonnet: On the Sea.

The hollow murmur of the ocean-tide.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 340.

<sup>9</sup> Sweet is the bitter sea, and the clear green in which the gaze seeks the soul, looking through the glass into itself. The sea thinks for me as I listen and ponder; the sea thinks, and every boom of the wave repeats my prayer.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, The Story of My Heart.

<sup>10</sup> Who hath desired the Sea? Her excellent loneliness rather

Than forecourts of kings, and her outermost pits than the streets where men gather?

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Sea and the Hills.

<sup>11</sup> My soul is full of longing
For the secret of the sea,
And the heart of the great ocean
Sends a thrilling pulse through me.
LONGFELLOW, The Secret of the Sea.

"Wouldst thou,"—so the helmsman answered,
"Learn the secret of the sea?"

Only those who brave its dangers

Comprehend its mystery!"

LONGFELLOW, The Secret of the Sea.

What are the wild waves saying,

Sister, the whole day long,

That ever amid our playing,

I hear but their low, lone song?

J. E. CARPENTER, What Are the Wild Waves Saying?

The sea, Floy, what is it that it keeps on saying?
DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 8.

And like the wings of sea-birds
Flash the white caps of the sea.
LONGFELLOW, Twilight.
- 2
She knows all sighs and she knows all sinning,
And they whisper out in her breaking wave:
She has known it all since the far beginning,
Since the grief of that first grave.
She shakes the heart with her stars and thunder
And her soft low word when the winds are late;
For the Sea is Woman, the Sea is Wonder—
Her other name is Fate!
EDWIN MARKHAM, Virginia.
- 3
But, visiting sea, your love doth press
And reach in further than you know,
And fills all these; and when you go
There's loneliness in loneliness.
ALICE MEYNELL, Song.
- 4
Before their eyes in sudden view appear
The secrets of the hoary deep, a dark
Illimitable Ocean, without bound,
Without dimension, where length, breadth,
and height,
And time and place are lost; where eldest
Night
And Chaos, ancestors of Nature, hold
Eternal anarchy, amidst the noise
Of endless wars, and by confusion stand.
For hot, cold, moist, and dry, four champions fierce,
Strive here for mast'ry.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 890.

To me the sea is a continual miracle,
The fishes that swim—the rocks—the motion of the waves—the ships with men in
them,
What stranger miracles are there?
WALT WHITMAN, Miracles.
Thou sea that pickest and cullest the race in time,
and unitest nations,
Sucked by thee, old husky nurse, embodying thee,
Indomitable, untamed as thee.

O pilot! 'tis a fearful night,
There's danger on the deep.
THOMAS HAYNES BAYLY, The Pilot.
A daring pilot in extremity;

Pleas'd with the danger, when the waves went high

He sought the storms.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 159.

<sup>1</sup> How Bishop Aidan foretold to certain seamen a storm that would happen, and gave them some holy oil to lay it.

VENERABLE BEDE, Ecclesiastical History. Vol. iii, ch. 15, Heading.

Remember to throw into the sea the oil which I give to you, when straightway the winds will abate, and a calm and smiling sea will accompany you throughout your voyage.

VENERABLE BEDE, Ecclesiastical History. Bk. iii, ch. 15. Hence the expression, "To throw oil on troubled waters."

All seas are made calm and still with oil; and therefore the divers under the water do spirt and sprinkle it abroad with their mouths because it dulceth and allayeth the unpleasant nature thereof, and carrieth a light with it.

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. ii, ch. 103.

Why does pouring oil on the sea make it clear and calm? Is it because the winds, slipping the smooth oil, have no force, nor cause any waves?

PLUTARCH, Morals: Natural Questions. Sec. 12.

<sup>2</sup> The sea heaves up, hangs loaded o'er the land, Breaks there and buries its tumultuous strength.

ROBERT BROWNING, Luria. Act i.

<sup>3</sup> Come hither, hither, my little page!

Why dost thou weep and wail?

Or dost thou dread the billows' rage,

Or tremble at the gale?

But dash the tear-drop from thine eye;

Our ship is swift and strong,

Our fleetest falcon scarce can fly

More merrily along.

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto i, st. 13. Song.

Come hither! come hither! my little daughter,

And do not tremble so;

For I can weather the roughest gale

That ever wind did blow.

LONGFELLOW, The Wreck of the Hesperus.

<sup>4</sup> The hell of waters! where they howl and hiss, And boil in endless torture.

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto iv, st. 69.

In Biscay's sleepless bay.

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto i, st. 14.

<sup>5</sup> Thou glorious mirror, where the Almighty's form

Glasses itself in tempests.

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto iv, st. 183.

<sup>6</sup> 'T was when the seas were roaring

With hollow blasts of wind;

A damsel lay deploring,

All on a rock reclin'd.

JOHN GAY, The What d'ye Call It. Act ii, sc. 8.

<sup>7</sup> The breaking waves dashed high

On a stern and rock-bound coast,

And the woods against a stormy sky,

Their giant branches toss'd.

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, The Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers in New England.

<sup>8</sup> He goes a great voyage that goes to the bottom of the sea.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. See also SHIPWRECK.

<sup>9</sup> Bursts as a wave that from the clouds impends,

And swell'd with tempests on the ship descends;

White are the decks with foam; the winds aloud

Howl o'er the masts, and sing thro' ev'ry shroud:

Pale, trembling, tired, the sailors freeze with fears;

And instant death on ev'ry wave appears.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xv, l. 752. (Pope, tr.)

The wild sea roars and lashes the granite cliffs below,

And round the misty islets the loud tempests blow.

MARY HOWITT, The Sea-Fowler.

<sup>10</sup> He maketh the deep to boil like a pot.

Old Testament: Job, xli, 31.

<sup>11</sup> Let him who knows not how to pray go to sea.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

He that will learn to pray, let him go to Sea.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>12</sup> And all day long the stone

Felt how the wind was blown;

And all night long the rock

Stood the sea's shock;

While, from the window, I

Looked out, and wondered why,

Why at such length

Such force should fight such strength.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Watching by a Sick-bed.

<sup>13</sup> Look when the clouds are blowing

And all the winds are free:

In fury of their going

They fall upon the sea.

But though the blast is frantic,

And though the tempest raves,

The deep immense Atlantic

Is still beneath the waves.

F. W. H. MYERS, Wind, Moon and Tides.

When winds are raging o'er the upper ocean

And billows wild contend with angry roar,
'Tis said, far down beneath the wild commotion

That peaceful stillness reigneth evermore.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, Hymn.

I stood upon the hatches in the storm.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 101.

3
Blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!
The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act v, sc. 1, l. 67.

4
Cease, rude Boreas, blustering railer!
List, ye landsmen all, to me:
Messmates, hear a brother sailor
Sing the dangers of the sea.
GEORGE A. STEVENS, The Storm.

5
Yet winds to seas
Are reconcil'd at length, and sea to shore.
MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 961.

V—Sea: Sailing

6
Once more upon the waters! yet once more!
And the waves bound beneath me as a steed
That knows his rider.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 2.

This quiet sail is as a noiseless wing
To waft me from distraction.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 85.

7
O'er the glad waters of the dark-blue sea,
Our thoughts as boundless, and our souls as free,
Far as the breeze can bear, the billows foam,
Survey our empire, and behold our home!

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 1.

8
Give me a spirit that on this life's rough sea
Loves t' have his sails fill'd with a lusty wind,

Even till his sail-yards tremble, his masts crack,
And his rapt ship run on her side so low
That she drinks water, and her keel plows air.
GEORGE CHAPMAN, Byron's Conspiracy. Act
iii, sc. 1.

9
The ship was cheered, the harbour cleared,
Merrily did we drop
Below the kirk, below the hill,
Below the lighthouse top.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Ancient Mariner. Pt. i, st. 6.
We were the first that ever burst
Into that silent sea.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Ancient Mariner. Pt. ii, st. 5.

10
But oars alone can ne'er prevail
To reach the distant coast;
The breath of heav'n must swell the sail,
Or all the toil is lost.
COWPER, Human Frailty. St. 6.

And all the way, to guide their chime,
With falling oars they kept the time.
ANDREW MARVELL, Bermudas.

Faintly as tolls the evening chime,
Our voices keep tune and our oars keep time.
THOMAS MOORE, A Canadian Boat-Song.

11
A wet sheet and a flowing sea,—
A wind that follows fast,
And fills the white and rustling sail,
And bends the gallant mast,—
And bends the gallant mast, my boys,
While, like the eagle free,
Away the good ship flies, and leaves
Old England on the lee.
ALLAN CUNNINGHAM, A Wet Sheet and a Flowing Sea.

12
Well, then—our course is chosen, spread the
sail,
Heave off the lead, and mark the soundings
well;
Look to the helm, good master; many a shoal Marks this stern coast, and rocks, where sits the Siren,
Who, like ambition, lures men to their ruin.
WILLIAM FALCONER, The Shipwreck. Quoted by Scott, Kenilworth. Ch. 17.

13
Thus, thus I steer my bark, and sail
On even keel with gentle gale.
MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 814.

Though pleased to see the dolphins play,
I mind my compass and my way.
MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 826.

For me, my craft is sailing on,
Through mists to-day, clear seas anon.
Whate'er the final harbor be,
'Tis good to sail upon the sea!
JOHN KENDRICK BANGS, The Voyage.

14
Come o'er the moonlit sea,

The waves are brightly glowing.

CHARLES JEFFERYS, The Moonlit Sea.

1
Some love to roam o'er the dark sea's foam,
Where the shrill winds whistle free.

CHARLES MACKAY, Some Love to Roam.

2
"Ahoy! and O-ho! and it's who's for the ferry?"

(The briar's in bud and the sun going down)

"And I'll row ye so quick and I'll row ye so steady,
And 't is but a penny to Twickenham Town."

THÉOPHILE MARZIALS, Twickenham Ferry.

3
Well pleas'd they slack their course, and many a league
Cheer'd with the grateful smell old Ocean smiles.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 164.

4
Thus far we run before the wind.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Apprentice. Act i, sc. 1,
l. 344.

But the principal failing occurred in the sailing,
And the Bellman, perplexed and distressed,
Said he had hoped, at least, when the wind blew
due East,

That the ship would not travel due West!

LEWIS CARROLL, The Hunting of the Snark.

5
Simple and strong and desolate and daring,
Leaps to the great embraces of the sea.

FREDERIC W. H. MYERS, St. Paul.

6
We have ploughed the vast ocean in a fragile bark. (Nos fragili ligno vastum sulcavimus æquor.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 4, l. 35.

7
I'm on the sea! I'm on the sea!

I am where I would ever be,
With the blue above and the blue below,
And silence wheresoe'er I go.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, The Sea.

8
A life on the ocean wave,
A home on the rolling deep,
Where the scattered waters rave,
And the winds their revels keep!

EPES SARGENT, A Life on the Ocean Wave.

9
Upon the gale she stooped her side,
And bounded o'er the swelling tide,
As she were dancing home;
The merry seamen laughed to see
Their gallant ship so lustily
Furrow the green sea-foam.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto ii, st. 1.

10
Behold the threaten sails,
Borne with the invisible and creeping wind,

Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd sea,

Breasting the lofty surge.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, Prologue, l. 10.

Sail like my pinnace to these golden shores.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act i, sc. 3, l. 89.

11
Gentle airs

Curl'd the blue deep, and bright the summer
sun

Play'd o'er the summer ocean, when our barks
Began their way. And they were gallant barks
As ever through the raging billows rode;
And many a tempest's buffeting they bore.
Their sails all swelling with the eastern breeze,
Their tighten'd cordage clattering to the mast,
Steady they rode the main.

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales. Pt. iv, l. 5.

Day after day, with one auspicious wind,
Right to the setting sun we held our course. . . .
Day after day, day after day the same,—
A weary waste of waters!

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales. Pt. iv, l. 16.

And still at morning where we were at night,
And where we were at morn, at nightfall still,
The centre of that drear circumference,
Progressive, yet no change!

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales. Pt. iv, l. 83.

12
I will go back to the great sweet mother,
Mother and lover of men, the sea.

I will go down to her, I and none other,
Close with her, kiss her and mix her with
me.

SWINBURNE, The Triumph of Time. St. 33. See also WANDERLUST.

13
Rocked in the cradle of the deep

I lay me down in peace to sleep;

Secure I rest upon the wave,

For Thou, O Lord! hast power to save.

EMMA HART WILLARD, Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep.

VI—Sea: Sailors

14
Great seamen . . . in tall ships ribbed with brass,

To put a girdle round about the world.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act i, sc.

1. A proverbial expression for a voyage around the world.

I'll put a girdle round about the earth in forty minutes.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 175.

He hath put a girdle 'bout the world,
And sounded all her quicksands.

JOHN WEBSTER, Duchess of Malfi. Act iii, sc. 2.

Round the world and home again,
That's the sailor's way.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Homeward Bound.

Wherever waves can roll, and winds can blow.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Farewell.

1 While the hollow oak our palace is,
Our heritage the sea.

ALLAN CUNNINGHAM, A Wet Sheet and a Flowing Sea.

2 For they say there's a Providence sits up aloft,

To keep watch for the life of poor Jack!

CHARLES DIBDIN, Poor Jack.

There's a sweet little cherub that sits up aloft,
To keep watch for the life of poor Jack.

CHARLES DIBDEN, Poor Jack.

For if bold tars are Fortune's sport,
Still are they Fortune's care.

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Blind Sailor.

3 Mayhap you have heard that as dear as their lives
All true-hearted tars love their ships and their wives.

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Nancy.

In every mess I find a friend,
In every port a wife.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Jack in His Element.

They'll tell thee sailors, when away,
In every port a mistress find.

JOHN GAY, Sweet William's Farewell.

A seafaring man may have a sweetheart in every port;
but he should steer clear of a wife as he would avoid a quicksand.

SMOLLETT, The Adventures of Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 21.

4 Here, a sheer hulk, lies poor Tom Bowling,

The darling of our crew;

No more he'll hear the tempest howling,
For death has broached him to.

His form was of the manliest beauty,

His heart was kind and soft;

Faithful, below, he did his duty;

But now he's gone aloft.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Tom Bowling.

5 Skill'd in the globe and sphere, he gravely stands,

And, with his compass, measures seas and lands.

DRYDEN, Sixth Satire of Juvenal, l. 760.

6 The wonder is always new that any sane man can be a sailor.

EMERSON, English Traits, p. 36.

7 Your seamen are like your element, always tempestuous.

FARQUHAR, Sir Harry Wildair. Act i, sc. 1.

A rude and boisterous captain of the sea.

JOHN HOME, Douglas. Act iv, sc. 1.

The skipper stormed and tore his hair,
Hauled on his boots and roared at Marden—

"Nantucket 's sunk and here we are Right over old Marm Hackett's garden!"
JAMES T. FIELDS, The Nantucket Skipper.

8 Now landsmen all, whoever you may be,
If you want to rise to the top of the tree,
If your soul isn't fettered to an office stool,
Be careful to be guided by this golden rule—
Stick close to your desks and never to go sea,
And you all may be Rulers of the Queen's Navee!

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i.

9 Sailors should never be shy.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i.

Sailors are but worldly men, and little prone to lead serious and thoughtful lives.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

10 Oak and brass of triple fold
Encompassed sure that heart, which first made bold
To the raging sea to trust a fragile bark.

(*Illi robur et æs triplex
Circa pectus erat, qui fragilem truci Commissit pelago ratem Primus.*)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 3, l. 9. (Conington, tr.)

11 The hungry sea is fatal to sailors. (Exitio est avidum mare nautis.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 28, l. 18.

Trust to a plank, draw precarious breath,
At most seven inches from the jaws of death.

(Confusus ligno, digitis a morte remotus Quattuor aut septem, si sit latissima, tædæ.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xii, l. 58.

Avoid business with the sea, and put thy mind to the ox-drawn plough, if it is any joy to thee to see the end of a long life. On land there is length of days, but on the sea it is difficult to find a man with gray hair.

PHALÆCUS, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 650.)

Ships are but boards, sailors but men: there be land-rats and water-rats, land-thieves and water-thieves, I mean pirates, and then there is the peril of waters, winds and rocks.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 3, l. 22.

12 Of all the husbands on the earth,
The sailor has the finest berth,
For in 'is cabin he can sit
And sail and sail—and let 'er knit.

WALLACE IRWIN, A Grain of Salt.

A baby was sleeping, Its mother was weeping,
For her husband was far on the wild-raging sea.

SAMUEL LOVER, The Angel's Whisper.

13 No man will be a sailor who has contrivance enough to get himself into a jail; for being in a ship is being in jail with the chance of being drowned. . . . A man in a jail has more room, better food, and commonly better company.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, 1759.)

What is a ship but a prison?

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 4.

1 Roll down—roll down to Rio—
Roll really down to Rio!

Oh, I'd love to roll to Rio
Some day before I'm old!

KIPLING, Just-So Stories: Armadilloes.

2 There were gentlemen and there were seamen in the navy of Charles the Second. But the seamen were not gentlemen; and the gentlemen were not seamen.

MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. i, ch. 3.

3 A white color is a disgrace in a sailor: he should be swarthy from the sea-water and the rays of the sun. (Candidus in nauta turpis color: æquoris unda Debet et a radiis sideris esse niger.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 723.

4 Seek, sailor, the safe harbors. (Tutos, pete, navita, portus.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iv, l. 625.

A Passage perillous makyth a Port pleasant.

UNKNOWN, Motto, inscribed on a harbor wall
on the Lake of Como.

Did you voyage all unspoken, small and lonely?
Or with fame, the happy fortune of the few?
So you win the Golden Harbour, in the old way;
There's the old sea welcome waiting there for you.

RONALD A. HOPWOOD, The Old Way. (London Times, 16 Sept., 1916.)

They saw the cables loosened, they saw the gangways cleared,

They heard the women weeping, they heard the
men that cheered;

Far off, far off, the tumult faded and died away,
And all alone the sea-wind came singing up the Bay.

NEWBOLT, The Sailing of the Long Ships.

5 The seaman sets his sails to suit the wind.
(Utumque in alto ventust, exim velum vortitur.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 49. (Act i, sc. 1.)

6 There is no pleasure sailors have greater than sighting from the deep the distant land.
(Voluptas nullast navitis . . . quam quom ex alto procul terram conspicuit.)

PLAUTUS, Menæchmi, l. 226. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

Pass we the joys and sorrows sailors find,
Coop'd in their winged sea-girt citadel,
The foul, the fair, the contrary, the kind,
As breezes rise and fall and billows swell,
Till on some jocund morn—lo, land! and all is well.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 28.

7 They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters; these see the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the deep.

Old Testament: Psalms, cvii, 23, 24.

8 Like a drunken sailor on a mast;
Ready, with every nod, to tumble down
Into the fatal bowels of the deep.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 101.

9 I make good the old saying, we sailors get money like horses, and spend it like asses.

SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. Ch. 2.

10 There were three sailors of Bristol city
Who took a boat and went to sea.
But first with beef and captain's biscuits
And pickled pork they loaded she.

There was gorging Jack and guzzling Jimmy,
And the youngest he was little Billee.

Now when they got as far as the Equator
They'd nothing left but one split pea.

THACKERAY, Little Billee.

Oh, I am a cook and a captain bold
And the mate of the Nancy brig,
And a bo'sun tight and a midshipmite
And the crew of the captain's gig.

W. S. GILBERT, The Yarn of the Nancy Bell.

11 Why, Jack's the king of all,
For they all love Jack.

FREDERICK E. WEATHERLY, *They All Love
Jack*. See also under JACK.

12 Six days shalt thou labor and do all thou art able,

And on the seventh—holystone the decks and scrape the cable.

UNKNOWN, The Philadelphia Catechism.

VII—Sea and Land

13 Whenever you can make your journey by land, do not make it by sea. (Quando terra iter facere possis, ne mari facias.)

APOSTOLIUS, Fragment. Cent. ii, sec. 54. One of the three things in his life which Cato
Major repented was having made a journey by sea when he could have gone by land.
(PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. 9, 6.)

There are many advantages in sea-voyaging, but security is not one of them.

SADI. (EMERSON, English Traits: Voyage to England.)

14 They are ill discoverers that think there is no land, when they can see nothing but sea.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

15 An everywhere of silver,
With ropes of sand

To keep it from effacing
The track called land.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. ii, No. 22.

A strong nor'wester's blowing, Bill;
Hark! don't ye hear it roar, now?

Lord help 'em, how I pities them
Unhappy folks on shore now!

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Sailor's Consolation.

This poem is sometimes attributed to William Pitt, the song-writer.

My eyes! what tiles and chimney-pots
About their heads are flying!

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Sailor's Consolation.

The shore has perils unknown to the deep.
GEORGE ILLES, Jottings.

Women and cowards on the land may lie,
The sea's a tomb that's proper for the brave.
DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis. St. 101.

Where the broad ocean leans against the land.
GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 284.

Praise the sea, but keep on land.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Being on sea, sail: being on land, settle.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

What though the sea be calm? Trust to the shore:

Ships have been drown'd, where late they danc'd before.

HERRICK, Safety on the Shore.

Love the sea? I dote upon it—from the beach.
DOUGLAS JERROLD, Specimens of Jerrold's Wit:
Love of the Sea.

When men come to like a sea life they are not fit to live on land.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

They scorn the strand who sail upon the sea.
H. D. THOREAU, The Fisher's Boy.

The land is dearer for the sea,
The ocean for the shore.

LUCY LARCOM, On the Beach. St. 11.

He who knows the ocean
And the ways of ships
May taste beside a mountain pool
Brine on his lips.

MARY SINTON LEITCH, He Who Loves the Ocean.

It is a pleasure for to sit at ease
Upon the land, and safely for to see
How other folks are tossèd on the seas
That with the blustering winds turmoilèd be.

LUCRETIUS. (AMYOT, Introduction to Plutarch.
North, tr. 1579.)

With whisper of her mellowing grain,
With treble of brook and bud and tree,
Earth joys for ever to sustain
The bass eternal of the sea.
RODEN NOEL, Beatrice.

What have you to do with the sea? You should have been content with land. (Quid tibi cum pelago? Terra contenta fuisses.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 8, l. 49.

By sea and by land. (Per mare, per terras.)
OVID, Heroides. Epis. vii, p. 88; epis. xiv, l. 101.

Ye gentlemen of England
That live at home at ease,
Ah! little do you think upon
The dangers of the seas.
MARTIN PARKER, Ye Gentlemen of England.

Ye who dwell at home,
Ye do not know the terrors of the main!
SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales. Pt. iv, l. 178.

I am the tomb of a shipwrecked man, and that opposite is the tomb of a husbandman.
So death lies in wait alike on sea and land.
PLATO. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 265.)

And Christians love in the turf to lie,
Not in watery graves to be;
Nay, the very fishes will sooner die
On the land than in the sea.
THOMAS HOOD, The Mermaid of Margate, l. 65.

I never was on the dull, tame shore,
But I loved the great sea more and more.
BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, The Sea.

Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 1, l. 70.

Hug the shore, let others keep to the deep.
(Litus ama, . . . altum alii teneant.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. v, l. 163.

Of Christian souls more have been wrecked on shore
Than ever were lost at sea.
CHARLES H. WEBB, With a Nantucket Shell.

VIII—Sea: Seasickness

He felt that chilling heaviness of heart,
Or rather stomach, which, alas! attends,
Beyond the best apothecary's art,
The loss of love, the treachery of
friends. . . .
No doubt he would have been much more pathetic,
But the sea acted as a strong emetic.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 21.
The best of remedies is a beef-steak
Against sea-sickness: try it, sir, before

You sneer, and I assure you this is true,
For I have found it answer—so may you.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 13.

There's not a sea the passenger e'er pukes in Turns up more dangerous breakers than the Euxine.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 5.

<sup>1</sup> The bounding pinnace play'd a game
Of dreary pitch and toss;
A game that, on the good dry land,
Is apt to bring a loss!

THOMAS HOOD, The Sea-Spell, l. 21.

<sup>2</sup> What of the poor man? . . . He hires a boat and gets just as sick as the rich man who sails in his yacht. (Quid pauper? . . . Conducto navigio æque Nauseat ac locuples quem ducit priva triremis.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 91.

<sup>3</sup> You may be sure that the reason Ulysses was shipwrecked on every possible occasion was not because of the anger of the sea-god; he was simply subject to sea-sickness. (Nausiator erat.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. liii, sec. 4.

<sup>4</sup> We all like to see people sea-sick when we are not ourselves.

MARK TWAIN, The Innocents Abroad. Ch. 3.

IX—Sea: Sea-Shells

<sup>5</sup> I wiped away the weeds and foam,
I fetched my sea-born treasures home;
But the poor, unsightly, noisome things
Had left their beauty on the shore,
With the sun and the sand and the wild uproar.

EMERSON, Each and All.

<sup>6</sup> But I have sinuous shells of pearly hue; . . .
Shake one, and it awakens; then apply
Its polish'd lips to your attentive ear,
And it remembers its august abodes,
And murmurs as the ocean murmurs there.

W. S. LANDOR, Gebir. Bk. v.

In the upper room I lay, and heard far off
The unsleeping murmur like a shell.

R. L. STEVENSON, To S. C.

<sup>7</sup> The hollow sea-shell, which for years hath stood

On dusty shelves, when held against the ear
Proclaims its stormy parent, and we hear
The faint, far murmur of the breaking flood.
We hear the sea. The Sea? It is the blood
In our own veins, impetuous and near.

EUGENE LEE-HAMILTON, Sea-shell Murmurs.

<sup>8</sup> The soul of music slumbers in the shell,
Till waked and kindled by the master's spell;

And feeling hearts—touch them but rightly —pour

A thousand melodies unheard before!

SAMUEL ROGERS, Human Life, l. 361.

<sup>9</sup> Gather a shell from the strewn beach
And listen at its lips: they sigh

The same desire and mystery,
The echo of the whole sea's speech.

D. G. ROSSETTI, The Sea-Limits.

From within were heard
Murmurings, whereby the monitor expressed
Mysterious union with its native sea.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 1138.

<sup>10</sup> I send thee a shell from the ocean-beach;
But listen thou well, for my shell hath speech.
Hold to thine ear And plain thou'lt hear

Tales of ships.

CHARLES H. WEBB, With a Nantucket Shell.

<sup>11</sup> It is perhaps a more fortunate destiny to have a taste for collecting shells than to be born a millionaire.

R. L. STEVENSON, Lay Morals.

X—Sea: Freedom of the Sea

<sup>12</sup> Thus much is certain: that he that commands the sea is at great liberty, and may take as much and as little of the war as he will.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Expense.

<sup>13</sup> To all nations their empire will be dreadful, because their ships will sail wherever billows roll or winds can waft them.

SIR JOHN DALRYMPLE, Memoirs of Great Britain and Ireland. Vol. iii, p. 152.

<sup>14</sup> The most advanced nations are always those who navigate the most.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

<sup>15</sup> That the persons of our citizens shall be safe in freely traversing the ocean, that the transportation of our own produce, in our own vessels, to the markets of our own choice, and the return to us of the articles we want for our own use, shall be unmolested, I hold to be fundamental, and the gauntlet that must be forever hurled at him who questions it.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 301.

EDMUND WALLER, To My Lord of Falkland.

SEASONS, THE

See also Spring, Summer, Autumn, Winter

<sup>4</sup> The tendinous part of the mind, so to speak, is more developed in winter; the fleshy, in summer. I should say winter had given the bone and sinew to literature, summer the tissues and the blood.

JOHN BURROUGHS, The Snow-Walkers.

<sup>5</sup> Therefore all seasons shall be sweet to thee,
Whether the summer clothe the general earth
With greenness, or the redbreast sit and sing
Betwixt the tufts of snow on the bare branch
Of mossy apple-tree.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Frost at Midnight, l. 65.

<sup>6</sup> Four seasons fill the measure of the year.
KEATS, The Human Seasons.

Perceiv'st thou not the process of the year,
How the four seasons in four forms appear,
Resembling human life in ev'ry shape they wear?
Spring first, like infancy, shoots out her head,
With milky juice requiring to be fed: . . .
Proceeding onward whence the year began,
The Summer grows adult, and ripens into
man. . . .

Autumn succeeds, a sober, tepid age,
Not froze with fear, nor boiling into rage; . . .
Last, Winter creeps along with tardy pace.
Sour is his front, and furrow'd is his face.

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 296. (Dryden,
tr.)

Sing a song of Spring-time, the world is going round,

Blown by the south wind, listen to its sound. . . .
Sing a song of Summer, the world is nearly still,
The mill-pond has gone to sleep, and so has the mill. . . .

Sing a song of Autumn, the world is going back;
They glean in the corn-field, and stamp on the stack. . . .

Sing a song of Winter, the world stops dead;
Under snowy coverlid flowers lie abed.

COSMO MONKHOUSE, A Song of the Seasons.
Then, how merry are the times!

The Spring times! the Summer times! . . .
Now, how solemn are the times!
The Winter times! the Night times! . . .
Sing then, hopeful are all times!
Winter, Spring, Summer times!

BRYAN W. PROCTER, A Song for the Seasons.

These, as they change, Almighty Father, these Are but the varied God. The rolling year
Is full of Thee. Forth in the pleasing Spring
Thy beauty walks, thy tenderness and love. . . .
Then comes thy glory in the Summer-months,
With light and heat refulgent. Then thy sun Shoots full perfection through the swelling year. . . .

Thy bounty shines in Autumn unconfined,
And spreads a common feast for all that lives.
In Winter awful thou! with clouds and storms
Around thee thrown, tempest o'er tempest rolled,
Majestic darkness! On the whirlwind's wing
Riding sublime.

JAMES THOMSON, A Hymn on the Seasons, l. 1.

Spring, the low prelude of a lordlier song;

Summer, a music without hint of death:

Autumn, a cadence, lingeringly long:

Winter, a pause;—the Minstrel-Year takes breath.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Year's Minstrelsy.

<sup>7</sup> Our seasons have no fixed returns,
Without our will they come and go;

At noon our sudden summer burns,

Ere sunset all is snow.

J. R. LOWELL, To —. St. 2.

<sup>8</sup> Autumn to winter, winter into spring,
Spring into summer, summer into fall,—
So rolls the changing year, and so we change;
Motion so swift, we know not that we move.

DINAH MARIA MULOOCK CRAIK, Immutable.

<sup>9</sup> Autumn brings fruit; summer is fair with harvest; spring gives flowers; winter is relieved by fire. (Poma dat autumnus; formosa est messibus ætas; Ver præbet flores; igne levatur hiemps.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 187.

<sup>10</sup> Each changing season doth its poison bring, Rheums chill the winter, agues blast the spring.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Ode to the Memory of Colonel Villiers, l. 49.

<sup>11</sup> Winter brings cold weather, and we must shiver. Summer returns with its heat, and we must sweat. (Hiems frigora adducit: algen-dum est. Ætas calores refert: æstuum est.)

SENECA, Epistolæ ad Lucilium. Epis. cvii, 7.

<sup>12</sup> January grey is here,

Like a sexton by her grave;

February bears the bier,

March with grief doth howl and rave,
And April weeps—but, O ye Hours!

Follow with May's fairest flowers.

SHELLEY, Dirge for the Year. St. 4.

<sup>1</sup> January snowy; February flowy; March blowy.

April show'ry; May flow'ry; June bow'ry.

July moppy; August croppy; September poppy.

October breezy; November wheezy; December freezy.

RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN, The Calendar.

Spring: slippy, drippy, nippy.

Summer: showery, flowery, bowery.

Autumn: hoppy, croppy, poppy.

Winter: wheezy, sneezy, breezy.

UNKNOWN, The Seasons. (Athenæum, 22 Feb., 1862.)

<sup>2</sup> Sing a song of seasons!

Something bright in all!

Flowers in the summer,

Fires in the fall.

R. L. STEVENSON, Autumn Fires.

<sup>3</sup> Ah! welaway! Seasons flower and fade.

TENNYSON, Song. St. 1.

<sup>4</sup> Barnaby bright, Barnaby bright,

The longest day and the shortest night;

Lucy light, Lucy light,

The shortest day and the longest night.

UNKNOWN, Old Rhyme. Referring to St.

Barnabas' Day, the summer solstice; and St.

Lucy's Day, the winter solstice.

JAMES STEPHENS, The Crock of Gold.

II—Secrets: Their Betrayal

6 Little secrets are commonly told again, but great ones are generally kept.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 13 Sept., 1748.

If a fool knows a secret, he tells it because he is a fool; if a knave knows one, he tells it wherever it is his interest to tell it. But women and young men are very apt to tell what secrets they know from the vanity of having been trusted.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, Sentences, and Maxims.

The vanity of being known to be entrusted with a secret is generally one of the chief motives to disclose it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, No. 13.

7 None are so fond of secrets as those who do not mean to keep them; such persons covet secrets as a spendthrift covets money, for the purpose of circulation.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. No. 40.

8 Never inquire into another man's secret; but conceal that which is intrusted to you, though pressed both by wine and anger to reveal it. (Arcanum neque tu scrutaberis illius umquam, Commissumque teges et vino tortus et ira.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 37.

9 They wish to know the family secrets, and to be feared accordingly. (Scire volunt secreta domus, atque inde timeri.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 113.

10 We confide our secret through friendship, but it escapes through love. (L'on confie son secret dans l'amitié, mais il échappe dans l'amour.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. iv.

11 When a secret is revealed, it is the fault of the man who confided it. (Toute révélation d'un secret est la faute de celui qui l'a confié.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. v.

How can we expect another to guard our secret if we have not been able to guard it ourselves? (Comment prétendons-nous qu'un autre garde notre secret, si nous n'avons pas pu le garder nous-mêmes?)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No. 584.

I have play'd the fool, the gross fool, to believe The bosom of a friend will hold a secret Mine own could not contain.

MASSINGER, The Unnatural Combat. Act v, sc. 2, l. 1.

12 Nothing is secret, that shall not be made manifest.

New Testament: Luke, viii, 17.

And that which you have spoken in the ear in closets shall be proclaimed upon the housetops.

New Testament: Luke, xii, 3.

13 Mind, it's all entre nous, But you know, love, I never keep secrets from you.

THOMAS MOORE, The Fudge Family in Paris. Letter i, l. 67.

14 Sooner will men hold fire in their mouths than keep a secret. (Nam citius flammas mortales ore tenebunt quam secreta tegant.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. No. 86.

15 Some secret truths, from learned pride conceal'd,

To maids alone and children are reveal'd.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto i, l. 37.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 348.

17 He who gives up the smallest part of a secret has the rest no longer in his power.

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 123.

18 If you wish another to keep your secret, first keep it yourself. (Alium silere quod voles, primus sile.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 876.

You can take better care of your secret than another can.

EMERSON, Journals, 1863.

1 If you have hitherto conceal'd this sight
Let it be tenable in your silence still;
And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act 1, sc. 2, l. 247.

2 If you wish to preserve your secret, wrap it up in frankness.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: Writing of Essays.

3 Shy and unready men are great betrayers of secrets; for there are few wants more urgent for the moment than the want of something to say.

SIR HENRY TAYLOR, The Statesman, p. 131.

4 I am full of leaks, and I let secrets out hither and yon. (Plenus rimarum sum, hac atque illac perfluo.)

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. ii, No. 32.

6 Thus through a woman was the secret known;
Tell us, and in effect you tell the town.

DRYDEN, The Wife of Bath, Her Tale, l. 201.

7 A man can keep another person's secret better than his own: a woman, on the contrary, keeps her secret though she blabs all others.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. v.

8 Nothing is so oppressive as a secret: women find it difficult to keep one long; and I know a goodly number of men who are women in this regard.

(*Rien ne pèse tant qu'un secret:
Le porter loin est difficile aux dames;
Et je sais même sur ce fait Bon nombre d'hommes que sont femmes.*)

a aux autres.*)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No.
624.

18 When the trumpet sounds the signal of danger, man hastens to join his comrades, no matter what the cause that calls them to arms. He rushes into the thickest of the fight, and amid the uproar of battle regains confidence in himself and in his powers.

LAMARTINE, Méditations Poétiques.

1 The promises of this world are for the most part vain phantoms, and to confide in one's self, and become something of worth and value, is the best and safest course.

MICHELANGELO. (EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success.)

There is no dependence that can be sure but a dependence upon one's self.

JOHN GAY, Letter to Swift, 9 Nov., 1729.

SELF-CONTROL

9 I count him braver who overcomes his desires than him who conquers his enemies; for the hardest victory is the victory over self.

ARISTOTLE. (STOBÆUS, Florilegium, p. 223.)

No man is such a conqueror as the man who has defeated himself.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit.

When the fight begins within himself
A man's worth something.

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

10 Prudent, cautious self-control
Is wisdom's root.

BURNS, A Bard's Epitaph.

11 The enemy is within the gates; it is with our own luxury, our own folly, our own criminality that we have to contend.

CICERO, In Catilinam. No. ii, ch. 5, sec. 11.

12 Coolness and absence of heat and haste indicate fine qualities.

19

In order that you may please you ought to be forgetful of self. (Ut placeas, debes immemor esse tui.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 14, l. 38.

20

Self-denial is not a virtue: it is only the effect of prudence on rascality.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

21

Never preferring himself to others; thus very readily you may find praise without envy, and friends to your taste. (Nunquam præponens se aliis; ita facillime sine invidia invenias laudem, et amicos pares.)

1 Self-denial is the shining sore on the leprous body of Christianity.

OSCAR WILDE. (HARRIS, Oscar Wilde, p. 340.)

SELF-KNOWLEDGE

2 Once read thy own breast right,
And thou hast done with fears!
Man gets no other light,
Search he a thousand years.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Empedocles on Etna, l. 142.

3 Condemn no poor man, mock no simple man, which proud fools . . . love to do; but find fault with yourself and with none other.

ROGER ASCHAM, Advice to Lord Warwick's Servant.

4 Weigh not thyself in the scales of thy own opinion, but let the judgement of the judicious be the standard of thy merit.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. ii,
sec. 8.

5 Lord deliver me from myself.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 10.

6 And I,—what I seem to my friend, you see:
What I soon shall seem to his love, you guess:

What I seem to myself, do you ask of me?
No hero, I confess.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Light Woman.

7 O wad some Power the giftie gie us
To see ourselfs as ithers see us!
It wad frae monie a blunder free us.

An' foolish notion:

What airs in dress an' gait wad lea'e us,
An' ev'n devotion!

ROBERT BURNS, To a Louse.

'Tis one of human nature's laws
To see ourselves without our flaws.

R. T. WOMBAT, Quatrains.

8 As men of inward light are wont
To turn their optics in upon 't

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto 1, l. 481.

9 As light increases we see ourselves to be worse than we thought.

FÉNELON, Spiritual Letters to Women. No. 8.

It is in general more profitable to reckon up our defects than to boast of our attainments.

CARLYLE, Essays: Signs of the Times.

10 I have to live with myself, and so
I want to be fit for myself to know;
I want to be able as days go by,
Always to look myself straight in the eye.
I don't want to stand with the setting sun
And hate myself for the things I've done.

EDGAR A. GUEST, Living.

Just stand aside and watch yourself go by,
Think of yourself as "he" instead of "I."

STRICKLAND GILLILAN, Watch Yourself Go By.

Confront yourself and look you in the eye—
Just stand aside and watch yourself go by.

STRICKLAND GILLILAN, Watch Yourself Go By.

11 The first step to self-knowledge is self-distrust. Nor can we attain to any kind of knowledge, except by a like process.

Not if I know myself at all.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: The Old and New Schoolmaster.

14 Man is so made that by continually telling him he is a fool he believes it, and by continually telling it to himself he makes himself believe it. For man holds an inward talk with himself alone, which it behoves him to regulate well.

PASCAL, Pensées. No. 536.

As I walk'd by myself, I talk'd to myself,
And myself replied to me;

And the questions myself then put to myself,
With their answers, I give to thee.

BERNARD BARTON, Colloquy With Myself.

17 Allow not sleep to draw near to your languorous eyelids

Until you have reckoned up each several deed of the daytime:

"Where went I wrong? Did what? And what to be done was left undone?"

Starting from this point, review, then, your acts, and thereafter remember:

Censure yourself for the acts that are base,
but rejoice in the goodly.

PYTHAGORAS (?), Golden Verses. (EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. 10, sec. 2.)

Sum up at night what thou hast done by day;
And in the morning what thou hast to do.

Dress and undress thy soul; mark the decay

And growth of it; if, with thy watch, that too
Be down then wind up both; since we shall be
Most surely judg'd, make thy accounts agree.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 76.

Let not soft slumber close your eyes,
Before you've recollected thrice
The train of action through the day!
Where have my feet chose out their way?
What have I learnt, where'er I've been,
From all I've heard, from all I've seen?
What have I more that's worth the knowing?
What have I done that's worth the doing?
What have I sought that I should shun?
What duty have I left undone,
Or into what new follies run?
These self-inquiries are the road
That lead to virtue and to God.

ISAAC WATTS, Self Examination.
'Tis greatly wise to talk with our past hours,
And ask them what report they bore to heaven;
And how they might have borne more welcome
news.

II—Self-Knowledge: Know Thyself

11 Make it thy business to know thyself, which is the most difficult lesson in the world.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 42.

The knowledge of thyself will preserve thee from vanity.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.

12 Full wise is he that can himselfen know.

CHAUCER, The Monkes Tale, l. 1449.

Men who know themselves are no longer fools;
they stand on the threshold of the Door of Wisdom.

HAVELOCK ELLIS, Impressions and Comments.
Ser. iii, p. 66.

13 Do your deed, and know yourself. (Fay ton faict, et te cognoy.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 3.

1 Know thyself. (Γνώθι σαυτόν.)

THALES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Thales. Sec. 40.) Diogenes Laertius asserts that this belongs to Thales, one of the seven wise men of Greece, although Antisthenes, in his Successions of Philosophers, attributes it to Phemonoë, and others to Chilon and to Solon. It was the first of the three maxims inscribed on the Temple of Apollo at Delphi. The others were "Nothing too much" (Μηδὲν ἄγαν), and "Give a pledge, or give surety, and trouble is at hand" (Ἐγγύα, πάρα δ' ἄτη).

I commend my "know thyself," which is still preserved on a column at Delphi. (Commendo nostrum γνώθι σαυτόν, nosce te, Quod in columna jam tenetur Delphica.)

CHILON. (AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 138.)

That irksome toil produces most excellent fruit—to distinguish what you can endure and what you cannot; by night and day to examine what you are doing, what you have done, down to the smallest atom. All virtues—self-respect, honor, fortitude—lie in this.

AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 140.

The ancients gave us the injunction, "Know thyself." (Διὰ τοῦτο παρήγγελλον οἱ παλαιοὶ τὸ Γνώθι σαυτόν.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Ch. xviii, sec. 18.

2 Know thyself. (Nosce te.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 22, sec. 52. The commonly used form of the proverb. The full quotation is: Cum igitur: Nosce te, dicit, hoc dicit: Nosce animum tuum, "When then Apollo says, 'Know thyself,' he says, 'Know thy soul.'"

From heaven descended the precept, "Know thyself." (E cælo descendit γνώθι σαυτόν.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. xi, l. 27. It should be noted that σαυτόν is a contraction of σαυτόν, and that sometimes one is used and sometimes the other. Originally the word was separated, as in Homer, who always writes, σ' αὐτόν.

3 The saying, "Know thyself," is silly. It were more practical to say, "Know other folks." (Γνώθι τοὺς ἄλλους.)

MENANDER, Thrasyleon: Fragment.

If the "Know thyself" (Γνώθι σαυτόν) of the oracle were an easy thing for every man, it would not be held to be a divine injunction.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes. Sec. 3.

Γνώθι σαυτόν!—and is this the prime And heaven-sprung adage of the olden time!—Vain sister of the worm,—life, death, soul, clod—Ignore thyself, and strive to know thy God!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Self-Knowledge.

Well said the wisdom of earth, O mortal, know thyself;

But better the wisdom of heaven, O man, learn thou thy God.

M. F. TUPPER, Of Self-Acquaintance.

SELF-LOVE

3 Self-love, the spring of motion, acts the soul;
Reason's comparing balance rules the whole. . . .

Most strength the moving principle requires;
Active its task, it prompts, impels, inspires:
Sedate and quiet the comparing lies,
Form'd but to check, delib'rate, and advise.
Self-love still stronger, as its objects nigh;
Reason's at distance, and in prospect lie.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 59.

Self-love but serves the virtuous mind to wake,
As the small pebble stirs the peaceful lake;
The centre mov'd, a circle straight succeeds,
Another still, and still another spreads;
Friends, parent, neighbour, first it will embrace;
His country next; and next all human race.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 363.

Reason, Passion, answer one great aim;
True Self-love and Social are the same.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 396.

4 Be always displeased at what thou art, if thou desire to attain to what thou art not;

bor's. (Omnis sibi malle melius esse quam alteri.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 427. (Act ii, sc. 5.) Quoted as a proverb.

II—Selfishness: Its Faults

18 Like a hog, or dog in the manger, he doth only keep it because it shall do nobody else good, hurting himself and others.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. 2, mem. 3, subs. 12.

19 You mayn't be changed to a bird though you live

As selfishly as you can;

But you will be changed to a smaller thing—
A mean and selfish man.PHCEBE CARY, A Legend of the Northland.

20 Selfishness is the greatest curse of the human race.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, Hawarden, 28 May, 1890.

1 Virtues lose themselves in self-interest, as streams lose themselves in the sea. (Les vertus se perdent dans l'intérêt, comme les fleuves se perdent dans la mer.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 171.

2 He that lives not somewhat to others, liveth little to himself.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10.

No man is born unto himself alone;
Who lives unto himself, he lives to none.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Esther. Sec i, med. 1.

3 Self is the medium through which Judgment's ray

Can seldom pass without being turn'd astray.

THOMAS MOORE, The Sceptic, l. 41.

4 High though his titles, proud his name,
Boundless his wealth as wish can claim,—
Despite those titles, power, and pelf,
The wretch, concentrated all in self,
Living, shall forfeit fair renown,
And, doubly dying, shall go down
To the vile dust from whence he sprung,
Unwept, unhonoured, and unsung.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto vi, st. 1.

Then dropt into the grave, unpitied and unknown!

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 9.

Without a grave, unknell'd, uncoffin'd, and unknown.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 179.

Unwept, unhonour'd, uninterr'd he lies!

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 484. (Pope, tr.)

Unwept, unnoted, and for ever dead!

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. v, l. 402. (Pope, tr.)

Unrespited, unpitied, unreprieved,
Ages of hopeless end.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 185.

Thy fate unpitied, and thy rites unpaid.

POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, l. 48.

Unwept, unshrouded, and unsepulchred.

ROBERT SOUTHY, A Tale of Paraguay. Canto i, st. 11.

5 That which serves and seeks for gain,
And follows but for form,

Will pack when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 79.

6 Suicidal Selfishness, that blights
The fairest feelings of the opening heart.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. v, l. 16.

Undisguising Selfishness, that sets
On each its price, the stamp-mark of her reign.
Even love is sold; the solace of all woe
Is turned to deadliest agony.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. v, l. 187.

7 Himself unto himself he sold:

Upon himself himself did feed;
Quiet, dispassionate and cold.

TENNYSON, A Character, l. 26.

8 The selfish heart deserves the pains it feels.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 300.

Nothing in nature, much less conscious being,
Was e'er created solely for itself.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 704.

9 Keep all you have and try for all you can.
BULWER-LYTTON, King Arthur. Bk. ii, l. 70.

10 I have heard said, eke times twice twelve,
"He is a fool that will forget himself."

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l. 97.

All sensible people are selfish.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

Where all are selfish, the sage is no better than the fool, and only rather more dangerous.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Party Politics.

11 It is reasonable that everyone should measure himself by his own standard and measurement. (Metiri se quemque suo modulo ac pede verum est.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 7, l. 98.

12 Be, as so many are now, rich for yourself, poor for your friends. (Esto, ut nunc multi, dives tibi, pauper amicis.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. v, l. 113.

The same people who can deny others everything are famous for refusing themselves nothing.

LEIGH HUNT, Table Talk: Catherine II. Note.

Or monarch's hands that let not bounty fall
Where want cries some, but where excess begs all.

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 41.

13 Selfishness, Love's cousin.

KEATS, Isabella. St. 31.

Twin-sister of Religion, Selfishness!

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. v, l. 22.

14 I have yet to find a man worth his salt in any direction who did not think of himself first and foremost. . . . The man who thinks of others before he thinks of himself may become a Grand Master of the Elks, a Socialist of parts, or the star guest of honor at public banquets, but he will never become a great or successful artist, statesman, or even clergyman.

G. J. NATHAN, Testament of a Critic, p. 6.

15 This is the plain truth: every one ought to keep a sharp eye for the main chance. (Vera dico: ad suum quemque hominem quæstum esse æquomst callidum.)

SENTIMENT, see Feeling

SENTIMENTALISM

4 The barrenest of all mortals is the sentimental.

CARLYLE, Characteristics.

Is not Sentimentalism twin-sister to Cant, if not one and the same with it?

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. 2, ch. 7.

5 Society is infested by persons who, seeing that the sentiments please, counterfeit the expression of them. These we call sentimentalists,—talkers who mistake the description for the thing, saying for having.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

6 Sentimentalists are they who seek to enjoy without incurring the Immense Debtorship for a thing done.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Richard Feverel. Ch. 24.

The sentimental people fiddle harmonics on the string of sensualism.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways.

Ch. 1. The word "sentimental" is said to have been used for the first time in a letter written in 1740 by Laurence Sterne.

7 Sentimentality is the error of supposing that quarter can be given or taken in moral conflicts.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

8 I sit with my toes in a brook,
And if any one axes forwhy?

I hits them a rap with my crook,
For 'tis sentiment does it, says I.

HORACE WALPOLE, Epigram. (CUNNINGHAM, Life of Walpole.)

They filled one home with glee:
Their graves are severed far and wide
By mount and stream and sea.

FELICIA HEMANS, The Graves of a Household.

12 You to the left and I to the right,
For the ways of men must sever—
And it may be for a day and a night,
And it well may be forever.

But whether we meet or whether we part,
(For our ways are past our knowing)
A pledge from the heart to its fellow heart,
On the ways we all are going!
Here's luck!

For we know not where we are going.

Serene, and resolute, and still,
And calm, and self-posessed.

LONGFELLOW, The Light of Stars. St. 7.

7 There is in stillness oft a magic power
To calm the breast when struggling passions lower;

Touched by its influence, in the soul arise
Diviner feelings, kindred with the skies.

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, Solitude.

Serene yet strong, majestic yet sedate,
Swift without violence, without terror great.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Carmen Seculare, l. 282.

8 If human things went ill or well;
If changing empires rose or fell;
The morning passed, the evening came,
And found this couple still the same.

MATTHEW PRIOR, An Epitaph.

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, sec. 5.

10 Serene amidst the savage waves. (Sævis tranquilluss in undis.)

WILLIAM OF ORANGE, Motto.

11 Serene will be our days and bright,
And happy will our nature be,
When love is an unerring light,
And joy its own security.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty, l. 17.

SERPENT

I—Serpent: Definitions and Apothegms

12 Think'st thou there are no serpents in the world

But those that slide along the grassy sod,
And sting the luckless foot that presses them?
There are who in the path of social life
Do bask their spotted skins in Fortune's sun,
And sting the soul.

JOANNA BAILLIE, De Montfort. Act i, sc. 2.

13 Man spurns the worm, but pauses ere he wake
The slumbering venom of the folded snake:
The first may turn—but not avenge the blow;
The last expires—but leaves no living foe.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 11.

14 Now the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field.

Old Testament: Genesis, iii, 1.

Some flow'rets of Eden ye still inherit,
But the trail of the Serpent is over them all!

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri, l. 206.

15 Johnson said that he could repeat a complete chapter of "The Natural History of Iceland" from the Danish of Horrebøw, the whole of which was exactly thus: "There are no snakes to be met with throughout the whole island."

BOSWELL, Life of Samuel Johnson, 1778. This is Chapter 72. But Chapter 42 is still shorter: "There are no owls of any kind in the whole island."

16 There was a snake that dwelt in Skye,
Over the misty sea, oh;

He lived upon nothing but gooseberry-pie,
For breakfast, dinner, and tea, oh!

HENRY JOHNSTONE, The Fastidious Serpent.

1
When you see a snake, never mind where he came from.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

2
Where's my serpent of old Nile?

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i, sc. 5, l. 25.

Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 29.

Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there, That kills and pains not?

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v, sc. 2, l. 243.

3
It is the bright day that brings forth the adder;

And that craves wary walking.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 14.

4
We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it: She'll close and be herself, whilst our poor malice

Remains in danger of her former tooth.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 13.

What, wouldst thou have a serpent sting thee twice?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 69.

5
There the snake throws her enamell'd skin.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 255.

6
Who sees the lurking serpent steps aside.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 361.

7
Away from here, lads; a chill snake lurks in the grass. (Frigidus, o pueri, fugite hinc, latet anguis in herba.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. ii, l. 93.

There's a snake in the grass. (Anguis sub viridi herba.)

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of a King.

But the serpent lurked under the grass, and under sugared speech was hid pestiferous poison.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicles, 236. (1548)

Take heed of the snake in the grass, or the padd in the straw.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works. Vol. ii, p. 294. (1593)

There is a snake in the bush.

ANDREW YARRINGTON, England's Improvement, p. 101.

Serpents lie where flowers grow.

UNKNOWN, The Spanish Lady's Love.

8
If the snake could hear and the slow-worm could see,

Neither man nor beast should e'er go free.

UNKNOWN, Old Rhyme. (Notes and Queries, ii, i, 401.)

If I could hear as well as see,
No man in life could master me.

UNKNOWN. (PARISH, Sussex Dictionary, 14.)

It is a country superstition that the marks on the adder's belly form these words.

II—Serpent: The Viper and the Cappadocian

9
An evil viper once bit a Cappadocian, but it died itself, having tasted the venomous blood. (Καππαδόκην ποτ' ἐχιδνα κακὴ δάκεν· ἀλλὰ καὶ αὐτὴ κάθ'αυτὴν γευσασμένη αἵματος λοβόλου.)

DEMODOCUS OF LEROS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 237.) The Latin form is: "Vipera Cappadocem nocitura momordit; at illa gustato perit sanguine Cappadocis."

Yesterday near Charenton, a snake bit Jean Fréron. What do you think happened? It was the serpent that died.

(Hier auprès de Charenton, Un serpent mordit Jean Fréron.

Que croyez-vous qu'il arriva?

Ce fut le serpent qui creva.)

VOLTAIRE, Imitation of Demodocus. (Œuvres Complètes, iii, 1002.) Attributed also to Piron. There are various other French versions of this epigram. (See Notes and Queries, 30 March, 1907.)

10
While Fell was reposing himself in the hay,
A reptile concealed bit his leg as he lay;
But, all venom himself, of the wound he made light,

And got well, while the scorpion died of the bite.

LESSING, Paraphrase of Demodocus.

The dog, to gain his private ends,

Went mad, and bit the man. . . .

The man recovered of the bite,

The dog it was that died.

GOLDSMITH, Elegy on the Death of a Mad Dog.

11
A serpent, which is touched with human saliva, perishes, and even commits suicide by biting itself.

LUCRETIVUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 640.

All men carry about them that which is poison to serpents: for if it be true that is reported, they will no better abide the touching with man's spittle than scalding water cast upon them: but if it happen to light within their chawes or mouth, especially if it come from a man that is fasting, it is present death.

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii, ch. 2. (Holland, tr.)

His lordship may compel us to be equal upstairs but there will never be equality in the servants' hall.

J. M. BARRIE, The Admirable Crichton. Act i.

<sup>1</sup> Maidservants, I hear people complaining, are getting instructed in the "ologies."

CARLYLE, Inaugural Address at Edinburgh.

DIONYSIUS CATO, Disticha de Moribus. Bk. iv, sec. 45.

<sup>3</sup> In all the necessities of life there is not a greater plague than servants.

COLLEY CIBBER, She Would and She Would Not. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>4</sup> He should be faithful, ugly, and fierce. (Ut sit fidelis, ut sit deformis, ut sit ferox.)

ERASMUS, Convivium Poeticum. Giving the three qualifications of a good servant.

The face of a pig, the ears of an ass, the feet of a stag, a padlock on his mouth, and a sword at his side.

CHRISTOPHER JOHNSON, The Trusty Servant. (c. 1560)

Never in the way and never out of the way.

CHARLES II, referring to Sidney Godolphin; a phrase afterwards used to describe a good valet. (MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. i, p. 265.)

Servants should put on patience when they put on a livery.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4101.

<sup>5</sup> A servant and a cock should be kept but a year.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 389.

<sup>6</sup> If you pay not a servant his wages, he will pay himself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2778.

He can give little to his servant that licks his knife.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>7</sup> No surly porter stands in guilty state
To spurn imploring famine from the gate.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 105.

A pampered menial drove me from the door,
To seek a shelter in an humbler shed.

THOMAS MOSS, The Beggar's Petition. "Pampered menial" is Oliver Goldsmith's. Moss submitted his poem to Goldsmith before it was published, and the latter substituted "pampered menial" for the original's more commonplace "liveried servant."

A great man's overfed great man, what the Scotch call Flunkey.

CARLYLE, Essays: Samuel Johnson.

<sup>8</sup> A servant that is diligent, honest and good
Must sing at his work like a bird in the wood.

<sup>9</sup> Empty chambers make foolish maids.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>10</sup> Disgust turns the stomach, should the servant touch the cup with his greasy hands. (Magna movet stomacho fastidia, seu puer unctis Tractavit calicem manibus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 4, l. 78.

<sup>11</sup> Every great house is full of saucy servants. (Maxima quæque domus servis est plena superbis.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. v, l. 66.

It is not becoming for a servant to be arrogant. (Non decet superbum esse hominem servum.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 470. (Act ii, sc. 4.)

Great men's servants think themselves great.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Who wishes to be ill-served, let him keep plenty of servants. (Chi vuol esser mal servito, tenga assai famiglia.)

UNKNOWN. An Italian proverb.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ix, l. 120.

A servant had better know too much than say too much. That's wisdom on his part. (Plus scire satius quam loqui servom hominem. Ea sapientia est.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 60. (Act i, sc. 1.)

Pitchers have ears, and I have many servants.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 52. See also under EARS.

Old Testament: II Kings, viii, 13. Quoted by Sydney Smith when advised to have his portrait painted by Landseer.

<sup>14</sup> We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty to do.

New Testament: Luke, xvii, 10.

<sup>15</sup> A faithful and good servant is a real godsend, but truly 'tis a rare bird in the land.

LUTHER, Table Talk. Sec. clvi. Paraphrasing Juvenal, vi, 165. See under SWAN.

<sup>16</sup> He that is greatest among you shall be your servant.

New Testament: Matthew, xxiii, 11.

<sup>17</sup> Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things.

New Testament: Matthew, xxv, 21.

O good old man, how well in thee appears
The constant service of the antique world,
When service sweat for duty, not for meed!
Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
Where none will sweat but for promotion.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 56.

<sup>18</sup> Nor let too pretty a maid-servant wait upon

you. (Nec nimium vobis formosa ancilla ministret.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 665.

Let thy maidservant be faithful, strong and homely.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1736.

1 So many servants, so many enemies. (Totidem hostes esse quot servos.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xlvii, sec. 5. Quoted as a proverb.

2 Every good servant does not all commands: No bond but to do just ones.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 1, l. 6.

3 You gentlemen's gentlemen are so hasty.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act ii, sc. 2. Referring to a valet.

4 When you have done a fault be always pert and insolent, and behave yourself as if you were the injured person.

SWIFT, Directions to Servants.

5 The sooty yoke of kitchen-vassalage.

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 469.

6 A baker's wife may bite of a bun,
A brewer's wife may drink of a tun,
A fish-monger's wife may feed of a cunger,
But a servingman's wife may starve for hunger.

UNKNOWN, Servingman's Comfort. (Inedited Tracts, 166. 1598)

II—Servant and Master

7 If you would have good servants, see that you be good masters.

RICHARD BAXTER, Works. Vol. iv, p. 290.

8 The truest report comes from a man's servants. (Verior fama e domesticis emanat.)

CICERO, De Petitione Consulatus. Sec. 6. Adapted. Quoted in this form by Francis Bacon.

The highest panegyric . . . that private virtue can receive is the praise of servants.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 68.

Few men have been admired by their servants. (Peu d'hommes ont esté admirez par leurs domestiques.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2.

See also HERO AND VALET.

9 Masters, give unto your servants that which is just and equal.

New Testament: Colossians, iv, 1.

Servants, be obedient to them that are your masters . . . not with eyeservice, as menpleasers; but as the servants of Christ.

New Testament: Ephesians, vi, 5.

10 From kings to cobblers 't is the same;

Bad servants wound their masters' fame.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. ii, fab. 6.

11 As with the servant, so with his master; as with the maid, so with her mistress.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxiv, 2.

LIKE MASTER, LIKE MAN, see under MASTER.

12 A devoted old servant cancels the name of master.

AXEL MUNTHE, Story of San Michele, p. 490.

13 A master is usually what his servants choose to make him. If they're good, he is good; if they are bad, it makes him bad. (Ut servi volunt esse erum, ita solet, Boni sunt, bonust; improbi sunt, malus fit.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 872. (Act iv, sc. 1.)

14 Take care that you do not let your servant excel you in doing right. (Cave sis te superare servom siris faciundo bene.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 402. (Act iii, sc. 2.)

15 'Tis the master shames me, not the servitude. (Domini pudet, Non servitutis.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 989.

16 Servants talk about their master behind his back when they may not talk in his presence. (Isti domino loquantur, quibus coram domino loqui non licet.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xlvii, 4.

17 Servants must their masters' minds fulfil.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 113.

18 The stone that is rolling can gather no moss; For master and servant oft changing is loss.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry: Housewifely Admonitions. See also under STONE.

SERVICE

I—Service: Definitions

19 We are his,

To serve him nobly in the common cause,
True to the death, but not to be his slaves.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 343. Referring to the King.

20 Command was service; humblest service done
By willing and discerning souls was glory.

GEORGE ELIOT, Agatha.

21 When I have attempted to join myself to others by services, it proved an intellectual trick,—no more. They eat your service like apples, and leave you out. But love them, and they feel you, and delight in you all the time.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Of Gifts.

Serve and thou shalt be served. If you love and serve men, you cannot, by any hiding or stratagem, escape the remuneration.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Studies: The Sovereignty of Ethics.

1 Who seeks for aid
Must show how service sought can be repaid.

OWEN MEREDITH, Siege of Constantinople.

2 They also serve who only stand and wait.
MILTON, Sonnet: On His Blindness.

3 If I have done the public any service, it is due to patient thought.

ISAAC NEWTON, Remark to Dr. Bentley.

4 For what hard heart would not all service do
To help a fair, a chaste, a woman too?

FRANCIS ROUS, Thule.

5 Service is no heritage.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act i, sc. 3, l. 26.

Service is no inheritance.

SWIFT, Directions to Servants: General Rules.

6 It did me yeoman's service.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 36.

7 Alas and alas! you may take it how you will,
but the services of no single individual are indispensable. Atlas was just a gentleman with a protracted nightmare!

R. L. STEVENSON, An Apology for Idlers.

8 Enough, if something from our hands have power

To live, and act, and serve the future hour.

WORDSWORTH, After-Thought.

9 Small service is true service while it lasts:
Of humblest Friends, bright Creature! scorn not one:

The Daisy, by the shadow that it casts,
Protects the lingering dew-drop from the Sun.

WORDSWORTH, To a Child.

II—Service to God

10 All service is the same with God,
With God, whose puppets, best and worst,
Are we: there is no last nor first.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. iv.

Our voluntary service He requires,
Not our necessitated.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 529.

They serve God well, Who serve his creatures.

CAROLINE NORTON, The Lady of La Garaye: Conclusion, l. 9.

11 God curse Moawiyah. If I had served God as well as I have served him, He would never have damned me to all eternity.

SWAMWRA, to the Governor of Basra, when deposed by the Caliph in 675. (See OCKLEY, History of Saracens. Hegira 54, A. D. 673.)

Had I but written as many odes in praise of Muhammad and Ali as I have composed for King Mahmud, they would have showered a hundred blessings on me.

ABUL KASIM FIRDUSI, The Shahnameh. (c. 1000)

12 Had I but served God as diligently as I have served my king, he would not have given me over in my grey hairs. But this is the just reward that I must receive for my indulgent pains and study, not regarding my service to God, but only to my prince.

CARDINAL WOLSEY, to Sir William Kingston, Constable of the Tower, at Leicester Abbey, 5 Nov., 1530. Wolsey, accused of high treason, was being conducted to London, but was overtaken by illness on the road, stopped at Leicester, and died there. (HUME, History of England. Ch. 30.)

Had I but served my God with half the zeal I served my king, he would not in mine age have left me naked to mine enemies.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 455. (1612)

13 Had I served God as well in every part
As I did serve my king and master still,
My scope had not this season been so short,
Nor would have had the power to do me ill.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Death of Morton. (1593)

SERVILITY

See also Slave

14 Always mistrust a subordinate who never finds fault with his superior.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms.

15 Servitude that hugs her chain.

THOMAS GRAY, Ode for Music, l. 6.

16 They kiss the hand by which they are oppressed. (Illam osculantur, qua sunt oppressi, manum.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 1, l. 5.

Many kiss the hand they wish cut off.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

17 Learn to lick betimes; you know not whose tail you may go by.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 117. (1670)

Wit that can creep, and pride that licks the dust.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 333.

For aye thy foot-licker.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 219.

18 More vile Than is a slave in base servility.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act v, sc. 3, l. 113.

Dogs, easily won to fawn on any man.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 130.

1
Away with slavish weeds and servile thoughts.
SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 1, 18.

Supple knees
Feed arrogance and are the proud man's fees.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 48.

2
Full little knowest thou that hast not tried,
What hell it is, in suing long to bide:
To lose good days, that might be better spent;
To waste long nights in pensive discontent;
To speed today, to be put back tomorrow;
To feed on hope, to pine with fear and sorrow; . . .

To fret thy soul with crosses and with cares;
To eat thy heart through comfortless despair;

To fawn, to crouch, to wait, to ride, to run,
To spend, to give, to want, to be undone.

SPENSER, Mother Hubberds Tale, l. 895.

SEXES

Sex to the last.
DRYDEN, Cymon and Iphigenia, l. 368.

4
Virtue attired in woman see, . . .
And forget the He and She.
JOHN DONNE, The Undertaking.

5
Breathes there a man with hide so tough
Who says two sexes aren't enough?
SAMUEL HOFFENSTEIN, The Sexes.

6
A woman never forgets her sex. She would rather talk with a man than an angel, any day.
O. W. HOLMES, The Poet at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 4.

7
Freud and his three slaves, Inhibition, Complex and Libido.

SOPHIE KERR, The Age of Innocence. (Sat. Eve. Post, 9 April, 1932.)

8
This world consists of men, women, and Hervey's.

LADY MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letters. Vol. i, p. 67. The reference is to John Hervey, whom Pope attacked in The Dunciad as "Lord Fanny." The saying has been wrongly attributed to Charles Pigott. (Jockey Club. Pt. ii, p. 4.)

As the French say, there are three sexes,—men, women, and clergymen.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, p. 262.)

The jibe of European scholars that there are three sexes in America—men, women, and professors.

JOEL E. SPINGARN.

This country is inhabited by saints, sinners, and Beechers.

DR. LEONARD BACON.

As the man beholds the woman,
As the woman sees the man,
Curiously they note each other,
As each other only can.
Never can the man divest her
Of that wondrous charm of sex;
Ever must she, dreaming of him,
That same mystic charm annex.
BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, The Sexes.

He was close on to six feet tall, of military bearing, and of such extraordinary vitality that young ladies asserted they could feel him ten feet away.

C. HARTLEY GRATTAN, Bitter Bierce, p. 39. Referring to Ambrose Bierce.

'Tisn't beauty, so to speak, nor good talk necessarily. It's just It. Some women'll stay in a man's memory if they once walked down a street.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Mrs. Bathurst. (1904)

10
The son of the female is the shadow of the male.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 141.

11
The nonsense of the old women (of both sexes).

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Vol. v, ch. 16.

In company with several other old ladies of both sexes.

DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Pt. i, ch. 17.

12
The little rift between the sexes is astonishingly widened by simply teaching one set of catchwords to the girls and another to the boys.

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i.

13
I lose my respect for the man who can make the mystery of sex the subject of a coarse jest, yet, when you speak earnestly and seriously on the subject, is silent.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 12 April, 1852.

14
In the argot of the sub-deb, "U.S.A." has long ago lost its patriotic meaning. It now stands for "Universal Sex Appeal."

MARY DAY WINN, Adam's Rib, p. 17. See also under LOVE AND LUST.

Sex is the tabasco sauce which an adolescent national palate sprinkles on every course in the menu.

MARY DAY WINN, Adam's Rib, p. 8.

15
Sometimes, through pride, the sexes change their airs;

My lord has vapours, and my lady swears.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Pt. iii, l. 136.

Some sexes change their sexes now and make a mere man wonder how.

ALFRED KREYMBORG, Outmoded.

SHADOW

1 If you measure your shadow, you will find it no greater than before.

ARCHIDAMUS III, KING OF SPARTA, to Philip of Macedon, who sent him a haughty letter after his victory at Chæronea. (PLUTARCH, Apothegms.)

A little man may cast a great shadow.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

2 Man, shackled to his shadow, cannot move Without the base companionship of self.
ALFRED AUSTIN, Fortunatus the Pessimist. Act i, sc. 4.

Always there is a black spot in our sunshine—it is the shadow of ourselves.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. 2, ch. 9.

Vain truly is the hope of your swiftest Runner to escape "from his own Shadow!"

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 6.

His shadow for his sole attendant.

LA FONTAINE, Fables: The Use of Knowledge. Bk. ii, fab. 18.

3 Catch not at the shadow and lose the substance.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, p. 335.
Founded on the fable of the dog and his reflection in the water.

4 Think not thy own shadow longer than that of others, nor delight to take the altitude of thyself.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 14.

5 The worthy gentleman [Mr. Coombe] . . . has feelingly told us, what shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, at Bristol, Sept., 1780.

We know not substance; 'mid the shades shadows ourselves we live and die.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. vi, st. 5.

6 Strange to relate, but wonderfully true, That even shadows have their shadows too!

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 411.

The picture of a shadow is a positive thing.

LOCKE, Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. ii, ch. 8, sec. 5.

7 Our days on the earth are as a shadow.

Old Testament: I Chronicles, xxix, 15.

Passeth as doth a shadow upon the wall.

CHAUCER, The Shipman's Tale, l. 9.

Come like shadows, so depart!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 111.

8 Oh for a lodge in some vast wilderness, Some boundless contiguity of shade.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 1.

The unpierc'd shade.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 245.

Or ruminate in the contiguous shade.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 86.

Chequer'd shadow.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 3, 15.

9 Shadows are not enough.

ELLEN GLASGOW, The Sheltered Life, p. 36.

10 A hunter of shadows, himself a shade. (Τὸς αὐτὸς κατέρεπεν ἐν οὐλόδοισιν δρεσσι.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 574. Referring to Orion.

We all laugh at pursuing a shadow, though the lives of the multitude are devoted to the chase.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH.

11 On yon bare knoll the pointed cedar shadows Drowse on the crisp, gray moss.

J. R. LOWELL, An Indian Summer Reverie.

12 Follow a shadow, it still flies you;

Seem to fly it, it will pursue.

BEN JONSON, Song: That Women Are But Men's Shadows. See also under WOOLING.

13 Shall the shadow go forward ten degrees, or go back ten degrees? And Hezekiah answered, It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees.

Old Testament: II Kings, xx, 9, 10.

Like Hezekiah's, backward runs

The shadow of my days.

TENNYSON, Will Waterproof's Lyrical Monologue. St. 5. The original version, altered in 1853 ed. to: "Against its fountain upward runs The current of my days."

14 Alas! must it ever be so?

Do we stand in our own light, wherever we go, And fight our own shadows forever?

15 Syene, and where the shadow both way falls, Meroë, Nilotic isle.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 70.

16 Every light has its shadow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Thus shadow owes its birth to light.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Persian, the Sun, and the Cloud, l. 10.

17 Some there be that shadows kiss;

Such have but a shadow's bliss.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 9, l. 66.

The best in this kind are but shadows.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act v, sc. 1, l. 213.

18 Shadows to-night Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard

Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 216.

1 The awful shadow of some unseen Power
Floats, though unseen, amongst us.

SHELLEY, Hymn to Intellectual Beauty, l. 1.

2 For this I see, that we, all we that live,
Are but vain shadows, unsubstantial dreams.
(Εἶδωλ' ὅσοι περ ζῶμεν ἢ κούφην σκιάν.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 126. (Plumptre, tr.)

Behold! human beings living in a sort of underground den . . . they see only their own shadows, or the shadows of one another, which the fire throws on the opposite wall of the cave.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. vii, sec. 514.

We are but dust and shadow. (Pulvis et umbra sumus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 7, l. 16.

3 The Shadow cloak'd from head to foot,
Who keeps the keys of all the creeds.

5 The setting sun doubles the lengthening shadows. (Sol crescentis decedens duplicat umbræ.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. iii, l. 67.

When the sun sets, shadows, that showed at noon

But small, appear most long and terrible.

NATHANIEL LEE, Cædipus.

And now his shadow reach'd her as she run,
His shadow lengthen'd by the setting sun.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 193.

But why lament the common lot

That all must share so soon;

Since shadows lengthen with the day,

That scarce exist at noon?

MRS. ALARIC A. WATTS, Requiem of Youth.

6 That shadow my likeness that goes to and fro seeking a livelihood, chattering, chaffering,

How often I find myself standing and looking at it where it flits,

How often I question and doubt whether that is really me.

WALT WHITMAN, That Shadow My Likeness.

7 Again the shadow moveth o'er

The dial-plate of time!

J. G. WHITTIER, The New Year, l. 3.

SHAKESPEARE

8 This was Shakespeare's form;
Who walked in every path of human life,

Felt every passion, and to all mankind
Doth now, will ever, that experience yield
Which his own genius only could acquire.

MARK AKENSIDE, For a Statue of Shakespeare.

9 Bonnet in hand, obsequious and discreet,
The butcher that served Shakespeare with his meat

Doubtless esteemed him little, as a man
Who knew not how the market prices ran.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Points of View.

10 Others abide our question. Thou art free.
We ask and ask; Thou smilest and art still,
Out-topping knowledge.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Shakespeare.

11 Live ever you, at least in Fame live ever:
Well may the body die, but Fame dies never.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, A Remembrance of Some English Poets.

12 Renowned Spenser, lie a thought more nigh
To learned Chaucer, and rare Beaumont lie
A little nearer Spenser, to make room
For Shakespeare in your threefold, fourfold
tomb.

WILLIAM BASSE, On Shakespeare. (1616)

13 There, Shakespeare, on whose forehead climb
The crowns o' the world: O eyes sublime
With tears and laughter for all time!

E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets, l. 298.

14 As I declare our Poet, him
Whose insight makes all others dim.
A thousand poets pried at life
And only one amid the strife
Rose to be Shakespeare.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve. Sec. 16.

Shakespeare!—to such names sounding, what succeeds

Fitly as silence?

ROBERT BROWNING, The Names.

15 Shake was a dramatist of note;
He lived by writing things to quote.

H. C. BUNNER, Shake, Mulleary and Go-ethe.

16 How often in the summer-tide,
His graver business set aside,
Has stripling Will, the thoughtful-eyed,
As to the pipe of Pan,

Stepped blithesomely with lover's pride
Across the fields to Anne.

RICHARD BURTON, Across the Fields to Anne.

But were it to my fancy given
To rate her charms, I'd call them heaven;
For though a mortal made of clay,
Angels must love Anne Hathaway;
She hath a way so to control,
To rapture the imprisoned soul,
And sweetest heaven on earth display,

That to be heaven Anne hath a way;
She hath a way,
Anne Hathaway,—

To be heaven's self Anne hath a way.

CHARLES DIBDIN, A Love Dittie. In his novel Hannah Hewitt. (1795) Anne Hathaway was the maiden name of Shakespeare's wife. These verses have often been attributed to Shakespeare, and a biting irony read into them.

1 And rival all but Shakespeare's name below.
CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 472.

2 If I say that Shakespeare is the greatest of intellects, I have said all concerning him. But there is more in Shakespeare's intellect than we have yet seen. It is what I call an unconscious intellect; there is more virtue in it than he himself is aware of.

CARLYLE, Essays: Characteristics of Shakespeare.

3 Happy in tragic and in comic powers,
Have we not Shakspeare?—is not Jonson ours?
For them, your natural judges, Britons, vote;
They'll judge like Britons, who like Britons wrote.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 223.

Things of the noblest kind his genius drew,
And look'd through Nature at a single view:
A loose he gave to his unbounded soul,
And taught new lands to rise, new seas to roll;
Call'd into being scenes unknown before,
And passing Nature's bounds, was something more.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 264.

4 Our myriad-minded Shakspeare—ἀνὴρ μυρίανους, a phrase which I have borrowed from a Greek monk, who applies it to a Patriarch of Constantinople. It seems to belong to Shakespeare, de jure singulari, et ex privilegio naturæ.

6 The making of Shakespeare's mind was like the making of the world.

WILLIAM JOHNSON CORY. (M. E. COLERIDGE,

7 Shakespeare, thou hadst as smooth a comic vein,

Fitting the sock, and in thy natural brain,
As strong conception, and as clear a rage,
As any one that traffick'd with the stage.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Elegy to Henry Reynolds.
(1627)

8 Shakespear, who (taught by none) did first impart

To Fletcher wit, to labouring Jonson art;
He, Monarch-like, gave those his subjects
law,

And is that Nature which they paint and draw.

DRYDEN, Prologue to His Version of The Tempest, l. 5.

But Shakespear's magic could not copied be;
Within that circle none durst walk but he.

DRYDEN, *Prologue to His Version of The Tem-
pest*, l. 19.

Heav'n, that but once was prodigal before,
To Shakespear gave as much; she could not give him more.

DRYDEN, To Mr. Congreve, l. 62.

9 When Shakspeare is charged with debts to his authors, Landor replies: "Yet he was more original than his originals. He breathed upon dead bodies and brought them into life."

EMERSON, *Letters and Social Aims: Quotation
and Originality*.

The passages of Shakspeare that we most prize were never quoted until within this century.

EMERSON, *Letters and Social Aims: Quotation
and Originality*.

10 It is difficult not to be intemperate in speaking of Shakspeare. . . . If the world were on trial, it is the perfect success of this one man that might justify such expenditure of geology, chemistry, fauna, and flora, as the world was. And, I suppose, if Intellect perceives and converses "in climes beyond the solar road," they probably call this planet, not Earth, but Shakspeare.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

Shakspeare's fault that the world appears so empty. He has educated you with his painted world, and this real one seems a huckster's shop.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

11 Nor sequent centuries could hit
Orbit and sum of Shakspeare's wit:

EMERSON, Solution, l. 39.

I see all human wits
Are measured by a few;
Unmeasured still my Shakspeare sits,
Lone as the blessed Jew.

EMERSON, Quatrains: Shakspeare.

What point of morals, of manners, of economy, of philosophy, of religion, of taste, of the conduct of life, has he not settled? What mystery has he not signified his knowledge of? What office, or function, or district of man's work, has he not remembered? What king has he not taught state, as Talma taught Napoleon? What maiden has not found him finer than her delicacy? What lover has he not outloved? What sage has he not outseen? What gentleman has he not instructed in the rudeness of his behavior?

EMERSON, Representative Men: Shakspeare.

Shakspeare's principal merit may be conveyed in saying that he of all men best understands the English language, and can say what he will.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Shakspeare.

Shakspeare has done more for woman than all the other dramatists of the world.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Shakspeare.

6 The stream of Time, which is continually washing the dissoluble fabrics of other poets, passes without injury by the adamant of Shakspeare.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Preface to the Works of Shakspeare.

When Learning's triumph o'er her barbarous foes
First rear'd the stage, immortal Shakspeare rose;
Each change of many-colour'd life he drew,
Exhausted worlds, and then imagin'd new:
Existence saw him spurn her bounded reign,
And panting Time toil'd after him in vain.
His powerful strokes presiding Truth impress'd,
And unresisted Passion storm'd the breast.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Prologue at the Opening of Drury Lane Theatre, l. 1.

Cornelle is to Shakspeare as a clipped hedge to a forest.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 160.

7 This Figure, that thou here seest put,
It was for gentle Shakspeare cut;

Wherein the Graver had a strife
With Nature, to out-doo the life:

O, could he but have drawne his wit
As well in brasse, as he hath hit

His face; the Print would then surpasse

All, that was ever writ in brasse.

But, since he cannot, Reader, looke

Not on his Picture, but his Booke.

BEN JONSON, To the Reader. These verses were printed facing the portrait of Shakspeare prefixed as a frontispiece to the first folio edition of his works, 1623.

8

Soul of the Age!

The applause! delight! the wonder of our stage!

My Shakspeare, rise; I will not lodge thee by Chaucer, or Spenser, or bid Beaumont lie

A little further, to make thee a room:

Thou art a monument, without a tomb,

And art alive still, while thy book doth live

And we have wits to read, and praise to give.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of My Beloved Master, William Shakspeare, and What He Hath Left Us, l. 17. Printed on the fifth preliminary leaf to the first folio, 1623.

And though thou hadst small Latin, and less Greek,

From thence to honour thee, I would not seek
For names.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakspeare, l. 31.

Triumph, my Britain, thou hast one to show,
To whom all scenes of Europe homage owe.

He was not of an age, but for all time!

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakspeare, l. 41.

Nature herself was proud of his designs,
And joy'd to wear the dressing of his lines!
Which were so richly spun, and woven so fit,
As, since, she will vouchsafe no other wit.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakspeare, l. 47.

Yet must I not give Nature all: thy Art,
My gentle Shakspeare, must enjoy a part.
For though the poet's matter Nature be,
His art doth give the fashion.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakspeare, l. 55.

For a good poet's made, as well as born,
And such wert thou. Look how the father's face Lives in his issue; even so, the race
Of Shakspeare's mind and manners brightly shines

In his well-turn'd and true fil'd lines:
In each of which he seems to shake a lance,
As brandish'd at the eyes of ignorance.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakspeare, l. 64.

Sweet Swan of Avon! what a sight it were

To see thee in our waters yet appear.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare, l. 71.

Shakespeare, at length thy pious fellows give
The world thy works: thy works, by which out-
live

Thy tomb, thy name must: when that stone is rent,

And Time dissolves thy Stratford monument,
Here we alive shall view thee still. This book,
When brass and marble fade, shall make thee
look

Fresh to all ages.

LEONARD DIGGES, To the Memorie of the Deceased Authour Maister, W. Shakespeare.
Eighth preliminary leaf to first folio, 1623.

Which made the Globe of heav'n and earth to ring.

HUGH HOLLAND, Upon the Lines and Life of the Famous Scenicke Poet, Master William Shakespeare. Sixth preliminary leaf to the first folio, 1623.

We wonder'd (Shakespeare) that thou went'st so soon

From the World's-Stage, to the Grave's-Tyringroom.

We thought thee dead, but this thy printed worth,
Tells thy spectators, that thou went'st but forth
To enter with applause. An actor's art,
Can die, and live, to act a second part.

JAMES MABBE [?], *To the Memorie of W.
Shakespeare*. Eighth preliminary leaf to the first folio, 1623.

1 I remember, the players have often mentioned it as an honour to Shakespeare, that in his writing (whatsoever he penn'd) he never blotted out line. My answer hath been, would he had blotted a thousand.

4 Then to the well-trod stage anon,
If Jonson's learned sock be on,
Or sweetest Shakespear, fancy's child,
Warble his native wood-notes wild.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 131.

What needs my Shakespear for his honour'd bones,

The labour of an age in piled stones,
Or that his hallow'd reliques should be hid

Under a star-ypointing pyramid?

Dear son of memory, great heir of Fame,
What need'st thou such weak witness of thy name?

Thou in our wonder and astonishment
Hast built thyself a live-long monument, . . .
And so sepulch'r'd in such pomp dost lie,
That kings for such a tomb would wish to die.

10 Good frend for Jesvs sake forbear,
To digg the dust enclosed heare.
Blese be ye man yt spares thes stones.
And curst be he yt moves my bones.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, on Shakespeare's tombstone in Stratford Church. Said to have been chosen by him, but not from his pen. The lines are rudely engraved in capital letters on the stone slab which covers his body, the last line an evident imitation of the damnation clause so frequent in Roman sepulchral inscriptions.

11 Stay Passenger, why goest thou by so fast?
Read if thou canst, whom envious Death hath plast,
With in this monument Shakspeare: with
whome,
Quick nature dide: whose name doth deck ys
Tombe,

Far more then cost: sieh all, yt He hath writt,
Leaves living art, but page, to serve his witt.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, on the monument in Stratford Church, erected before 1623.

13 Shame is an ornament to the young, a disgrace to the old, since an old man ought not to do anything of which he need be ashamed. The virtuous man does not feel shame, if shame is the feeling caused by base actions, since the virtuous man does not do base actions. Shame is a mark of a base man, and springs from a character capable of doing a shameful act.

As soon goeth the young lambskin to the market as the old yew.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4.

As soon comes the lamb's skin to market as the auld tup's.

SCOTT, Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 4.

17

The scab of one sheep, or the mange of one pig, destroys an entire herd. (Grege totus in agris Unius scabie et porringine porci.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 79.

One scabbed sheep infecteth all the fold.

HILL, Commonplace-Book. 129. (c. 1490)

One sickly sheep infects the flock,

And poisons all the rest.

ISAAC WATTS, Against Evil Company.

I am a tainted wether of the flock,

Meetest for death.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 114.

18

Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold and one shepherd.

New Testament: John, x, 16.

There were ninety-and-nine that safely lay In the shelter of the fold;

But one was out in the hills away,

Far off from the gates of gold,—

Away in the mountains wild and bare,
Away from the tender Shepherd's care.
ELIZABETH CLEPHANE, The Lost Sheep.

De massa ob de sheepfol',
Dat guards de sheepfol' bin,
Look out in de gloomerin' meadows,
Wha'r de long night rain begin—
So he call to de hirelin' shepa'd,
"Is my sheep, is dey all come in?—
My sheep, is dey all come in?"
SARAH P. McLEAN GREENE, De Sheepfol'.

1 As sheep that have not a shepherd.
Old Testament: 1 Kings, xxii, 17.

2 And before him shall be gathered all nations:
and he shall separate them one from another,
as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats.
New Testament: Matthew, xxv, 32.

3 The mountain sheep are sweeter,
But the valley sheep are fatter;
We therefore deemed it meet
To carry off the latter.

T. L. PEACOCK, War Song of Dinas Vawr.
(Misfortunes of Elphin. Ch. 11.)

4 It is the nature of sheep always to follow the first, wheresoever it goes; which makes Aristotle, lib. 9, de Hist. Animal. mark them for the most silly and foolish animals in the world.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 8.

One sheep follows another.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

One sheep will leap the ditch when another goes first.

SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 36.

Sheep follow sheep.

The Talmud. Sec. 62.

5 As good be hanged for a sheep as a lamb.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. See also under HANGING.

6 Then will he look as fierce as a Cotswold lion.
NICHOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act
iv, sc. 6 (1566). See also under LION.

7 Little Bo-peep has lost her sheep,
And can't tell where to find them;
Leave them alone, and they'll come home,
Wagging their tails behind them.
UNKNOWN, Bo-peep.

II—Sheep and Wolf

8 It is hard to have wolf full and wether whole.
CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 1373.

9 The death of the wolf is the health of the sheep.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits. Fo. 31.

10 The dust raised by the sheep does not choke
the wolf.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4491.

11 He that will be made a sheep shall find wolves enough.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works. Vol. ii, p. 38. Quoted
as a proverb.

He that makes himself a sheep shall be eaten by
the wolf.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Make yourselves sheep and the wolves will eat
you.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard. Quoted as an Italian proverb.

He that makes himself a sheep will find that the wolves are not all dead.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 4.

12 He that will needs be a sheep, cannot greatly grudge to be bitten with a fox.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotinus. Sig. Bb4.
(1583)

He that will make himself a sheep, it is no matter though the wolves do eat him.

BARNABE RICH, Irish Hubbub, 4. (1619)

13 It is a foolish sheep that makes the wolf his confessor.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 23.

14 You have entrusted the sheep to the wolf.
(Lupo ovem commisisti.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 832. (Act v, sc. 1.)

III—Shepherd

15 Sooth 't were a pleasant life to lead,
With nothing in the world to do
But just to blow a shepherd's reed,
The silent season thro',
And just to drive a flock to feed,—
Sheep—quiet, fond and few!

LAMAN BLANCHARD, Dolce far Niente. St. 1.

16 In summer's heat, and winter's cold,
He fed his flock, and penn'd the fold.

JOHN GAY, Fables: Introduction.

17 For kings have often fears when they do sup,
Where shepherds dread no poison in their cup.
ROBERT GREENE, The Shepherd's Wife's Song.

The shepherd's homely curds,
His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,
His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
Is far beyond a prince's delicacies,
His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
His body couched in a curious bed,
When care, mistrust, and treason waits on him.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 47.

18 My name is Norval; on the Grampian hills
My father feeds his flocks; a frugal swain,

Whose constant cares were to increase his store,

And keep his only son, myself, at home.

JOHN HOME, Douglas. Act ii, sc. 1.

<sup>1</sup> And every shepherd tells his tale
Under the hawthorn in the dale.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 67. "Tells his tale": i. e., counts his sheep.

<sup>2</sup> Sleepest or wakest thou, jolly shepherd?

Thy sheep be in the corn;

And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,
Thy sheep shall take no harm.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 42.

<sup>3</sup> My flocks feed not,
My ewes breed not,
My rams speed not,
All is amiss.

SHAKESPEARE [?], Sonnets to Sundry Notes of Music. St. 18.

SHELLEY, PERCY BYSSHE

<sup>4</sup> In his poetry, as well as in his life, Shelley was indeed "a beautiful and ineffectual angel, beating in the void his luminous wings in vain."

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma: Shelley.

<sup>5</sup> Ah, did you once see Shelley plain,
And did he stop and speak to you,
And did you speak to him again?

How strange it seems and new!

ROBERT BROWNING, Memorabilia.

<sup>6</sup> For they who shrank from his mad human ache

Call him high Shelley now and praise his wake.
ALFRED KREYMBORG, A Man Whom Men Explore.

<sup>7</sup> Knight-errant of the Never-ending Quest,
And Minstrel of the Unfulfilled Desire;
For ever tuning thy frail earthly lyre
To some unearthly music.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Shelley.

<sup>8</sup> Shelley, lyric lord of England's lordliest singers, here first heard
Ring from lips of poets crowned and dead the Promethean word

Whence his soul took fire, and power to outsoar the sunward-soaring bird.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Eton: An Ode.

<sup>9</sup> 'Tis no mean fortune to have heard
A singer who, if errors blurred
His sight, had yet a spirit stirred
By vast desire,

And ardour fledging the swift word
With plumes of fire.

WILLIAM WATSON, Shelley's Centenary.

All the rapturous heart of things
Throbs through his own.

WILLIAM WATSON, Shelley's Centenary.

<sup>10</sup> Shelley, the hectic, flamelike rose of verse,
All colour, and all odour, and all bloom,
Steeped in the moonlight, glutted with the sun,
But somewhat lacking root in homely earth.

WILLIAM WATSON, To Edward Dowden, l. 46.

SHERIDAN, RICHARD BRINSLEY

<sup>11</sup> Good at a fight, but better at a play;
Godlike in giving, but the devil to pay.

BYRON, On a Cast of Sheridan's Hand.

<sup>12</sup> The flash of Wit, the bright Intelligence,
The beam of Song, the blaze of Eloquence,
Set with their Sun, but still have left behind
The enduring produce of immortal Mind;
Fruits of a genial morn, and glorious noon,
A deathless part of him who died too soon.

BYRON, On the Death of Sheridan, l. 27.

The matchless dialogue, the deathless wit,
Which knew not what it was to intermit;
The glowing portraits, fresh from life, that bring Home to our hearts the truth from which they spring;

These wondrous beings of his Fancy, wrought
To fulness by the fiat of his thought.

BYRON, On the Death of Sheridan, l. 49.

Long shall we seek his likeness—long in vain,
And turn to all of him which may remain,
Sighing that Nature form'd but one such man,
And broke the die—in moulding Sheridan.

BYRON, On the Death of Sheridan, l. 115.

<sup>13</sup> Whose mind was an essence, compounded with art

From the finest and best of all other men's pow'rs:—

Who rul'd, like a wizard, the world of the heart,

And could call up its sunshine, or bring down its show'rs:—

Whose humour, as gay as the fire-fly's light,
Play'd round every subject, and shone as it play'd;—

Whose wit, in the combat, as gentle as bright,
Ne'er carried a heart-stain away on its blade.

I—Ship: Apothegms

<sup>14</sup> He holds him with his skinny hand,
"There was a ship," quoth he.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. i.

<sup>15</sup> Yet never ship upon the sea

Bears blessed merchandise for me.

JOHN DRINKWATER, Vigil.

If all the ships I have at sea

Should come a-sailing home to me,

Ah, well! the harbor would not hold

So many ships as there would be

If all my ships came home from sea.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, My Ships.

The true ship is the ship builder.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Of History.

A great ship asks deep waters.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

To be in the same boat. (Τὰυτ' ἐμοὶ ζῦγόν τοῖσιν.)

HERODAS, Sententiæ, vi, 12.

Therefore the sinner and the saint

Are often in the selfsame boat.

EDWARD WARD, Nuptial Dialogues. Pt. ii, l. 360.

Women are jealous of ships. They always suspect the sea. They know they're three of a kind when it comes to a man.

EUGENE O'NEILL, Mourning Becomes Electra. Act i.

Ships, young ships,

I do not wonder men see you as women—

You in the white length of your loveliness

Reclining on the sea!

SALLY BRUCE KINSOLVING, Ships.

Who wishes to give himself an abundance of trouble, let him equip these two things, a ship and a woman. No two things involve more bother, for neither is ever sufficiently adorned.

PLAUTUS, Pænulus, l. 210. (Act i, sc. 2.)

A ship is ever in need of repairing.

JOHN TAYLOR, A Navy of Landships.

Let our barks across the pathless flood
Hold different courses.

SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 29.

It would have been as though he were in a boat of stone with masts of steel, sails of lead, ropes of iron, the devil at the helm, the wrath of God for a breeze, and hell for his destination.

EMORY A. STORRS, Speech, Chicago, 1866, referring to President Johnson, who had threatened to use troops to compel Congress to adjourn.

Your ships are the wooden walls.

THEMISTOCLES, interpreting an oracle received by the Athenians. (HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, sec. 143.)

The wooden wall alone shall remain unconquered. (τεῖχος ἑὸν.)

The second reply of the Pythian oracle to the Athenians, 480 B.C. (HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, sec. 141.)

The credit of the Realm, by defending the same with Wooden Walls, as Themistocles called the Ships of Athens.

LINSCHOTEN, London: Preface.

There's not a ship that sails the ocean,

But every climate, every soil,

Must bring its tribute, great or small,

And help to build the wooden wall!

LONGFELLOW, Building of the Ship, l. 66.

The ships rest upon the beach. (Stant littore puppes.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 901.

One ship drives east and another drives west

With the self-same winds that blow,

'Tis the set of the sails and not the gales

Which tells us the way to go.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Winds of Fate.

II—Ship: Description

But the ships, they carries me long, long ways,
An' draws far places near.

J. J. BELL, On the Quay.

Gray sail against the sky,
Gray butterfly!

Have you a dream for going,

Or are you only the blind wind's blowing?

DANA BURNET, A Sail at Twilight.

She walks the waters like a thing of life,
And seems to dare the elements to strife.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 3.

She bears her down majestically near,
Speed on her prow, and terror in her tier.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto iii, st. 15.

And ships were drifting with the dead
To shores where all was dumb!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Last Man, l. 19.

Ships that sailed for sunny isles,
But never came to shore.

THOMAS KIBBLE HERVEY, The Devil's Progress.

Till next day, There she lay,
In the Bay of Biscay, O!

ANDREW CHERRY, The Bay of Biscay, O!

As ships, becalmed at eve, that lay
With canvas drooping, side by side,

Two towers of sail at dawn of day

Are scarce long leagues apart descried.

ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, Qua Cursum Ventus.

All in the Downs the fleet was moor'd.

JOHN GAY, Sweet William's Farewell.

For she is such a smart little craft,
Such a neat little, sweet little craft—
Such a bright little, Tight little,
Slight little, Light little,

Trim little, slim little craft!

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act ii.

1 This is the ship of pearl, which, poets feign,
Sails the unshadowed main,—
The venturous bark that flings
On the sweet summer wind its purpled wings.
O. W. HOLMES, The Chambered Nautilus.

2 Scarce one tall frigate walks the sea
Or skirts the safer shores
Of all that bore to victory
Our stout old Commodores.
O. W. HOLMES, At a Dinner to Farragut.

Ships,
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruel war.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida: Prologue.

This new Katterfelto, his show to complete,
Means his boats should all sink as they pass
by our fleet;
Then as under the ocean their course they steer right on,
They can pepper their foes from the bed of old Triton.

HENRY KIRKE WHITE, The Wonderful Juggler.
(1803) An anticipation of the submarine.

3 There be triple ways to take, of the eagle or the snake,
Or the way of a man with a maid;
But the sweetest way to me is a ship's upon
the sea,
In the heel of the North-East Trade.
RUDYARD KIPLING, The Long Trail.

The Liner she's a lady, an' she never looks nor 'eeds—
The Man-o'-War's 'er 'usband, an' 'e gives 'er
all she needs;
But, oh, the little cargo-boats, that sail the wet seas roun',
They're just the same as you an' me a-plyin' up an' down!
RUDYARD KIPLING, The Liner She's a Lady.

Lord, Thou hast made this world below the shadow of a dream,
An', taught by time, I tak' it so—exceptin' always Steam.
From coupler-flange to spindle-guide I see Thy Hand, O God—
Predestination in the stride o' yon connectin'- rod.
KIPLING, M'Andrew's Hymn, l. 1.

4 Build me straight, O worthy Master!
Stanch and strong, a goodly vessel
That shall laugh at all disaster,
And with wave and whirlwind wrestle!
LONGFELLOW, The Building of the Ship, l. 1.

She starts,—she moves,—she seems to feel
The thrill of life along her keel!
LONGFELLOW, The Building of the Ship, l. 349.

5 And the wind plays on those great sonorous harp, the shrouds and masts of ships.
LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. i, ch. 7.

6 Long since, when all the docks were filled
With that sea beauty man has ceased to build.
JOHN MASEFIELD, Ships.

7 The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,
Burn'd on the water: the poop was beaten
gold;
Purple the sails, and so perfumed that
The winds were love-sick with them; the oars were silver,
Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and
made
The water which they beat to follow faster,
As amorous of their strokes.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 196.

8 She comes majestic with her swelling sails,
The gallant Ship; along her watery way,
Homeward she drives before the favouring
gales;
Now flirting at their length the streamers
play,
And now they ripple with the ruffling breeze.
SOUTHEY, Sonnets. No. xix.

Thou bring'st the sailor to his wife,
And travell'd men from foreign lands,
And letters unto trembling hands:
And, thy dark freight, a vanish'd life.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. x.

9 And the stately ships go on
To their haven under the hill.
TENNYSON, Break, Break, Break. St. 3.

10 Ships dim-discovered dropping from the clouds.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 946.

11 Whoever you are, motion and reflection are especially for you,
The divine ship sails the divine sea for you.
WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Rolling Earth.

12 Speed on the ship! But let her bear
No merchandise of sin,
No groaning cargo of despair
Her roomy hold within;
No Lethæan drug for Eastern lands,
Nor poison-draught for ours;
But honest fruits of toiling hands
And Nature's sun and showers.
WHITTIER, The Ship-Builders.

SHIPWRECK

13 What matter in what wreck we reached the shore,

So we both reached it?

WILFRID CAWEN BLUNT, To One Who Would Make a Confession.

<sup>1</sup> He perhaps reads of a shipwreck on the coast of Bohemia.

EDMUND BURKE, On the Sublime and Beautiful: Pt. i, Introduction.

<sup>2</sup> Then rose from sea to sky the wild farewell!
Then shriek'd the timid, and stood still the brave;

Then some leap'd overboard with dreadful yell,

As eager to anticipate their grave;
And the sea yawn'd around her like a hell,
And down she suck'd with her the whirling wave.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 52.

He sinks into thy depths with bubbling groan.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 179.

A solitary shriek—the bubbling cry
Of some strong swimmer in his agony.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 53.

But hark! what shriek of death comes in the gale,
And in the distant ray what glimmering sail
Bends to the storm?—Now sinks the note of fear!

Ah! wretched mariners!—no more shall day
Unclose his cheering eye to light ye on your way!

ANN RADCLIFFE, Mysteries of Udolpho: Shipwreck.

<sup>3</sup> Let us think of them that sleep,
Full many a fathom deep,
By thy wild and stormy steep,
Elsinore!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Battle of the Baltic.

<sup>4</sup> He who will not be ruled by the rudder, must be ruled by the rock.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature. Vol. ii, p. 454.

<sup>5</sup> And for a winding sheet a wave,
I had, and all the ocean for my grave.

DRYDEN, The Conquest of Granada. Pt. ii, act ii, sc. 1. (1670)

A lady that was drowned at sea and had a wave for her winding sheet.

GEORGE VILLIERS, The Rehearsal. (1671)

<sup>6</sup> The ship hangs hovering on the verge of death,
Hell yawns, rocks rise, and breakers roar beneath! . . .

In vain the cords and axes were prepared,
For every wave now smites the quivering yard;

High o'er the ship they throw a dreadful shade,

Then on her burst in terrible cascade. . . .

Again she plunges! hark! a second shock
Bilges the splitting vessel on the rock—
Down on the vale of death, with dismal cries,
The fated victims shuddering cast their eyes. . . .

Ah Heaven!—behold her crashing ribs divide!

She loosens, parts, and spreads in ruin o'er the tide.

WILLIAM FALCONER, The Shipwreck. Canto iii, l. 610.

<sup>7</sup> He who has suffered shipwreck, fears to sail
Upon the seas, though with a gentle gale.

ROBERT HERRICK, Shipwreck.

<sup>8</sup> When Crew and Captain understand each other to the core,
It takes a gale and more than a gale to put their ship ashore.

RUDYARD KIPLING, "Together."

<sup>9</sup> And fast through the midnight dark and drear,
Through the whistling sleet and snow,
Like a sheeted ghost, the vessel swept Tow'rs the reef of Norman's Woe.

LONGFELLOW, The Wreck of the Hesperus.

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 503. Said of sailors leaping from a wreck into the sea.

They make glorious shipwreck who are lost in seeking worlds.

LESSING. (Quoted by Emerson, Journals, 1867.)

<sup>11</sup> Down, down beneath the deep,
That oft in triumph bore him,
He sleeps a sound and peaceful sleep,
With the salt waves dashing o'er him.

HENRY FRANCIS LYTE, The Sailor's Grave.

Sleep on, sleep on, thou mighty dead!
A glorious tomb they've found thee;
The broad blue sky above thee spread,
The boundless ocean round thee.

HENRY FRANCIS LYTE, The Sailor's Grave.

Kings have no such couch as thine,
As the green that folds thy grave.

TENNYSON, A Dirge. St. 6.

<sup>12</sup> It was that fatal and perfidious bark,
Built in th' eclipse, and rigg'd with curses dark,
That sunk so low that sacred head of thine.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 100.

<sup>13</sup> Like ships that have gone down at sea,
When heaven was all tranquillity!

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Light of the Harem, l. 189.

<sup>14</sup> I have seen a man drowned in the sea who laughed at shipwreck, and I said, "Never was the wave more just." (Vidi ego naufragium

qui risit in æquora mergi, Et "numquam" dixi "justior unda fuit.")

OID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 8, l. 11.

1 He wrongly accuses Neptune, who makes shipwreck a second time. (Improbe Neptu-num accusat, qui iterum naufragium facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 264.

2 To make shipwreck in port. (Naufragium in portu facere.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. xii, sec. 23. Quoted as a proverb.

3 No dust have I to cover me,
My grave no man may show;
My tomb is this unending sea,
And I lie far below.

My fate, O stranger, was to drown;
And where it was the ship went down
Is what the sea-birds know.

E. A. ROBINSON, Inscription by the Sea. (From the Greek Anthology.)

4 Though his bark cannot be lost,
Yet it shall be tempest-tost.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 24.

5 'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1114.

Lord, Lord! methought, what pain it was to drown!

What dreadful noise of waters in mine ears!
What ugly sights of death within mine eyes!
Methought I saw a thousand fearful wrecks;
Ten thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon;
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels,
All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea:
Some lay in dead men's skulls; and, in those holes
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept,
As 't were in scorn of eyes, reflecting gems.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 21.

The wills above be done! but I would fain die
a dry death.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 1, l. 67.

6 My son i' the ooze is bedded; and I'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded

And with him there lie mudded.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 3, l.
100.

Deeper than did ever plummet sound.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act v, sc. 1, l. 56.

7 Here and there they are seen swimming in the vast flood. (Apparent rari nantes in gurgite vasto.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 118.

8 Or, shipwrecked, kindles on the coast
False fires, that others may be lost.

WORDSWORTH, To the Lady Fleming, l. 69.

9

I made a prosperous voyage when I suffered
shipwreck.

ZENO, referring to the fact that he was shipwrecked on a voyage from Phœnicia to Peiræus, and so came to Athens, where he studied philosophy under Crates. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, sec. 4.)

SHOE

11

"Who are you?" said the stocking to the shoe.
Said the shoe to the stocking,
"How terribly shocking,
For such as you to say to a shoe,
Who are you?"

ANGE FAGNANO, Strife.

12

Or, if thee list not wait for dead men's shoon.
BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 5.
(1597)

He that looks after dead-men's shoes, may chance to go barefoot.

JAMES MABBE, Celestina, 24. (1631)

13

Now for good luck, cast an old shoe after me.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

And wheresoe'er thou move, good luck
Shall fling her old shoe after.

TENNYSON, Will Waterproof's Lyrical Monologue. St. 27.

14

Let not the shoe be too large for the foot.

LUCIAN, Pro Imaginibus. Sec. 10.

Let firm, well hammer'd soles protect thy feet
Thro' freezing snows, and rains, and soaking sleet.

Should the big last extend the shoe too wide,
Each stone will wrench the unwary step aside;
The sudden turn may stretch the swelling vein,
The cracking joint unhinge, or ankle sprain;
And when too short the modish shoes are worn,
You 'll judge the seasons by your shooting corn.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 33.

I was not made of common calf,
Nor ever meant for country loan;
If with an axe I seem cut out,
The workman was no cobbling clown;
A good jack boot with double sole he made,
To roam the woods, or through the rivers wade,
GIUSEPPE GIUSTI, The Chronicle of the Boot.

15

My galligaskins, that have long withstood
The winter's fury, and encroaching frosts,
By time subdued (what will not time subdue!),

A horrid chasm disclosed.

JOHN PHILLIPS, The Splendid Shilling, l. 121.

16

We ought not to treat living creatures like shoes or pots and pans, which, when worn with use, we throw away.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. 5, sec. 5.

1 No one of you can tell me where my shoe pinches.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Æmilius Paulus. Ch. 5, sec.

2. Relating the story of a Roman, who made this response to friends who demanded why he had divorced his wife without apparent cause.

Each knows where the shoe pinches him. (Cada uno sabe donde la aprieta el Zapato.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 32.

But I wot best where wringeth me my shoe.

CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale, l. 309.

Those who wear the shoe know best where it pinches.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 16.

Others may guess where the shoe wrings, besides him that wears it.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 413.

2 You cannot put the same shoe on every foot.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 596.

All shoes fit not all feet.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Quixote. Act v, sc. 2.

All feet tread not in one shoe.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

For still when all is said the rule stands fast

That each man's shoe be made on his own last.

(Metiri se quemque suo modulo ac pede verum est.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 7, l. 98. (Conington, tr.)

To each foot its own shoe. (A chaque pied son soulier.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13.

3 'Tis the same to him who wears a shoe, as if the whole earth were covered with leather.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth. Quoted as a Persian proverb.

4 Hark! the boy calls thee to his destin'd stand,
And the shoe shines beneath his oily hand.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 101.

5 One said he wondered that leather was not dearer than any other thing. Being demanded a reason: because, saith he, it is more stood upon than any other thing in the world.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Shakespeare Jest Books: Conceits, Flashes and Whimzies. No. 86.

6 The shoe will hold with the sole.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546.)

Who should hold with the shoe but the sole?

UNKNOWN, Peddler's Prophecy, l. 730. (1595)

7 Oh, where did hunter win
So delicate a skin

For her feet?

You lucky little kid,

You perished, so you did,

For my sweet.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, To My Mistress's Boots.

8

And put

My clouted brogues from off my feet.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 213.

9

Tip at the toe, live to see woe;

Wear at the side, live to be a bride;

Wear at the ball, live to spend all;

Wear at the heel, live to save a deal.

UNKNOWN, The Wear of Shoes. Old rhyme.

SHOEMAKER

10

I do not think that shoemaker a good workman who makes a great shoe for a little foot.

AGESILAUS THE GREAT, to one commending an orator for his skill in amplifying petty matters. (PLUTARCH, Laconic Apophthegms.)

11

Let not the cobbler go above his last. (Ne sutor supra crepidam.)

APELLES. He was in the habit of hanging his pictures where they could be seen by the passers-by, and listening to their comments. One day a shoemaker criticised the shoes in a certain picture, and found next day that they had been repainted. Proud of his success as a critic, he began to find fault with the thigh of the figure, when Apelles called out from behind the canvas, "Shoemaker, don't go above your last!" (Sutor, ne supra crepidam judicaret. PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xxxv, ch. 10, sec. 36.) Lucian tells the same story of Phidias.

Let not the cobbler go beyond his last. (Ne sutor ultra crepidam.)

ERASMUS, quoting the proverb in the form generally used. And the usual rendering is, of course, "Cobbler, stick to your last."

Remember, cobbler, to keep to your leather. (Memento, in pellicula, cerdo, tenere tua.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, ep. 16, l. 6.

Do you not perceive that you are speaking beyond your hammer? (Non sentis, inquit, te ultra malleum loqui?)

ATHENÆUS, to a blacksmith criticising music.

The title of Ultracrepidarian critics has been given to those persons who find fault with small and insignificant details.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. Essay xxii.

12

'Tis a maxim with me, that an hale Cobbler is a better man than a sick king.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, Love in a Village. Act i, sc. 5.

13

Him that makes shoes goes barefoot himself.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

When we see a man with bad shoes, we say it is no wonder, if he is a shoemaker. (Quand nous voyons un homme mal chaussé, nous disons que ce n'est pas merveille, s'il est chaussetier.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 24.

Who is worse shod than the shoemaker's wife?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

1
Ye tuneful cobblers! still your notes prolong,
Compose at once a slipper and a song;
So shall the fair your handiwork peruse,
Your sonnets sure shall please—perhaps your shoes.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 791.

2
A man cannot make a pair of shoes rightly unless he do it in a devout manner.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Letter to Erskine, 22 Oct., 1842.

3
A shoemaker's son is a prince born.

THOMAS DELONEY, The Gentle Craft. Ch. 9.

4
The shoemaker makes a good shoe because he makes nothing else.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Greatness.

5
Mock not the cobbler for his black thumbs.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and the Profane State: Of Jestings.

Oh, her heart's adrift with one
On an endless voyage gone!

Night and morning
Hannah's at the window binding shoes.

LUCY LARCOM, Hannah Binding Shoes.

I am but, as you would say, a cobbler. . . .
Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl.
. . . I am indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes;
when they are in great danger I recover them.
As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather have gone upon my handiwork.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 1, l. 9.

Hans Grovendraad, an honest clown,
By cobbling in his native town,
Had earned a living ever.

His work was strong and clean and fine,
And none who served at Crispin's shrine
Was at his trade more clever.

JAN VAN RYSWICK, Hans Grovendraad. (F. W. Ricord, tr.)

8
When boots and shoes are torn up to the lefts, Cobblers must thrust their awls up to the hefts.

NATHANIEL WARD, The Simple Cobbler of Aggawam in America. Title page.

9
Marry, because you have drank with the King,
And the King hath so graciously pledg'd you,
You shall no more be call'd shoemakers,
But you and yours, to the world's end,
Shall be call'd the Trade of the Gentle Craft.

UNKNOWN, George-a-Greene. (Old play of 1599.) The king referred to was Edward IV, who, in one of his disguises, is said to have drunk with a party of shoemakers and pledged them. The term, "gentle craft," probably arose from the legend that St. Crispin, after he left Rome for Soissons to preach Christianity, supported himself by shoe-making.

I'll . . . fall to my old trade of the gentle craft the cobbler.

ROBERT WILSON, Cobbler's Prophecy, l. 1677. (1594)

Brave shoemakers, all gentlemen of the gentle craft.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Shoemaker's Holiday. Act iii, sc. 1. (1600)

When young of Crispin's gentle craft by trade.

11
Had sighed to many, though he loved but one.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 5.

12
And sighed, and wept, and said no more.

CHAUCER, Chaucer's Dream, l. 931. Usually attributed to Chaucer, but probably spurious. The line is borrowed from Alan de Lisle (or de Insulis), De Planctu Naturæ.

Sigh'd and look'd, and sigh'd again.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 120.

Sighed and looked unutterable things.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1188.

13
Not such sorrowful sighs as men make
For woe, or else when that folk be sick,

But easy sighs, such as been to like.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 1361.

And easy sighs, such as folk draw in love.

HENRY HOWARD, Prisoner in Windsor.

14
Drew a long, long sigh, and wept a last adieu!

COWPER, On the Receipt of My Mother's Picture, l. 30.

15
To sigh, yet not recede; to grieve, yet not repent.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales of the Hall. Bk. iii.

To sigh, yet feel no pain.

THOMAS MOORE, The Blue Stocking. Song ii.

16
When he is here, I sigh with pleasure—
When he is gone, I sigh with grief.

W. S. GILBERT, The Sorcerer. Act i.

17
The sigh that rends thy constant heart
Shall break thy Edwin's too.

GOLDSMITH, A Ballad: The Hermit. (Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 8.)

18
Implores the passing tribute of a sigh.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 80.

1 My soul has rest, sweet sigh! alone in thee.
PETRARCH, To Laura in Death. Sonnet liv.

Oh, if you knew the pensive pleasure
That fills my bosom when I sigh,
You would not rob me of a treasure
Monarchs are too poor to buy.
SAMUEL ROGERS, To —. St. 2.

Sighs

Which perfect Joy, perplex'd for utterance,
Stole from her sister Sorrow.
TENNYSON, The Gardener's Daughter, l. 249.

2 Speed the soft intercourse from soul to soul,
And waft a sigh from Indus to the Pole.
POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 57.

3 Words may be false and full of art;
Sighs are the natural language of the heart.
THOMAS SHADWELL, Psyche. Act iii.

4 He raised a sigh so piteous and profound,
That it did seem to shatter all his bulk
And end his being.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 94.

5 A plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 364.

6 Hushed be that sigh, be dry that tear,
Nor let us lose our Heaven here.

SHERIDAN, Dry Be That Tear.

7 Never sigh, but send.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. 1.

SIGHT

SILENCE

I—Silence: Definitions

Silence is gain to many of mankind. (Πολλοῖς γὰρ ἐστὶ κέρδος ἡ σιγὴ βροτῶν.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus. Frag. 103.

Silence is the virtue of fools, so he rightly said to the silent man: "If you are wise, you are a fool; if you are a fool, you are wise."

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Loquacitas.

Silence is the wit of fools. (Le silence est l'esprit des sots.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Conversation.

Silence is the eternal duty of man.

CARLYLE, Inaugural Address at Edinburgh.

Silence, the great Empire of Silence: higher than all stars; deeper than the Kingdom of Death! It alone is great; all else is small.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as King.

Silence is the element in which great things fashion themselves together.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 3.

The uttered part of a man's life, let us always repeat, bears to the unuttered, unconscious part a small unknown proportion.

CARLYLE, Essays: Memoirs of the Life of Scott.

Of every noble work the silent part is best
Of all expression that which cannot be expressed.

W. W. STORY, The Unexpressed.

Silence is the mother of Truth.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. iv, ch. 4.

The ancient sentence said, Let us be silent for so are the gods. Silence is a solvent that destroys personality, and gives us leave to be great and universal.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Intellect.

Silence is true wisdom's best reply.

EURIPIDES, Fragments. Frag. 947.

Silence is man's chief learning. (Ἡ μεγάλη παιδευσὶς ἐν ἀνθρώποις σιωπῇ.)

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 46.)

Aurispā nothing writes though learn'd, for he
By a wise silence seems more learn'd to be.

JANUS PANNONIUS, On Aurispā.

Stillborn silence! thou that art
Flood-gate of the deeper heart!

RICHARD FLECKNOE, Silence.

Silence is one great art of conversation. He is not a fool who knows when to hold his tongue.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 59.

Silence and modesty are very valuable qualities in the art of conversation. (Le silence et la modestie sont qualités très commodes à la conversation.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 25.

That silence is one of the great arts of conversation is allowed by Cicero himself, who says, there is not only an art, but even an eloquence in it.

HANNAH MORE, Essays on Various Subjects: Thoughts on Conversation.

Silence is strength. (Qui silet, est firmus.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 697.

Love silence, even in the mind; for thoughts are to that as words are to the body, troublesome: much speaking, as much thinking, spends. True silence is the rest of the mind; and it is to the spirit what sleep is to the body, nourishment and refreshment.

WILLIAM PENN, Advice to His Children.

<sup>1</sup> Silence is the soul of war.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Ode in Imitation of Horace.

Whoso holdeth him still doth assent.
UNKNOWN, Partonope, 467. (c. 1490)

8
But that you shall not say I yield being silent,
I would not speak.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 99.

IV—Silence: Its Virtues

9
Silence may do good, and can do little harm.
RICHARD BRATHWAITE, English Gentleman, 51.
(1630)

Silence seldom hurts.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4170.

10
It is harmful to no one to have been silent.
(Nulli taciuisse nocet.)

DIONYSIUS CATO, Disticha de Moribus. Bk. i,
No. 12.

11
If you will still live at ease,
Hear and see, and hold your peace.
JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, Fo. 101. (1591)

Hear, see, and be silent, if you wish to live in peace. (Audi, vide, tace, si vis vivere in pace.)
UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum: Folliculus.

12
There is likewise a reward for faithful silence.
(Est et fideli tuta silentio Merces.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 2, l. 25.

13
Silence is as full of potential wisdom and wit
as the unhewn marble of great sculpture.

ALDOUS HUXLEY, Point Counter Point, p. 10.

14 Silence is the safest role for the man who distrusts himself. (Le silence est le parti le plus sûr de celui qui se défie de soi-même.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 79.

15
In silence God brings all to pass. ("Ἀπαντα σιγῇ ὁ θεὸς ἐξεργάζεται.)
MENANDER, Fragments. No. 818.

16
All things, save silence only, bring repentance.
(Μόνη σιωπὴ μεταμέλειαν οὐ θέπει.)
MENANDER, Fragments. No. 1105.

Be silent and safe—silence never betrays you.
J. B. O'REILLY, Rules of the Road. St. 2.

17
Let a fool hold his tongue and he will pass for a sage. (Taciturnitas stulto homini pro sapientia est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 914.

Even a fool, when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 28.

18
Wise Men say nothing in dangerous times.
JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Wisdom.

V—Silence: Its Eloquence

19
Silence never shows itself to so great an advantage, as when it is made the reply to calumny and defamation.

ADDISON, The Tatler. No. 133.

The best apology against false accusers is silence and sufferance, and honest deeds set against dishonest words.

JOHN MILTON, Apology for Smectymnuus:
Introduction.

And I too talk, and lose the touch
I talk of. Surely, after all,
The noblest answer unto such
Is kindly silence when they brawl.

TENNYSON, The After Thought. (Punch, 7 March, 1846.) Altered in the published poems to: "Is perfect stillness when they brawl."

20
Silence is more eloquent than words.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Prophet.

There are moments when silence, prolong'd and unbroken,

More expressive may be than all words ever spoken.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto 1, st. 20.

Well-timed silence hath more eloquence than speech.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Discretion.

<sup>1</sup>
The silent organ loudest chants
The master's requiem.

EMERSON, Dirge. Last lines.

<sup>2</sup>
There is the silent criticism of silence, worth all the rest.

HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. ii, ch. 2.

<sup>3</sup>
Silence that spoke, and eloquence of eyes.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiv, l. 252. (Pope, tr.)

When they hold their tongues they cry out (i.e. their silence is eloquent). (Cum tacent clamant.)

CICERO, In Catilinam. No. i, sec. 8.

Even silence may be eloquent in love.

CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor. Act ii, sc. 2.

Silence in love bewrays more woe

Than words, though ne'er so witty:

A beggar that is dumb, you know,

May challenge double pity.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Silent Lover. St. 9.

<sup>4</sup>
There is an eloquent silence: it serves sometimes to approve, sometimes to condemn;
there is a mocking silence; there is a respectful silence.

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Réflexions Diverses: Pt.
iv, De la Conversation.

<sup>5</sup>
Why, know you not soul speaks to soul?
I say the use of words shall pass—

Words are but fragments of the glass,

But silence is the perfect whole.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Why, Know You Not?

Grant me the power of saying things

Too simple and too sweet for words.

COVENTRY PATMORE, The Angel in the House.

Bk. i, canto i, prelude 1.

<sup>6</sup>
I'll speak to thee in silence.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 4, l. 29.

See also under FACE.

<sup>7</sup>
The silence often of pure innocence

Persuades when speaking fails.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 41.

<sup>8</sup>
Come then, expressive Silence, muse His praise.

THOMSON, A Hymn on the Seasons, l. 118.

VI—Silence and Speech

<sup>9</sup>
Both silent, when there is need, and speaking in season. (Σιγῶν θ' ὅπου δέι καὶ λέγων τὰ καίρια.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus the Fire-Bringer.

Frag. 118.

It is a great thing to know the season for speech and the season for silence. (Magna res est vocis et silentii tempora nosse.)

SENECA, De Moribus. Sec. 74.

There is a time of speaking and a time of being still.

WILLIAM CAXTON, Charles the Grete, 56.
(1485)

Let him now speak, or else hereafter for ever hold his peace.

Book of Common Prayer: Solemnization of Matrimony.

Now speak, Or be for ever silent.

MASSINGER, The Duke of Milan. Act iv, sc. 3.

<sup>10</sup>
"Dost thou now at length think me a philosopher?" To which he bitingly replied, "I would have thought thee one if thou hadst held thy peace." (Intellegeram si tacuisses.)

BOËTHIUS, Philosophiæ Consolationis. Bk. ii, prosa 7. Hence the phrase, "Si tacuisses, phil-osophus mansisses," If you had been silent,
you would have remained a philosopher.

Better to remain silent and be thought a fool than to speak out and remove all doubt.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN. (Golden Book, Nov., 1931.)

An ignorant man is wisest if he remains silent, hiding his speech like a disgraceful disease.

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology). Bk. x, epig. 98.

Do you wish people to think well of you? Don't speak. (Voulez-vous qu'on croie du bien de vous? n'en dites pas.)

PASCAL, Pensées. Appendix to ch. 29, No. 15.

If thou wouldst be known a wise man, let thy words show thee so; if thou doubt thy words, let thy silence feign thee so. It is not a greater point of wisdom to discover knowledge than to hide ignorance.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchiridion. Cent. iii, No. 57.

O my Antonio, I do know of these,
That therefore only are reputed wise,
For saying nothing.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
i, sc. 1, l. 95.

<sup>11</sup>
An event has happened, upon which it is difficult to speak, and impossible to be silent.

EDMUND BURKE, *Impeachment of Warren
Hastings*, 5 May, 1789.

<sup>12</sup>
Under all speech that is good for anything there lies a silence that is better. Silence is deep as Eternity; Speech is shallow as Time.

CARLYLE, Essays: Memoirs of the Life of Scott.

Speech is great, but silence is greater.

CARLYLE, Essays: Characteristics of Shakespeare.

As the Swiss inscription says: Sprechen ist silbern, Schweigen ist golden—Speech is silvern,
Silence is golden; or, as I might rather express it,
Speech is of Time, Silence is of Eternity.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 3.

Silence sweeter is than speech.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Magnus and Morna. Sc. 3.

Speech is better than silence; silence is better than speech.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nominalist and Realist.

Silence more musical than any song.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Sonnet: Rest.

The dark is at the end of every day,

And silence is the end of every song.

E. A. ROBINSON, Woman and the Wife.

1 When you have nothing to say, say nothing.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Reflections. No. 183.

2 Let thy speech be better than silence, or be silent.

DIONYSIUS THE ELDER, Fragments. Frag. 6.

Be silent or let thy words be worth more than silence.

PYTHAGORAS. (STOBÆUS, Florilegium. Pt. 34, l. 7.)

3 There are some silent people who are more interesting than the best talkers.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 35.

4 Speech is often barren, but silence also does not necessarily brood over a full nest.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt. Ch. 16.

5 Not able to speak, but unable to hold his tongue. (Οὐ λέγειν δεινὸς, ἀλλὰ σιγᾶν ἀδύνατος.)

EPICHRMUS, Fragments. No. 272.

Though he could not speak, he could not be silent. (Qui cum loqui non posset, tacere non potuit.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. i, ch. 15, sec. 16. Paraphrasing Epichrmus.

It is a sad thing when men have neither wit to speak well nor judgment to hold their tongues.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Hommes.

He must have leave to speak that cannot hold his tongue.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

See also TONGUE: HOLDING THE TONGUE.

6 It is safer to keep silence than to speak. (Ἀσφαλέστερον γὰρ τοῦ λέγειν τὸ σιγᾶν.)

EPICETUS [?], Enchiridion. Frag. 29.

7 Of the best society it used to be said: their speech instructs the mind, and their silence the feelings.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

8 He that speaks sows, and he that holds his peace gathers.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

He that speaks doth sow, he that holds his peace doth reap.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 24.

9 Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath.

New Testament: James, i, 19.

10 You hesitate to stab me with a word, And know not Silence is the sharper sword.

R. U. JOHNSON, To One Who Has Forgotten.

11 What shall I say to you? What can I say Better than silence is?

LONGFELLOW, Morituri Salutamus, l. 128.

12 Silence is a very small virtue, but to speak what should not be uttered is a heinous crime. (Exigua est virtus præstare silentia rebus: At contra gravis est culpa tacenda loqui.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 603.

13 Silence at the proper season is wisdom and better than any speech.

PLUTARCH, Morals: On Education.

Silence is wisdom, when speaking is folly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4169.

14 Be silent always when you doubt your sense.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 7.

15 A man of virtue, judgment, and prudence speaks not until there is silence.

SADI, The Gulistan. Ch. 4, No. 7.

16 Be check'd for silence, But never tax'd for speech.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act i, sc. 1, l. 76.

17 Anon, as patient as the female dove, When that her golden couplets are disclosed, His silence will sit drooping.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 309.

18 Silence after grievous things is good, . . . For words divide and rend;

But silence is most noble till the end.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

Peace and be wise; no gods love idle speech.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Meleager.

19 I have been breaking silence these twenty-three years and have hardly made a rent in it. Silence has no end; speech is but the beginning of it.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 9 Feb., 1841.

20 Fear oftentimes restraineth words, But makes not thought to cease; And he speaks best who hath the skill When for to hold his peace.

THOMAS VAUX, Of a Contented Mind.

For many have been harmed by speech,— Through thinking, few, or none.

THOMAS VAUX, Of a Contented Mind.

21 All were with one accord silent, and deeply attentive held their peace. (Conticuere omnes, intentique ora tenebant.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 1.

Why do you compel me to break my deep silence? (Quid me alta silentia cogis Rumpere?)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. x, l. 63.

The sweet voice into silence went,
A silence which was almost pain.

WHITTIER, The Grave by the Lake. St. 45.

2
He knew the precise psychological moment
when to say nothing.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 2.

I have often repented speaking, but never of holding my tongue. (Dixisse me aliquando pœnituit, tacuisse nunquam.)

XENOCRATES. (VALERIUS MAXIMUS, Annals.
Bk. vii, ch. 2, sec. 7.) Plutarch attributes the saying to Simonides.

I have often regretted having spoken, never having kept silent. (Sæpius locutum, nunquam me tacuisse Pœnitet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententia. No. 1070.

We often repent of what we have said, but never,
never, of that which we have not.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 117.

We seldom repent talking too little, but very often talking too much.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Hommes.

4
A wise old owl lived in an oak;
The more he saw the less he spoke;
The less he spoke the more he heard:
Why can't we all be like that bird?

UNKNOWN, The Wise Old Owl. Quoted by John D. Rockefeller, Sr., and used by Calvin Coolidge as motto over the fireplace of his home at Northampton, Mass.

VII—Silence: Stillness

5
Three things are ever silent—Thought, Destiny, and the Grave.

BULWER-LYTTON, Harold. Bk. x, ch. 2.

There be
Three silent things:
The falling snow . . . the hour
Before the dawn . . . the mouth of one
Just dead.

ADELAIDE CRAPSEY, Triad.

Three Silences there are: the first of speech,
The second of desire, the third of thought.

There was silence deep as death;
And the boldest held his breath.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Battle of the Baltic. St. 2.

7
The splendor of Silence,—of snow-jeweled hills and of ice.

INGRAM CROCKETT, Orion.

8
O golden Silence, bid our souls be still,
And on the foolish fretting of our care
Lay thy soft touch of healing unaware!

JULIA CAROLINE RIPLEY DORR, Silence.

Remember what peace there may be in silence.
MAX EHLMANN, Desiderata.

9
An horrid stillness first invades the ear,
And in that silence we the tempest fear.
DRYDEN, Astræa Redux, l. 7.

10
And silence, like a poultice, comes
To heal the blows of sound.

O. W. HOLMES, The Music-Grinders. St. 10.

11
There is a silence where hath been no sound,
There is a silence where no sound may be,
In the cold grave—under the deep deep sea,
Or in wide desert where no life is found.

THOMAS HOOD, Sonnet: Silence.

12
Noiseless as fear in a wide wilderness.

<sup>9</sup> For to sin, indeed, is human; but to persevere in sin is not human but altogether satanic. (Peccare, quidem, humanum est; at in peccatis perseverare, id non humanum est, sed omnino satanicum.)

ST. CHRYSOSTOM, Adhortatio at Theodorum Lapsum, i, 14.

To do sin is mannish, but certes to persevere long in sin is the work of the devil.

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 29. Quoted as a proverb.

He that falls into sin is a man; that grieves at it, is a saint; that boasteth of it, is a devil.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and the Profane State: Of Self-Praising.

God pardons those who do through frailty sin,
But never those that persevere therein.

ROBERT HERRICK, Pardon.

Man-like is it to fall into sin,
Fiend-like is it to dwell therein,
Christ-like is it for sin to grieve,
God-like is it all sin to leave.

6 Gone are those three, those sisters rare
With wonder-lips and eyes ashine.
One was wise, and one was fair,
And one was mine.

ARTHUR DAVISON FICKE, The Three Sisters.

7 Being used but sisterly salutes to feel,
Inspid things—like sandwiches of veal.
THOMAS HOOD, Bianca's Dream, l. 263. See also under KISS.

8 What did the Colonel's Lady think?
Nobody never knew.
Somebody asked the Sergeant's Wife,
An' she told 'em true!
When you get to a man in the case,
They're as like as a row of pins—
For the Colonel's Lady an' Judy O'Grady
Are sisters under their skins!
RUDYARD KIPLING, The Ladies.

E'en a woman, and commanded

By such poor passion as the maid that milks.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 15, l. 72.

9 For there is no friend like a sister,
In calm or stormy weather,
To cheer one on the tedious way,
To fetch one if one goes astray,
To lift one if one totters down,
To strengthen whilst one stands.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Goblin Market. Conclusion.

10 O, never say hereafter
But I am truest speaker: you call'd me brother

When I was but your sister.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 375.

A ministering angel shall my sister be.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 264.

11 The weird sisters.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 32.

SKILL

12 'Tis God gives skill,
But not without men's hands: He could not make

Antonio Stradivari's violins

Without Antonio.

GEORGE ELIOT, Stradivarius, l. 151.

13 Skill to do comes of doing.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.

14 Skill is stronger than strength.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. The French form is, "L'adresse surmonte la force."

15 Skill and confidence are an unconquered army.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

16 This sort of thing takes a deal of training.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore.

17 All things require skill but an appetite.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

18 And skill's a joy to any man.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Everlasting Mercy, l. 600.

19 . . . To show our simple skill,
That is the true beginning of our end.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 110.

20 Like an arrow shot
From a well-experienced archer hits the mark
His eye doth level at.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act i, sc. 1, l. 163.

21 Masterful skill. (Arte magistra.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 442; bk. xii, l. 427.

SKIN

- 1
You are come off now with a whole skin.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 5.
- It is good sleeping in a whole skin.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.
- Your skins are whole.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iii, sc. 1, l. 111.
- 2
A fair skin covers a crooked mind.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.
- 3
Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots?
Old Testament: Jeremiah, xiii, 23. See also under CHANGE.
- 4
Skin for skin, yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life.
Old Testament: Job, ii, 4.
- 5
My skin hangs about me like an old lady's loose gown.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 3.
- 6
His silver skin laced with his golden blood.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 118.
- I'll not shed her blood;
Nor scar that whiter skin of her than snow,
And smooth as monumental alabaster.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 3.

SKULL

- 7
Remove yon skull from out the scatter'd heaps:
Is that a temple where a God may dwell?
Why ev'n the worm at last disdains her shatter'd cell!
Look on its broken arch, its ruin'd wall,
Its chambers desolate, and portals foul:
Yes, this was once Ambition's airy hall,
The dome of Thought, the palace of the Soul.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 5, 6.
- 8
That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once. . . . And now my Lady Worm's; chap-less, and knocked about the mazzard with a sexton's spade.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 83.
- 9
Behold this ruin! 'Twas a skull
Once of ethereal spirit full!
This narrow cell was Life's retreat;
This place was Thought's mysterious seat!
What beauteous pictures fill'd that spot,
What dreams of pleasure, long forgot!
Nor Love, nor Joy, nor Hope, nor Fear,
Has left one trace, one record here.
ANNA JANE VARDILL, Lines to a Skull. (Published in European Magazine, Nov., 1816, with signature V.) Claimed by J. D. Gord-man, Robert Philip, and others.

SKY

- 10
Oh "darkly, deeply, beautifully blue!"
As some one somewhere sings about the sky.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 110.
- Blue, darkly, deeply, beautifully blue,
In all its rich variety of shades,
Suffused with glowing gold.
SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales. Pt. i, canto v, l.
102. Referring to dolphins, not to the sky,
as Byron supposed.
- 11
And they were canopied by the blue sky,
So cloudless, clear, and purely beautiful
That God alone was to be seen in heaven.
BYRON, The Dream. St. 4.
- Naught is seen in the vault on high
But the moon, and the stars, and the cloudless
sky.
JOSEPH RODMAN DRAKE, Culprit Fay. St. 1.
- The very clouds have wept and died
And only God is in the sky.
JOAQUIN MILLER, The Ship in the Desert.
- 12
Just take a trifling handful, O philosopher!
Of magic matter: give it a slight toss over
The ambient ether—and I don't see why
You shouldn't make a sky.
MORTIMER COLLINS, Sky-Making: To Professor Tyndall.
- 13
The mountain at a given distance
In amber lies;
Approached, the amber flits a little,—
And that's the skies!
EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 45.
- 14
Under the cold sky. (Sub Jove frigido.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 1, l. 25.
- 15
The sky
is that beautiful old parchment in which the sun and the moon
keep their diary.
ALFRED KREYMBORG, Old Manuscript.
- 16
And that inverted Bowl they call the Sky,
Whereunder crawling coop'd we live and die,
Lift not your hands to It for help—for it
As impotently moves as you or I.
OMAR KHAYYÁM, Rubáiyát. St. 72. (Fitzgerald, tr.)
- 17
Phaëton, if he were alive, would shun the sky. (Vitaret cœlum Phaëton, si viverat.)
OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 1, l. 79.
- 18
The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handywork.
Old Testament: Psalms, xix, 1.
- 19
The wrathful skies

Gallow the very wanderers of the dark,
And make them keep their caves.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 43.

1 What if the sky fell? (Quid si nunc cælum ruat?)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 719. (Act iv, sc. 3.) Quoted as a proverb.

If the sky fall, we shall catch larks. (Si les nues tomboyent esperoyt prendre les alouettes.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 11.

If the sky falls, the pots will be broken. (Si el cielo se cae, quebrarse han las ollas.)

The Spanish form of the proverb.

2 Sometimes gentle, sometimes capricious, sometimes awful, never the same for two moments together; almost human in its passions, almost spiritual in its tenderness, almost Divine in its infinity.

RUSKIN, The True and Beautiful: The Sky.

3 Look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestic roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 312.

4 Heaven's face doth glow.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 48.

Heaven's ebon vault,
Studded with stars unutterably bright,
Through which the moon's unclouded grandeur rolls,
Seems like a canopy which Love had spread
To curtain her sleeping world.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. iv, l. 4.

5 The Lord descended from above
And bow'd the heavens high;
And underneath his feet he cast
The darkness of the sky.

THOMAS STERNHOLD, A Metrical Version of Psalm civ. St. 1.

6 Never yet
Had heaven appear'd so blue, nor earth so green.

TENNYSON, The Holy Grail, l. 364.

Of evening tinct,
The purple-streaming amethyst is thine.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 150.

Green calm below, blue quietness above.

WHITTIER, The Pennsylvania Pilgrim. St. 113.

7 Before the pageant of the skies
Nightly his spirit bowed.

L. FRANK TOOKER, He Bringeth Them unto Their Desired Haven.

8 It becomes wearisome constantly to watch
The arch of heaven. (Tædet cæli convexa tueri.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iv, l. 451.

9 Over all the sky—the sky! far, far out of reach, studded, breaking out, the eternal stars.

WALT WHITMAN, Bivouac on a Mountain Side.

10 I never saw a man who looked
With such a wistful eye
Upon that little tent of blue
Which prisoners call the sky,
And at every drifting cloud that went
With sails of silver by.

OSCAR WILDE, The Ballad of Reading Gaol. Pt. i, st. 3.

11 The soft blue sky did never melt
Into his heart; he never felt
The witchery of the soft blue sky!

WORDSWORTH, Peter Bell. Pt. i, st. 15.

I—Slander: Definitions

12 Slander, canine eloquence. (Canina eloquentia.)

APPIUS CLAUDIUS CÆCUS. (QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. xii, ch. 9, sec. 9.)

Squint-eyed Slander plies th' unhallow'd tongue.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Judgment of Paris. St. 109.

13 Slander is a shipwreck by a dry tempest.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

14 Slander is a most serious evil; it implies two who do wrong, and one who is doubly wronged.

ARTABANUS. (HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, 10.)

An evil-speaker differs from an evil-doer only in opportunity. (Maledicus a malefico non distat nisi occasione.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. xii, ch. 9, sec. 9.

A Slander counts by Threes its victims, who Are Speaker, Spoken Of, and Spoken To.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 39.

Tale-bearers, as I said before, are just as bad as the tale-makers.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act i, sc. 1.

The partaker is as bad as the thief.
SWIFT, of William III's motto, "Recipit non rapuit."

15 Slander, that worst of poisons, ever finds
An easy entrance to ignoble minds.

JOHN HERVEY, Paraphrase of Juvenal.

16 Defamation is becoming a necessity of life; insomuch that a dish of tea in the morning or evening cannot be digested without this stimulant.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xi, p. 224.

1 If slander be a snake, it is a winged one—it flies as well as creeps.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Specimens of Jerrold's Wit: Slander.

2 We commonly slander through vanity more often than through malice. (On est d'ordinaire plus médisant par vanité que par malice.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 483.

3 Slander, the foulest whelp of Sin.

POLLOK, The Course of Time. Bk. viii, l. 726.

Slander, meanest spawn of hell—
And women's slander is the worst.

TENNYSON, The Letters. St. 5.

4 What is slander? A verdict of "guilty" pronounced in the absence of the accused, with closed doors, without defence or appeal, by an interested and prejudiced judge.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: Mind. No. 67.

Believe not each accusing tongue,
As most weak mortals do;

But still believe that story wrong
Which ought not to be true.

RICHARD BRINSLEY SEERIDAN, Sheridaniana.

There are two sides to a story,
Hear them both before you blame;

For a woman's crowning glory
Is a fair, unblemished name!

Heaven holds no gift that's grander,
So beware of idle slander;

There are two sides to a story—
Right and wrong!

WILL A. HEELAN AND J. FRED HELF, There Are Two Sides to a Story. (1900)

5 'Tis slander,
Whose edge is sharper than the sword, whose
tongue

Outvenoms all the worms of Nile, whose breath

Rides on the posting winds and doth belie
All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states,

Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave
This viperous slander enters.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 35.

Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,
As level as the cannon to his blank,
Transports his poison'd shot.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 41.

Slander's mark was ever yet the fair;
The ornament of beauty is suspect,
A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.
So thou be good, slander doth but approve
Thy worth the greater.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lxx.

6 Soft-buzzing slander—silky moths, that eat
An honest name.

JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. iv, l. 619.

7 Slander, the immortal daughter of self-love and idleness. (La Médisance est la fille immortelle De l'Amour-propre et de l'Oisiveté.)
VOLTAIRE, La Calomnie.

II—Slander: Apothegms

8 Slander flings stones at itself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4183.
(1732)

Who by aspersions throw a stone
At th' head of others, hit their own.

GEORGE HERBERT, Charms and Knots.

If I tell a malicious lie, in order to affect any man's fortune or character, I may indeed injure him for some time; but I shall be sure to be the greatest sufferer myself at last.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 Sept., 1747.

See also under RETRIBUTION.

9 It is said that self-praise stinks in the nostrils. For the kind of smell that arises from the unjust abuse of others, people have no nose at all.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

10 It may be a slander, but it is no lie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

That is no slander, sir, which is a truth.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc. 1,
l. 33.

11 A generous heart repairs a slanderous tongue.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. viii, l. 43. (Pope, tr.)

12 The tooth of slander. (Dente Theonino.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 82. A proverbial expression for calumny, of unknown origin. Theon is supposed to have been a satirical poet.

13 Brand him who will with base report,—
He shall be free from mine.

SCOTT, Bridal of Triermain. Canto ii, st. 18.

To speak no slander, no, nor listen to it.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 468.

14 Thee nor carketh care nor slander.

TENNYSON, A Dirge. St. 2.

III—Slander: Its Baseness

15 The man that dares traduce, because he can
With safety to himself, is not a man.

COWPER, Expostulation, l. 432.

16 If you mean wild beasts, the slanderer's; if tame ones, the flatterer's.

DIOGENES, when asked which beast's bite was the most dangerous. (SENECA, Epistles.)

The most dangerous of wild beasts is a slanderer;
of tame ones a flatterer.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs. No. 511.

17 Each man swore to do his best

To damn and perjure all the rest.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 631.

1 Leaving behind them horrible dispraise. (Di sè lasciando orribili dispregi!)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto viii, l. 51. (Cary, tr.)

2 I hate the man who builds his name

On ruins of another's fame.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Fab. xiv, l. 1.

3 The world delights to tarnish shining names,
And to trample the sublime in the dust.

(Es liebt die Welt, das Strahlende zu schwärzen Und das Erhabne in den Staub zu ziehn.)

SCHILLER, Das Mädchen von Orleans.

Since we cannot attain to it, let us avenge ourselves by abusing it. (Puisque nous ne la pouvons aveindre, vengeons nous à en mesdire.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 7. Referring to greatness.

4 Innuendo, into which one must read more meaning than was intended to meet the ear. (Suspiciose, in quibus plus intellegendum esset quam audiendum.)

The creature's at his dirty work again.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 91.

11 He that repeateth a matter separateth very friends.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 9.

I'll devise some honest slanders

To stain my cousin with: one doth not know
How much an ill word may empoison liking.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 84.

Alas! they had been friends in youth;
But whispering tongues can poison truth.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Christabel. Pt. ii, l. 408.

12 For slander lives upon succession,
For ever housed where it gets possession.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 105.

13 What king so strong,
Can tie the gall up in the slanderous tongue?

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 198.

Done to death by slanderous tongues.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 3, l. 3.

14 Slander'd to death by villains,
That dare as well answer a man indeed
As I dare take a serpent by the tongue.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 1, l. 88.

15 I will be hang'd, if some eternal villain,
Some busy and insinuating rogue,
Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some office,

Have not devis'd this slander.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 130.

I am disgrac'd, impeach'd and baffled here,
Pierced to the soul with slander's venom'd spear.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 1, l. 170.

Slander,
Whose sting is sharper than the sword's.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 85.

16 The breath
Of accusation kills an innocent name,
And leaves for lame acquittal the poor life,
Which is a mask without it.

SHELLEY, The Cenci. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 137.

17 Detraction and spite are received with eager ears. (Obtrectatio et livor pronis auribus accipiuntur.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. i, sec. 1.

This ill-wresting world is grown so bad,
Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxl.

18 The tiny-trumpeting gnat can break our dream

When sweetest; and the vermin voices here
May buzz so loud—we scorn them, but they sting.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 137.

19 Slander that is raised is ill to fell.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wife, l. 25. (c. 1460)

V—Slander: Contempt for Slander

1 One may even scourge me, so it be in my absence.

ARISTOTLE, when told that some one had slandered him. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle, sec. 18.)

Better he speak where we are both known, than where we are both unknown.

PHILIP OF MACEDON, when advised to banish a man who had spoken ill of him. (FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 103.)

If I am

Traduced by ignorant tongues, which neither know

My faculties nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing, let me say,
'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake
That virtue must go through.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 2, l. 71.

2 The man that despiseth slander deserveth it.
LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 255.

3 That they speak [evil of me] is not the point; that they do not speak it justly, that is the point. (Quin dicant non est: merito ut ne dicant, id est.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act i, sc. 2.

4 Spiteful songs, if despised, are soon forgotten;
but if you show displeasure, they seem to be admitted as true. (Carmina . . . spreta exlescunt; si irascere, agnita videntur.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 34.

Where it concerns himself,

Who's angry at a slander, makes it true.

BEN JONSON, Catiline. Act iii, sc. 1.

VI—Slander: Admonitions

5 Carry no tales, be no common teller of news, be not inquisitive of other men's talk, for those that are desirous to hear what they need not, commonly be ready to babble what they should not.

ROGER ASCHAM, *Advice to Lord Warwick's
Servant*.

6 Though the quickness of thine ear were able to reach the noise of the moon, which some think it maketh in its rapid revolution; though the number of thy ears should equal Argus his eyes; yet stop them all with the wise man's wax, and be deaf unto the suggestions of tale-bearers, calumniators, pickthank or malevo-lent delators, who, while quiet men sleep, sowing the tares of discord and division, distract the tranquillity of charity and all friendly society.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt.
i, sec. 20.

7 Avoid gossip lest you come to be regarded as its originator; for silence harms no one, but speech is harmful. (Rumorem fuge, ne incipias novus auctor haberi; Nam nulli tacuisse nocet nocet esse locutum.)

DIONYSIUS CATO, Disticha de Moribus. Bk. i,
No. 21.

8 Don't be a Prittle-prattle, nor Prate-apace, nor be a minding anything but what is said
to you.

ERASMUS, The Schoolmaster's Admonitions.

9 Ever have an eye as to what and to whom you speak concerning any man. (Quid de quoque viro, et cui dicas, sæpe videto.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 68.

10 Speak no ill of a friend, nor even of an enemy.
(Ἐλὼν μὴ λέγειν κακῶς, ἀλλὰ μηδὲ ἐχθρόν.)

PITTACUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus. Bk.
i, sec. 78.)

Hear no ill of a friend, nor speak any of an enemy.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1739.

11 Slander-mongers and those who listen to slander, if I had my way, would all be strung up, the talkers by the tongue, the listeners by the ears. (Homines qui gestant quique auscultant crimina, Si meo arbitratu liceat, omnes pen-deant, Gestores linguis, auditores auribus.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 427. (Act i, sc. 5.)

12 I ne'er with Wits or Witlings pass'd my days
To spread about the itch of verse and praise;
Nor like a puppy daggled thro' the town
To fetch and carry sing-song up and down. .

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 223.

13 Publish not men's secret faults, for by dis-gracing them you make yourself of no repute.

SADI, Gulistan: Rules for Conduct. No. 39.

Thy friend has a friend, and thy friend's friend has a friend, so be discreet.

The Talmud.

14 Refrain your tongue from backbiting, for . . .
the mouth that beliieth slayeth the soul.

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, i, 11.

Rebuke backbiters, and encourage them not by hearkening to their tales.

SAMUEL BAGSTER, Christian Politics.

15 If for a tranquil mind you seek,
These things observe with care:

Of whom you speak, to whom you speak,
And how, and when, and where.

UNKNOWN, A Rule of Conduct. Quoted by Edwin Booth.

SLAVERY

I—Slavery: Definitions and Apothegms

16 So free we seem, so fettered fast we are!

ROBERT BROWNING, Andrea del Sarto.

Born slaves, bred slaves,
Branded in the blood and bone slaves.
ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act i.

So we are slaves,
The greatest as the meanest.
BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act ii, sc. 1.
Nations of slaves, with tyranny debas'd,
(Their Maker's image more than half defac'd).
ADDISON, The Campaign, l. 81.

1
Slavery they can have anywhere. It is a weed that grows in every soil.
EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America.

2
As the slave departs, the man returns.
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 348.
Was man ordained the slave of man to toil,
Yoked with the brutes, and fettered to the soil?
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 495.

3
He that is one man's slave, is free from none.
CHAPMAN, The Gentleman Usher. Act i, sc. 1.

4
Excessive liberty leads both nations and individuals into excessive slavery. (Nimias libertas et populis et privatis in nimiam servitutem cadit.)
CICERO, De Republica. Bk. i, sec. 44.

5
I own I am shock'd at the purchase of slaves,
And fear those who buy them and sell them
are knaves;
What I hear of their hardships, their tortures,
and groans,
Is almost enough to draw pity from stones.
COWPER, Pity for Poor Africans, l. 1. (1788)
He blam'd and protested, but join'd in the plan;
He shar'd in the plunder, but pitied the man.
COWPER, Pity for Poor Africans, l. 43.

6
Base in kind, and born to be a slave.
COWPER, Table Talk, l. 28.

I would not have a slave to till my ground,
To carry me, to fan me while I sleep,
And tremble when I wake, for all the wealth
That sinews bought and sold have ever earn'd.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 29.

8
Under the whip of the driver, the slave shall feel his equality with saints and heroes.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.
Slavery it is that makes slavery; freedom, freedom.
The slavery of women happened when the men were slaves of kings.
EMERSON, Miscellanies: Women.

Freedom and slavery! the one is the name of virtue, and the other of vice, and both are acts of the will.
EPICTETUS, Fragments. No. 8.

10 Slaves bought with a price do not put up with unjust treatment from their masters; will you,

Roman citizens born to power, endure slavery with patience?

GAIUS MEMMIUS. (SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. xxxi, sec. 11.)

11
Corrupted freemen are the worst of slaves.
DAVID GARRICK, The Gamblers: Prologue.

12
Nothing in the world is lawless except a slave.
J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

13
He loves his bonds, who, when the first are broke,
Submits his neck unto a second yoke.
ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 42.

14
Whatever day
Makes man a slave, takes half his worth away.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 392. (Pope, tr.)

15
Men! whose boast it is that ye
Come of fathers brave and free,
If there breathe on earth a slave,
Are ye truly free and brave?
J. R. LOWELL, Stanzas on Freedom.

They are slaves who fear to speak
For the fallen and the weak; . . .
They are slaves who dare not be
In the right with two or three.
J. R. LOWELL, Stanzas on Freedom.

16
It is useless, believe me, to be the slave of a slave, even though he be a friend: let him be free who shall wish to be my master.
(Non bene, crede mihi, servo servitur amico:
Sit liber, dominus qui volet esse meus.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ii, epig. 32, l. 7.

17
Better the devil's than a woman's slave.
MASSINGER, Parliament of Love. Act ii, sc. 2.

18 Retain a free man's mind though slave, and slave thou shalt not be. (Ἐλευθέριος δούλευε δούλος οὐκ ἔσει.)

MENANDER [?], Fragments. Frag. 857.

Man's mind and not his master makes him slave.
R. U. JOHNSON, To the Spirit of Byron.

They set the slave free, striking off his chains. . .
Then he was as much of a slave as ever. . . .
His slavery was not in his chains,
But in himself . . .
They can only set free men free . . .
And there is no need of that:
Free men set themselves free.
JAMES OPPENHEIM, The Slave.

The blow that liberates the slave
But sets the master free.
JAMES JEFFREY ROCHE, Gettysburg.
See also under MASTER.

19
He gave us only over beast, fish, fowl,
Dominion absolute; that right we hold
By His donation; but man over men
He made not lord, such title to himself

Reserving, human left from human free.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 67.

1 And ne'er shall the sons of Columbia be slaves,
While the earth bears a plant, or the sea rolls its waves.

ROBERT TREAT PAINE, Adams and Liberty.
(1798)

2 Slave before slave, and master before master.
(Δούλος πρὸ δούλου, δεσπότης πρὸ δεσπότης.)

PHILEMON, Fragment. (ARISTOTLE, Politics.
Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 22.)

3 None can be free who is a slave to, and ruled by, his passions.

PYTHAGORAS, (STOBÆUS, Florilegium. Pt. xviii,
l. 23.)

Show me a man who is not a slave. One is a slave to lust, another to greed, another to ambition, and all men are slaves to fear. I will name you an ex-consul who is slave to an old hag, a millionaire who is slave to a serving-maid; I will show you youths of the noblest birth in serfdom to pantomime players! No servitude is more disgraceful than that which is self-imposed. (Nulla servitus turpior est quam voluntaria.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. 47, sec. 17.

4 Slavery enchains a few; more enchain themselves to slavery. (Paucos servitus, plures servitutem tenent.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. 22. 11.

The most onerous slavery is to be a slave to oneself.

SENECA, Naturales Questiones: Bk. iii, Præfatio. Sec. 17.

So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 3, l. 101.

5 The foulest death is preferable to the fairest slavery. (Præferendam esse spurcissimam mortem servitute mundissimæ.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. 70, 21.

It is far better to be a mortal freeman than an immortal slave.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Voltaire.

6 As many have been killed by the wrath of slaves as by that of kings. (Non pauciores servorum ira cecidisse quam regnum.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. iv, sec. 8.

7 O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 576.

A base slave,

A hilding for a livery, a squire's cloth,

A pantler, not so eminent.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 127.

8 You have among you many a purchased slave,
Which, like your asses and your dogs and mules,

You use in abject and in slavish parts,
Because you bought them.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 90.

The distinguishing sign of slavery is to have a price, and to be bought for it.

RUSKIN, Crown of Wild Olive: War.

9 Disguise thyself as thou wilt, still, Slavery!
said I,—still thou art a bitter draught!

LAURENCE STERNE, Sentimental Journey: The Passport: The Hotel at Paris.

10 The thrall in person may be free in soul.

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 162.

11 O men, made for slavery! (O homines, ad servitutem paratos!)

TIBERTIUS. (TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 65.)

12 Slavery is as ancient as war, and war as human nature.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Slaves.

II—Slavery in England

13 The meanest Briton scorns the highest slave.
ADDISON, The Campaign, l. 300.

14 It could not, in the opinion of His Majesty's Government, be classified as slavery in the extreme acceptance of the word without some risk of terminological inexactitude.

WINSTON CHURCHILL, Speech, House of Commons, 22 Feb., 1906. Referring to Chinese labor in South Africa.

15 Slaves cannot breathe in England; if their lungs

Receive our air, that moment they are free;
They touch our country, and their shackles fall.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 40.

I speak in the spirit of the British law, which makes liberty commensurate with and inseparable from British soil; which proclaims even to the stranger and sojourner, the moment he sets his foot upon British earth, that the ground on which he treads is holy and consecrated by the genius of universal emancipation.

JOHN PHILPOT CURRAN, British Law.

16 A soil whose air is deemed too pure for slaves to breathe in.

FRANCIS HARGRAVE, *Argument in Somerset
Habeas Corpus Case*, 14 May, 1772. James Somerset was a negro slave from Jamaica who accompanied his master to England, and claimed his freedom. The decision upheld the argument of Hargrave, Somerset's counsel, that slaves could not exist in England.

Every man who comes to England is entitled to the protection of the English law, whatever oppression he may heretofore have suffered, and whatever may be the colour of his skin, whether it is black, or whether it is white. (Quamvis ille niger, quamvis tu candidus.)

WILLIAM MURRAY, EARL OF MANSFIELD, Decision, in Somerset Habeas Corpus Case, May, 1772. (State Trials. Vol. xx, p. 1.)

Lord Mansfield first established the grand doctrine that the air of England is too pure to be breathed by a slave.

LORD JOHN CAMPBELL, Lives of the Lord Chancellors. Vol. ii, p. 418.

Foreign slaves as soon as they come within the limits of France are free. (Servi peregrini, ut primum Galliæ fines penetraverunt, eodem momento liberi sunt.)

BODINUS, a French jurist of the 17th century. (Works. Bk. i, ch. 4.)

1 Am I not a man and brother?

JOSIAH WEDGWOOD, Motto, on medallion designed by Wedgwood, 1787, representing a negro in chains, with one knee on the ground and both hands raised to heaven. Adopted as the seal of the Anti-Slavery Society of London.

2 O true yoke-fellow of Time,
Duty's intrepid liegeman, see, the palm
Is won, and by all Nations shall be worn!
The blood-stained Writing is for ever torn;
And thou henceforth wilt have a good man's calm,

A great man's happiness; thy zeal shall find
Repose at length, firm friend of human kind!

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. ii, No. 3. To Thomas Clarkson, on the passing of the bill for abolition of the slave trade, March, 1807.

A Briton, even in love, should be

A subject, not a slave!

WORDSWORTH, Poems Founded on the Affections. No. 10, l. 19.

III—Slavery in America

3 If those laws of the southern states by virtue of which slavery exists there and is what it is, are not wrong, nothing is wrong.

LEONARD BACON, Slavery Discussed: Preface. (1846)

If slavery is not wrong, nothing is wrong.

LINCOLN, Letter to A. G. Hodges, 4 April, 1864.

4 God has put into every white man's hand a whip to flog the black.

CARLYLE, Letter to Emerson, 1848.

5 There shall be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude in the said territory.

NATHAN DANE, Article, added to the Ordinance for the Government of the Northwest Territory, 1787. (Indiana Hist. Soc. Pub. No. 1, p. 69.)

No more slave States and no more slave territory.

SALMON P. CHASE, Platform Resolutions, adopted by the Free-Soil National Convention, 9 Aug., 1848.

6 I do not see how a barbarous community and a civilized community can constitute a state. I think we must get rid of slavery or we must get rid of freedom.

EMERSON, The Assault upon Mr. Sumner's Speech, 26 May, 1856.

"A house divided against itself cannot stand." I believe this government cannot endure permanently half-slave and half-free.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, 17 June, 1858. (STODDARD, Life of Lincoln.)

Where Slavery is, there Liberty cannot be; and where Liberty is, there Slavery cannot be.

CHARLES SUMNER, Slavery and the Rebellion. Speech before the N. Y. Young Men's Republican Union, 5 Nov., 1864.

Either be wholly slaves, or wholly free.

DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. ii, l. 285.

7 Resolved: That the compact which exists between the North and the South is a covenant with death and an agreement with hell, involving both parties in atrocious criminality, and should be immediately annulled.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON, Resolution, adopted by the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society, 27 Jan., 1843.

8 In all social systems there must be a class to do the mean duties. . . . It constitutes the very mudsills of society. . . . Fortunately for the South, she found a race adapted to that purpose. . . . We use them for that purpose and call them slaves.

JAMES H. HAMMOND, Speech, U. S. Senate, March, 1858.

9 Whitee—as well as blackee—man-cipation.

THOMAS HOOD, The Monkey Martyr.

10 In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,

With a glory in His bosom that transfigures you and me:

As He died to make men holy, let us die to make men free,

While God is marching on.

JULIA WARD HOWE, Battle-Hymn of the Republic.

11 I intend no modification of my oft-expressed wish that all men everywhere could be free.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter to Horace Greeley, 22 Aug., 1862. (RAYMOND, History of Lincoln's Administration.)

In giving freedom to the slave we assure freedom to the free,—honorable alike in what we give and what we preserve.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Second Annual Message to Congress, 1 Dec., 1862.

It is my last card, and I will play it and may win the trick.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, referring to the Emancipation Proclamation. (ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Diary, Sharon Springs, N. Y., 31 July, 1863.) Judge Edwards Pierrepont described to Winthrop a visit paid by him to the President on the Sunday preceding the issuing of the Proclamation, during the course of which he alleged that Lincoln made the remark as quoted.

Whenever I hear anyone arguing for slavery, I feel a strong impulse to see it tried on him personally.

LINCOLN, Address, 17 March, 1865.

Out from the land of bondage 'tis decreed our slaves shall go,
And signs to us are offered as erst to Pharaoh;
If we are blind, their exodus, like Israel's of yore,
Through a Red Sea is doomed to be, whose surges are of gore.

J. R. LOWELL, On the Capture of Certain Fugitive Slaves Near Washington. (1850)

But libbaty's a kind o' thing
Thet don't agree with niggers.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 6.

2
Slavery is in flagrant violation of the institutions of America—direct government—over all the people, by all the people, for all the people.

THEODORE PARKER, Sermon, Music Hall, Boston, 4 July, 1858. See also under DEMOCRACY.

No slave is here:—our unchained feet
Walk freely as the waves that beat
Our coast.

JAMES GATES PERCIVAL, New England.

4
An irrepressible struggle between opposing and enduring forces.

W. H. SEWARD, Speech, at Rochester, N. Y., 25 Oct., 1858, referring to slavery.

5
This is a world of compensations, and he who would be no slave must consent to have no slave. Those who deny freedom to others deserve it not for themselves, and, under a just God, they cannot long retain it.

CHARLES SUMNER, Letter, 6 April, 1859, declining to attend festival in honor of anniversary of Jefferson's birthday. Has been wrongly attributed to Abraham Lincoln, who probably quoted it.

By the Law of Slavery, man, created in the image of God, is divested of the human character, and declared to be a mere chattel.

CHARLES SUMNER, The Anti-Slavery Enterprise. Address at New York, 9 May, 1859.

6
We preach Democracy in vain while Tory and Conservative can point to the other side of the Atlantic and say: "There are nineteen millions of the human race free absolutely, governing themselves—the government of all, by all, for all; but instead of being a consistent republic, it is one widespread confederacy of free men for the enslavement of a nation of another complexion."

GEORGE THOMPSON, Speech, House of Commons, 1851.

7
Under a government which imprisons any unjustly, the true place for a just man is also a prison, . . . the only house in a slave State in which a free man can abide with honor.

H. D. THOREAU, The Duty of Civil Disobedience.

8
Mister Ward, don't yur blud bile at the thawt that three million and a half of your culled brethren air a clanking their chains in the South?—Sez I, not a bile! Let 'em clank!

ARTEMUS WARD, His Book: Oberlin.

9
I never mean, unless some particular circumstances should compel me to do it, to possess another slave by purchase, it being among my first wishes to see some plan adopted by which slavery in this country may be abolished by law.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Farewell Address, 19 Sept., 1796.

10
That execrable sum of all villainies commonly called the slave-trade.

JOHN WESLEY, Journal, 12 Feb., 1772.

Perjury only filches your neighbor's rights. Man-stealing takes rights and neighbor too.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Progress. Address delivered at Boston, 17 Feb., 1861.

11
Our fellow-countrymen in chains!
Slaves, in a land of light and law!
Slaves, crouching on the very plains
Where rolled the storm of Freedom's war! . . .

What! mothers from their children riven!
What! God's own image bought and sold!
Americans to market driven,
And bartered as the brute for gold!
WHITTIER, Expostulation, l. 1. (1842)

SLEEP

I—Sleep: Apothegms

12

What probing deep
Has ever solved the mystery of sleep?

T. B. ALDRICH, Human Ignorance.

The mystery Of folded sleep.

TENNYSON, A Dream of Fair Women, l. 262.

1 We sleep, but the loom of life never stops and the pattern which was weaving when the sun went down is weaving when it comes up to-morrow.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts, p. 12.

2 Strange state of being! (for 'tis still to be) Senseless to feel, and with seal'd eyes to see.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 30.

For sleep is awful.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 143.

Into dreadful slumber lull'd.

TENNYSON, Eleánore, l. 30.

3 Our life is two-fold: Sleep hath its own world, A boundary between the things misnamed Death and existence: Sleep hath its own world,

And a wide realm of wild reality.

BYRON, The Dream, l. 1.

No sleep till morn when youth and pleasure meet.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 22.

4 While we are asleep, we are all equal.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.

5 I shall sleep like a top.
SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, The Rivals. Act iii. (1668)

Juan slept like a top, or like the dead.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 134.

6 He is so wary that he sleeps like a hare, with his ears open.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1947.

7 You counsel me to take counsel of my pillow.
GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 21. (1573)

8 Perhaps no man shall ever know whether it is better to wear nightcaps or not.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life.)

9 Sleep such as makes the darkness brief.

(Somnus qui faciat breves tenebras.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 47, l. 11.

10 Now may our heiress fair on both ears sleep.
(Ἐν ἀμφότερα ὦτα ἡπικληρος ἡ καλὴ μέλλει καθευδῆσιν.)

MENANDER, Plocium. Frag. 402.

You can sleep on both ears: i.e., in security.
(In aures utramvis otiose ut dormias.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 342. (Act ii, sc. 3.)

Then truly live I like one that sleepeth on both his ears.

JOHN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus. C 4. (1540)

Supine amidst our flowing store,
We slept securely, and we dreamt of more.

DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis, l. 14.

11 O, we're a' noddin', nid, nid, noddin';

O, we're a' noddin' at our house at hame.

CAROLINA NAIRNE, We're a' Noddin'.

12 No one when asleep is good for anything.

PLATO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato. Sec. 39.)

Drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 21.

13 He sleeps well who knows not that he sleeps ill. (Bene dormit, qui non sentit quod male dormiat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 77. FRANCIS

BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 5.

What blessed ignorance equals this,

To sleep—and not to know it?

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansiegg: Her Dream.

14 I never sleep comfortably except when I am at sermon or when I pray to God. (Je ne dors jamais bien à mon aise sinon quand je suis au sermon, ou quand je prie Dieu.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 41.

15 Sleep, riches, and health, to be truly enjoyed, must be interrupted.

RICHTER, Flower, Fruit, and Thorn. Ch. 8.

16 We did sleep day out of countenance.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 181.

He sleeps by day More than the wild-cat.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 47.

17 I would 'twere bed-time, Hal, and all well.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 1, l. 125.

Winding up days with toil and nights with sleep.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 296.

18 I have an exposition of sleep come upon me.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 42.

I let fall the windows of mine eyes.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 116.

19 Whatever moves, or toils, or grieves, hath its appointed sleep.

SHELLEY, Stanzas. April, 1814.

20 I sleep, but my heart waketh.

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, v, 2.

21 I am going to the land of Nod.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

22 Who can wrestle against Sleep?—Yet is that giant very gentleness.

MARTIN FARQUHAR TUPPER, Of Beauty.

23 A little more sleep and a little more slumber.

ISAAC WATTS, The Sluggard.

II—Sleep: Care-Charmer Sleep

24 What means this heaviness that hangs upon me?

This lethargy that creeps through all my senses?

Nature, oppress'd and harrass'd out with care,
Sinks down to rest.

ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 1.

Sweet are the slumbers of the virtuous man.

ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 4.

Heaven trims our lamps while we sleep.

A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Sleep.

Sleep is a sort of innocence and purification. Blessed be He who gave it to the poor sons of men as the sure and faithful companion of life, our daily healer and consoler.

AMEL, Journal, 20 March, 1853.

Silken rest Tie all thy cares up!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Four Plays in One: Sc. 4, Triumph of Love.

Blessings on him that first invented sleep! It covers a man, thoughts and all, like a cloak; it is meat for the hungry, drink for the thirsty, heat for the cold, and cold for the hot. It is the current coin that purchases cheaply all the pleasures of the world, and the balance that sets even king and shepherd, fool and sage.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 68. Quoted by Sterne, Tristram Shandy, iv, 15.

"God bless the man who first invented sleep!"
So Sancho Panza said and so say I;
And bless him, also, that he didn't keep
His great discovery to himself, nor try
To make it,—as the lucky fellow might—
A close monopoly by patent-right.

J. G. SAXE, Early Rising.

So long as I am asleep I have neither fear nor hope, trouble nor glory.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 68.

Sleep is the best cure for waking troubles.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 70.

O sleep! it is a gentle thing,
Beloved from pole to pole!

To Mary Queen the praise be given!
She sent the gentle sleep from Heaven
That slid into my soul.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. v.

Her gentle limbs did she undress,
And lay down in her loveliness.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Christabel. Pt. i, l. 237.

For she belike hath drunken deep
Of all the blessedness of sleep!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Christabel. Pt. ii, l. 375.

I met at eve the Prince of Sleep,
His was a still and lovely face,
He wandered through a valley steep.
Lovely in a lonely place.

WALTER DE LA MARE, I Met at Eve.

Sleep, Silence' child, sweet father of soft rest,

Prince, whose approach peace to all mortals brings,

Indifferent host to shepherds and to kings,
Sole comforter of minds with grief oppressed.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Sonnets. No. 9.

Come, Sleep, and with thy sweet deceiving
Lock me in delight awhile.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Woman-Hater.

O sleep! in pity thou art made
A double boon to such as we;
Beneath closed lids and folds of deepest shade,

We think we see.

NATHANIEL FROTHINGHAM, The Sight of the Blind.

Oh, lightly, lightly tread!
A holy thing is sleep,

On the worn spirit shed,
And eyes that wake to weep.

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, The Sleeper.

Dream, who loves dreams! forget all grief;
Find in sleep's nothingness relief.

LIONEL JOHNSON, Oxford Nights.

O magic sleep! O comfortable bird,
That broodest o'er the troubled sea of the mind

Till it is hush'd and smooth! O unconfin'd Restraint! imprison'd liberty! great key
To golden palaces, strange minstrelsy,
Fountains grotesque, new trees, bespangled caves,

Echoing grottoes, full of tumbling waves
And moonlight; aye, to all the mazy world
Of silvery enchantment!—who, upfurl'd
Beneath thy drowsy wing a triple hour,
But renovates and lives?

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. i, l. 453.

O soft embalmer of the still midnight,
Shutting, with careful fingers and benign,
Our gloom-pleas'd eyes, embower'd from the light,

Enshaded in forgetfulness divine:

O soothest Sleep!

KEATS, To Sleep.

Bed is the boon for me!

It's well to bake and sweep,
But hear the word of old Lizette:
It's better than all to sleep.

AGNES LEE, Old Lizette on Sleep.

Cool Sleep, thy reeds, in solemn ranks,
That murmur peace to me by midnight's streams,
At dawn I pluck, and dayward pipe my flock of dreams.

PERCY MACKAYE, To Sleep.

1 By the Gate of Sleep we enter the Enchanted Valleys.

WILLIAM SHARP, The Enchanted Valleys.

2 Enfold me in thy mystical embrace,
Thou sovereign gift of God, most sweet, most blest,

O happy Sleep!

ADA LOUISE MARTIN, Sleep.

3 The dove-cote doors of sleep.

ALICE MEYNELL, At Night.

The dewy-feather'd sleep.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 146.

The timely dew of sleep.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 614.

4 Sleep, dear Sleep, sweet harlot of the senses,
Delilah of the spirit, you unnerve
The strong man's knees, depose his laughing brain,
And make him a mere mass of steady breathing.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Sleep.

5 Blessed are the sleepy, for they shall soon drop off.

NIETZSCHE, Thus Spake Zarathustra: Of the Chairs of Virtue.

6 Take me upon thy breast,
O river of rest.

Draw me down to thy side,
Slow-moving tide.

GRACE FALLOW NORTON, O Sleep.

7 O Sleep, thou rest of all things, Sleep, gentlest of the gods, peace of the soul, who puttest care to flight. (Somne, quies rerum, placidissime, Somne, deorum, Pax animi, quem cura fugit.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xi, l. 623.

8 He that sleeps feels not the tooth-ache.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 4, l. 177.

9 Methought I heard a voice cry, "Sleep no more!

Macbeth does murder sleep," the innocent sleep,

Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care,
The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,

Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course,
Chief nourisher in life's feast.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 35.

The season of all natures, sleep.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 141.

Sleep, that sometimes shuts up sorrow's eye,
Steal me awhile from mine own company.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 435.

10 Sleep, the fresh dew of languid love, the rain
Whose drops quench kisses till they burn again.

SHELLEY, Epipsychidion, l. 558.

11 Come, Sleep! O Sleep, the certain knot of peace,

The baiting-place of wit, the balm of woe,
The poor man's wealth, the prisoner's release,
Th' indifferent judge between the high and low!

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet 39.

12

Gentle sleep!

Scatter thy drowsiest poppies from above;
And in new dreams not soon to vanish, bless
My senses with the sight of her I love.

HORACE SMITH, Poppies and Sleep.

Sleep's the only medicine that gives ease.
(Ἄλλ' ἔαν χρεὼν ἔκηνον εὐδεν.)

SOPHOCLES, Philoctetes, l. 768.

Sleep is better than medicine.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

14

Thou hast been call'd, O Sleep! the friend of Woe,

But 'tis the happy who have call'd thee so.

SOUTHEY, The Curse of Kehama. Pt. xv, st. 12.

15

I am tired of tears and laughter,

And men that laugh and weep

Of what may come hereafter

For men that sow to reap:

I am weary of days and hours,

Blown buds of barren flowers,

Desires and dreams and powers,

And everything but sleep.

SWINBURNE, The Garden of Proserpine. St. 2.

Thou art more than the day or the morrow, the seasons that laugh or that weep;

For these give joy and sorrow; but thou, Proserpina, sleep.

Sweet is the treading of wine, and sweet the feet of the dove;

But a goodlier gift is thine than foam of the grapes or love.

SWINBURNE, Hymn to Proserpine, l. 3.

16

The end is come of pleasant places,

The end of tender words and faces,

The end of all, the poppied sleep.

SWINBURNE, Ilicet. St. 1.

All gifts but one the jealous God may keep

From our soul's longing, one he cannot—sleep.

This, though he grudge all other grace to prayer,

This grace his closed hand cannot choose but spare.

This, though his ear be sealed to all that live,
Be it lightly given or lothly, God must give.

SWINBURNE, Tristram of Lyonesse: Prelude, l. 205.

Whate'er thy joys, they vanish with the day:
Whate'er thy griefs, in sleep they fade
away, . . .

Sleep, mournful heart, and let the past be past:

Sleep, happy soul, all life will sleep at last.

TENNYSON, The Foresters: Act i, Song.

2
To tired limbs and over-busy thoughts,
Inviting sleep and soft forgetfulness.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 1323.

Come, blessed barrier between day and day,
Dear mother of fresh thoughts and joyous
health!

WORDSWORTH, To Sleep.

3
Tired Nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep!
He, like the world, his ready visit pays
Where fortune smiles; the wretched he forsakes;

Swift on his downy pinion flies from woe,
And lights on lids unsullied with a tear.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 1.

III—Sleep: Wishes

4
Still believe that ever round you
Spirits float who watch and wait;
Nor forget the twain who found you
Sleeping nigh the Golden Gate.

BESANT AND RICE, The Case of Mr. Lucraft and Other Tales, p. 92.

5
Visit her, gentle Sleep! with wings of healing,
And may this storm be but a mountain-birth,
May all the stars hang bright above her dwell-
ing,

Silent as though they watched the sleeping Earth!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Dejection, l. 128.

6
Softly, O midnight hours!
Move softly o'er the bowers
Where lies in happy sleep a girl so fair:
For ye have power, men say,
Our hearts in sleep to sway

And cage cold fancies in a moonlight snare.

AUBREY DE VERE, Softly, O Midnight Hours.

7
Sleep sweet within this quiet room,
O thou! who'er thou art,
And let no mournful yesterday
Disturb thy quiet heart. . . .

Forget thyself and all the world,
Put out each feverish light.

The stars are watching overhead.

Sleep sweet! Good night! Good night!

ELLEN HUNTINGTON GATES, Sweet Sleep. Originally written by Mrs. Gates as a motto for a silken quilt made by a friend, the first line reading, "Sleep sweet beneath this silken quilt."

8
Breathe thy balm upon the lonely,
Gentle Sleep!

As the twilight breezes bless
With sweet scents the wilderness,
Ah, let warm white dove-wings only
Round them sweep!

LUCY LARCOM, Sleep Song.

9
Dreams of the summer night!

Tell her, her lover keeps

Watch! while in slumbers light

She sleeps! My lady sleeps!

LONGFELLOW, Spanish Student. Act i, sc. 3.

10
To all, to each, a fair good-night,

And pleasing dreams, and slumbers light!

WALTER SCOTT, Marmion: L'Envoy.

Good night, good night! As sweet repose and rest

Come to thy heart, as that within my breast!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 123.

11
On your eyelids crown the god of sleep,
Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness:
Making such difference 'twixt wake and sleep,
As is the difference betwixt day and night,
The hour before the heavenly-harness'd team
Begins his golden progress in the east.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 217.

Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 230.

Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!
Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 187.

Sleep rock thy brain.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 237.

12
Good night, good sleep, good rest from sorrow,
To these that shall not have good morrow;

The gods be gentle to all these.

SWINBURNE, Ilicet. St. 8.

13
Slumbers sweet thy mercy send us,
Holy dreams and hopes attend us,
This livelong night.

RICHARD WHATELY, Evening Hymn.

IV—Sleep: Prayers and Lullabies

14
Sleep an' let me to my wark—
A' thae claes to airn—

Jenny wi' the airn teeth,

Come an' tak' the bairn!

ALEXANDER ANDERSON, Jenny Wi' the Airn Teeth.

15
When the sheep are in the fauld, and a' the
kye at hame,

And all the weary world to sleep are gane.

LADY ANNE BARNARD, Auld Robin Gray.

Sleep, sleep, beauty bright,
Dreaming in the joys of night;
Sleep, sleep; in thy sleep
Little sorrows sit and weep.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Cradle Song.

2
Fly away, Kentucky Babe, fly away to rest,
Lay yo' kinky, woolly head on yo' mammy's
breast,—

Close yo' eyes in sleep.

RICHARD HENRY BUCK, Kentucky Babe.

3
Golden slumbers kiss your eyes,
Smiles awake you when you rise.
Sleep, pretty wantons, do not cry,
And I will sing a lullaby.
Rock them, rock them, lullaby.

THOMAS DEKKER, Patient Grissil: Lullaby.

If thou wilt close thy drowsy eyes,
My mulberry one, my golden son,
The rose shall sing thee lullabies,
My pretty cosset lambkin!
EUGENE FIELD, Armenian Lullaby.

5
Wynken, Blynken, and Nod one night
Sailed off in a wooden shoe—
Sailed on a river of crystal light
Into a sea of dew.

EUGENE FIELD, Wynken, Blynken, and Nod.

6
I lay me down to sleep with little care
Whether my waking find me here or there.
MARY WOOLSEY HOWLAND, Rest.

7
Like infant's slumbers, pure and light.
JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Evening.

Thou driftest gently down the tides of sleep.
LONGFELLOW, To a Child, l. 115.

8
Sleep, baby, sleep!
Thy father's watching the sheep,
Thy mother's shaking the dreamland tree,
And down drops a little dream for thee.

Sleep, baby, sleep!

ELIZABETH PRENTISS, Cradle Song.

I will both lay me down in peace, and sleep:
for thou, Lord, only makest me dwell in safety.
Old Testament: Psalms, iv, 8.

10
O, hush thee, my babe, thy sire was a knight,
Thy mother a lady both lovely and bright;
The woods and the glens, from the towers which we see,
They all are belonging, dear babe, to thee.
SCOTT, Lullaby of an Infant Chief.

11
Hush, my dear, lie still and slumber!
Holy angels guard thy bed!
Heavenly blessings without number
Gently falling on thy head.
ISAAC WATTS, A Cradle Hymn.

12
Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take.

UNKNOWN, Prayer at Lying Down. (New England Primer.) A few editions give the reading, "I pray, Thee, Lord," but the version given above is the one generally used.

Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep;
When in the morning light I wake,
Lead Thou my feet, that I may take
The path of love for Thy dear sake.

UNKNOWN, Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep: Revised Version.

I lay me down in peace and sleep,
For thou, dear Lord, my soul will keep.
And as I rest, this prayer I make:
To do thy will when I awake.

GRENVILLE KLEISER, Evening Prayer.

N.R.A. me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my codes I'll keep;
If I should bust before I wake,
A.F.O.L. my plant will take.

UNKNOWN, Now I Lay Me: New Deal Version. For the benefit of future generations, it may be worth explaining that in the summer of 1933, a government agency known as the National Recovery Administration, endeavored to regulate American industry by a series of codes, establishing minimum rates of pay and shortening working hours; and the American Federation of Labor sought to organize the country's workers in order to enforce them. The whole movement, of which the N.R.A. was only a part, was known as the "New Deal."

13
Hush-a-bye, baby, on the tree-top,
When the wind blows, the cradle will rock;
When the bough breaks, the cradle will fall,
And down will come baby, cradle, and all.

UNKNOWN. Old Nursery Rhyme. The Book Lover (Feb., 1904) says it was the first poem produced on American soil, by a youth who came over in the Mayflower. It has also been attributed to Charles Blake.

V—Sleep of Little and Great

14
Art thou poor, yet hast thou golden slumbers?
O sweet content!

THOMAS DEKKER, Patient Grissil: Song.

15
The sleep of a labouring man is sweet.
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, v, 12.

Sleep is sweet to the labouring man.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology.

Weariness

Can snore upon the flint, when resty sloth
Finds the down pillow hard.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 33.

<sup>1</sup> Soft sleep does not disdain the humble cottage of the peasant, nor the shady bank, nor the valley by zephyrs fanned. (Somnus agrestium Lenis vivorum non humilis domos Fastidit umbrosamque ripam, Non Zephyris agitata Tempe.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 1, l. 21.

<sup>2</sup> The lowliest cot will give thee peaceful sleep, While Gaius tosses on his bed of down.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, epig. 92, l. 3.

Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee, . . .
Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great,
Under the canopies of costly state,
And lull'd with sound of sweetest melody?
O thou dull god, why liest thou with the vile
In loathsome beds, and leavest the kingly couch
A watch-case or a common 'larum-bell?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 9.

Canst thou, O partial sleep, give thy repose
To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude,
And in the calmest and most stillest night,
With all appliances and means to boot,
Deny it to a king? Then happy low, lie down!
Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 26.

Yet not so sound and half so deeply sweet
As he whose brow with homely biggen bound
Snores out the watch of night.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 26.

VI—Sleep and Health

<sup>3</sup> It is recorded of Methusalem, who, being the longest liver, may be supposed to have best preserved his health, that he slept always in the open air; for, when he had lived five hundred years, an angel said to him, "Arise, Methusalem, and build thee an house, for thou shalt live yet five hundred years longer." But Methusalem answered and said, "If I am to live but five hundred years longer, it is not worth while to build me an house—I will sleep in the air, as I have been used to do."

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to Miss —, on the art of procuring pleasant dreams. The story is one of Franklin's pleasant inventions.

<sup>4</sup> One hour's sleep before midnight is worth three afterwards.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

<sup>5</sup> It does not become a man of counsel to sleep the whole night through. (Οὐ χρὴ παννύχτιον εὐδεν βουλευφόρον ἄνδρα.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 24.

<sup>6</sup> I never take a nap after dinner but when I have had a bad night, and then the nap takes me.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

For his sleep

Was aery light, from pure digestion bred.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 3.

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 697. (Act iii, sc. 2.)

For much sleep is not medicinal in middle of the day.

JOHN RUSSELL, Boke of Nature, l. 952.

Let your midday sleep be short or none at all. (Sit brevis aut nullus tibi somnus meridianus.)

UNKNOWN, Maxim, School of Salerno.

<sup>9</sup> Five hours sleep a traveller, seven a scholar, eight a merchant, and eleven every knave.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, 114. (1666)

Six hours for a man, seven for a woman, and eight for a fool. The precept seems to be based on the Latin lines: Sex horis dormire sat est junevique senique, Septem vix pigro, nulli concedimus octo.

Collectio Salernitana, v, 7. (Notes and Queries, xi, v, 52.)

<sup>10</sup> When it is time to turn over, it is time to turn out. (Or exactly, "When one begins to turn in bed, it is time to get up.")

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Maxims and Table-Talk.

VII—Sleep: Brother of Death

See also Death: The Last Sleep

<sup>11</sup> Since the brother of death daily haunts us with dying mementoes.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. v, sec. 9.

And Sleep, Death's brother, yet a friend to life,
Gave wearied Nature a restorative.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Repartees Between Cat and Puss.

<sup>12</sup> Care-charmer Sleep, son of the sable Night,
Brother to Death, in silent darkness born;
Relieve my languish, and restore the light.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Sonnets to Delia. No. xlv.

Care-charming Sleep, thou easer of all woes,
Brother to Death . . . thou son of Night.

JOHN FLETCHER, Valentinian. Act v, sc. 2.

HESIOD, Theogony, l. 756.

There she met Sleep, the brother of Death. ("Ἐνθ' ἴππῳ ξύμβλητο, κασίγνητῳ Θανάτῳ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiv, l. 231.

Then Sleep and Death, two twins of winged race,
Of matchless swiftness, but of silent pace.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvi, l. 831. (Pope, tr.)

Death's own brother, Sleep. (Consanguineus Leti Sopor.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 278.

1 Heavy Sleep, the Cousin of Death.

THOMAS SACKVILLE, Sleep.

2 How wonderful is Death,
Death and his brother Sleep!

One, pale as yonder waning moon
With lips of lurid blue;

The other, rosy as the morn
When throned on ocean's wave
It blushes o'er the world:

Yet both so passing wonderful!

SHELLEY, Queen Mab, l. 1. Queen Mab was written in 1813. Two years later, Shelley wrote another poem, The Daemon of the World, which began with the same lines.

3 When in the down I sink my head,
Sleep, Death's twin-brother, times my breath.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxviii.

Sleep, kinsman thou to death and trance
And madness, thou hast forged at last
A night-long present of the past.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxxi.

VIII—Sleep: Death's Counterfeit

4 Sleep is like death, and after sleep

The world seems new begun;
White thoughts stand luminous and firm,
Like statues in the sun;

Refreshed from supersensuous founts,
The soul to clearer vision mounts.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Sleep.

5 Death without dying—living, but not Life.

SIR EDWIN ARNOLD, The Light of the World.
Bk. iv, l. 164.

6 We term sleep a death . . . by which we may be literally said to die daily; in fine, so like death, I dare not trust it without my prayers.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 12.

Sleep is a death: O make me try,
By sleeping, what it is to die;
And as gently lay my head
On my grave, as now my bed.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 12.

7 Sleep falls like snowflakes, and it seems
'Tis always drifting into dreams;
But Death falls like the snow at sea,
And drifts into Eternity.

FRANCIS CARLIN, Sleep.

8 Sleep, I have heard say, has only one fault, that it is like death; for between a sleeping man and a dead man there is very little difference.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 68.

9 Sleep's but a short death; death's but a longer
sleep.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Apollyonists. Canto i, st. 6.

10 There will be sleeping enough in the grave.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758. A parody of a popular saying, "Thou shalt sorrow enough in hell," derived from a tale
in the Gesta Romanorum.

11 O fool, what else is sleep but the image of chill death? (Stulte, quid est somnus, gelidæ nisi mortis imago?)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. ix, l. 41.

12 Lived she?—in sooth 't were hard to tell,
Sleep counterfeited Death so well.

W. M. PRAED, The Bridal of Belmont, l. 238.

13 O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her!
And be her sense but as a monument.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 31.

14 Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit,

And look on death itself!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 81.

O'er their brows death-counterfeiting sleep
With leaden legs and batty wings doth creep.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 364.

Thy eyes' windows fall,
Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;
Each part, deprived of supple government,
Shall, stiff and stark and cold, appear like death.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc. 1,
l. 100.

15 Sleep, death's ally.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, St. Peter's Complaint.

16 For next to Death is Sleep to be compared:
Therefore his house is unto his annex.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto vii, st. 25.

17 Deep rest and sweet, most like indeed to death's own quietness. (Dulcis et alta quies, placidæque simillima morti.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 522.

18 Come, gentle sleep! attend thy votary's prayer,
And, though death's image, to my couch repair;

How sweet, though lifeless, yet with life to lie,
And, without dying, O how sweet to die!

THOMAS WARTON, Latin Epigram on Sleep.
(John Wolcot, tr.)

19 Each night we die,
Each morn are born anew: each day, a life!
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 286.

IX—Sleep: Insomnia

1 Slumber everywhere! . . .
But I in chilling twilight stand and wait
At the portcullis of thy castle gate,
Longing to see the charmed door of dreams
Turn on its noiseless hinges, delicate Sleep!

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Invocation to Sleep.

2 Come to me now! O, come! benignant sleep!
And fold me up, as evening doth a flower,
From my vain self, and vain things which have power

Upon my soul to make me smile or weep.
And when thou comest, oh, like Death be deep.

PATRICK PROCTOR ALEXANDER, Sleep.

3 Sleep I can get nane
For thinking on my dearie.
BURNS, Simmer's a Pleasant Time.

4 In vain from side to side he throws
His form, in courtship of repose.
BYRON, The Siege of Corinth. St. 13.

My slumbers, if I slumber, are not sleep,
But a continuance of enduring thought.
BYRON, Manfred. Act i, sc. 1.

Sleep, Which will not be commanded.
BYRON, Marino Faliero. Act iv, sc. 1.

5 And I with sobs did pray—
O let me be awake, my God!
Or let me sleep alway.
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. vi.

6 Sister Simplicitie!
Sing, sing a song to me,—
Sing me to sleep!
Some legend low and long,
Slow as the summer song
Of the dull Deep.

SIDNEY DOBELL, A Sleep Song.

7 Those only can sleep who do not care to sleep.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

Still last to come where thou art wanted most.
WORDSWORTH, To Sleep.

8 Insomnia never comes to a man who has to get up at exactly six o'clock. Insomnia troubles only those who can sleep any time.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine. Vol. xxv, p. 78.

9 But sleep stole on me unawares,
Even on me at last;
Though drop by drop the minutes faint,
Like hours at midnight passed.
HARRIET ELEANOR KING, The First of June.

10 Over the edge of the purple down,
Where the single lamplight gleams,
Know ye the road to the Merciful Town

That is hard by the Sea of Dreams—
Where the poor lay their wrongs away,
And the sick may forget to weep?
But we—pity us! Oh, pity us!
We wakeful; ah, pity us!—
We must go back with Policeman Day—
Back from the City of Sleep!
RUDYARD KIPLING, The City of Sleep. St. 1.

For I am weary, and am overwrought
With too much toil, with too much care distraught,
And with the iron crown of anguish crowned.
Lay thy soft hand upon my brow and cheek,
O peaceful Sleep!
LONGFELLOW, Sleep.

11 I have forgotten how to sigh—
Remembered how to sleep.
DOROTHY PARKER, The Danger of Writing Defiant Verse.

12 I will not give sleep to mine eyes, or slumber to mine eyelids.
Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxii, 4; Proverbs, vi, 4.

13 Sleep came at length, but with a train
Of feelings true and fancies vain,
Mingling, in wild disorder cast,
The expected future with the past.
SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto i, st. 2.

14 I have not slept one wink.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 103.

And for my soul I cannot sleep a wink.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii,
Sat. 1, l. 12.

15 I'll wake mine eye-balls blind first.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 104.

16 O sleep, O gentle sleep,
Nature's soft nurse, how have I frightened thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids
down

And steep my senses in forgetfulness?
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 5.

Who, with a body fill'd and vacant mind,
Gets him to rest, cramm'd with distressful bread.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 286.

17 At their chamber-door I'll beat the drum
Till it cry sleep to death.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 119.

18 Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks; that to provoke in him,
Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 12.

19 Sleep shall neither night nor day
Hang upon his pent-house lid.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 19.

Not poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'dst yesterday.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 330.

Give me to drink mandragora.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i, sc. 5, l. 4.

1
O, I have pass'd a miserable night,
So full of ugly sights, of ghastly dreams,
That, as I am a Christian faithful man,
I would not spend another such a night,
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 2.

All the wild trash of sleep, without the rest.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 70.

2
And Sleep shall obey me,
And visit thee never,
And the Curse shall be on thee
For ever and ever.

SOUTHEY, The Curse of Kehama. Pt. ii, st. 14.

3
Sleep vanishes before the house of care.
(Somnus sollicitas deficit ante domus.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 4, l. 20. See also under CARE.

4
A flock of sheep that leisurely pass by,
One after one; the sound of rain, and bees
Murmuring; the fall of rivers, winds and seas,
Smooth fields, white sheets of water, and pure
sky;

I have thought of all by turns and yet do lie
Sleepless! . . .
Come, blessed barrier between day and day,
Dear mother of fresh thoughts and joyous
health!

WORDSWORTH, To Sleep.

5
The wakey nights.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, Complaint upon Love.

SLEEVELESS

6
To make . . . a sleeveless errand.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 7. (1546)

A sleeveless errand.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 4, l. 9. (1601)

To whose house I went upon a sleeveless errand.

UNKNOWN, Jacks of Dover, 4. (1604)

7
Having, under a Sleeveless Pretence, been deny'd a Combat.

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book, ii, 782. (1726)

Neither feign for thyself any sleeveless excuse.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 114. (1579)

8
He . . . had no honourable mode of avoiding the sleeveless quarrel fixed on him.

SCOTT, Familiar Letters, ii, 111. (1821)

9
And measureth his goodness, not by sleeveless words.

THOMAS USK, Testament of Love. (c. 1387)

Sleeveless talk.

UNKNOWN, Jacob's Well, 181. (c. 1440)

10
Now this was the guise in which the messengers journeyed: one sleeve was on the cap of each of them in front, as a sign that they were messengers, in order that through what hostile land soever they might pass, no harm might be done them.

UNKNOWN, Mabinogion: The Dream of Mayen Wledig. (Lady Guest, tr.)

Without the sleeve they might never be able to perform their errand.

WARWICK BOND, Note, to his edition of Lyly's Works, iii, 503.

SMILE

I—Smile: Apothegms

11
There is a smile of Love,
And there is a smile of Deceit,
And there is a smile of smiles

In which these two smiles meet.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Smile and Frown.

12
Her bright smile haunts me still.

J. E. CARPENTER. Title of popular song of 1880's.

13
What I saw was equal ecstasy:
One universal smile it seemed of all things.
(Cio ch'io vedeva mi sembrava un riso Dell' universo.)

DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xxvii, l. 5.

All Nature wears one universal grin.

FIELDING, Tom Thumb the Great. Act i, sc. 1.

14
In came Mrs. Fezziwig, one vast substantial smile.

DICKENS, A Christmas Carol. Stave 2.

15
His smile is sweetened by his gravity.

GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i.

His wise, rare smile is sweet with certainties.

W. E. HENLEY, In Hospital: The Chief.

16
He smiled a kind of sickly smile and curled up on the floor,
And the subsequent proceedings interested him no more.

BRET HARTE, The Society Upon the Stanislaus.

17
In his heart he smiled a sardonic smile.
(Μεῖλιησε δὲ θυμῷ σαρκάκιον μάλα τοῖον.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xx, l. 301.

Your laugh is of the sardonic kind.

CAIUS GRACCHUS, when his adversaries laughed at his defeat by unfair means when applying for a third tribuneship. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Caius Gracchus.) The sardonic laugh was supposed to be an involuntary distention of the muscles of the mouth occasioned by a bitter plant, Sardonian herba, which came from Sardinia. Hence, γέλως σαρδάκιος, bitter or sardonic laughter, laughter that is forced or unnatural.

1 Make two grins grow where there was only a frown before.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Pig-Pen Pete.

2 Nods, and becks, and wreathèd smiles.
MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 28.

A smile that glow'd
Celestial rosy red, love's proper hue.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 618.

3 Smiles from reason flow
To brute deny'd, and are of love the food.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 239.

4 Smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 210.

5 An thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou
'lt catch cold shortly.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 112.

6 The heaving of my lungs provokes me to ridiculous smiling.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 78.

7 A smile recures the wounding of a frown.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 465.

8 To hear him speak, and sweetly smile,
You were in Paradise the while.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, A Friend's Passion for His Astrophel.

9 The smile that won't come off.
JOSEPH W. STANDISH. Title and refrain of popular song. (1903)

10 And, as when
A stone is flung into some sleeping tarn,
The circle widens till it lip the marge,
Spread the slow smile thro' all her company.
TENNYSON, Pelleas and Ettarre, l. 88.

The slow wise smile.
TENNYSON, The Miller's Daughter, l. 5.

11 Wrinkles should merely indicate where smiles have been.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

12 Yet, if successful, thou wilt be adored—
Lo, like a Cheshire cat our Court will grin!
JOHN WOLCOT, Works. Vol. ii, p. 424.

13 YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 108.
A tender smile, our sorrows' only balm.

II—Smile: Women's Smiles

14 Her smile is as the litten West,
Nigh-while the sun is gone.
THOMAS ASHE, Old Jane.

Her very frowns are fairer far
Than smiles of other maidens are.
HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Song: She Is Not Fair.

15 They smile so when one's right, and when one's wrong
They smile still more.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 164.

16 Give me your smile, the lovelight in your eyes,
Life could not hold a fairer paradise.
LEONARD COOKE, The Sunshine of Your Smile.
Popular song of 1915.

17 But O, her artless smile's mair sweet
Than hinny or than marmalete.
JAMES HOGG, My Love She's But a Lassie Yet.

18 The odor is the rose;
The smile, the woman.
ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON, Her Smile.

19 Smooth flow the waves, the zephyrs gently
play,
Belinda smil'd, and all the world was gay.
POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto ii, l. 51.

When bold Sir Plume had drawn Clarissa down,
Chloe stepp'd in, and kill'd him with a frown;
She smiled to see the doughty hero slain,
But, at her smile, the beau revived again.
POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto v, l. 67.

20 Blest as the immortal gods is he,
The youth who fondly sits by thee,
And hears and sees thee all the while
Softly speak and sweetly smile.
SAPPHO, To —.

(Ille mi par esse deo videtur,
Ille, si fas est, superare divos,
Qui, sedans adversus, identidem te Spectat et audit Dulce ridentem.)
CATULLUS, Odes. No. li, l. 1.

Softly speak and sweetly smile.
ADDISON, Spectator. Vol. iii, No. 229. (Tr. from Boileau.)

21 Heaven hath no mouth, and yet is said to smile
After your style:

No more hath earth, yet that smiles too,
Just as you do.
AURELIAN TOWNSEND, To the Lady May. (c. 1635)

22 I feel in every smile a chain.
JOHN WOLCOT, Pindarica.

23 And she hath smiles to earth unknown;
Smiles, that with motion of their own

Do spread, and sink, and rise.
WORDSWORTH, Louisa. St. 2.

III—Smile: Deceitful Smiles

1 Oh sir, she smiled, no doubt,
Whene'er I passed her; but who passed without

Much the same smile?

ROBERT BROWNING, My Last Duchess.

2 Smile with an intent to do mischief, or cozen him whom he salutes.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

3 But own'd, that smile, if oft observed and
near,

Waned in its mirth, and wither'd to a sneer.

BYRON, Lara. Canto i, st. 17.

4 From thy own smile I snatch'd the snake.

BYRON, Manfred. Act i, sc. 1.

There is a snake in thy smile, my dear,
And bitter poison within thy tear.

SHELLEY, The Cenci: Song. Act v, sc. 4.

5 The smiler with the knife under the cloak.

CHAUCER, The Knight's Tale, l. 1141.

He surest strikes that smiling gives the blow.

SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, The Beau's Duel: Epilogue.

6 But he smiled, as he sat by the table,
With the smile that was childlike and bland.

BRET HARTE, Plain Language from Truthful James.

But his smile it was pensive and childlike.

BRET HARTE, Plain Language from Truthful James.

7 Eternal smiles his emptiness betray,
As shallow streams run dimpling all the way.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 315. See also under WATER.

Egnatius, because he has white teeth, is everlastingly smiling. If people come to the prisoner's bench, when the counsel for the defence is making everyone cry, he smiles: if they are mourning at the funeral of a dear son, when the bereaved mother is weeping for her only boy, he smiles: whatever it is, wherever he is, whatever he is doing, he smiles. It is a disease he has. (Quicquid est, ubicumque, quodcumque agit, renidet. Hunc habet morbum.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode 29, l. 1.

8 One may smile, and smile, and be a villain.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 108.

Why I can smile and murder while I smile.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 182.

There's daggers in men's smiles.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 146.

9 Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort

As if he mock'd himself and scorn'd his spirit,
That could be moved to smile at any thing.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 205.

Of such vinegar aspect
That they'll not show their teeth by way of smile,
Though Nestor swore the jest be laughable.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 1, l. 54.

10 With silent smiles of slow disparagement.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 14.

11 And Milo's lurking marble smile.

WILLIAM WATSON, Termonde.

IV—Smile and Tear

See also Laughter and Tears

12 Smiles form the channel of a future tear.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 97.

And if she met him, though she smiled no more,
She looked a sadness sweeter than her smile.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 72.

Of all tales 'tis the saddest—and more sad,
Because it makes us smile.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 9.

13 The social smile, the sympathetic tear.

THOMAS GRAY, The Alliance of Education and Government, l. 37.

14 Why comes not death to those who mourn?—
He never smiled again!

FELICIA HEMANS, He Never Smiled Again.

'Tis hard to smile when one would weep,
To speak when one would silent be;

To wake when one would wish to sleep,
And wake to agony.

ANNE HUNTER, The Lot of Thousands.

15 A smile is ever the most bright and beautiful with a tear upon it. What is the dawn without the dew? The tear is rendered by the smile precious above the smile itself.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Dante and Gemma Donati.

16 All kin' o' smily round the lips,
An' teary round the lashes.

J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'.

17 As Jupiter

On Juno smiles, when he impregns the clouds
That shed May flowers.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 499.

18 Behold who ever wept, and in his tears
Was happier far than others in their smiles.

PETRARCH, The Triumph of Eternity, l. 95.

19 With a smile on her lips and a tear in her eye.

SCOTT, Lochinvar. (Marmion. Canto v, st. 12.)

Reproof on her lips, but a smile in her eye.

SAMUEL LOVER, Rory O'More.

1 Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh
Was that it was, for not being such a smile;
The smile mocking the sigh.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 51.
Triumphs for nothing and lamenting toys
Is jollity for apes and grief for boys.
2 SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 193.

2 You have seen
Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears
Were like a better way: those happy smilets,
That play'd on her ripe lip, seem'd not to know
What guests were in her eyes: which parted thence,
As pearls from diamonds dropp'd.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 19.
Venus smiles not in a house of tears.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc. 1,
l. 8.

3 'Tis easy enough to be pleasant,
When life flows along like a song;
But the man worth while is the one who will smile
When everything goes dead wrong;
For the test of the heart is trouble,
And it always comes with the years,
But the smile that is worth the praise of earth
Is the smile that comes through tears.
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Worth While.
It's easy to fight when everything's right
And you're mad with the thrill and the glory;
It's easy to cheer when victory's near,
And wallow in fields that are gory.
It's a different song when everything's wrong,
When you're feeling infernally mortal;
When it's ten against one, and hope there is none,
Buck up, little soldier, and chortle!
ROBERT W. SERVICE, Carry On.

SMITH

4 The first artificer of death; the shrewd
Contriver who first sweated at the forge,
And forc'd the blunt and yet unbloodied steel
To a keen edge, and made it bright for war. . . .
And the first smith was the first murd'rer's son.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 213.
And he sang: "Hurra for my handiwork!"
And the red sparks lit the air;
Not alone for the blade was the bright steel
made;
And he fashioned the first ploughshare.
CHARLES MACKAY, Tubal Cain. St. 4.
And fitfully you still may see the grim smiths ranking round,
All clad in leathern panoply, their broad hands only bare;

Some rest upon their sledges here, some work the windlass there.
SAMUEL FERGUSON, The Forging of the Anchor.
St. 1.

5 The smith hath always a spark in his throat.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4754.
Meaning he is always thirsty.
He is not a blacksmith, but he has a spark in his throat.
C. H. SPURGEON, Plowman's Pictures, 39.

6 I heard that Smug the smith, for ale and spice
Sold all his tools, and yet he kept his vice.
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Of a Drunken Smith.
(Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 301.)

7 The smith and his penny both are black.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

8 As great Pythagoras of yore,
Standing beside the blacksmith's door,
And hearing the hammers, as they smote
The anvils with a different note,
Stole from the varying tones, that hung
Vibrant on every iron tongue,
The secret of the sounding wire,
And formed the seven-chorded lyre.
LONGFELLOW, To a Child, l. 175.

And the smith his iron measures hammered to
the anvil's chime;
Thanking God, whose boundless wisdom makes the flowers of poesy bloom
In the forge's dust and cinders, in the tissues of the loom.

LONGFELLOW, Nuremberg, l. 34.
9 Under a spreading chestnut-tree
The village smithy stands;
The smith, a mighty man is he,
With large and sinewy hands;
And the muscles of his brawny arms
Are strong as iron bands.
LONGFELLOW, The Village Blacksmith, l. 1.

Week in, week out, from morn till night,
You can hear his bellows blow;
You can hear him swing his heavy sledge,
With measured beat and slow,
Like a sexton ringing the village bell,
When the evening sun is low.
LONGFELLOW, The Village Blacksmith, l. 13.

10 In other part stood one who at the forge
Labouring, two massy clods of iron and brass
Had melted.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 560.

11 From whence came Smith, albe he knight or squire,
But from the smith that forgeth at the fire?
RICHARD ROWLANDS, *Restitution of Decayed
Intelligence*, p. 310. (c. 1600)

Fate tried to conceal him by naming him Smith.
O. W. HOLMES, The Boys. Of Samuel Francis
Smith, author of America.

Here lies what had nor birth, nor shape, nor fame;
No gentleman! no man! no-thing! no name! . . .
More, shrunk to Smith—and Smith's no name at all.

POPE, Epitaph on James More-Smythe.

The Smiths never had any arms, and have invariably sealed their letters with their thumbs.

SYDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, p. 244.)

1 I saw a smith stand with his hammer, thus,
The whilst his iron did on the anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 193.

2 The painful smith, with force of fervent heat,
The hardest iron soon doth mollify,
That with his heavy sledge he can it beat,
And fashion it to what he it list apply.

SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet xxxii.

SMOKING, see Tobacco

SNAIL

3 Whereso'er he roam,—
Knock when you will,—he's sure to be at home.

VINCENT BOURNE, The Snail. (Charles Lamb, tr.)

The snail, which everywhere doth roam,
Carrying his own house still, still is at home.

JOHN DONNE, To Sir Henry Wotton.

I can tell you why a snail has a house . . .
To put his head in.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 5, l. 30.

4 He was a sort of snail which crawled over a man in his sleep and left its slime.

JOHN SINGLETON COPLEY. Referring to an artist named Carter. (DUNLAP, History of the Arts of Design in the U.S., i, 129.)

5 An inadvertent step may crush the snail
That crawls at ev'ning in the public path;
But he that has humanity, forewarn'd,
Will tread aside, and let the reptile live.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 564.

6 Like snails I see the people go
Along the pavement, row on row;
And each one on his shoulder bears
His coiling shell of petty cares—
The spiral of his own affairs.

ELEANOR HAMMOND, From a Street Corner.

7 Wise emblem of our politic world,
Sage snail, within thine own self curled,
Instruct me softly to make haste,
Whilst these my feet go slowly fast.

RICHARD LOVELACE, The Snail.

8 The slow snail climbeth the tower at last,
though the swift swallow mount it sooner.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 419.

9 You have beaten the snail in slowness. (Vicistis cochleam tarditudine.)

PLAUTUS, Pœnulus, l. 532. (Act iii, sc. 1.)

There he comes, in a snail's trot.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, John Bull. Act iii, sc. 1. (1803)

He is easy-paced, this snail.

JOHN DONNE, To Sir Henry Wotton.

I will thitherward hie me in haste like a snail.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

10 The snail, whose tender horns being hit,
Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain,
And there, all smother'd up, in shade doth sit,
Long after fearing to creep forth again.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 1033.

11 "The snail," says the Hindoo, "sees nothing but his own shell, and thinks it the grandest palace in the universe."

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 10.

SNAKE, see Serpent

SNEER

See also Ridicule, Scorn

12 There was a laughing devil in his sneer.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 9.

And shaped his weapon with an edge severe,
Sapping a solemn creed with solemn sneer.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 107.

13 Better to stand ten thousand sneers than one abiding pang, such as time could not abolish,
of bitter self-reproach.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Confessions of an English Opium Eater. Pt. i.

14 I can't help it, I was born sneering.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i.

15 Ill-suited to the sharp sneers of these men.
(Minus aptus acutis Naribus horum hominum.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 29.

16 Sir spokesman, sneers are weakness veiling
rage.

GEORGE MEREDITH, A Ballad of Fair Ladies in Revolt. St. 42.

17 Who can refute a sneer?

WILLIAM PALEY, Moral Philosophy. Vol. ii, bk. v, ch. 9.

18 "You laugh," he says, "and indulge too much in curved nostrils." ("Rides," ait, "et nimis uncis Naribus indulges.")

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 40.

19 Damn with faint praise, assent with civil leer,
And without sneering, teach the rest to sneer.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 201.

1
I fancy that it is just as hard to do your duty when men are sneering at you as when they are shooting at you.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Brooklyn Navy Yard, 11 May, 1914.

SNEEZING

2
He's a friend at a sneeze; the most you can get out of him is a God bless you.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2436.

Will you demand of me, whence this custom ariseth, to bless and say God help to those that sneeze? We produce three sorts of wind: that issuing from below is too undecent; that from the mouth implieth some reproach of gourmandise; the third is sneezing: and because it cometh from the head, and is without imputation, we thus kindly entertain it. Smile not at this subtlety; it is (as some say) Aristotle's.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 6.

He hath sneezed thrice; turn him out of the hospital.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 2.

(Hang it, I shall sneeze till spring!)
Snuff is a delicious thing.

LEIGH HUNT, Sneezing.

5
Just where the breath of life his nostrils drew,
A charge of snuff the wily virgin threw;
The gnomes direct, to every atom just,
The pungent grains of titillating dust.
Sudden, with starting tears each eye o'erflows,
And the high dome re-echoes to his nose.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto v, l. 81.

6
Sneeze on a Sunday morning fasting,
You'll enjoy your true love to everlasting.

UNKNOWN. (DYER, English Folk-Lore, p. 239.)

Sneeze on a Monday, you sneeze for danger;
Sneeze on a Tuesday, you kiss a stranger;
Sneeze on a Wednesday, you sneeze for a letter;
Sneeze on a Thursday, for something better;
Sneeze on a Friday, you sneeze for sorrow;
Sneeze on a Saturday, your sweetheart tomorrow;
Sneeze on a Sunday, your safety seek,
The Devil will have you the whole of the week.

UNKNOWN. (HARLAND, Lancs. Folk-Lore, p. 68.)

SNOB

7
Don't be proud and turn up your nose
At poorer people in plainer clothes;
But learn, for the sake of your soul's repose,
That all proud flesh, where'er it grows,
Is liable to irritation.

S. S. COX, Because You Flourish in Worldly Affairs.

8
I attach but little value to rank or wealth, but the line must be drawn somewhere. A man in that station may be brave and worthy, but at every step he would commit solecisms that society would never pardon.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i.

9
Snobbery is but a point in time. Let us have patience with our inferiors. They are ourselves of yesterday.

ISAAC GOLDBERG, Tin Pan Alley.

10
We are all snobs of the Infinite, parvenus of the Eternal.

JAMES HUNEKER, Iconoclasts, p. 16.

11
Ain't a snob a fellow as wants to be taken for better bred, or richer, or cleverer, or more influential than he really is?

CHARLES LEVER, One of Them. Ch. 39.

12
Heaven grant him now some noble nook,

For, rest his soul! he'd rather be

Genteelly damn'd beside a Duke,

Than sav'd in vulgar company.

THOMAS MOORE, Epitaph on a Tuft-Hunter.

13
Now she is dead she greets Christ with a nod,—
(He was a carpenter)—but she knows God.

VIRGINIA McCORMICK, The Snob.

14
Say what strange motive, Goddess! could compel

A well-bred Lord t' assault a gentle Belle?

O say what stranger cause, yet unexplor'd,

Could make a gentle Belle reject a Lord?

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto i, l. 7.

15
Perpetual nosing after snobbery at least suggests the snob.

R. L. STEVENSON, Some Gentlemen in Fiction.

16
Rough to common men,
But honeying at the whisper of a lord.

TENNYSON, The Princess: Prologue, l. 114.

17
He who meanly admires a mean thing is a Snob—perhaps that is a safe definition of the character.

THACKERAY, Book of Snobs. Ch. 2.

It is impossible, in our condition of Society, not to be sometimes a Snob.

THACKERAY, Book of Snobs. Ch. 3.

The state of society, viz. Toadyism, organized; base Man-and-Mammon worship, instituted by command of law;—snobbishness, in a word, perpetuated.

THACKERAY, Book of Snobs. Ch. 3.

That which we call a snob, by any other name would still be snobbish.

THACKERAY, Book of Snobs. Ch. 18.

No one succeeds better than Mr. Thackeray in cutting his coat according to his cloth. Here he flattered the aristocracy; but when he crossed the Atlantic, George Washington became the idol of his worship.

EDMUND YATES. (Town Talk, 12 June, 1858.)

1 A tuft-hunter is a snob, a parasite is a snob, the man who allows the manhood within him to be awed by a coronet is a snob. The man who worships mere wealth is a snob.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Life of Thackeray, p. 56.

SNOW

I—Snow: Apotegms

2 Ye, farewell all the snow of ferne year!

CHAUCEUR, Troilus and Criseyde, l. 1176.

Where are the snows of yesteryear? (Où sont les neiges a'antan?)

FRANÇOIS VILLON, Ballade des Dames du Temps Jadis. (Rossetti, tr.)

One burden answers, ever and aye,
"Nay, but where is the last year's snow?"

VILLON, Ballade des Dames du Temps Jadis. (Lang, tr.)

But where are the snows of last year? That was the greatest concern of Villon, the Parisian poet. (Mais où sont les neiges d'antan? C'estoit le plus grand soucy qu'eust Villon, le poète parisien.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. ii, ch. 14.

Where's the snow

That fell the year that's fled—where's the snow?

SAMUEL LOVER, The Snow.

3 You come as seasonably as snow in summer.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5869.

As profitable as snow in harvest.

UNKNOWN, Pedlar's Prophecy, l. 237. (1595)

4 Whether you boil snow or pound it, you can have but water of it.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

5 Snow is white and lieth in the dike,
And every man lets it lie;

Pepper is black, and hath a good smack,
And every man doth it buy.

HILL, Commonplace-Book, p. 128. (c. 1495)

For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night
Whiter than new snow on a raven's back.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 18.

6 "The gates are mine to open,
As the gates are mine to close,
And I abide in my Mother's house,"
Said our Lady of the Snows.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Our Lady of the Snows. Referring to Canada. In Italian, "Sancta Maria ad Nives"; in French, "Notre Dame des Neiges"; many Catholic churches so-called after the famous legend.

7 The pity of the snow, that hides all scars.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

8 They are pulling geese in Scotland, so here it snows.

SAMUEL PEGGE THE ELDER, Derbicisms, p. 138. (1791)

The old lady up in the sky is picking her geese pretty hard to-day.

DICKENS, The Holly Tree. Branch 1.

9 A little snow, tumbled about,
Anon becomes a mountain.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 176.

10 Right, as snow in harvest.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 248.

II—Snow: Description

11 Lo, what wonders the day hath brought,
Born of the soft and slumbrous snow!

ELIZABETH AKERS ALLEN, Snow.

12 And out of the frozen mist the snow
In wavering flakes begins to glow;

Flake after flake

They sink in the dark and silent lake.

BRYANT, The Snow-Shower.

Through the sharp air a flaky torrent flies,
Mocks the slow sight, and hides the gloomy skies;

The fleecy clouds their chilly bosoms bare,
And shed their substance on the floating air.

GEORGE CRABBE, Inebriety, l. 17.

13 Whenever a snowflake leaves the sky,
It turns and turns to say "Good-by!"
Good-by, dear clouds, so cool and gray!"
Then lightly travels on its way.

MARY MAPES DODGE, Snowflakes.

But when a snowflake, brave and meek,
Lights on a rosy maiden's cheek,
It starts—"How warm and soft the day!"
" 'Tis summer!" and it melts away.

MARY MAPES DODGE, Snowflakes.

14 Announced by all the trumpets of the sky,
Arrives the snow, and, driving o'er the fields,
Seems nowhere to alight: the whited air
Hides hills and woods, the river, and the heaven,

And veils the farm-house at the garden's end.
The sled and traveller stopped, the courier's feet
Delayed, all friends shut out, the housemates sit

Around the radiant fireplace, enclosed
In a tumultuous privacy of storm.

EMERSON, The Snow-Storm, l. 1.

Come, see the north wind's masonry.
Out of an unseen quarry evermore
Furnished with tile, the fierce artificer
Curves his white bastions with projected roof
Round every windward stake, or tree, or door.
EMERSON, The Snow-Storm, l. 10.

The frolic architecture of the snow.

EMERSON, The Snow-Storm, l. 28.

1 Out of the bosom of the Air,
Out of the cloud-folds of her garments
shaken,

Over the woodlands brown and bare,
Over the harvest-fields forsaken,
Silent, and soft, and slow
Descends the snow.

LONGFELLOW, Snow-Flakes.

2 What heart could have thought you?—
Past our devisal (A filigree petal!)
Fashioned so purely, Fragilely, surely.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, To a Snow-Flake.

Through the hushed air the whitening shower
descends,

At first thin-wavering; till at last the flakes
Fall broad and wide and fast, dimming the day
With a continual flow. The cherished fields
Put on their winter-robe of purest white.

'Tis brightness all; save where the new snow melts

Along the mazy current.

JAMES THOMPSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 229.

3 Oh! the snow, the beautiful snow,
Filling the sky and the earth below; . . .
Beautiful snow, from the heavens above,
Pure as an angel and fickle as love!

JOHN WHITTAKER WATSON, Beautiful Snow.
Fraudulently claimed by no less than seven people. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems, p. 178.)

4 Like an army defeated
The snow hath retreated.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Written in March.

5 I saw fair Chloris walk alone,
Whilst feather'd rain came swiftly down,
As Jove descended from his tower
To court her in a silver shower.
The wanton snow flew on her breast
Like little birds unto their nest,
But, overcome with whiteness there,
For grief it thaw'd into a tear;
Thence falling on her garment's hem,
To deck her, froze into a gem.

WILLIAM STRODE, On Chloris Walking in the Snow.

SOCIETY

I—Society: Definitions

6 Man seeketh in society comfort, use, and protection.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

Man was formed for society.

WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, *Of the Nature of Laws
in General*.

[Man] is a social animal. (Sociale animal est.)
SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. vii, sec. 1.

7 The bond of human society is reason and speech. (In universi generis humani sociatate
. . . vinculum est ratio et oratio.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 16, sec. 50.

8 Fine society is only a protection against the vulgaries of the street and the tavern. . . .
'Tis an exclusion and a precinct. . . . It is an unprincipled decorum; an affair of clean linen and coaches, of gloves, cards, and elegance in trifles.

EMERSON, *Conduct of Life: Considerations by
the Way*.

Society is a masked ball, where every one hides his real character, and reveals it by hiding.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

Society is a joint stock company, in which the members agree, for the better securing of his bread to each shareholder, to surrender the liberty and culture of the eater.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

Society is frivolous, and shreds its day into scraps, its conversation into ceremonies and escapes.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

Society is a hospital of incurables.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

9 Society never advances.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

No society can ever be so large as one man.

EMERSON, *Essays, Second Series: New England
Reformers*.

10 Here is the use of society: it is so easy with the great to be great.

EMERSON, Essays: Society and Solitude.

When a man meets his fitting mate society begins.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Social Aims.

It is rendering mutual service to men of virtue and understanding to make them acquainted with one another.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vi, p. 424.

11 The spirit of truth and the spirit of freedom
—they are the pillars of society.

HENRIK IBSEN, Pillars of Society. Act iv.

12 Society is the union of men and not the men themselves. (La Société est l'union des hommes, et non pas les hommes.)

MONTESQUIEU, De l'Esprit. Bk. x, sec. 3.

13 The difference between what is commonly called ordinary company and good company is only hearing the same things said in a little room or in a large salon.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

14 The problem of building a human society is always the difficulty of establishing a relation between individual and communal happiness.

DORA RUSSELL, The Right to Be Happy, p. 255.

1 Society is like the air, necessary to breathe, but insufficient to live on.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays.

2 Society, saith the text, is the happiness of life.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 167.

3 Society exists for the benefit of its members; not the members for the benefit of society.

SPENCER, Principles of Ethics. Sec. 222.

4 A society cannot be founded only on the pursuit of pleasure and power; a society can only be founded on the respect for liberty and justice.

TAINE, History of English Literature. Bk. ii, ch. 11, sec. 1.

5 What men call social virtue, good fellowship, is commonly but the virtue of pigs in a litter, which lie close together to keep each other warm.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 23 Oct., 1852.

6 Society therefore is as ancient as the world.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Policy.

7

There is

One great society alone on earth:

The noble Living and the noble Dead.

WORDSWORTH, The Prelude. Bk. xi, l. 393.

II—Society: Apothegms

8

Brothers, I am sorry I have got no Morrison's Pill for curing the maladies of Society.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. i, ch. 4.

9

I want you to see Peel, Stanley, Graham, Sheil, Russell, Macaulay, Old Joe, and so on. They are all upper-crust here.

THOMAS C. HALIBURTON, Sam Slick in England. Ch. 24. (1843)

Those families, you know, are our upper crust, not upper ten thousand.

J. FENIMORE COOPER, Ways of the Hour. Ch. 6. (1850)

At present there is no distinction among the upper ten thousand of the city.

N. P. WILLIS, Necessity for a Promenade Drive.

There are only about four hundred people in New York Society.

WARD McALLISTER. A boast at the Union Club, after he had cut down the list of guests for the ball given by Mrs. William Astor, 1 Feb., 1892. The phrase was caught up by the newspapers, and passed into the idiom of the language. (Dict. of Amer. Biog.)

10

The Brahmin caste of New England. This is the harmless, inoffensive, untitled aristocracy referred to.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, Elsie Venner. Ch. 1.

11

Mrs. Montagu has dropt me. Now, Sir, there are people whom one should like very well to drop, but would not wish to be dropt by.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, iv, 73.)

12

He might have proved a useful adjunct, if not an ornament, to society.

CHARLES LAMB, Elia: Captain Starkey.

13

But the fact is, a man may do very well with a very little knowledge and scarce be found out, in mixed company.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: The Old and the New Schoolmaster.

A town that boasts inhabitants like me
Can have no lack of good society!

LONGFELLOW, The Birds of Killingworth.

15

The Don Quixote of one generation may live to hear himself called the savior of society by the next.

J. R. LOWELL, Essays: Don Quixote.

16

What quality are they of?

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 59.

17

A few yards in London cement, or dissolve friendship.

SYDNEY SMITH. (EMERSON, Considerations by the Way.)

18

Ah, you flavour everything; you are the vanille of society.

19

The genteel comedy of the polite world.

SMOLLETT, The Adventures of Ferdinand Count Fathom. Ch. 1.

20

Pray, madam, who were the company? Why, there was all the world and his wife.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

He welcomes at once all the world and his wife.

CHRISTOPHER ANSTEE, New Bath Guide, p. 140. (1767)

21

Society waits uniform'd, and is for a while between things ended and things begun.

WALT WHITMAN, Thoughts: Of These Years.

22

She tried to found a salon, but only succeeded in opening a restaurant.

Gerald: I suppose Society is wonderfully delightful?

Lord Illingworth: To be in it is merely a bore.

But to be out of it is simply a tragedy.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

The wise man sometimes flees from society from fear of being bored. (Le sage quelquefois évite le monde, de peur d'être ennuyé.)

<sup>1</sup> Society became my glittering bride.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iii, l. 735.

III—Society: Its Virtues

<sup>2</sup> The social hours, swift-wing'd, unnotic'd fleet.

BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night, l. 39.

<sup>3</sup> Society, friendship, and love

Divinely bestow'd upon man.

COWPER, Verses: Alexander Selkirk, l. 17.

<sup>4</sup> Why should your fellowship a trouble be,
Since man's chief pleasure is society?

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Orchestra. St. 32.

<sup>5</sup> The thoughts of the best minds always become the last opinion of Society.

EMERSON, Correspondence of Carlyle and Emerson, i, 29.

<sup>6</sup> Of all the cordials known to us, the best, safest, and most exhilarating, with the least harm, is society.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Clubs.

<sup>7</sup> Without society, and a society to our taste, men are never contented.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vi, p. 15.

<sup>8</sup> It is an extreme evil to depart from the company of the living before you die.

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Sec. 1.

For it is most true that a natural and secret hatred and aversion towards society in any man, hath somewhat of the savage beast.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship.

<sup>9</sup> A little society is needful to show a man his failings.

R. L. STEVENSON, Ethical Studies, p. 82.

<sup>10</sup> Company keeps our rind from growing too coarse and rough.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to George Montagu, 22 Sept., 1765.

IV—Society: Its Faults

<sup>11</sup> Dante standing, studying his angel,—
In there broke the folk of his Inferno.

Says he—"Certain people of importance"

(Such he gave his daily dreadful line to)

"Entered and would seize, forsooth, the poet."

Says the poet—"Then I stopped my painting."

ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. Sec. 5.

<sup>12</sup> Society is now one polish'd horde,
Form'd of two mighty tribes, the Bores and Bored.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 95.

<sup>13</sup> The visit paid, with ecstasy we come,
As from a seven years transportation, home.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 399.

The painful ceremony of receiving and returning visits.

SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. Ch. 5.

<sup>14</sup> Oh to the club, the scene of savage joys,
The school of coarse good-fellowship and noise.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 421.

Club: An assembly of good fellows, meeting under certain conditions.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary.

<sup>15</sup> On the approach of Spring, I withdraw without reluctance from the noisy and extensive scene of crowds without company and dissipation without pleasure.

EDWARD GIBBON, Memoirs. Vol. i, p. 116.

<sup>16</sup> Ermined and minked and Persian-lambed,
Be-puffed (be-painted, too, alas!)

Be-decked, be-diamonded—be-damned!

The Women of the Better Class.

OLIVER HERFORD, The Women of the Better Class.

<sup>17</sup> For one of the pleasures of having a rout
Is the pleasure of having it over.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Dream. St. 3.

<sup>18</sup> I live in the crowds of jollity, not so much to enjoy company as to shun myself.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 16.

<sup>19</sup> Society is no comfort To one not sociable.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 12.

<sup>20</sup> No society can surely be flourishing and happy, of which the far greater part of the members are poor and miserable.

ADAM SMITH, Wealth of Nations. Bk. i, ch. 8.

<sup>21</sup> Other people are quite dreadful. The only possible society is oneself.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act iii.

<sup>22</sup> High society is for those who have stopped working and no longer have anything important to do.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, Washington, 24 Feb., 1915.

<sup>23</sup> The dreary intercourse of daily life.

V—Society and Convention

<sup>1</sup> "I am afraid," replied Elinor, "that the pleasantness of an employment does not always evince its propriety."

JANE AUSTEN, Sense and Sensibility. Ch. 13.

<sup>2</sup> Conventionality is not morality. Self-righteousness is not religion. To attack the first is not to assail the last. To pluck the mask from the face of the Pharisee, is not to lift an impious hand to the Crown of Thorns.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Jane Eyre: Preface.

<sup>3</sup> It's wiser being good than bad;
It's safer being meek than fierce:
It's fitter being sane than mad.

ROBERT BROWNING, Apparent Failure.

<sup>4</sup> For a "mixt company" implies, that, save Yourself and friends, and half a hundred
more,

Whom you may bow to without looking grave,
The rest are but a vulgar set.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 59.

<sup>5</sup> In general, the more completely cased with formulas a man may be, the safer, happier is it for him.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. ii, ch. 17.

<sup>6</sup> the Cambridge ladies who live in furnished souls are unbeautiful and have comfortable minds . . .
they believe in Christ and Longfellow, both dead.

E. E. CUMMINGS, Sonnets: Realities.

<sup>7</sup> My business in the social system is to be agreeable; I take it that everybody's business in the social system is to be agreeable.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 18.

<sup>8</sup> Society everywhere is in conspiracy against the manhood of every one of its members.
. . . The virtue in most request is conformity.
Self-reliance is its aversion. It loves not realities and creators, but names and customs.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

Society will pardon much to genius and special gifts, but, being in its nature a convention, it loves what is conventional, or what belongs to coming together.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

Comme il faut, is the Frenchman's description of good society.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

<sup>9</sup> The snow is lying very deep,
My house is sheltered from the blast.
I hear each muffled step outside,
I hear each voice go past,

But I'll not venture in the drift
Out of this bright security,
Till enough footsteps come and go
To make a path for me.

AGNES LEE, Convention.

<sup>10</sup> Where it is a duty to worship the sun it is pretty sure to be a crime to examine the laws of heat.

JOHN MORLEY, Miscellanies: Voltaire.

<sup>11</sup> What will Mrs. Grundy say?

THOMAS MORTON, Speed the Plough. (1798)

Mrs. Grundy, in the play, is a neighbor and obsession of Dame Ashfield, who constantly refers to her, wondering what she will think or say. Mrs. Grundy never appears. It was this play which introduced Mrs. Grundy to the British public.

Always ding-dinging Dame Grundy into my ears —What will Mrs. Grundy say? or, What will Mrs. Grundy think?

THOMAS MORTON, Speed the Plough. Act i,
sc. 1.

The world's an ugly world. Offend
Good people, how they wrangle!
Their manners that they never mend,—
The characters they mangle!
They eat, and drink, and scheme, and plod,—
They go to church on Sunday;

And many are afraid of God—
And more of Mrs. Grundy.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, The Jester's Plea.

There be four things that keep us all from having our own way,—

Money, Fortune, Mrs. Grundy, and Policeman A.
D'ARCY THOMPSON, Sales Attici.

<sup>12</sup> Custom and convention govern human action.
(Νόμος δὲ καὶ ἔθει πάντα τοὺς ἀνθρώπους πράττειν.)

PYRRHO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pyrrho. Bk. ix,
sec. 61.)

Society has only one law, and that is custom.

P. G. HAMERTON, The Intellectual Life: Pt. vi, letter 1.

<sup>13</sup> Conventional people are roused to fury by departure from convention, largely because they regard such departure as a criticism of themselves.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, The Conquest of Happiness, p. 131.

<sup>14</sup> Keep decorum.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i,
sc. 2, l. 77.

Let them cant about decorum
Who have characters to lose.

BURNS, The Jolly Beggars.

<sup>15</sup> Men like conventions because men made them.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 64.

<sup>16</sup> To say what you think will certainly damage you in society; but a free tongue is worth more than a thousand invitations.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts.

VI—Society and Solitude

1 Solitude is very sad,
Too much company twice as bad.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Blackberries.

Society than solitude is worse,
And man to man is still the greatest curse.

ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, Ovid to His Wife.

2 If from society we learn to live,
'Tis solitude should teach us how to die.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 33.

3 There is a society in the deepest solitude.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 10.

4 Solitude is impracticable, and society fatal.

EMERSON, Essays: Society and Solitude.

The solitary worshipper knows the essence of the thought: the scholar in society sees only its fair face.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

5 Solitude is as needful to the imagination as society is wholesome for the character.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Dryden.

6 Solitude is often the best society.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

For solitude sometimes is best society,
And short retirement urges sweet return.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 249.

7 I love tranquil solitude,

And such society

As is quiet, wise, and good.

SHELLEY, Song: Rarely, Rarely Comest Thou.

I—Soldier: Apothegms

8 It were better to be a soldier's widow than a coward's wife.

T. B. ALDRICH, Mercedes. Act ii, sc. 2.

9 One can be a soldier without dying, and a lover without sighing.

EDWIN ARNOLD, Adzuma. Act ii, sc. 5.

10 To take a soldier without ambition is to pull off his spurs.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Ambition.

Ambition, The soldier's virtue.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 22.

11 Man is a military animal,
Glories in gunpowder, and loves parade.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Metropolis.

12 Soldiers in peace are like chimneys in summer.
WILLIAM CECIL, LORD BURGHLEY, Ten Precepts.

13 She was so accustomed to fast riding with our cavalry . . . she does not know how to treat a doughboy.

MRS. GEORGE A. CUSTER, Letter, March, 1867.

In the Civil War, infantrymen were called doughboys from their large brass buttons. In the World War, it was applied to all branches of the service.

14 A serjeant is a soldier with a halbert, and a drummer is a soldier with a drum.

JUSTICE DENISON, Judgment, Lloyd v. Wood-dall. (1 Black, 30.)

15 Eh-oh, my little brother,
They rigged you up in state,
In a khaki coat and gun to tote,
But you never could learn to hate.

MARTIN FEINSTEIN, In Memoriam.

16 Cowards in scarlet pass for men of war.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, She Gallants. Act v, sc. 1.

Uniforms were often masks [to hide cowards] . . . When my journal appears, many statues must come down.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Sayings.

All are not soldiers that go to the wars. (No son soldados todos los que van á la guerra.)

UNKNOWN. A Spanish proverb.

17 Every man thinks meanly of himself for not having been a soldier.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1778.)

18 It ain't the individual, nor the army as a whole,

But the everlastin' teamwork of every bloom-in' soul.

J. MASON KNOX [?], Coöperation. These lines have been attributed to other writers. They were claimed for Mr. Knox in a letter from his wife to the New York Times.

19 Courage, in soldiers, is a dangerous profession they follow to earn their living. (La valeur est, dans les simples soldats, un métier périlleux qu'ils ont pris pour gagner leur vie.)

ERNEST THURTELL, Speech, House of Commons, on bill to abolish death penalty for desertion.

1 All soldiers run away, madam.
DUKE OF WELLINGTON, when asked whether British soldiers ever ran away.

2 Of boasting more than of a bomb afraid,
A soldier should be modest as a maid.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. iv, l. 251.

3 On becoming soldiers we have not ceased to be citizens.

UNKNOWN, Humble Representation, addressed to Parliament by the soldiers of Cromwell's army, 1647.

When we assumed the soldier, we did not lay aside the citizen.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Address, to the provincial Congress of New York, 26 June, 1775.
The quotation is inscribed on the memorial amphitheatre in Arlington Cemetery.

4 O God, if in the day of battle I forget Thee, do not Thou forget me.

UNKNOWN, A Soldier's Prayer. (WILLIAM KING, Anecdotes of His Own Time, p. 7.)

II—Soldiers: Their Virtues

5 Glory is the sodger's prize;
The sodger's wealth is honour.

BURNS, The Sodger's Return, l. 59.

6 For the army is a school in which the miser becomes generous, and the generous prodigal; miserly soldiers are like monsters, very rarely seen.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 39.

7 Dear God, I raised my boy to be a soldier;
I tried to make him strong of will and true.

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, A Soldier. An answer to a popular song of the World War period, "I did not raise my boy to be a soldier," written by Albert Bryan and published in 1914.

The man who has not raised himself to be a soldier, and the woman who has not raised her boy to be a soldier for the right, neither one of them is entitled to citizenship in the Republic.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, to the Soldiers at Camp Upton, 1917.

8 He stands erect; his slouch becomes a walk;
He steps right onward, martial in his air,
His form and movement.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 639.

9 That little bronze button,
Still keep it in view,
And honor the wearers,
Once brave boys in blue.

ADAM CRAIG, The Little Bronze Button. (1899)

Ye living soldiers of the mighty war,
Once more from roaring cannon and the drums,
And bugles blown at morn, the summons comes;
Forget the halting limb, each wound and scar:

Once more your Captain calls to you;
Come to his last review!
R. W. GILDER, The Burial of Grant.

10 Last night, among his fellow-roughs
He jested, quaffed, and swore;
A drunken private of the Buffs,
Who never looked before.

To-day, beneath the foeman's frown,
He stands in Elgin's place,
Ambassador from Britain's crown,
And type of all her race.

FRANCIS HASTINGS DOYLE, The Private of the Buffs.

So let his name through Europe ring!

A man of mean estate,
Who died as firm as Sparta's king,
Because his soul was great.

FRANCIS HASTINGS DOYLE, The Private of the Buffs.

From softness only softness comes;
Urged by a bitterer shout within,
Men of the trumpets and the drums
Seek, with appropriate discipline,
That Glory past the pit or wall
Which contradicts and stops the breath,
And with immortalizing gall
Builds the most stubborn things on death.

OLIVER GOGARTY, Marcus Curtius.

11 The broken soldier, kindly bade to stay,
Sat by his fire, and talk'd the night away,
Wept o'er his wounds, or, tales of sorrow done,
Shoulder'd his crutch, and show'd how fields were won.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 155.

12 If soldier,
Chase brave employments with a naked sword
Throughout the world. Fool not, for all may have

If they dare try, a glorious life, or grave.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 15.

13 The man-at-arms is the only man.

HENRIK IBSEN, Lady Inger. Act i. Quoted as a proverb.

14 So 'ere's to you, Fuzzy-Wuzzy, at your 'ome
in the Soudan;

You're a pore benighted 'eathen but a first-class fightin' man.

RUDYARD KIPLING, "Fuzzy-Wuzzy."

Ah there, Piet!—picked up be'ind the drive!
The wonder wasn't 'ow 'e fought, but 'ow 'e
kep' alive,
With nothin' in 'is belly, on 'is back, or to 'is feet—

I've known a lot o' men behave a dam' sight worse than Piet.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Piet.

15 The soldier should be fear-inspiring; not decked with gold and silver, but relying on his courage and his steel. . . . Valor is the soldier's adornment.

LIVY, History. Bk. ix, sec. 40.

1 They carved at the meal With gloves of steel,
And they drank the red wine through the helmet barred.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto i, st. 4.

A soldier's but a man; A life's but a span;
Why, then, let a soldier drink.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 73.

2 A soldier,
Full of strange oaths and bearded like the pard,
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7,
l. 149.

Arm'd at point exactly, cap-a-pe.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 200.

All furnished, all in arms,
All plumed like estridges that with the wind
Baited like eagles having lately bathed;
Glittering in golden coats, like images;
As full of spirit as the month of May,
And gorgeous as the sun at midsummer.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 97.

3 I am a soldier and unapt to weep
Or to exclaim on fortune's fickleness.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act v, sc. 3, l. 133.

They are soldiers,
Witty, courteous, liberal, full of spirit.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 2, l. 42.

He is a soldier fit to stand by Cæsar.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 126.

'Tis the soldiers' life
To have their balmy slumbers waked with strife.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 257.

4 Theirs not to make reply,
Theirs not to reason why,
Theirs but to do and die:
Into the valley of Death

Rode the six hundred.

TENNYSON, The Charge of the Light Brigade.

5 Let it be your pride, therefore, to show all men everywhere not only what good soldiers you are, but also what good men you are.
. . . Let us set for ourselves a standard so high that it will be a glory to live up to it, and then let us live up to it and add a new laurel to the crown of America.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, to the soldiers of the National Army, 1917.

6 When captains courageous, whom death could not daunt,
Did march to the siege of the city of Gaunt,

They mustered their soldiers by two and by three,

And the foremost in battle was Mary Ambree.

13 Telling me . . . it was great pity, so it was,
This villanous saltpetre should be digg'd
Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
Which many a good tall fellow had destroy'd
So cowardly; and but for these vile guns,
He would himself have been a soldier.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 57.

If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a soused gurnet.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 12.

14 A soldier is an anachronism of which we must

BERNARD SHAW, The Devil's Disciple. Act iii.

I never expect a soldier to think.

BERNARD SHAW, The Devil's Disciple. Act iii.

15 True, quoth my Uncle Toby, thou didst very right, Trim, as a soldier—but certainly very wrong as a man.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. vi, ch. 8.

A soldier, cried my Uncle Toby, interrupting the corporal, is no more exempt from saying a foolish thing, Trim, than a man of letters— But not so often, an' please your honour, replied the corporal.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. viii, ch. 19.

He's an absent-minded beggar, and his weaknesses are great—

But we and Paul must take him as we find him—

He is out on active service, wiping something off a slate—

And he's left a lot of little things behind him!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Absent-Minded Beggar.

There are girls he walked with casual. They'll be sorry now he's gone,

For an absent-minded beggar they will find him,

But it ain't the time for sermons with the winter coming on.

We must help the girl that Tommy's left behind him!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Absent-Minded Beggar.

6 But we are soldiers;
And may that soldier a mere recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in love!

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc. 3, l. 286.

7 When the military man approaches, the world locks up its spoons and packs off its woman-kind.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman.

8 What female heart can withstand a red-coat? I think this should be a part of female education. As you have the rocking-horse to accustom them to ride, I would have military dolls in the nursery, to harden their hearts against officers and red-coats.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, p. 313.)

9 Malbrouck is off to the wars; . . .
I don't know when he'll return.

(Malbrouck s'en va-t-en guerre;

Mironton, mironton, mirontaine;

Malbrouck s'en va-t-en guerre,

UNKNOWN, Malbrouck. A famous old French song, sometimes attributed to Madame de Sévigné, and supposed to refer to the unsuccessful expedition against St. Malo made by Charles, Third Duke of Marlborough, in 1758. Found in many collections; popularized by Marie Antoinette about 1780; introduced by Beaumarchais into Le Mariage de Figaro, and by George Du Maurier into Trilby. Sung to the air of "We won't go home till morning."

O, send Lewis Gordon hame
And the lad I mauna name,
Though his back be at the wa'
Here's to him that's far awa'.

WILLIAM GEDDES [?], Lewis Gordon.

The unreturning brave.

V—Soldiers and Public Ingratitude

10 For a soldier I listed, to grow great in fame,
And be shot at for sixpence a day.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Charity.

How happy's the soldier who lives on his pay,
And spends half-a-crown out of sixpence a day!

JOHN O'KEEFE, The Poor Soldier.

Ninepence a day fer killin' folks comes kind o' low fer murder.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 2.

11 For it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' "Chuck 'im out, the brute!"

But it's "Saviour of 'is country" when the guns begin to shoot.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tommy.

Then it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' "Tommy, 'ow's yer soul?"

But it's "Thin red line of 'eroes" when the drums begin to roll.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tommy.

We aren't no thin red 'eroes, nor we aren't no blackguards too,

But single men in barracks, most remarkable like you;

An' if sometimes our conduct isn't all your fancy
paints,
Why, single men in barracks don't grow into plaster saints.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tommy.

The world's wicked.

We are men, not saints, sweet lady.

MASSINGER, Unnatural Combat. Act i, sc. 1.
Tommy Atkins, as a sobriquet of the British soldier, comes from the imaginary name "Thomas Atkins," employed in 1815 in connection with The Soldier's Account Book, called into use by the War Office. "Thomas Atkins" appeared in the sample forms accompanying the official circular letter, 31 August, 1815.

<sup>1</sup> The painful warrior famoused for fight,
After a thousand victories once foil'd,
Is from the book of honour razed quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxv.

Our God and soldier we alike adore,
When at the brink of ruin, not before;
After deliverance, both alike requited,
Our God forgotten, and our soldiers slighted.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Epigram. See also DEVIL:

General Grant was drinking too much whiskey.

<sup>5</sup> Turenne's small change. (La monnaie de M.
Turenne.)

MADAME DE CORNUEL, referring to the eight generals appointed to take Turenne's place.
(Nouvelle Biographie Universelle.)

<sup>6</sup> Captains are casual things.

JOHN FLETCHER, Rule a Wife and Have a Wife.
Act iii.

Great captains, with their guns and drums,
Disturb our judgment for the hour,
But at last silence comes.

J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode.

An army all of captains, used to pray
And stiff in fight, but serious drill's despair,
Skilled to debate their orders, not obey.

J. R. LOWELL, Under the Old Elm. Referring to the Continental army.

That in the captain's but a choleric word,
Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 130.

The courageous captain of complements.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 4,
l. 19.

See now comes the captain all daubed with gold lace.

SWIFT, The Grand Question Debated.

<sup>7</sup> I have heard, in such a way as to believe it,
of your recently saying that both the army and the government needed a dictator. . . .
Only those generals who gain successes can set up dictators. What I ask of you now is military success, and I will risk the dictatorship.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, *Letter to Major-General
Joseph Hooker*, appointing him commander of the Army of the Potomac, 26 Jan., 1863.

<sup>8</sup> I personally wish Jacob Freese, of New Jersey, to be appointed colonel of a colored regiment, and this regardless of whether he can tell the exact shade of Julius Cæsar's hair.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, *Letter to Secretary of War
Stanton*.

<sup>9</sup> "Companions," said he [Saturninus], "you have lost a good captain, to make of him a bad general."

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9.

1
Yet, trained in camps, he knew the art
To win the soldier's hardy heart.
They love a captain to obey,
Boisterous as March, yet fresh as May;
With open hand and brow as free,
Lover of wine and minstrelsy;
Ever the first to scale a tower,
As venturous in a lady's bower:—
Such buxom chief shall lead his host
From India's fires to Zembla's frost.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto iii, st. 4.

2
It is a bad soldier who grumbles when following his commander. (Malus miles est qui imperatorem gemens sequitur.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. cvii, sec. 10.

3
If you have a station in the file,
Not i' the worst rank of manhood, say 't.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 102.

4
'Tis the curse of service,
Preferment goes by letter and affection,
Not by the old gradation, where each second
Stood heir to the first.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 1, l. 35.

Worked himself, step by step, through each preferment,
From the ranks upwards. And verily, it gives
A precedent of hope, a spur of action
To the whole corps, if once in their remembrance
An old, deserving soldier makes his way.

SCHILLER, Wallenstein. Pt. i, act i, sc. 1. (Cole-ridge, tr.)

5
Cassio, I love thee;
But never more be officer of mine.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 248.

VII—Soldiers: How Sleep the Brave

6
Lay him low, lay him low,
In the clover or the snow!
What cares he? he cannot know:
Lay him low!

GEORGE HENRY BOKER, Dirge for a Soldier.

He rush'd into the field, and, foremost fighting, fell.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 23.

He slept an iron sleep,—

Slain fighting for his country.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xi, l. 285. (Bryant, tr.)

7
In the field of proud honour—our swords in our hands,

Our King and our Country to save—

While victory shines on life's last ebbing sands,

O! who would not die with the brave!

BURNS, Song of Death, l. 16.

Oh who would not sleep with the brave?

A. E. HOUSMAN, Lancer, l. 2.

I see before me the Gladiator lie:
He leans upon his hand—his manly brow
Consents to death, but conquers agony.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 140.

9
How sleep the brave, who sink to rest,
By all their country's wishes blest!
When Spring, with dewy fingers cold,
Returns to deck their hallow'd mold,
She there shall dress a sweeter sod
Than Fancy's feet have ever trod.

By fairy hands their knell is rung,
By forms unseen their dirge is sung;
There Honour comes, a pilgrim grey,
To bless the turf that wraps their clay,
And Freedom shall a-while repair,
To dwell a weeping hermit there!

WILLIAM COLLINS, Ode Written in 1746.

The snow shall be their winding-sheet,
And every turf beneath their feet
Shall be a soldier's sepulchre.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hohenlinden. St. 8.

10
Toll for the brave—
The brave! that are no more:
All sunk beneath the wave,
Fast by their native shore.

COWPER, On the Loss of the Royal George.

Far in foreign fields from Dunkirk to Belgrade
Lie the soldiers and chiefs of the Irish Brigade.

THOMAS DAVIS, Battle Eve of the Brigade.

11
We meet neath the sounding rafter,
And the walls around are bare;
As they shout back our peals of laughter,
It seems that the dead are there.
Ho! stand to your glasses steady!

'T is all we have left to prize.

A cup to the dead already,—

Hurrah for the next that dies!

BARTHOLOMEW DOWLING, The Revel.

And hands that wist not though they dug a
grave,

Undid the hasps of gold, and drank, and gave,
And he drank after, a deep glad kingly draught:
And all their life changed in them, for they quaffed

Death; if it be death so to drink, and fare

As men who change and are what these twain were.

SWINBURNE, Tristram of Lyonesse: The Sailing of the Swallow, l. 789.

12
For glory lights the soldier's tomb,
And beauty weeps the brave.

JOSEPH RODMAN DRAKE, To the Defenders of New Orleans.

13
It is a sign of a soldier to believe that there is nothing left of man after death, except a corpse. (Militare est credere nihil hominis superesse post mortem, nisi cadaver.)

ERASMUS, Hippeus Anippos.

1 Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment Day;
Love and tears for the Blue,
Tears and love for the Gray.
FRANCIS MILES FINCH, The Blue and the Gray.
Each for his land, in a fair fight,
Encountered, strove, and died,
And the kindly earth that knows no spite
Covers them side by side.
RUDYARD KIPLING, The American Rebellion:
After.

Sleep sweetly in your humble graves,
Sleep, martyrs of a fallen cause.
HENRY TIMROD, Ode.

2 He that stepped forward to follow the flag,
To ride with a saber or march with a Krag,
You'll find now, with thousands, shipped home in a bag,
Just a little brass tag.
EDGAR A. GUEST, A Little Brass Tag.

3 Let those who have no homes at all,
Go battle for a long one.
THOMAS HOOD, The Volunteer, l. 69.

4 In a wood they call the Rouge Bouquet,
There is a new-made grave today,
Built by never a spade nor pick,
Yet covered with earth ten metres thick.
There lie many fighting men,
Dead in their youthful prime.
Never to laugh nor love again
Nor taste the Summertime.
JOYCE KILMER, Rouge Bouquet.

If any question why we died,
Tell them, because our fathers lied.
RUDYARD KIPLING, Epitaphs of the War: Common Form.

5 We have met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting-place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Gettysburg Address, 19
Nov., 1863.

These heroes are dead. They died for liberty—they died for us. They are at rest. They sleep in the land they made free, under the flag they rendered stainless, under the solemn pines, the sad hemlocks, the tearful willows, the embracing vines. They sleep beneath the shadows of the clouds, careless alike of sunshine or storm, each in the windowless palace of rest. Earth may run red with other wars—they are at peace. In the midst of battles, in the roar of conflict, they found the serenity of death.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Memorial Day Vision.

6 Nicanor lay dead in his harness.
Apocrypha: II Maccabees, xv, 28.

7 Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

JOHN MCCRAE, In Flanders Fields.

Your flaming torch aloft we bear,
With burning heart an oath we swear
To keep the faith, to fight it through,
To crush the foe or sleep with you
In Flanders fields.
C. B. GALBREATH, Answer to "In Flanders Fields."

8 When soldiers brave death, they drive him into the ranks of the enemy.
NAPOLEON, Address to His Soldiers, two days after the battle of Jena.

9 "And where do we go now?" brave Bingham
said,
And Bethell, with his feet among the dead
Feeling the slant plate sink, the waters thrust, Answered him cheerily, "Why, to heaven I trust."

ROBERT NICHOLS, The Souls of the Righteous.

O loved, living, dying, heroic soldier,
All, all, my joy, my grief, my love, are thine!
ROBERT NICHOLS, Fulfillment.

10 A soldier of the Legion lay dying in Algiers,
There was lack of woman's nursing, there was dearth of woman's tears; . . .
And he said, "I never more shall see my own,
my native land;
Take a message, and a token, to some distant friends of mine,
For I was born at Bingen,—at Bingen on the Rhine."

CAROLINE NORTON, Bingen on the Rhine.

11 The muffled drum's sad roll has beat
The soldier's last tattoo;
No more on Life's parade shall meet
The brave and fallen few.
On Fame's eternal camping-ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And Glory guards, with solemn round,
The bivouac of the dead.
THEODORE O'HARA, The Bivouac of the Dead.

Nor shall your story be forgot,
While Fame her record keeps,
Or Honor points the hallowed spot
Where Valor proudly sleeps.
THEODORE O'HARA, The Bivouac of the Dead.

1
The sunshine streaming upon Salmon's height
Is not so sweet and white
As the most heretofore sin-spotted Soul
That darts to its delight
Straight from the absolution of a faithful fight.

COVENTRY PATMORE, Peace.

2
Soldiers are citizens of death's grey land.
SIEGFRIED SASSOON, Dreamers.

3
Soldier, rest! thy warfare o'er,
Dream of fighting fields no more;
Sleep the sleep that knows not breaking,
Morn of toil, nor night of waking.
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 31.

Death had he seen by sudden blow,
By wasting plague, by tortures slow,
By mine or breach, by steel or ball,
Knew all his shapes and scorned them all.
SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto i, st. 8.

Fell as he was in act and mind,
He left no bolder heart behind:
Then, give him, for a soldier meet,
A soldier's cloak for winding sheet.
SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto vi, st. 33.

4
O, wither'd is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fallen.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 15, l. 64.

Cut is the branch that might have grown full
straight,
And burnèd is Apollo's laurel bough,
That sometime grew within this learnèd man.
MARLOWE, Doctor Faustus. Final chorus.

5
Died with their swords in hand.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act i, sc. 1, l. 36.

O, farewell, honest soldier.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 16.

God's soldier be he!
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And so, his knell is knoll'd.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 8, l. 47.

6
Sleep, soldiers! still in honored rest
Your truth and valor wearing:
The bravest are the tenderest,—
The loving are the daring.
BAYARD TAYLOR, The Song of the Camp.

Home they brought her warrior dead.
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. v, l. 532.

8
Where are the boys of the old Brigade,
Who fought with us side by side?
F. E. WEATHERLY, The Old Brigade.

Not in the Abbey proudly laid
Find they a place or part;
The gallant boys of the old Brigade,
They sleep in Old England's heart.
F. E. WEATHERLY, The Old Brigade.

9
Not a drum was heard, not a funeral note,
As his corse to the rampart we hurried;
Not a soldier discharged his farewell shot
O'er the grave where our hero we buried.
CHARLES WOLFE, *The Burial of Sir John
Moore After Corunna*.

No useless coffin enclosed his breast,
Not in sheet or in shroud we wound him;
But he lay like a warrior taking his rest
With his martial cloak around him.
WOLFE, The Burial of Sir John Moore.

Few and short were the prayers we said,
And we spoke not a word of sorrow;
But we steadfastly gazed on the face that was
dead,
And we bitterly thought of the morrow.
WOLFE, The Burial of Sir John Moore.

Slowly and sadly we laid him down,
From the field of his fame fresh and gory;
We carved not a line, and we raised not a stone,
But we left him alone with his glory.
WOLFE, The Burial of Sir John Moore.

I—Solitude: Definitions and Apothegms

11
It had been hard for him that spake it to have put more truth and untruth together, in few words, than in that speech: "Whosoever is delighted in solitude is either a wild beast, or a god."

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship.

12
To fly from need not be to hate mankind.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 59.

13
The secret of solitude is that there is no solitude.

JOSEPH COOK, Boston Monday Lectures: Conscience.

14
There is one means of procuring solitude which to me, and I apprehend to all men, is effectual, and that is to go to the window and look at the stars.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iii, p. 263.

Inspiration makes solitude anywhere.

EMERSON, *Nature, Addresses, and Lectures:
Literary Ethics*.

15
When you have closed your doors, and darkened your room, remember never to say that you are alone, for you are not alone; God is within, and your genius is within,—and what need have they of light to see what you are doing?

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 14.

A solitude is the audience-chamber of God.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Lord Brooke and Sir Philip Sidney.

1 Nobody with me at sea but myself.

GOLDSMITH, The Haunch of Venison, l. 60.

All by my own-alone self.

2 Woe unto him that is never alone, and cannot bear to be alone.

P. G. HAMERTON, The Intellectual Life. Pt. ix, letter 6.

3 The strongest man in the world is he who stands most alone.

HENRIK IBSEN, An Enemy of the People, Act v.

The more powerful and original a mind, the more it will incline towards the religion of solitude.

ALDOUS HUXLEY, Proper Studies, p. 218.

4 Now the New Year reviving old Desires,
The thoughtful Soul to Solitude retires.

OMAR KHAYYÁM, Rubáiyát. St. 4. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

5 You must show him . . . by leaving him severely alone.

CHARLES STEWART PARNELL, Speech at Ennis, 19 Sept., 1880.

6 Grand, gloomy and peculiar, he sat the throne a sceptered hermit, wrapped in the solitude of his own originality.

CHARLES PHILLIPS. (THOMPSON, Presidents I've Known, p. 272.)

7 Solitude vivifies; isolation kills.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. v, No. 60.

8 Time is not here, nor days, nor months, nor years,

An everlasting NOW of solitude!

SOUTHEY, Thalaba. Bk. i, sec. 28. See also PRESENT: THE EVERLASTING NOW.

9 I never found the companion that was so companionable as solitude.

THOREAU, Walden: Solitude.

10 O! lost to virtue, lost to manly thought,
Lost to the noble sallies of the soul!

Who think it solitude, to be alone.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 6.

II—Solitude: Its Virtues

11 Converse with men makes sharp the glittering wit,

But God to man doth speak in solitude.

JOHN STUART BLACKIE, Highland Solitude.

'Tis solitude should teach us how to die;

It hath no flatterers; vanity can give

No hollow aid; alone—man with his God must strive.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 33.

12 Dear solitude, the soul's best friend,

That man acquainted with himself dost make.

CHARLES COTTON, The Retirement.

13 Solitude is the nurse of enthusiasm, and enthusiasm is the true parent of genius. In all ages solitude has been called for—has been flown to.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 10.

So vain is the belief

That the sequestered path has fewest flowers.

THOMAS DOUBLEDAY, The Poet's Solitude.

14 Go cherish your soul; expel companions; set your habits to a life of solitude; then will the faculties rise fair and full within.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Literary Ethics.

I am sure of this, that by going much alone a man will get more of a noble courage in thought and word than from all the wisdom that is in books.

EMERSON, Journals, 1833.

What a saving grace is in poverty and solitude, that the obscure youth learns the practice instead of the literature of his Virtues!

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

15 Living in solitude till the fulness of time, I still kept the dew of my youth and the freshness of my heart.

HAWTHORNE: Inscribed beneath his bust in Hall of Fame.

16 By all means use sometimes to be alone.

Salute thyself: see what thy soul doth wear. . . .

Who cannot rest till he good fellows find,

He breaks up house, turns out of doors his mind.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 25.

17 Two paradises 'twere in one,
To live in Paradise alone.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Garden.

18 Wisdom's self
Oft seeks to sweet retired Solitude,
Where with her best nurse Contemplation
She plumes her feathers, and lets grow her wings,
That in the various bustle of resort

Were all too ruff'd, and sometimes impair'd.

MILTON, Comus, l. 375.

Solitude is the best nurse of wisdom.

LAURENCE STERNE, Letters. No. 82.

Impulses of deeper birth

Have come to him in solitude.

WORDSWORTH, A Poet's Epitaph, l. 47.

1 O blessed solitude! O sole blessedness. (O beata solitudo! O sola beatitudo.)

CORNELIUS MUYS, Solitudo. (1566)

I praise the Frenchman, his remark was shrewd—
"How sweet, how passing sweet is solitude!"

But grant me still a friend in my retreat,
Whom I may whisper—Solitude is sweet.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 739. The quotation has been attributed to LA BRUYÈRE.

2 Hail, mildly pleasing Solitude,
Companion of the wise and good;
But from whose holy piercing eye
The herd of fools and villains fly.
Oh! how I love with thee to walk,
And listen to thy whispered talk,
Which innocence and truth imparts,
And melts the most obdurate hearts.

JAMES THOMSON, Hymn on Solitude, l. 1.

I will arise and go now, and go to Innisfree,
And a small cabin build there, of clay and wattle made:

Nine bean-rows will I have there, a hive for the honey-bee,

And live alone in the bee-loud glade.

W. B. YEATS, The Lake Isle of Innisfree.

3 O sacred solitude! divine retreat!
Choice of the prudent! envy of the great,
By thy pure stream, or in thy waving shade,
We court fair wisdom, that celestial maid.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire v, l. 254.

III—Solitude: Its Faults

4 Solitude affects some people like wine; they must not take too much of it, for it flies to the head.

MARY COLERIDGE, Gathered Leaves, p. 223.

5 Oh, solitude! where are the charms
That sages have seen in thy face?
Better dwell in the midst of alarms,
Than reign in this horrible place.

COWPER, Verses Supposed to be Written by Alexander Selkirk.

6 Woe to him that is alone when he falleth;
for he hath not another to help him up.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iv, 10. (Væ soli.—Vulgate.)

The wise saith, "Woe him that is alone,
For, and he fall, he hath no help to rise."

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 694.

Woe be to him that lust to be alone,
For if he falle, helpe hath he none.

THOMAS HOCLEVE, De Regimine Principum.

7 Solitude is dangerous to reason, without being favourable to virtue. . . . Remember that the solitary mortal is certainly luxurious, probably superstitious, and possibly mad.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. i, p. 219.

Solitude is pasturage for suspicion.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Sandra Belloni. Ch. 28.

8

In solitude

What happiness, who can enjoy alone,

Or all enjoying, what contentment find?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 364.

9

Overbearing austerity is always the companion of solitude. (Τὴν ἐρημίαν σύννοικον αὐθάδεια μὴ ὑπομείναντας.)

PLATO, Epistle to Dion. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Alcibiades and Coriolanus. Ch. 2, sec. 2.)

Solitude would ripen a plentiful crop of despots.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nominalist and Realist.

10

Solitude prompts us to all kinds of evil. (Omnia nobis mala solitudo persuadet.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xxv, 6.

There are some solitary wretches who seem to have left the rest of mankind only as Eve left Adam, to meet the devil in private.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

IV—Solitude and the Crowd

11

Little do men perceive what solitude is, and how far it extendeth. For a crowd is not company, and faces are but a gallery of pictures, and talk but a tinkling cymbal, where there is no love.

SIR FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship.

But 'midst the crowd, the hum, the shock of men,
To hear, to see, to feel, and to possess,
And roam along, the world's tired denizen,
With none who bless us, none whom we can bless, . . .

This is to be alone; this, this is solitude!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 26.

Among them, but not of them.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 113.

How lonely we are in the world! . . . You and I are but a pair of infinite isolations, with some fellow-islands a little more or less near to us.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 16.

12

The time when, most of all, you should withdraw into yourself is when you are forced to be in a crowd.

EPICURUS, Fragments. No. 209.

13

Far from the sweet society of men.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxi, l. 394. (Pope, tr.)

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,

Their sober wishes never learn'd to stray;

Along the cool sequester'd vale of life

They kept the noiseless tenor of their way.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard. St. 19.

Far from the clank of crowds.

WALT WHITMAN, Starting from Paumanok.
Sec. 1.

1 Man dwells apart, though not alone,
He walks among his peers unread;
The best of thoughts which he hath known
For lack of listeners are not said.

JEAN INGELOW, Afternoon at a Parsonage:
Afterthought.

2 Oh that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of wayfaring men; that I might leave my people, and go from them! for they be all adulterers, an assembly of treacherous
men.

Old Testament: Jeremiah, ix, 2.

Oh for a lodge in some vast wilderness,
Some boundless contiguity of shade,
Where rumour of oppression and deceit,
Of unsuccessful or successful war,
Might never reach me more.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 1.

O Solitude! if I must with thee dwell,
Let it not be among the jumbled heap
Of murky buildings: climb with me the steep,— Nature's observatory; . . . let me thy vigils keep 'Mongst boughs pavilion'd, where the deer's swift leap

Startles the wild bee from the foxglove bell.

KEATS, Sonnet: O Solitude.

3 We need not bid, for cloistered cell,
Our neighbour and our work farewell.

JOHN KEEBLE, The Christian Year: Morning.

The city does not take away, neither does the country give, solitude; solitude is within us.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest:
The Country. No. 48.

4 Avoid the reeking herd,
Shun the polluted flock,
Live like that stoic bird
The eagle of the rock.

ELINOR WYLIE, The Eagle and the Mole.

5 I should have then this only fear:
Lest men, when they my pleasures see,
Should hither throng to live like me,
And so make a city here.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Wish.

V—Solitude and Loneliness

6 Yes: in the sea of life enis'd,
With echoing straits between us thrown,
Dotting the shoreless watery wild,
We mortal millions live alone.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, To Marguerite.

7 Indeed, though in a wilderness, a man is never alone, not only because he is with himself and his own thoughts, but because he is with the Devil, who ever consorts with our solitude. . . . There is no such thing as solitude, nor anything that can be said to be alone and by itself, but God.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 11.

8 When is man strong until he feels alone?

ROBERT BROWNING, Colombe's Birthday. Act
iii.

He travels the fastest who travels alone.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Winners.

See also under MARRIAGE AND CELIBACY.

9 Alone!—that worn-out word,
So idly spoken, and so coldly heard;
Yet all that poets sing, and grief hath known,
Of hope laid waste, knells in that word—

ALONE!

BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. ii.

I am as one who is left alone at a banquet, the lights dead and the flowers faded.

BULWER-LYTTON, The Last Days of Pompeii.
Ch. 5.

I feel like one who treads alone
Some banquet-hall deserted,
Whose lights are fled, whose garlands dead,
And all but he departed!

10 Then forth uprose that lone wayfaring man.
CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. i, st. 27.

All perished!—I alone am left on earth!
To whom nor relative nor blood remains,
No!—not a kindred drop that runs in human veins!

CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. iii, st. 17.

11 Alone, alone, all, all alone,
Alone on a wide wide sea!
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. iv.

So lonely 'twas, that God himself
Scarce seemèd there to be.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. iv.

12 I am a lone lorn creetur and everythink goes contrairy with me.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 3.

13 Thrice happy he, who by some shady grove,
Far from the clamorous world, doth live
his own;

Though solitary, who is not alone,
But doth converse with that eternal love.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Urania.

In solitude, where we are least alone.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 90.

14 Everything begins from loneliness.

JOHN ERSKINE, Adam and Eve. Ch. 1.

One aged man—one man—can't fill a house.

ROBERT FROST, An Old Man's Winter Night.

15 He will not take me where he goes,
He's deaf to me and blind.

Always, I am left at home,
Sitting in my mind.

AMANDA BENJAMIN HALL, The Wanderer.

1 Why should we faint and fear to live alone,
Since all alone, so Heaven has will'd, we
die,

Nor e'en the tenderest heart, and next our
own,
Knows half the reasons why we smile and
sigh?

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: 24th Sunday after Trinity.

11 That thou art my son, I have partly thy mother's word, partly my own opinion, but chiefly a villainous trick of thine eye and a foolish hanging of thy nether lip, that doth warrant me.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 443.

12 A son who is the theme of honour's tongue;
Amongst a grove, the very straightest plant.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 1, l. 81.

Kent: Is not this your son, my lord?
Gloucester: His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blushed to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it.

Kent: I cannot conceive you.

Gloucester: Sir, this young fellow's mother could: whereupon she grew round-wombed, and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a husband for her bed.

I—Song: Apothegms

2 Everything ends in songs. (Tout finit par des chansons.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Le Mariage de Figaro.

3 Sing a song of sixpence.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Bonduca. Act v, 2.

Sing a song of sixpence, a pocket full of rye,
Four-and-twenty blackbirds baked in a pie.

UNKNOWN, Old Nursery Rhyme.

4 It is the best of all trades to make songs, and the second best to sing them.

HILAIRE BELLOC, On Song.

5 But how the subject-theme may gang,
Let time and chance determine;

Perhaps it may turn out a sang,
Perhaps turn out a sermon.

ROBERT BURNS, Epistle to a Young Friend.

I think, whatever mortals crave,
With impotent endeavour,

A wreath—a rank—a throne—a grave—
The world goes round forever;

I think that life is not too long,
And therefore I determine,

That many people read a song,
Who will not read a sermon.

W. M. PRAED, Chant of the Brazen Head. St. 1.

What will a child learn sooner than a song?

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 205.

6 Unlike my subject now . . . shall be my song;

It shall be witty and it shan't be long.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Impromptu, on Sir Thomas Robinson, of Rokeby, who was both tall and stupid. (MAHON, Chesterfield's Letters: Preface.)

On Tuesday, July 18, I found tall Sir Thomas Robinson sitting with Johnson.

BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, 18 July, 1763.

7 And heav'n had wanted one immortal song.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 197.

8 I see you have a singing face—a heavy, dull, sonata face.

FARQUHAR, The Inconstant. Act ii, sc. 1.

Come, sing now, sing; for I know you sing well;
I see you have a singing face.

JOHN FLETCHER, Wild Goose Chase. Act ii, 2.
You know you haven't got a singing face.

I know a man . . . sold a goodly manor for a song.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 10.

I bought it for a song.

JOHN CROWNE, Regulus. Act ii, sc. 1. (1694)

Hence comes the common saying, and commoner practice, of parting with money for a song.

SWIFT, Tale of a Tub. Sec. 9. (1704)

All this for a song!

WILLIAM CECIL, LORD BURGHLEY, Lord High Treasurer, when commanded by Queen Elizabeth to give Edmund Spenser a hundred pounds.

17 A beau and witting perish'd in the throng,
One died in metaphor, and one in song.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto v, l. 59.

<sup>1</sup> A very excellent good-conceited thing; after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it.

<sup>2</sup> Come, sing me a bawdy song; make me merry.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 16.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 3, l. 41.

To each word a warbling note.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act v, sc. 1, l. 405.

He hath songs for man or woman, of all sizes.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 191.

<sup>4</sup> Cicala to cicala is dear, and ant to ant, and hawk to hawk, but to me the muse and song.

THEOCRITUS, Idylls. No. 9, st. 2. (Lang, tr.)

Your song, divine poet, is to me even as sleep is to the weary. (Tale tuum carmen nobis, divine poeta, Quale sopor fessis.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. v, l. 45.

II—Song: Singing and Working

<sup>5</sup> The mouth which is busy with song is not busy with the grapes. (Bouche qui mord à la chanson ne mord pas à la grappe.)

EDMOND ABOUT, Les Mariages de Paris. Quoted as a proverb.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, The Maid of the Mill. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>7</sup> Gloomy cares will be lightened by song. (Minuentur atræ Carminē curæ.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 11, l. 35.

He who sings scares away his woes. (Quien Canta Sus males espanta.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 22.

<sup>8</sup> They sing, they will pay. (Ils chantent, ils payeront.)

CARDINAL MAZARIN, when he heard the Parisian populace singing, after the imposition of some new taxes. Originally a patois: "S'ils chantent la chansonnette, ils payeront."

Slavedrivers know well enough that when the slave is singing a hymn to liberty he is consoling himself for his slavery and not thinking about breaking his chain.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies, p. 94.

<sup>9</sup> Men, even when alone, lighten their labors by song, however rude. (Etiam singulorum fatigatio quamlibet se rudi modulatione solatur.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. i, ch. 10, sec. 16.

<sup>10</sup> Knitting and withal singing, and it seemed that her voice comforted her hands to work.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. i.

She makes her hand hard with labour, and her heart soft with pity: and when winter evenings fall early (sitting at her merry wheel), she sings a defiance to the giddy wheel of fortune . . . and fears no manner of ill because she means none.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, A Fair and Happy Milk-maid.

Verse sweetens toil, however rude the sound;

She feels no biting pang the while she sings,

Nor as she turns the giddy wheel around,

Revolves the sad vicissitudes of things.

RICHARD GIFFORD, Contemplation. (1753)

Samuel Johnson, who was fond of tinkering with other men's poetry, changed the second line of this stanza to "All at her work the village maiden sings."

The sad vicissitude of things.

LAURENCE STERNE, Sermon: The Character of Shmel. (1767)

III—Song: Any Words Good Enough

<sup>11</sup> Nothing is capable of being well set to music that is not nonsense.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 18.

To varnish nonsense with the charms of sound.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 219.

This particularly rapid, unintelligible patter, Isn't generally heard, and if it is it doesn't matter!

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act ii.

<sup>12</sup> For music any words are good enough.

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds. (Planché, tr.)

<sup>13</sup> That which is not worth saying is sung. (Ce qui ne vaut pas la peine d'être dit, on le chante.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Barbier de Séville. Act i, sc. 1.

Let a man try the very uttermost to speak what he means, before singing is had recourse to.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal, 17 Nov., 1843, referring to poetry.

<sup>14</sup> Why "words for music" are almost invariably trash now, though the words of Elizabethan songs are better than any music, is a gloomy and difficult question.

W. S. LANDOR, Essays: T. H. Bayly.

1 As for the words, there will be no difference between the words that are and are not set to music; both will conform to the same laws.
PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iii, sec. 398.

2 Soft words, with nothing in them, make a song.

EDMUND WALLER, To Mr. Creech.

IV—Song: Its Power

3 Her fingers witched the chords they passed along,

And her lips seemed to kiss the soul in song.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Theodric. l. 30.

How oft, from yonder window o'er the lake,
Her song of wild Helvetian swell and shake
Has made the rudest fisher bend his ear
And rest enchanted on his oar to hear!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Theodric, l. 42.

4 At ev'ry close she made, th' attending throng
Replied, and bore the burden of the song:
So just, so small, yet in so sweet a note,
It seem'd the music melted in the throat.

DRYDEN, The Flower and the Leaf, l. 197.

5 'Tis not in the high stars alone,
Nor in the cups of budding flowers,
Nor in the redbreast's mellow tone,
Nor in the bow that smiles in showers,
But in the mud and scum of things
There always, always something sings.

EMERSON, The Poet. Frag. 14.

The leaguèd might of trivial things
Wars with the soul that dreams and sings.

DON MARQUIS, The Singer.

6 When I but hear her sing, I fare
Like one that raisèd, holds his ear
To some bright star in the supremest
Round;

Through which, besides the light that's seen,
There may be heard, from Heaven within,
The rests of Anthems, that the Angels sound.

OWEN FELLTHAM, Lusoria. No. xxxiv. This is the poem beginning, "When, dearest, I but think of thee," usually attributed to Sir John Suckling, but Felltham claimed it, and modern criticism is disposed to support the claim.

Where thro' the long-drawn aisle and fretted vault

The pealing anthem swells the note of praise.

THOMAS GRAY, *Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard*, l. 39.

Compared with these, Italian trills are tame;
The tickled ears no heartfelt raptures raise.

BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night. l. 115.

The fineness which a hymn or psalm affords

Is when the soul unto the lines accords.

GEORGE HERBERT, A True Hymn.

7 Song wins grace with the gods above, and with the gods below. (Carmine di superi placantur, carmine Manes.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 138.

8 The song on its mighty pinions,
Took every living soul, and lifted it gently to heaven.

LONGFELLOW, Children of the Lord's Supper,
l. 44.

For doth not Song
To the whole world belong?
Is it not given wherever tears can fall,
Wherever hearts can melt or blushes glow,
Or mirth or sadness mingle as they flow,
A heritage to all?

ISA CRAIG KNOX, On the Centenary of Burns.

9 Listen to that song and learn it!
Half my kingdom would I give,

As I live,

If by such songs you would earn it!

LONGFELLOW, The Saga of King Olaf. Pt. v.

Such songs have power to quiet

The restless pulse of care,

And come like the benediction

That follows after prayer.

LONGFELLOW, The Day Is Done. St. 9.

10 Or bid the soul of Orpheus sing
Such notes as, warbled to the string,
Drew iron tears down Pluto's cheek.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 105.

But would you sing, and rival Orpheus' strain.
The wond'ring forests soon should dance again;
The moving mountains hear the powerful call.
And headlong streams hang list'ning in their fall!

POPE, Pastorals: Summer, l. 81.

3 I cannot sing the old songs
I sang long years ago,
For heart and voice would fail me,
And foolish tears would flow;
For bygone hours come o'er my heart
With each familiar strain;
I cannot sing the old songs,
Or dream those dreams again.

CHARLOTTE ALINGTON BARNARD, I Cannot Sing the Old Songs. Mrs. Barnard wrote under the pseudonym of Claribel. (c. 1860)

I cannot sing the old songs
Though well I know the tune,
Familiar as a cradle-song
With sleep-compelling croon;
Yet though I'm filled with music,
As choirs of summer birds,
"I cannot sing the old songs"—
I do not know the words.
ROBERT J. BURDETTE, Songs Without Words.

I can not sing the old songs now!
It is not that I deem them low,
'Tis that I can't remember how
They go.

CHARLES STUART CALVERLEY, Changed.

9 Those high songs of thine
That stung the sense like wine,
Or fell more soft than dew or snow by night.
SWINBURNE, To Victor Hugo. St. 6.

10 A love-song I had somewhere read,
An echo from a measured strain,
Beat time to nothing in my head
From some odd corner of the brain.
It haunted me, the morning long,
With weary sameness in the rhymes,
The phantom of a silent song,
That went and came a thousand times.
TENNYSON, The Miller's Daughter. St. 9.

11 You sing the same old song. (Cantilenam eandem canis.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 495. (Act iii, sc. 2.)

Bring the good old bugle, boys! we'll sing another song—
Sing it with a spirit that will start the world along—
Sing it as we used to sing it, fifty thousand strong,

While we were marching through Georgia.

While some, perhaps, will sigh.
THOMAS MOORE, Nets and Cages, l. 11.

13 And ever as he went some merry lay he sung.
JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 27.

14 Let the singing singers
With vocal voices, most vociferous,

In sweet vociferation out-vociferize
Even sound itself.

HENRY CAREY, Chrononhotonthologos. Act i,
sc. 1.

<sup>1</sup> He could songes make, and well endite.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 95.

He knew
Himself to sing, and build the lofty rhyme.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 10.

<sup>2</sup> On the beryl-rimmed rebecs of Ruby
Brought fresh from the hyaline streams,
She played on the banks of the Yuba
Such songs as she heard in her dreams.

THOMAS HOLLEY CHIVERS, Lily Adair.

Y'ought to hyeah dat gal a-warblin'

Robins, la'ks an' all dem things

Heish de mouffs an' hides dey faces

When Malindy sings.

PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR, *When Malindy
Sings*.

<sup>3</sup> A wandering minstrel I—

A thing of shreds and patches,
Of ballads, songs, and snatches,
And dreamy lullaby.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i.

Sing, minstrel, sing us now a tender song
Of meeting and parting, with the moon in it.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Ulysses. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>4</sup> A few can touch the magic string,
And noisy Fame is proud to win them:—

Alas for those that never sing,
But die with all their music in them!

O. W. HOLMES, The Voiceless. St. 1.

Songs may be mute; for songs may exist unsung, but voices exist only while they sound.

W. S. LANDOR, *Imaginary Conversations: Abbé
Delille and Landor*.

<sup>5</sup> Because the road was steep and long
And through a dark and lonely land,
God set upon my lips a song

And put a lantern in my hand.

JOYCE KILMER, Love's Lantern.

<sup>6</sup> In the ink of our sweat we will find it yet,
The song that is fit for men!

FREDERIC LAWRENCE KNOWLES, The Song.

<sup>7</sup> God sent his Singers upon earth
With songs of sadness and of mirth,
That they might touch the hearts of men,
And bring them back to heaven again.

LONGFELLOW, The Singers. St. 1.

He the sweetest of all singers.

LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha. Pt. vi, l. 21.

<sup>8</sup> He touch'd the tender stops of various quills,
With eager thought warbling his Doric lay.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 188.

<sup>9</sup> Sweetest the strain when in the song

The singer has been lost.

ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS, The Poet and the Poem.

<sup>10</sup>

In Heaven a spirit doth dwell
Whose heart-strings are a lute;
None sing so wildly well
As the angel Israfel.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, Israfel.

The angel Israfel, whose heart-strings are a lute, and who has the sweetest voice of all God's creatures.

The Koran.

<sup>11</sup>

The sweet psalmist of Israel.

Old Testament: II Samuel, xxiii, 1.

<sup>12</sup>

Scenes sung by him who sings no more!

His bright and brief career is o'er,

And mute his tuneful strains.

SCOTT, The Lord of the Isles. Canto iv, st. 11.

For him, no minstrel raptures swell.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto
vi, l. 8.

Why then a final note prolong,
Or lengthen out a closing song?

SCOTT, Marmion: L'Envoi.

He ceased. But still their trembling ears retained

The deep vibrations of his witching song.

JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence.
Canto i, st. 20.

<sup>13</sup>

Sing, siren, for thyself.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 47.

The Siren waits thee, singing song for song.

W. S. LANDOR, To Robert Browning.

<sup>14</sup>

Sing again, with your dear voice revealing
A tone

Of some world far from ours,
Where music and moonlight and feeling
Are one.

SHELLEY, To Jane.

<sup>15</sup>

And round thee with the breeze of song
To stir a little dust of praise.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxxv.

Short swallow-flights of song, that dip
Their wings in tears, and skim away.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xlviii.

<sup>16</sup>

Swift, swift, and bring with you
Song's Indian summer!

FRANCIS THOMPSON, A Carrier Song. St. 2.

<sup>17</sup>

I do not sing unbidden. (Non injussa cano.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. vi, l. 9.

<sup>18</sup>

Enough of mournful melodies, my lute!
Be henceforth joyous, or be henceforth mute.
Song's breath is wasted when it does but fan
The smouldering infelicity of man.

WILLIAM WATSON, Epigrams

VII—Song: Discords

1
The tenor's voice is spoilt by affectation,
And for the bass, the beast can only bellow;
In fact, he had no singing education,
An ignorant, noteless, timeless, tuneless fellow.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 87.

Heard at conventicle, where worthy men,
Misled by custom, strain celestial themes
Through the preest nostril.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 437.

2
And when that choir got up to sing,
I couldn't catch a word;
They sung the most doggonedest thing
A body ever heard!

WILL CARLETON, The New Church Organ.

Then they began to sing
That extremely lovely thing,

"Scherzando! ma non troppo, ppp."

W. S. GILBERT, The Story of Prince Agib.

3
Sir Joseph: Can you sing?

Ralph: I can hum a little, your honour.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i.

4
There is this vice in all singers, that if asked to sing among their friends they are never so inclined, but unasked they never leave off.
(Omnibus hoc vitium est cantoribus, inter amicos Ut numquam inducant animum cantare rogati, Injussi numquam desistant.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 1.

5
He praised unblushingly her notes, for he was false as they.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Army Headquarters.

6
Man was never meant to sing:
And all his mimic organs e'er expressed
Was but an imitative howl at best.

JOHN LANGHORNE, The Country Justice, ii, 223.

Their lean and flashy songs
Grate on their scranell pipes of wretched straw.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 123.

7
I count it but time lost to hear such a foolish song.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 3, l. 41.

Nay, now you are too flat
And mar the concord with too harsh a descant.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act i, sc. 2, l. 94.

VIII—Song and Love

8
It's the song of a merryman, moping mum,
Whose soul was sad, and whose glance was glum,
Who sipped no cup, and who craved no
crumb

As he sighed for the love of a ladye.

W. S. GILBERT, Yeomen of the Guard. Act i.

9
And when, beside me in the dale,
He carolled lays of love,
His breath lent fragrance to the gale
And music to the grove.
GOLDSMITH, A Ballad. (Vicar of Wakefield.
Ch. 8.)

The swain responsive to the milkmaid sung.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 117.

10
So she poured out the liquid music of her voice to quench the thirst of his spirit.

HAWTHORNE, Mosses from an Old Manse: The Birthmark.

She sang the tears into his eyes,
The heart out of his breast.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Maiden-Song.

11
Bow down, my song, before her presence high.

MORTON LUCE, Thysia. Sonnet iii.

12
But I can only offer you, my sweet,
The songs I made on many a night of stars.
Yet have I worshipped honor, loving you.

THEODORE MAYNARD, If I Had Ridden Horses.

As a skylark to the sky,
Up into thy breast I fly;
As a sea-shell of the sea
Ever shall I sing of thee.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Lines.

My heart is dead, my veins are cold:
I may not, must not, sing of love.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto ii, 30.

14
Every night he comes
With music of all sorts and songs composed
To her unworthiness: it nothing steads us
To chide him from our eaves; for he persists
As if his life lay on 't.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
iii, sc. 7, l. 39.

Thou hast by moonlight at her window sung
With feigning voice verses of feigning love.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 30.

15
Song like a rose should be;
Each rhyme a petal sweet;
For fragrance, melody,
That when her lips repeat
The words, her heart may know
What secret makes them so.

Love, only Love!

FRANK DEMPSTER SHERMAN, Song.

16
Singing is sweet, but be sure of this,
Lips only sing when they cannot kiss.

JAMES THOMSON (B. V.), Sunday Up the River.

And what's a careless kiss or so
To one remembered song?

THEODOSIA GARRISON, The Kerry Lads.

IX—Song: Some Familiar Refrains

1 In the evening by the moonlight.

JAMES A. BLAND. Refrain of song, written 1880. Bland was a negro and proclaimed himself as "the best Ethiopian song writer in the world."

2 If you want to win her hand,
Let the maiden understand

That she's not the only pebble on the beach.

HENRY BRAISTEAD, You're Not the Only Pebble on the Beach. (1896) Sung by the "Little Magnet," Lottie Gilson, for years.

3 Oh, you beautiful doll!

SEYMOUR BROWN. Title and refrain of song. (1911)

When Rip Van Winkle went away?

ALFRED BRYAN, Who Paid the Rent for Mrs. Rip Van Winkle? Featured by Sam Bernard in The Belle of Bond Street, 1914.

5 Tammany, Tammany,
Big Chief sits in his tepee,
Cheering braves to victory.

VINCENT BRYAN. Refrain of lyric first sung by Jeff de Angelis, in Fantana, at the Lyric Theatre, New York City, 1905. Official song of Tammany.

6 We won't come back till it's over over there.

GEORGE M. COHAN, Over There. Written in 1917; the official song of the American army, so to speak, for which Cohan received public thanks from President Wilson.

7 You can't keep a good man down.

M. F. CAREY. Title and refrain of popular song. (1900)

8 Let her go, Gallagher!

WILLIAM W. DELANEY. Title and refrain of popular song. (1887)

9 Just tell them that you saw me.

PAUL DRESSER. Title and refrain of song, published 1895.

10 Hail! Hail! the gang's all here,—

What the hell do we care,
What the hell do we care?

Hail! Hail! we're full of cheer,—
What the hell do we care, Bill!

D. A. ESTROM, Hail! Hail! the Gang's All Here. (1897) A popular song during the war with Spain, sung to an air from W. S. Gilbert's The Pirates of Penzance.

11 My gal's a high-born lady.

BARNEY FAGAN. Title and refrain of song. (1896)

12 The Moth and the Flame.

CLYDE FITCH. Title of play produced in 1898. Also title of song by George Taggart.

13 Down went McGinty to the bottom of the say,
And he must be very wet, for they haven't found him yet,

But they say his ghost comes round the docks
before the break of day,
Dressed in his best suit of clothes.

JOSEPH FLYNN, Down Went McGinty. First sung at Hyde & Behman's theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1880.

14 Keep the home fires burning, while your hearts are yearning,

Tho' your lads are far away they dream of home.

MRS. LENA GUILBERT FORD, Keep the Home Fires Burning. Theme suggested by Ivor Novello, who wrote the music. Published in 1915, and popular during the World War.

15 Old Black Joe.

STEPHEN COLLINS FOSTER. Title and refrain of song. (1860)

Oh! Susanna, don't you cry for me,
I've come from Alabama wid my banjo on my knee.

STEPHEN COLLINS FOSTER, Oh! Susanna. Sung for first time at Andrews' Eagle Ice Cream Saloon, Pittsburgh, Pa., by Nelson Kneass, 11 Sept., 1847, and soon a world-wide hit.

16 Sweet Adeline, My Adeline,
At night, dear heart, For you I pine.

In all my dreams, Your fair face beams;
You're the flower of my heart, Sweet Adeline.

RICHARD H. GIRARD, Sweet Adeline. (1903)

17 Many a heart is aching, if you could read them all,

Many the hopes that have vanished, after the ball.

CHARLES K. HARRIS, After the Ball. A popular song, written and composed by Harris in 1892. First sung by J. Aldrich Libby, in Charles Hoyt's A Trip to Chinatown.

18 Just break the news to mother.

CHARLES K. HARRIS. Title and refrain of song written in 1897 and popular during the war with Spain.

19 There'll be a hot time in the old town to-night!

JOSEPH HAYDEN. Refrain of popular song set to music by Theodore Metz in the fall of 1896, when the McIntyre and Heath Minstrels visited Old Town, La. Adopted by the American soldiers as the unofficial melody of the War with Spain.

20 Ain't it awful, Mabel?

JOHN EDWARD HAZZARD. Refrain of popular song of same name. (1908)

21 I wonder who's kissing her now.

HOUGH AND ADAMS. Refrain of song sung in The Prince of To-night. (1909)

1 For his last words were, Darling, I'll meet you

When the robins nest again.

FRANK HOWARD, When the Robins Nest Again. Popular song, written in 1883, the title taken from a melody by Barney Fagan. Howard's real name was Martindale. "When the robins nest again" became, in the slang of the day, synonymous with never. It is so used in John Luther Long's novel, Madame Butterfly.

With the robins I'll return.

JAMES J. WALKER. Title of lyric. (1907)

2 Take your clothes and go.

IRVING JONES. Title and refrain of popular song. (1897)

3 "Throw him down McCloskey," was to be the battle cry,—

"Throw him down McCloskey, you can lick him if you try."

JOHN W. KELLY, Throw Him Down McCloskey. A popular song made famous by Maggie Cline in 1890. Kelly was known as "The Rolling Mill Man," and is said to have got the inspiration for the song from a bar-room fight in Union Square, New York. Maloney the Rolling Mill Man was a song of which he was the author and which he sang with great success.

4 The waiter roars it through the hall,
"We don't give bread with one fishball!"

GEORGE MARTIN LANE, The Lay of the One Fishball. The ballad was used as the basis of a mock Italian opera, Il Pesceballo, by Professor Francis James Child and James Russell Lowell.

5 Everybody works but father.

CHARLES W. MCCLINTOCK. Title of popular song, published 1905.

6 Has anybody here seen Kelly?
Kelly from the Emerald Isle?

WILLIAM J. MCKENNA, Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly? An American version of an English song. Sung by Nora Bayes in The Jolly Bachelors, produced in 1908.

7 You can't lose me, Charlie.

HARRY S. MILLER. Title and refrain of popular song. (1893)

8 A winning way, a pleasant smile,
Dressed so neat, but quite in style,
Merry chaff your time to while,
Has Little Annie Rooney.

MICHAEL NOLAN, Annie Rooney. A popular song, written in 1890, and popularized by Lottie Gilson.

9 Somewhere, Somewhere, Beautiful Isle of Somewhere,
Land of the true, where we live anew,

Beautiful Isle of Somewhere!

JESSIE BROWN POUNDS, Beautiful Isle of Somewhere. (1901)

10 Take back your gold, for gold can never buy me.

Take back your bribe, and promise you'll be true.

MONROE H. ROSENFELD, Take Back Your Gold. (1897) Made famous in 1903 by Imogene Comer, at the Bowdoin Theatre, Boston.

11 Love me and the world is mine.

DAVID REED, JR. Refrain of song, published 1906.

12 I don't care if you never come back.

MONROE H. ROSENFELD. Title and refrain of popular song. (1897)

13 Johnny, get your gun, get your gun today,

Pigeons a-flying all de way,

If you want to get to Heaven in de good ole way,

Johnny, get your gun, get your gun.

MONROE H. ROSENFELD, Johnny, Get Your Gun. (1886)

14 A mademoiselle from Armenteers,

She hasn't been kissed in forty years,

Hinky, dinky, par-lee-voo.

RED ROWLEY, Mademoiselle from Armentières. "The folk song of the Great War."

15 Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay!

HENRY J. SAYERS. Title and refrain of song popularized by Lottie Collins in 1891.

17 In the good old summer time.

REN SHIELDS. Refrain of song, popularized by Blanche Ring in The Defender in 1902.

18 Yes, we have no bananas,

We have no bananas today.

FRANK SILVER AND IRVING COHEN, Yes, We Have No Bananas. (1923)

I claim that it ["Yes, we have no bananas"] is the greatest document that has been penned in the entire History of American Literature.

WILL ROGERS, The Illiterate Digest, p. 77.

19 Down where the Wurtzburger flows.

HARRY VON TILZER. Refrain of song published 1902. Sung by Nora Bayes, just entering vaudeville, who became known as "the Wurtzburger Girl." When she carried the song to London, the London Times asked "why she did not sing about the Thames" instead of some "western American stream."

20 In the shade of the old apple-tree.

HARRY WILLIAMS. Refrain of song published 1905.

1 I don't want to play in your yard,
I don't like you any more;
You'll be sorry when you see me
Sliding down our cellar door;
You can't holler down our rain barrel,
You can't climb our apple tree,
I don't want to play in your yard
If you won't be good to me.
PHILIP WINGATE, *I Don't Want to Play in
Your Yard*. (1894)

2 White wings, they never grow weary.
BANKS WINTER. Title of song. (1884)

3 Frankie and Albert were lovers, O Lordy, how they could love.

Swore to be true to each other, true as the stars above;

He was her man, and he done her wrong.

UNKNOWN, Frankie and Albert. The original version of Frankie and Johnnie, the so-called St. Louis version, relating the story of the murder of Albert, or Allen, Britt, by Frankie Baker, at St. Louis, 15 October, 1899. There are more than 200 versions of this song.

4 We're here because we're here,
Because we're here, because we're here;
Oh, here we are, and here we are,
And here we are again.

UNKNOWN, Here We Are. (Soldiers' song, 1916)

5 Ten thousand dollars for the folks back home.

UNKNOWN. Sung by A.E.F. funeral parties to the tune of Chopin's Funeral March.

Other refrains will be found under their appropriate headings; "Tell me, pretty maiden," for example, under MAD.

SONNET

6 Rafael made a century of sonnets.

ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. Sec. 2.

7 What is a sonnet? 'Tis the pearly shell
That murmurs of the far-off murmuring sea;
A precious jewel carved most curiously;
It is a little picture painted well.

RICHARD WATSON GILDER, The Sonnet.

8 There Sackville's sonnets sweetly sauced
And feath'ly fined be.

JASPER HEYWOOD, Metrical Preface to the Thyestes of Seneca.

9 For, of all compositions, he thought that the sonnet

Best repaid all the toil you expended upon it.
J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 368.

10 The sonnet is a trunk, and you must pack
With care, to ship frail baggage far away;
The octet is the trunk; sestet, the tray;

11 Tight, but not overloaded, is the knack.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Thoughts While Packing a Trunk.

A sonnet is a moment's monument,—
Memorial from the Soul's eternity
To one dead deathless hour.

D. G. ROSSETTI, The Sonnet.

12 A torturer of phrases into sonnets.

SCOTT, Auchindrane. Pt. iii, ch. 1.

13 I had rather than forty shillings I had my Book of Songs and Sonnets here.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 205.

14 Will you then write me a sonnet in praise of my beauty?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
v, sc. 2, l. 4.

Deep-brain'd sonnets.

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 209.

A halting sonnet of his own pure brain.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
v, sc. 4, l. 87.

15 The Sonnet is a world, where feelings caught
In webs of phantasy, combine and fuse
Their kindred elements 'neath mystic dews
Shed from the ether round man's dwelling wrought.

JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS, The Sonnet.

Spare thou no pains; carve thought's pure diamond

With fourteen facets, scattering fire and light.

JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS, The Sonnet.

Our Sonnet's world hath two fixed hemispheres:
This, where the sun with fierce strength masculine

Pours his keen rays and bids the noonday shine;
That, where the moon and the stars, concordant
powers,

Shed milder rays, and daylight disappears
In low melodious music of still hours.

JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS, The Sonnet.

16 A sonnet is a wave of melody:
From heaving waters of the impassioned soul
A billow of tidal music one and whole
Flows, in the "octave"; then, returning free,
Its ebbing surges in the "sestet" roll
Back to the deeps of Life's tumultuous sea.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, The Sonnet's Voice.

17 Scorn not the Sonnet; Critic, you have frowned,

Mindless of its just honours; with this key
Shakespeare unlocked his heart; the melody
Of this small lute gave ease to Petrarch's wound; . . . and, when a damp

Fell round the path of Milton, in his hand
The Thing became a trumpet; whence he blew

Soul-animating strains—alas, too few!

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Scorn Not the Sonnet.

"With this same key
Shakespeare unlocked his heart," once more!
Did Shakespeare? If so, the less Shakespeare he!

ROBERT BROWNING, House. St. 10.

Shall I sonnet-sing you about myself?

Do I live in a house you would like to see?
Is it scant of gear, has it store of pelf?

"Unlock my heart with a sonnet key?"

No: thanking the public, I must decline.

ROBERT BROWNING, House. St. 1.

"Scorn not the sonnet," though its strength be sapped,

Nor say malignant its inventor blundered;
The corpse that here in fourteen lines is wrapped
Had otherwise been covered with a hundred.
RUSSELL H. LOINES, On a Magazine Sonnet.

I—Sorrow: Definitions

1 Sorrow is knowledge.

BYRON, Manfred. Act i, sc. 1.

'Tis held that sorrow makes us wise.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cviii.

2 For Sorrow's a woman a man may take
And know, till his heart and body break.

SAMUEL HOFFENSTEIN, Sorrow That Cries.

3 There is no wisdom in useless and hopeless sorrow, but there is something in it so like virtue, that he who is wholly without it cannot be loved.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Mrs. Thrale, 1781.

4 Sorrow is a kind of rust of the soul, which every new idea contributes in its passage to scour away.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 47.

5 Sorrow, the great idealizer.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Spenser.

6 Our size of sorrow,
Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great
As that which makes it.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 15, l. 4.

Sorrow breaks seasons and reposing hours,
Makes the night morning, and the noon-tide
night.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 76.

7 Sorrow is held the eldest child of sin.

JOHN WEBSTER, Duchess of Malfi. Act v, sc. 5.

Sorrow is good for nothing but sin.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4232.

8 Where there is sorrow, there is holy ground.
OSCAR WILDE, De Profundis.

II—Sorrow: Apothegms

9 Nothing comes to us too soon but sorrow.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.

10 The busy bee has no time for sorrow.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

Sorrow preys upon Its solitude. . . .
The busy have no time for tears.
BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act iv, sc. 1.

11 All sorrows are less with bread.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 55.

Fat sorrow is better than lean sorrow.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1507.

A lean sorrow is hardest to bear.
SARA ORNE JEWETT, Life of Nancy, p. 278.

There are few sorrows, however poignant, in which a good income is of no avail.
LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts.

12 If you wish to live a life free from sorrow, think of what is going to happen as if it had already happened.

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 158.

Why should we Anticipate our sorrows? 'Tis like those
That die for fear of death.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, The Sophy.

To grieve for evils is often wrong; but it is much more wrong to grieve without them.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters. Vol. ii, p. 23.

See also TROUBLE: NEVER TROUBLE TROUBLE.

13 Sorrow comes unsent for.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4230.

Sorrows are visitors that come without invitation.
C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 5.

14 When sorrow is asleep wake it not.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5569.

When sorrow sleepeth, wake it not,
But let it slumber on.
MARY A. STODART, Song.

Without the door let sorrow lie.
GEORGE WITHER, Christmas.

15 Sink's my sad soul with sorrow to the grave.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 543. (Pope, tr.)
Bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

Old Testament: Genesis, xlii, 38.

Smit with exceeding sorrow unto Death.
TENNYSON, The Lover's Tale, l. 590.

16 The world will never be long without some good reason to hate the unhappy.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Adventurer. No. 99.

17 We often console ourselves for being unhappy by a certain pleasure in appearing so.
(On se console souvent d'être malheureux) par un certain plaisir qu'on trouve à le paraître.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No. 573.

1 Humanity is fortunate, because no man is unhappy except by his own fault. (Bono loco res humanæ sunt, quod nemo nisi vitio suo miser est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, 15.

2 I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it with thee;

For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse Than priests and fanes that lie.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 240.

3 More in sorrow than in anger.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 232.

4 Hysterica passio, down, thy climbing sorrow.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 58.

All's cheerless, dark, and deadly.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 290.

Affliction may one day smile again; and till then, sit thee down, sorrow!

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 316.

5 To show an unfelt sorrow is an office

Which the false man does easy.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 142.

6 Past sorrows, let us moderately lament them; For those to come, seek wisely to prevent them.

JOHN WEBSTER, Duchess of Malfi. Act iii, sc. 2.

III—Sorrow: A Blessing

7 The path of sorrow, and that path alone, Leads to the land where sorrow is unknown; No trav'ller ever reach'd that blest abode Who found not thorns and briars in his road.

COWPER, An Epistle to a Protestant Lady in France, l. 9.

8 Who ne'er his bread in sorrow ate,
Who ne'er the mournful midnight hours
Weeping upon his bed has sate,
He knows you not, ye Heavenly Powers.
(Wer nie sein Brod Thränen ass,
Wer nicht die kummervollen Nächte
Auf seinem Bette weinend sass,
Der kennt euch nicht, ihr himmlischen Mächt.)

GOETHE, Wilhelm Meister. Bk. ii, ch. 13.

(Longfellow, tr., used as the motto for Hyperion. Bk. i.)

9 I walked a mile with Sorrow
And ne'er a word said she;
But, oh, the things I learned from her

When Sorrow walked with me.

ROBERT B. HAMILTON, Along the Road.

10 How beautiful, if sorrow had not made
Sorrow more beautiful than Beauty's self.
KEATS, Hyperion. Bk. i, l. 35.

Come then, Sorrow! Sweetest Sorrow!
Like an own babe I nurse thee on my breast:
I thought to leave thee, And deceive thee,
But now of all the world I love thee best.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iv, l. 279.

11 A grace within his soul hath reigned
Which nothing else can bring;
Thank God for all that I have gained
By that high sorrowing.

RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, Sorrow.

Do not cheat thy heart and tell her

"Grief will pass away,
Hope for fairer times in future,
And forget to-day."

Tell her, if you will, that sorrow
Need not come in vain;
Tell her that the lesson taught her
Far outweighs the pain.

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Friend Sorrow.

12 This sorrow's heavenly;
It strikes where it doth love.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 21.

13 All pains are nothing in respect of this,
All sorrows short that gain eternal bliss.

EDMUND SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet lxiii.

14 Lives there whom pain hath evermore pass'd by

And sorrow shunned with an averted eye?
Him do thou pity, him above the rest,
Him of all hopeless mortals most unblest'd.

WILLIAM WATSON, Epigrams.

15 A soul, by force of sorrows high,
Uplifted to the purest sky
Of undisturbed humanity!
WORDSWORTH, The White Doe of Rylstone.
Canto ii, l. 585.

IV—Sorrow: Its Relief

16 Sing away sorrow, cast away care.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 8.

17 For 'tis some ease our sorrows to reveal
If they to whom we shall impart our woes,
Seem but to feel a part of what we feel,
And meet us with a sigh, but at the close.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The Tragedy of Cleopatra.
Act iv, sc. 1.

Some ease it is hid sorrows to declare.

FRANCIS DAVISON, A Complaint.

So sorrow is cheered by being poured
From one vessel into another.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Misery.

'Tis something to lighten with words a fated sorrow. (Est aliquid, fatale malum per verba levare.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 1, l. 59.

See also GRIEF: VOCAL AND SILENT.

1 Remove sorrow from thee: for sorrow hath killed many, and there is no profit therein.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxx, 23.

Chase Anguish, and doubt, and fear, and sorrow, and pain,

From mortal or immortal minds.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 557.

2 And sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxxv, 10.

Sorrow is never long without a dawn of ease.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. xi, p. 99.

3 Earth has no sorrow that Heaven cannot heal.

THOMAS MOORE, Come, Ye Disconsolate.

The longest sorrow finds at last relief.

WILLIAM ROWLEY, New Wonder. Act iv. sc. 1.

4 The wounds of the unhappy endure through the night. (In noctis spatium miserorum vulnera durant.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. No. 121.

5 Wherever sorrow is, relief would be.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 5, 86.

6 For gnarling sorrow hath less power to bite The man that mocks at it and sets it light.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 292.

Fell sorrow's tooth doth never rankle more Than when it bites, but lanceth not the sore.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 302.

In wooing sorrow let's be brief, Since, wedding it, there is such length in grief.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 1, l. 93.

7 If sorrow can admit society, Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 38.

8 Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp'd, Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 4, 36.

9 To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal;

But sorrow flouted at is double death.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iii, sc. 1, 245.

10 Stay but to-morrow, and your present sorrow will be weary, and will lie down to rest.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Sermons. Vol. i, p. 327.

V—Sorrow: The Common Lot

11 Why waste a word, or let a tear escape, While other sorrows wait you in the world?

ROBERT BROWNING, Balaustion's Adventure.

12 How selfish Sorrow ponders on the past,

And clings to thoughts now better far removed!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 96.

13 But sorrow return'd with the dawning of morn,

And the voice in my dreaming ear melted away.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Soldier's Dream.

14 Men die, but sorrow never dies;

The crowding years divide in vain,

And the wide world is knit with ties

Of common brotherhood in pain.

SUSAN COOLIDGE, The Cradle Tomb in Westminster Abbey.

But when I came to Heartbreak Hill, Silver touched the sea;

I knew that many and many a soul

Was climbing close to me;

I knew I walked that weary way

In a great company.

HELEN GRAY CONE, Heartbreak Road.

15 When I was young, I said to Sorrow, "Come, and I will play with thee!"

He is near me now all day,

And at night returns to say,

"I will come again to-morrow—

I will come and stay with thee."

AUBREY DE VERE, Song: When I Was Young.

16 Heavy the sorrow that bows the head

When love is alive and hope is dead!

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i.

17 To each his suff'rings; all are men,

Condemn'd alike to groan,—

The tender for another's pain,

Th' unfeeling for his own.

Yet ah! why should they know their fate?

Since sorrow never comes too late.

THOMAS GRAY, On a Distant Prospect of Eton College, l. 91.

18 Sorrows our portion are: ere hence we go,

Crosses we must have; or, hereafter, woe.

ROBERT HERRICK, Sorrows.

19 When sparrows build and the leaves break forth

My old sorrow wakes and cries.

JEAN INGELOW, Supper at the Mill: Mother's Song.

20 O, sorrow! Why dost borrow

Heart's lightness from the merriment of May?

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iv, l. 164.

To Sorrow I bade good morrow,

And thought to leave her far away behind;

But cheerly, cheerly, She loves me dearly;

She is so constant to me, and so kind.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iv, l. 173.

1 I have a silent sorrow here,
A grief I'll ne'er impart.
KOTZEBUE, The Stranger. Act iv, sc. 1.
(Thompson, tr.)

2 Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by? behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow.

Old Testament: Lamentations, i, 12.

Much then I learned and much can show
Of human guilt and human woe,
Yet ne'er have in my wanderings known
A wretch whose sorrows matched my own!
SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto iv, st. 23.

3 Believe me, every man has his secret sorrows, which the world knows not; and oftentimes we call a man cold when he is only sad.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iii, ch. 4.

Into each life some rain must fall,
Some days must be dark and dreary.

LONGFELLOW, The Rainy Day.

4 Our days and nights
Have sorrows woven with delights.
MALHERBE, To Cardinal Richelieu. (Longfellow, tr.) See also JOY AND SORROW.

5 And Sorrow tracketh wrong,
As echo follows song.

HARRIET MARTINEAU, Hymn: On, on, for ever.
See also under RETRIBUTION.

6 A weary lot is thine, fair maid,
A weary lot is thine!
To pull the thorn thy brow to braid,
And press the rue for wine!
SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto iii, st. 28.

7 There is no day without sorrow. (Nulla dies mærore caret.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 77.

Each new morn
New widows howl, new orphans cry, new sorrows
Strike heaven on the face.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 4.

8 When sorrows come, they come not single spies,

But in battalions!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. v, l. 78. See also under MISFORTUNE.

9 O, if thou teach me to believe this sorrow,
Teach thou this sorrow how to make me die.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 29.

I will instruct my sorrows to be proud;
For grief is proud and makes his owner stoop.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 68.

Here I and sorrows sit;
Here is my throne, bid kings come bow to it.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 73.

10 But now will canker sorrow eat my bud,
And chase the native beauty from his cheek.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 82.

Hath sorrow struck
So many blows upon this face of mine,
And made no deeper wounds?
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 277.

11 Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint. l. 7.

Ah, do not, when my heart hath 'scaped this
sorrow,

Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe;
Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
To linger out a purposed overthrow.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xc.

12 I have, as when the sun doth light a storm,
Buried this sigh in wrinkle of a smile:
But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming gladness,
Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc.
1, l. 37.

13 Sorrow so royally in you appears,
That I will deeply put the fashion on.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 2, l. 51.

14 It stirs

Too much of suffocating sorrow!
SHELLEY, Rosalind and Helen, l. 66.

15 O Sorrow, wilt thou rule my blood,
Be sometimes lovely like a bride,
And put thy harsher moods aside,
If thou wilt have me wise and good?
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lix, st. 2.

Your sorrow, only sorrow's shade,
Keeps real sorrow far away.

TENNYSON, Margaret. St. 4.

16 Some natural sorrow, loss, or pain,
That has been, and may be again.
WORDSWORTH, The Solitary Reaper, l. 23.

I—Soul: Definitions

17 Soul is the Man.

THOMAS CAMPION, Are You What Your Fair Looks Express?

18 The soul of man is larger than the sky,
Deeper than ocean, or the abysmal dark
Of the unfathom'd centre.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, To Shakespeare.

19 A soul,—a spark of the never-dying flame that separates man from all the other beings of earth.

J. FENIMORE COOPER, Afloat and Ashore. Ch. 12.

1 Our souls sit close and silently within,
And their own web from their own entrails spin;

And when eyes meet far off, our sense is such,
That, spider-like, we feel the tenderest touch.

DRYDEN, Marriage-à-la-Mode. Act ii, sc. 1.

2 The Supreme Critic on the errors of the past and the present, and the only prophet of that which must be, is that great nature in which we rest as the earth lies in the soft arms of the atmosphere; that Unity, that Over-Soul, within which every man's particular being is contained and made one with all other.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: The Over-Soul.

The one thing in the world, of value, is the active soul.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: The American Scholar.

3 Whether or not the philosophers care to admit that we have a soul, it seems obvious that we are equipped with something or other which generates dreams and ideals, and which sets up values.

JOHN ERSKINE. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 39.)

4 By the word soul, or psyche, I mean that inner consciousness which aspires. By prayer I do not mean a request preferred to a deity; I mean . . . intense aspiration.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, The Story of My Heart.

5 The soul's a sort of sentimental wife,
That prays and whimpers of the higher life.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, The Decadent to His Soul.

6 For every soul is a circus,
And every mind is a tent,
And every heart is a sawdust ring
Where the circling race is spent.

VACHEL LINDSAY, Every Soul is a Circus.

7 Hands of invisible spirits touch the strings
Of that mysterious instrument, the soul,
And play the prelude of our fate. We hear
The voice prophetic, and are not alone.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i, sc. 3, l. 111.

8 Men do not know what the nature of the soul is, whether it is engendered with us or whether it is infused into us at our birth; whether it perishes with us, dissolved by death, or whether it haunts the gloomy shades and bottomless pits of Orcus, or whether, by divine influence, it infuses itself into other animals. (Ignoratur enim, quæ sit natura animæ; Nata sit, an contra nascentibus insinuetur; Et simul intereat nobiscum, morte diremta, An tenebras Orci visat, vastasque lacunas: An pecudes alias divinitus insinuet se.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 113.

So the soul cannot exist separate from the body, and the man himself, whose body seems as it were the urn of the soul.

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 553.

My mind is incapable of conceiving such a thing as a soul. I may be in error, and man may have a soul; but I simply do not believe it.

THOMAS A. EDISON, Do We Live Again?

Nobody knows how the idea of a soul or the supernatural started. It probably had its origin in the natural laziness of mankind.

JOHN B. WATSON, Behaviorism, p. 3.

9 A soul is a troublesome possession, and when man developed it he lost the Garden of Eden.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM, Red.

10 The soul on earth is an immortal guest,
Compelled to starve at an unreal feast.

HANNAH MORE, Reflections of King Hezekiah, l. 125.

11 There is a divinity within our breast. (Deus est in pectore nostro.)

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 4, l. 93.

12 Of all things which a man has, next to the gods, his soul is the most divine and most truly his own.

PLATO, Laws. Bk. iv, sec. 252.

13 The soul has in itself a capacity for affection, and loves just as naturally as it perceives, understands, and remembers.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 7.

14 Do you ask where the Supreme Good dwells? In the soul. And unless the soul be pure and holy, there is no room in it for God. (Quis sit summi boni locus quæris? Animus. Hic nisi purus ac sanctus est, deum non capit.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. 87, 21.

The soul is more powerful than any sort of fortune; . . . of its own power it can produce a happy life, or a wretched one. (Valentior enim omni fortuna animus est.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. 98, 2.

The soul is our king. (Rex noster est animus.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. 114, 24.

The soul has this proof of its divinity: that divine things delight it. (Animus hoc habet argumentum divinitatis suæ, quod illum divina delectant.)

SENECA, Naturales Questiones. Bk. i, Præfatio.

15 Mine eternal jewel.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 68.

1 My soul is an enchanted Boat,
Which, like a sleeping swan, doth float
Upon the silver waves of thy sweet singing;
And thine doth like an Angel sit
Beside the helm conducting it,
Whilst all the winds with melody are ringing.
SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act ii, sc. 5,
l. 72.

2 The human soul is a silent harp in God's quiere, whose strings need only to be swept by the divine breath to chime in with the harmonies of creation.
H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 10 Aug., 1838.

3 What then do you call your soul? What idea have you of it? You cannot of yourselves, without revelation, admit the existence within you of anything but a power unknown to you of feeling and thinking.

VOLTAIRE, A Philosophical Dictionary: Soul.

4 But who would force the Soul tilts with a straw
Against a Champion cased in adamant.
WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii,
No. 7.

For the Gods approve
The depth, and not the tumult, of the soul.
WORDSWORTH, Laodamia, l. 75.

5 Amazing pomp! redouble this amaze;
Ten thousand add; add twice ten thousand
more;
Then weigh the whole; one soul outweighs
them all.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 995.

6 And I have written three books on the soul,
Proving absurd all written hitherto,
And putting us to ignorance again.
ROBERT BROWNING, Cleon, l. 57.

II—Soul: Apothegms

7 My soul still flies above me for the quarry it shall find.

WILLIAM ROSE BENÉT, The Falconer of God.

8 The soul's Rialto hath its merchandise;
I barter curl for curl upon that mart.
E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese. No. xix.

And he that makes his soul his surety,
I think, does give the best security.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto i, l. 203.

When by habit a man cometh to have a bargaining soul, its wings are cut so that it can never soar.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 253.

Most people sell their souls and live with a good conscience on the proceeds.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMYTH, Afterthoughts.

9 This soul, to whom Luther and Mahomet were Prisons of flesh.

JOHN DONNE, The Progress of the Soul. Song
i, st. 7.

10 The soul is lost by mimicking soul.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table Talk.

11 The soul is not where it lives, but where it loves.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentium.

12 Spontaneously to God should tend the soul,
Like the magnetic needle to the Pole.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 115.
See also under CONSTANCY.

13 Why do you hasten to remove anything which hurts your eye, while if something affects your soul, you postpone the cure until next year?

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 38.

14 Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

New Testament: Luke, xii, 19; Ecclesiastes, viii, 15. See also under EATING.

15 For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

New Testament: Matthew, xvi, 26.

16 Ah, what a dusty answer gets the soul
When hot for certainties in this our life!

GEORGE MEREDITH, Modern Love. St. 50.

Dusty Answer.

ROSAMOND LEHMAN. Title of novel.

17 Lack of wealth is easily repaired; but poverty of soul is irreparable. (La pauvreté des biens

III—Souls: Good and Bad

11 Calm Soul of all things! make it mine
 To feel, amid the city's jar,
 That there abides a place of thine,
 Man did not make, and can not mar!
 MATTHEW ARNOLD, Lines Written in Kensington Gardens, l. 37.

12 A soul as white as Heaven.
 BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Maid's Tragedy. Act iv, sc. 1.

The man who in this world can keep the whiteness of his soul is not likely to lose it in any other.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp.

13 God help all poor souls lost in the dark.
 ROBERT BROWNING, Heretic's Tragedy. St. 10.
 'T is an awkward thing to play with souls,
 And matter enough to save one's own.
 ROBERT BROWNING, A Light Woman.

14 I trust in my own soul, that can perceive
 The outward and the inward, Nature's good
 And God's.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act i.

15 Of what avail to have a soul derived from above, and to lift the head on high, if, after the manner of beasts, men go astray? (Quid mentem traxisse polo, quid profuit altum Erexisse caput, pecudum si more pererrant?)
 CLAUDIAN, De Raptu Proserpinæ. Bk. iii, l. 41.

16 Two souls, alas! reside within my breast,
 And each withdraws from and repels its brother.

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 2. (Taylor, tr.)

I feel two natures struggling within me.
 GEORGE GRAY BARNARD. Title of group of statuary.

The lark soars up in the air,
 The toad sits tight in his hole;
 And I would I were certain which of the pair
 Were the truer type of my soul!
 F. ANSTEY, Stanza Written in Depression Near Dulwich.

In me there meet a combination of antithetical elements which are at eternal war with one another.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i.

17 Awake, my soul, and with the sun
 Thy daily course of duty run.

BISHOP THOMAS KEN, Evening Hymn.

Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul,
 As the swift seasons roll!
 Leave thy low-vaulted past!
 Let each new temple, nobler than the last,
 Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
 Till thou at length art free,
 Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea!

O. W. HOLMES, The Chambered Nautilus.

18 I count that soul exceeding small
 That lives alone by book and creed,—
 A soul that has not learned to read.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Larger College.

Ah! there be souls none understand;
 Like clouds, they cannot touch the land.
 Unanchored ships, they blow and blow,
 Sail to and fro, and then go down
 In unknown seas that none shall know,
 Without one ripple of renown.

Call these not fools; the test of worth
 Is not the hold you have of earth.
 Ay, there are gentlest souls sea-blown
 That know not any harbor known.

Now it may be the reason is,
 They touch on fairer shores than this.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Ship in the Desert, Canto xxii.

19 There was a little Man, and he had a little
 Soul;

And he said, "Little Soul, let us try, try, try!"
 THOMAS MOORE, Little Man and Little Soul.

1 The soul's calm sunshine and the heartfelt joy.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 168.

2 The soul alone renders us noble. (Animus facit nobilem.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xlv, 5.

3 Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;
 And there I see such black and grained spots
 As will not leave their tinct.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 89.

4 The soul of man is like the rolling world,
 One half in day, the other dipt in night;
 The one has music and the flying cloud,
 The other, silence and the wakeful stars.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Horton.

My soul is a dark ploughed field
 In the cold rain;

My soul is a broken field
 Ploughed by pain.

SARA TEASDALE, The Broken Field.

5 A sinful soul possess'd of many gifts,
 A spacious garden full of flowering weeds.
 TENNYSON, To —.

What profits now to understand
 The merits of a spotless shirt—
 A dapper boot—a little hand—
 If half the little soul is dirt.

TENNYSON, The New Timon and the Poets.
 (Published in Punch, 28 Feb., 1846, in answer to attack made by Bulwer-Lytton in The New Timon when Tennyson received a pension.)

6 "Two things," the wise man said, "fill me with awe:

The starry heavens and the moral law."
 Nay, add another wonder to thy roll,—
 The living marvel of the human soul!

HENRY VAN DYKE, Stars and the Soul.

7 And keeps that palace of the soul serene.

EDMUND WALLER, Of Tea, l. 9.

The palace of the soul.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 6. See also under SKULL.

8 A charge to keep I have,
 A God to glorify:

A never-dying soul to save,
 And fit it for the sky.

CHARLES WESLEY, Christian Fidelity.

IV—Soul and Body

9 To man, propose this test—
 Thy body at its best,
 How far can it project thy soul on its lone way?

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra. St. 8.

10 Whoe'er thou art, O reader, know
 That Death has murdered Johnny!
 And here his body lies fu' low—
 For saul he ne'er had ony.

ROBERT BURNS, On Wee Johnny. John Wilson, the printer of Burns's poems, at Kilmarnock.

11 A fiery soul, which working out its way,
 Fretted the pigmy body to decay,
 And o'er informed the tenement of clay.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 156.

He was one of a lean body and visage, as if his eager soul, biting for anger at the clog of his body, desired to fret a passage through it.

THOMAS FULLER, Life of the Duke of Alva.

For the sword outwears its sheath,
 And the soul wears out the breast.

BYRON, So We'll Go No More a Roving.

12 Though a sound body cannot restore an unsound mind, yet a good soul can, by its virtue, render the body the best possible.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato. See also MIND AND BODY.

13 It is much more necessary to cure the soul than the body, for death is better than a bad life. (Ψυχὴν σώματος ἀναγκαϊότερον ἰᾶσθαι τοῦ γὰρ κακῶς ζῆν τοῦ τεθνᾶναι κρείσσον.)

EPICETUS [?], Encheiridion. Frag. 32.

14 The soul needs few things, the body many.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

The body is sooner dressed than the soul.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

15 The body, laden with yesterday's vices, drags down the soul as well, and fastens to the earth a fragment of the divine spirit. (Corpus onustum Hesternis vitiis animum quoque pręgravat Una Atque adfigit humo divinę particulam aurę.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 77.

16 The limbs will quiver and move after the soul is gone.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (NORTHCOTE, Johnsoniana, p. 487.)

17 There is nothing the body suffers that the soul may not profit by.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways. Ch. 1.

18 The soul is nothing apart from the senses.

PROTAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Protagoras. Bk. ix, sec. 51.)

The body is the socket of the soul.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

The perfect body is itself the soul.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Before a Statue of Achilles.

19 It is the soul, and not the strong-box, which should be filled. (Animum impleri debere, non arcam.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcii, 32.

1 So every spirit, as it is more pure,
And hath in it the more of heavenly light,
So it the fairer body doth procure
To habit in, and it more fairly dight,
With cheerful grace and amiable sight.
For, of the soul, the body form doth take,
For soul is form, and doth the body make.

EDMUND SPENSER, Hymn in Honour of Beauty, l. 127.

For what is form, or what is face,
But the soul's index, or its case?

NATHANIEL COTTON, Pleasure.

2 How should I gauge what beauty is her dole,
Who cannot see her countenance for her soul,
As birds see not the casement for the sky?
And as 'tis check they prove its presence by,
I know not of her body till I find
My flight debarred the heaven of her mind.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Her Portrait.

3 Our life is but the Soul made known by its fruits, the body. The whole duty of man may be expressed in one line: Make to yourself a perfect body.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 21 June, 1840.

V—Soul: The Unconquered Soul

4 No coward soul is mine,
No trembler in the world's storm-troubled sphere:

I see Heaven's glories shine,
And faith shines equal, arming me from fear.

EMILY BRONTË, Last Verses.

5 My feet are heavy now but on I go,
My head erect beneath the tragic years.

JOHN DAVIDSON, I Felt the World A-spinning on Its Nave.

6 The soul selects her own society,
Then shuts the door;
On her divine majority
Obtrude no more.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 13.

7 Awake, my soul! stretch every nerve,
And press with vigour on;
A heavenly race demands thy zeal,
And an immortal crown.

PHILIP DODDRIDGE, Zeal and Vigour in the Christian Race.

8 Let fortune empty her whole quiver on me.
I have a soul that, like an ample shield,
Can take in all, and verge enough for more.

DRYDEN, Don Sebastian. Act i, sc. 1.

Give ample room, and verge enough.

THOMAS GRAY, The Bard, l. 51.

9 Out of the night that covers me,
Black as the pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods may be
For my unconquerable soul.
W. E. HENLEY, Invictus.

Out of the light that dazzles me,
Bright as the sun from pole to pole,
I thank the God I know to be
For Christ, the Conqueror of my soul.
DOROTHEA DAY, Victus.

Dame Nature doubtless has designed
A man the monarch of his mind.

JOHN BYROM, Careless Content.

10 It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of my fate:
I am the captain of my soul.
W. E. HENLEY, Invictus.

Arise, O Soul, and gird thee up anew, Though the black camel Death kneel at thy gate;

No beggar thou that thou for alms shouldst sue:
Be the proud captain still of thine own fate.
JAMES B. KENYON, The Black Camel.

Mistress of mine own self and mine own soul.

TENNYSON, The Foresters. Act iv, sc. 1.

See also under SELF-CONTROL.

11 God gave thy soul brave wings; put not those feathers

Into a bed, to sleep out all ill weathers.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 14.

12 Only a sweet and virtuous soul,
Like seasoned timber, never gives,
But though the whole world turn to coal,
Then chiefly lives.

GEORGE HERBERT, Virtue.

13 A frame of adamant, a soul of fire,
No dangers fright him, and no labours tire.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, *The Vanity of Human
Wishes*, l. 191.

14 Give thanks, O heart, for the high souls
That point us to the deathless goals. . . .
The company of souls supreme
The conscripts of the Mighty Dream. . . .
Brave souls that took the perilous trail
And felt the vision could not fail.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Conscripts of the Dream.

15 Lord of myself, accountable to none.
But to my conscience, and my God alone.

JOHN OLDEHAM, Satire Addressed to a Friend.

16 Make thee a soul that will abide; only that endures to the end. (Iam molire animum, qui duret; . . . Solus ad extremos permanet ille rogos.)

OVID, Ars Poetica. Bk. ii, l. 119.

1 'Tis my soul
That I thus hold erect as if with stays,
And decked with daring deeds instead of ribbons.

EDMOND ROSTAND, Cyrano de Bergerac. Act i, sc. 4.

2 I love a soul not all of wood,
Predestined to be good,
But true to the backbone
Unto itself alone
And false to none;
Born to its own affairs,
Its own joys and own cares;
By which the work that God begun
Is finished, and not undone.

H. D. THOREAU, Conscience.

3 They have mighty souls beating in narrow breasts. (Ingentes animos angusto in corpore versant.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 83.

Little bodies have great souls.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

What a mighty soul in a narrow bosom. (Welch' höher Geist in einer engen Brust.)

GOETHE, Torquato Tasso. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 199.

4 What do you suppose will satisfy the soul,
except to walk free and own no superior?

WALT WHITMAN, Laws for Creations.

Ever the undiscouraged, resolute, struggling soul of man; . . .

Ever the soul dissatisfied, curious, unconvinced
at last;

Struggling to-day the same—battling the same.

WALT WHITMAN, Life.

O my brave soul! O farther farther sail!

O daring joy, but safe! are they not all the seas of God?

O farther, farther, farther sail!

WALT WHITMAN, Passage to India. Sec. 9.

5 And the most difficult of tasks to keep Heights which the soul is competent to gain.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 138.

VI—Soul: Its Last Journey

6 To-day the journey is ended,
I have worked out the mandates of fate;

Naked, alone, undefended,

I knock at the Uttermost Gate.

Behind is life and its longing,

Its trial, its trouble, its sorrow,

Beyond is the Infinite Morning

Of a day without a to-morrow.

WENONAH STEVENS ABBOTT, A Soul's Soliloquy.

7 There's a quiet harbor somewhere
For the poor a-weary soul.

H. H. BROWNELL, The Burial of the Dane.

8 A happy soul, that all the way

To heaven hath a summer day. . . .
And, when life's sweet fable ends,
Soul and body part like friends:—
No quarrels, murmurs, no delay;
A kiss, a sigh, and so away.

RICHARD CRASHAW, In Praise of Lessius's Rules of Health, l. 33.

9 Gentle little soul, hastening away, my body's guest and comrade, whither goest thou now, pale, fearful, pensive, not jesting, as of old?
(Animula, vagula, blandula
Hospes comesque corporis,
Quæ nunc abibis in loca,
Pallidula, rigida, nudula,
Nec, ut soles, dabis joca?)

HADRIAN, Morientis, Ad Animam Suam
(ÆLIUS SPARTIANUS, Life of the Emperor Hadrian.)

Ah! gentle, fleeting, wav'ring sprite,
Friend and associate of this clay!

To what unknown region borne,
Wilt thou now wing thy distant flight?

No more with wonted humour gay,

But pallid, cheerless, and forlorn.

HADRIAN, Ad Animam Suam. (Byron, tr.)

Vital spark of heav'nly flame,

Quit, oh quit, this mortal frame!

Trembling, hoping, ling'ring, flying,

Oh, the pain, the bliss of dying! . . .

Hark! they whisper; angels say,

Sister Spirit, come away!

POPE, The Dying Christian to His Soul. (The Spectator, 15 Nov., 1711.)

Poor little pretty, fluttering thing,

Must we no longer live together?

And dost thou prune thy trembling wing,

To take thy flight thou know'st not whither?

Thy humorous vein, thy pleasing folly

Lies all neglected, all forgot:

And pensive, wavering, melancholy,

Thou dread'st and hop'st thou know'st not what.

HADRIAN, Ad Animam Suam. (Prior, tr.)

Ma petite âme, ma mignonne,

Tu t'en vas donc, ma fille, et Dieu sçache où tu
vas:

Tu pars seulette, nuë, et tremblotante, hélas!

Que deviendra ton humeur folichonne!

Que deviendront tant de jolis ébats!

HADRIAN, Ad Animam Suam. (Fontanelle, tr.)

Prior quotes Fontanelle's version before his own.

10 Ah, the souls of those that die
Are but sunbeams lifted higher.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv:
The Cloisters, l. 19.

The dust's for crawling, heaven's for flying,
Wherefore, O Soul, whose wings are grown,
Soar upward to the sun!

EDGAR LEE MASTERS, The Spoon River Anthology: Julian Scott.

11 Return unto thy rest, my soul,

From all the wanderings of thy thought,
From sickness unto death made whole,
Safe through a thousand perils brought.
JAMES MONTGOMERY, Rest for the Soul.

<sup>1</sup>
I reflected, how soon in the cup of Desire
The pearl of the soul may be melted away;
How quickly, alas, the pure sparkle of fire
We inherit from heav'n, may be quench'd in the clay.

THOMAS MOORE, Stanzas.

<sup>2</sup>
My soul, the seas are rough, and thou a stranger
In these false coasts; O keep aloof; there's danger;
Cast forth thy plummet; see, a rock appears;
Thy ship wants sea-room; make it with thy tears.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. iii, No. 11.

<sup>3</sup>
Go, Soul, the Body's guest,
Upon a thankless arrant:
Fear not to touch the best,
The truth shall be thy warrant:
Go, since I needs must die,
And give the World the lie.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Lie. Probably written by Raleigh during his imprisonment, 1592. Found in a manuscript of 1593. Has also been attributed to Sir John Davies, Joshua Sylvester, Lord Pembroke and Richard Edwards.

Tell zeal, it lacks devotion;
Tell love, it is but lust;
Tell time, it is but motion;
Tell flesh, it is but dust!
And wish them not reply,
For thou must give the lie.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Lie.

Yet stab at thee that will,
No stab the soul can kill!
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Lie.

<sup>4</sup>
And the souls mounting up to God
Went by her like thin flames.
D. G. ROSSETTI, The Blessed Damsel.

<sup>5</sup>
Her soul from earth to Heaven lies,
Like the ladder of the vision,
Wheron go To and fro,
In ascension and demission,
Star-flecked feet of Paradise.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Scala Jacobi Portaque Eburnea.

VII—Soul: Transmigration

<sup>6</sup>
Animals share with us the privilege of having a soul.

PYTHAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Bk. viii, sec. 13.)

The soul, bound now in this creature, now in that, goes on a round ordained of necessity.

PYTHAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Bk. viii, sec. 14.)

I was Euphorbus at the siege of Troy.
PYTHAGORAS.

When I was a shepherd on the plains of Assyria.
THOREAU.

<sup>7</sup>
Our souls are deathless, and ever, when they have left their former seat, do they live in new abodes and dwell in the bodies that have received them. (Morte carent animæ semperque priore relictæ Sede novis domibus vivunt habitantque receptæ.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 158.

<sup>8</sup>
The soul is immortal, and is clothed successively in many bodies.

PLATO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato. Sec. 40.)

I hold that when a person dies
His soul returns again to earth;
Arrayed in some new flesh-disguise
Another mother gives him birth.
With sturdier limbs and brighter brain
The old soul takes the roads again.

JOHN MASEFIELD, A Creed.

<sup>9</sup>
Thou almost makest me waver in my faith
To hold opinion with Pythagoras,
That souls of animals infuse themselves
Into the trunks of men.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 130.

Clown: What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning wildfowl?

Malvolio: That the soul of our grandam might haply inhabit a bird.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 54.

SOUND

I—Sound: Definitions

<sup>10</sup>
A thousand trills and quivering sounds
In airy circles o'er us fly,
Till, wafted by a gentle breeze,
They faint and languish by degrees,
And at a distance die.

ADDISON, Ode for St. Cecilia's Day. St. 6.

<sup>11</sup>
No sound is dissonant which tells of Life.

S. T. COLERIDGE, This Lime-Tree Bower My Prison, l. 76.

<sup>12</sup>
There is in souls a sympathy with sounds.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 1.

<sup>13</sup>
Own, by neglecting sorrow's wound,
The consanguinity of sound.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 152.

<sup>14</sup>
There is no sound but shall find some lovers,
as the bitterest confections are grateful to some palates.

BEN JONSON, Explorata; Consuetudo.

1 A sound so fine there's nothing lives
'Twixt it and silence.

JAMES SHERIDAN KNOWLES, Virginus. Act v, 2.

2 Not many sounds in life, and I include all urban and rural sounds, exceed in interest a knock at the door.

LAMB, Essays of Elia: Valentine's Day.

3 Sonorous metal blowing martial sounds.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 540.

4 And empty heads console with empty sound.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 542.

5 Momentary as a sound.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 143.

Idle sounds resembling parasites.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 848.

Low, sweet, faint sounds, like the farewell of ghosts.

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act ii, sc. 1,
l. 158.

6 Sweet is every sound,
Sweeter thy voice, but every sound is sweet;
Myriads of rivulets hurrying thro' the lawn,
The moan of doves in immemorial elms,
And murmuring of innumerable bees.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vii, l. 203.

And beauty born of murmuring sound.
WORDSWORTH, Three Years She Grew.

7 Sugar is not so sweet to the palate as sound to the healthy ear.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal. (EMERSON, Thoreau.)

II—Sound and Sense

8 If the speaker's words sound discordant with his fortunes, the Romans in box and pit alike, will raise a loud guffaw. (Si dicentis erunt fortunis absona dicta, Romani tollent equites peditesque cachinnum.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 112.

To all proportioned terms he must dispense
And make the sound a picture of the sense.

CHRISTOPHER PITT, *Imitation of Horace, Ars
Poetica*, l. 112.

The sound must seem an echo to the sense.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 15.

Take care of the sense and the sounds will take care of themselves.

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice in Wonderland. Ch. 9.

9 It has more sound than value. (Plus sonat quam valet.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xl, sec. 5.

10 Sound is more than sense.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts.

11 Mr. Hannaford's utterances have no meaning; he's satisfied if they sound clever.

ALFRED SUTRO, The Walls of Jericho. Act i.

SPAIN AND THE SPANIARDS

12 Poor Isabella's dead, whose abdication
Set all tongues wagging in the Spanish nation.
For that performance 'twere unfair to scold
her:

She wisely left a throne too hot to hold her.
To History she'll be no royal riddle—Merely a plain parched pea that jumped the griddle.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary, p. 11.

13 A whale stranded upon the coast of Europe.
EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons.
Referring to Spain. The original sentence was, "A whale stranded upon the sea shore of Europe."

14 Oh, Christ! it is a goodly sight to see What Heaven hath done for this delicious
land!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 15.

Oh, lovely Spain! renown'd romantic land!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 35.

15 A nation swoln with ignorance and pride,
Who lick yet loathe the hand that waves the sword.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 16.

The land of war and crimes.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 16.

16 Her soil has felt the foot-prints, and her clime
Been winnowed by the wings of Liberty.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Stanzas to the Memory of the Spanish Patriots, l. 30.

17 All evil comes from Spain; all good from the north.

SIR THOMAS CHALONER, Letter from Florence, 1597. "A common proverb in every man's mouth." (Notes and Queries, 10th Ser., Vol. ii, p. 23.)

18 Well here's to the Maine, and I'm sorry for Spain,

Said Kelly and Burke and Shea.

J. I. C. CLARKE, The Fighting Race.

19 Perhaps they may count me a beggar here,
With never a roof for the wind and the
rain,

But there is the sea with its wave-lashed pier,
And over the sea lies Spain.

C. W. COLEMAN, Over the Sea Lies Spain.

20 Sung the Spanish king's beard.

SIR FRANCIS DRAKE. (KNIGHT, Pictorial History of England, iii, 215.)

He has singed the beard of the King of Spain.
H. W. LONGFELLOW, A Dutch Picture.

<sup>1</sup> Illustrious monarch of Iberia's soil.
PHILIP FRENEAU, Columbus to Ferdinand.

<sup>2</sup> Proud daughter of that monarch, upon whom,
Though elsewhere it grow dark, sun never sets.

(Altera figlia Di quel monarcha a cui Nè anco, quando annotta, il Sol tramonta.)
GUARINI, Pastor Fido. (1585) Referring to Catherine of Austria. Philip II of Spain is supposed to have said, "The sun never sets upon my empire."

The sun never sets upon my dominions.
ALEXANDER THE GREAT. (WILLIAMS, Life. Ch.
13.) This was a boast repeated by many writers: for Rome by Claudian (De Consulatu Stilichonis, iii, 139); Ovid (Fasti, ii, 136); Tibullus (Elegiæ, ii, 5, 58); Vergil
(Æneid, vi, 795); for Portugal by Camoens
(Lusiad, i, 8); for Philip II by James Howell (Familiar Letters).

It may be said of the Hollanders as of the Spaniards, that the sun never sets upon their dominions.

THOMAS GAGE, New Survey of the West Indies: Epistle Dedicatory. (1648)

See also under ENGLAND.

<sup>3</sup> The king of Spain is a great potentate, who stands with one foot in the east and the other in the west; and the sun never sets that it does not shine on some of his dominions.

BALTHASAR SCHUPPIUS, Abgenötigte Ehrenrettung. (1660)

<sup>4</sup> The richest man in Christendom I'm called;
On my dominions never sets the sun.
(Ich heisse

Der reichste Mann in der getauften Welt;
Die Sonne geht in meinem Staat nicht unter.)
SCHILLER, Don Carlos. Act i, sc. 6, l. 60.

The sun never sets on the immense empire of Charles V.

SCOTT, Life of Napoleon. Ch. 59.

<sup>5</sup> Why should the brave Spanish soldiers brag?
The sun never sets in the Spanish dominions, but ever shineth on one part or other we have conquered for our king.

CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH, Advertisements for the Unexperienced, etc. (Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., Ser. iii, vol. 3, l. 49.)

SPARROW

<sup>6</sup> Sparrow, my lady's pet, with whom she often plays. (Passer, deliciæ meæ puellæ, Quicum ludere.)

CATULLUS, Odes. No. ii, l. 1.

Mourn, ye Loves and Graces, My lady's sparrow is dead, her pet, whom she loved more than her very eyes. (Lugete, O Veneres Cupidinesque, . . .

Passer mortuus est meæ puellæ, Quem plus illa oculis suis amabat.)

CATULLUS, Odes. No. iii, l. 1.

Tell me not of joy: there's none
Now my little sparrow's gone;
He, just as you, Would toy and woo.

WILLIAM CARTWRIGHT, Lesbia's Sparrow.

<sup>7</sup> I thought the sparrow's note from heaven,
Singing at dawn on the alder bough;
I brought him home, in his nest, at even;
He sings the song, but it cheers not now,
For I did not bring home the river and sky;—
He sang to my ear,—they sang to my eye.

EMERSON, Each and All, l. 13.

<sup>8</sup> He's cheerful in weather so bitterly cold
It freezes your bones to the marrow;
I'll admit he's a beggar, a gangster, a bum,
But I take off my hat to the sparrow.

MINNA IRVING, The Sparrow.

<sup>9</sup> The sparrows chirped as if they still were proud

Their race in Holy Writ should mentioned be.

LONGFELLOW, The Birds of Killingworth. St. 2.

I—Speech: Definitions

<sup>10</sup> Speech is the image of life. (Ὁ λόγος εἰδολὸν τοῦ βίου.)

DEMOCRITUS, Idylls. (BRATHWAIT, *English
Gentleman*, 51. 1641)

A man's character is revealed by his speech.
(Ἀνδρὸς χαρακτήρ ἐκ λόγου γνωρίζεται.)

MENANDER, The Flute Girl: Fragment.

Man's speech is like his life. (Ὅτις ὁ βίος, τοιοῦτος καὶ ὁ λόγος.)

SOCRATES. (CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum, v, 47.)

A man cannot speak but he judges himself.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

Language most shews a man: Speak, that I may see thee.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Oratio Imago Animi.
See also LANGUAGE: SINCERITY.

<sup>11</sup> Usage, in whose hands lies the judgment, the right and the rule of speech. (Usus, Quem penes arbitrium est et jus et norma loquendi.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 71.

<sup>12</sup> Speech is the only benefit man hath to express his excellency of mind above other creatures. It is the Instrument of Society.
. . . In all speech, words and sense are the body and the soul.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: De Orationis Digni-tate.

1 Speech is the mirror of the soul; as the man, so is his speech. (Sermo animi est imago; qualis vir, talis et oratio est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 1073.

Speech is the picture of the mind.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Speech is the index and mirror of the soul.

T. W. ROBERTSON, Nightingale. Pt. i.

2 God, all-powerful Creator of nature and Architect of the world, has impressed man with no character so proper to distinguish him from other animals, as by the faculty of speech.

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. ii, ch. 17, sec. 2.

3 Speech is the mirror of action. (Γόγον εἶδωλον εἶναι τῶν ἔργων.)

SOLON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Bk. i, 58.)

4 All speech, written or spoken, is a dead language, until it finds a willing and prepared hearer.

R. L. STEVENSON, Lay Morals.

5 The speech of men is like embroidered tapestries, since, like them, it must be extended in order to display its patterns, but when it is rolled up it conceals and distorts them.

THERMISTOCLES, to ARTAXERXES. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Ch. 29, sec. 3.)

His speeches are like cyprus trees; they are tall and comely, but bear no fruit.

PHOCION. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Phocion.)

6 All speech is a hazard; oftener than not it is the most hazardous kind of deed.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, The Life of Don Quixote. See also WORD AND DEED.

7 Speech, thought's canal! speech, thought's criterion, too!

Thought in the mine, may come forth gold or dross;

When coin'd in words, we know its real worth.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 469.

II—Speech: Apothegms

8 To say the truth, though I say 't that should not say 't.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Wit at Several Weapons. Act ii, sc. 2.

9 What I have said, Charles Middlewick, 's my ultipomatum.

HENRY J. BYRON, Our Boys. Act ii.

10 That's nothing to what I could say if I chose.

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 9.

"Then you should say what you mean," the March Hare went on.

"I do," Alice hastily replied; "at least—at least I mean what I say—that's the same thing, you know."

"Not the same thing a bit!" said the Hatter.

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 7.

11 He himself said it. (Ipse dixit.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, ch. 5, sec.

10. Referring to the Pythagoreans, of whom this was a saying.

Pythagoras, to whom was applied the phrase, "The Master said" (Αὐτὸς ἔφα), which passed into a proverb of ordinary life.

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Bk. viii, 46.

12 I speak this by permission, and not of commandment.

New Testament: I Corinthians, vii, 6.

13 The bearings of this observation lays in the application on it.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 23.

14 We never speak as we pass by.

FRANK EGERTON. Refrain of popular song. (1883)

15 I can't say fairer than that, can I?

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

16 I will speak something notable, new, and hitherto unsaid by any other mouth. (Dicam insigne, recens, adhuc Indictum ore alio.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 25, l. 7.

Now I'll say something to remember.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act i.

17 Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.

New Testament: Matthew, xii, 34. (Ex abundantia cordis os loquitur.—Vulgate.)

18 For more than forty years I have been speaking prose without knowing it. (Il y a plus de quarante ans que je dis de la prose sans que j'en susse rien.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 179.

He speaks to a dead man: i. e., he wastes words. (Verba faciet mortuo.)

PLAUTUS, Pænulus, l. 840. (Act iv, sc. 2.)

The words are spoken to a dead man. (Verba fiunt mortuo.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 1015. (Act v, sc. 8.)

19 He never speaks but his mouth opens.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 193.

20 I do not much dislike the matter, but The manner of his speech.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 113.

21 Say, and speak thick.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 58.

What should we speak of
When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how,
In this our pinching cave, shall we discourse
The freezing hours away?

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 35.

1 I will speak daggers to her, but use none.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 414.

Nor shall it be your excuse, that, murderer as you are, you have spoken daggers, but used none.

SHELLEY, Adonais: Preface.

She speaks poniards, and every word stabs.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 255.

2 Runs not this speech like iron through your blood?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
v, sc. 1, l. 252.

He speaks plain cannon fire, and smoke and bounce.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 462.

3 Mend your speech a little,
Lest it may mar your fortunes.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 95.

Thou but offend'st thy lungs to speak so loud.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 140.

4 She has brown hair, and speaks small like a woman.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 48.

You may speak as small as you will.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 2, l. 52.

I'll speak in a monstrous little voice.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 2, l. 54.

5 There was speech in their dumbness, language in their very gesture.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act v, sc. 2. l. 14.

6 I am not surprised, for I have heard him speak very disrespectfully of the Equator.

SYDNEY SMITH, to Sir John Leslie, when the latter complained to him that Francis Jeffrey had attacked in the Edinburgh Review, an article of his dealing with the North Pole, and when he complained, had retorted,
"Oh, damn the North Pole!" (GREVILLE,
Memoirs, 1833; LADY HOLLAND, Memoir.
Ch. 2.)

Insultin' the sun and quarrellin' wi' the equator.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianæ. No. 24.
May, 1830.

7 God giveth speech to all, song to the few.

WALTER CHALMERS SMITH, Olrig Grange. Bk.
i, Editorial, l. 15.

8 He said enough, Enough said.

GERTRUDE STEIN, Enough Said. The poem consists of these words, five times repeated.

9 The first duty of man is to speak; that is his chief business in this world.

R. L. STEVENSON, Talk and Talkers.

Who hath given man speech? or who hath set therein

A thorn for peril and a snare for sin?

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

God's great gift of speech abused

Makes thy memory confused.

TENNYSON, A Dirge. St. 7.

III—Speech: Speaking Well

10 The speaking in perpetual hyperbole is comely in nothing but in love.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Love.

11 Every man, who can speak at all, can speak elegantly and correctly if he pleases, by attending to the best authors and orators; and, indeed, I would advise those who do not speak elegantly, not to speak at all; for I am sure they will get more by their silence than by their speech.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 26 Dec., 1749.

The manner of speaking is full as important as the matter, as more people have ears to be tickled, than understandings to judge.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 July, 1750.

12 Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt.

New Testament: Colossians, iv, 6.

13 Though I be rude in speech.

New Testament: II Corinthians, xi, 6.

Rude am I in my speech,
And little bless'd with the soft phrase of peace.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 81.

14 The music that can deepest reach,
And cure all ill, is cordial speech.

EMERSON, *Conduct of Life: Considerations by
the Way*.

15 In chatter excellent, but unable quite to speak. (Δαλεῖν ἀριστος, ἀδυνατώτατος λέγειν.)

EUPOLIS, Fragments. No. 95.

He speaks one word nonsense and two that have nothing in them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 2025.

16 Speak clearly, if you speak at all;
Carve every word before you let it fall.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 408.

[Learning] knit her brows and stamped her angry foot

To hear a Teacher call a rōöt a rōöt.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 406.

- <sup>1</sup> The flowering moments of the mind
Drop half their petals in our speech.
O. W. HOLMES, To My Readers. St. 11.
- <sup>2</sup> His speech flowed from his tongue sweeter than honey. (Τοῦ καὶ ἀπὸ γλώσσης μελιτος γλυκίων ῥέειν αὐδῇ.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 245.
The poetry of speech.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 58.
The sweet music of speech.
COWPER, Verses: Alexander Selkirk.
- <sup>3</sup> The greatest things gain by being said simply;
they are spoiled by emphasis. But one must say little things nobly, because they are propped up by expression, tone and manner.
LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. ii, No. 82.
To speak and to offend, with some people, are but one and the same thing.
LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Du Cœur.
- <sup>4</sup> One speaks little when vanity does not make one speak. (On parle peu quand la vanité ne fait pas parler.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 137.
It is never more difficult to speak well than when one is ashamed to be silent. (Il n'est jamais plus difficile de bien parler que quand on a honte de se taire.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No.
556.
- <sup>5</sup> He will no more speak fast, than he will run,
for fear his tongue should go before his wit.
SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Of Seneca's Epistles.
- <sup>6</sup> When we make ourselves understood, we always speak well, and all your fine diction serves no purpose. (Quand on se fait entendre, on parle toujours bien, Et tous vos beaux dictons ne servent pas de rien.)
MOLIÈRE, Les Femmes Savantes. Act ii, sc. 6.
- <sup>7</sup> Nor have I readiness in speaking. (Nec mihi dicere promptum.)
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xiii, l. 10.
- <sup>8</sup> Grant me the power of saying things
Too simple and too sweet for words.
COVENTRY PATMORE, The Angel in the House:
Bk. i, sec. 1, Prelude.
- <sup>9</sup> You are skilled in knowing what to say and what not to say. (Dicenda tacendave calles.)
PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 5.
- <sup>10</sup> Speak after the manner of men.
New Testament: Romans, vi, 19.
- <sup>11</sup> His ready speech flowed fair and free,
In phrase of gentlest courtesy;
Yet seemed that tone and gesture bland

Less used to sue than to command.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 21.

<sup>12</sup> An angry man speaks in an angry way, an excitable man in a hurried way, and an effeminate man in a style that is soft and unresisting. (Iracundi hominis iracunda oratio est, commoti nimis incitata, delicati tenera et fluxa.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. cxiv, 20.

The sailor speaks of winds, the ploughman of oxen;

The soldier tells his wounds, the shepherd his sheep.

(Navita de ventis, de tauris narrat arator; Enumerat miles vulnera, pastor oves.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 1, l. 43

<sup>13</sup> To speak much is one thing, to speak well is another. (Χωρίς τό τ' εἰπεῖν πολλὰ καὶ τὰ
καίρια.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus Coloneus, l. 808.

<sup>14</sup> His speech is a burning fire.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

<sup>15</sup> He knew the most effective time for speaking. (Qui novit mollissima fandi tempora.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iv, l. 293.

I had a thing to say,
But I will fit it with some better time.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 25.

It may be right; but you are i' the wrong
To speak before your time.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act v, sc.
1, l. 85.

<sup>16</sup> Choice word and measured phrase, above the reach

Of ordinary men; a stately speech;

Such as grave Livers do in Scotland use.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto ii, l. 345.

In general those who nothing have to say
Contrive to spend the longest time in doing it;
They turn and vary it in every way,
Hashing it, stewing it, mincing it, ragouting it.
J. R. LOWELL, An Oriental Apologue. St. 15.

11 What cracker is this same that deafs our ears
With this abundance of superfluous breath?
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 147.

12 Why have I blabbed?

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc.
2, l. 132.

13 She sits tormenting every guest,
Nor gives her tongue one moment's rest,
In phrases batter'd, stale, and trite,

Which modern ladies call polite.

V—Speech: With Discretion

See also Silence and Speech

14 The wise man, before he speaks, will consider well what he speaks, to whom he speaks, and where and when. (Sapiens, ut loquatur, multa prius considerat, quid dicat, aut cui dicat, quo in loco, et tempora.)

ST. AMBROSE, De Officiis Ministrorum. Bk. i,
ch. 10, sec. 35.

Si sapiens fore vis, sex serva quæ tibi mando:
Quid dicas, et ubi, de quo, cui, quomodo, quando.
UNKNOWN, Six Things to be Observed. (Notes and Queries, 23 Dec., 1911, p. 516.)

If that thou wilt speak aright,
Six things thou must observe then:
What thou speakest, and of what wight,
Where, to whom, why, and when.

UNKNOWN, *Whatever Thou Say, Advise Thee
Well*. (MS. Trinity College, Cambridge, c.
1530.)

If you your lips would keep from slips
Five things observe with care;
To whom you speak, of whom you speak,
And how, and when, and where.
W. E. NORRIS, Thirlby Hall, i, 315. Quoted.

If you your ears would keep from jeers,
These things keep meekly hid:
Myself and me, or my and mine,
Or how I do or did.

W. E. NORRIS, Thirlby Hall, i, 315. Quoted.

15 Discretion of speech is more than eloquence.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Discourse.

And let him be sure to leave other men their turns to speak.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Discourse.

There is no man but speaketh more honestly than he can do or think.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

16 You, having a large and fruitful mind, should not so much labour what to speak as to find what to leave unspoken. Rich soils are often to be weeded.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to Coke, expostulating with him on his verbosity.

17 Speak not at all, in any wise, till you have somewhat to speak; care not for the reward of your speaking, but simply and with undivided mind for the truth of your speaking.

CARLYLE, Essays: Biography.

There is endless merit in a man's knowing when to have done.

CARLYLE, Essays: Francia.

18 A wise man, then, sets hatch before the door,
And, whilst he may, doth square his speech with heed.

THOMAS DELONEY, Strange Histories, l. 70.

Think all you speak; but speak not all you think:
Thoughts are your own; your words are so no
more.

Where Wisdom steers, wind cannot make you sink:

Lips never err, when she does keep the door.

HENRY DELAUNE, Epigram.

wealth. (Κρείσσων γὰρ μῦθον ἢ κτεάνων φυλακή.)
LUCIAN. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 42.)

6 Wise men say nothing in dangerous times.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: War.

7 But ye, keep ye on earth
Your lips from over-speech,
Loud words and longing are so little worth,
And the end is hard to reach.
SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

VI—Speech: To Conceal Thought

For Candid Speech, see Candor

8 He who does not make his words rather serve to conceal than discover the sense of his heart, deserves to have it pulled out like a traitor's,
and strewn publicly to the rabble.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains. Vol. ii, p. 25.
(1759)

The true use of speech is not so much to express our wants as to conceal them.

GOLDSMITH, The Bee. No. 3. An echo of Butler, whose Remains he had just reviewed.

13 The brow, the eyes, the countenance very often deceive us; but most often of all the speech. (Frons, oculi, vultus, persæpe mentiuntur; oratio vero sæpissime.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Quintum Fratrem. Bk. i,
ch. 1, sec. 5.

14 These authors do not avail themselves of the invention of letters for the purpose of conveying, but of concealing their ideas.

LORD HOLLAND, Life of Lope de Vega.

15 Speech was made to open man to man, and not to hide him; to promote commerce, and not betray it.

DAVID LLOYD, State Worthies. Vol. i, p. 503.
(1665)

Speech has been given to man to express his thought. (La parole a été donnée à l'homme pour exprimer sa pensée.)

MOLIÈRE, La Mariage Forcé. Sc. 4, l. 186.

16 The smooth speeches of the wicked are full of treachery. (Habent insidias hominis blandi-tiæ mali.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 19, l. 1.

17 In their declamations and speeches they made use of words to veil and muffle their design.

Dark-brow'd sophist, come not anear;
All the place is holy ground.

TENNYSON, The Poet's Mind. St. 2.

18 It is easy for men to say one thing and think another.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 322.

19 He that speaks me fair and loves me not, I'll speak him fair and trust him not.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 24.

Speak fair and think what you will.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 144.

1 A knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 25.

2 It oft falls out,
To have what we would have, we speak not what we mean.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc.
4, l. 117.

3 Speech was given to the ordinary sort of men whereby to communicate their mind, but to wise men whereby to conceal it.

ROBERT SOUTH, Sermon, preached in Westminster Abbey, 30 April, 1676.

4 Speech was given to man to disguise his thoughts. (La parole a été donnée à l'homme pour déguiser sa pensée.)

TALLEYRAND. (BARÈRE, Talleyrand, vi. HAREL, Le Nain Jaune.) Harel afterwards alleged that the mot was really his own, and that he had put it into Talleyrand's mouth.

When Harel wished to put a joke or witticism into circulation, he was in the habit of connecting it with some celebrated name, on the chance of reclaiming it if it took. Thus he assigned to Talleyrand, in the Nain Jaune, the phrase,
"Speech was given to man to disguise his thoughts."

FOURNIER, L'Esprit dans l'Histoire.

5 Men use thought only to justify their wrongdoing, and employ speech only to conceal their thoughts. (Ils ne se servent de la pensée que pour autoriser leurs injustices, et emploient les paroles que pour déguiser leurs pensées.)

VOLTAIRE, Dialogues: No. xiv, Le Chapon et la Poularde. (1766)

We must distinguish between speaking to deceive and being silent to be reserved. (Il faut distin-guier entre parler pour tromper et se taire pour être impénétrable.)

VOLTAIRE, Essai sur les Mœurs. Sec. 163.

6 Where nature's end of language is declined,
And men talk only to conceal the mind.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 207.

8 I will sit down now, but the time will come when you will hear me.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Maiden Speech, House of Commons, 1837.

9 The speeches of one that is desperate, which are as wind.

Old Testament: Job, vi, 26.

10 Strong men delight in forceful speech. Soldiers relish a speaker delivering himself a little unreservedly.

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry. No. 25.

11 Ha, my friend, get me out of danger; you can deliver your speech afterwards. (Hé, mon ami, tire-moi de danger; Tu feras après ta harangue.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. i, No. 19.

Knowin' the ears long speeches suit air mostly made to match.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser ii, No. 3.

12 I shall make you an impromptu at my leisure.
(Je vous ferai un impromptu à loisir.)

MOLÈRE, Les Précieuses Ridicules. Act i, sc.
11, l. 124.

Ward has no heart, they say, but I deny it;
He has a heart, and gets his speeches by it.

SAMUEL ROGERS, *Impromptu Epitaph upon
Lord Dudley*, alluding to the story that Dudley carefully practised the speeches which he pretended were extempore.

13 Forgotten—like a maiden speech,
Which all men praise, but none remember.

WINTHROP MACKWORTH PRAED, To a Lady.

14 What is the short meaning of this long harangue? (Was ist der langen Rede kurzer Sinn?)

SCHILLER, Piccolomini. Act i, sc. 2, l. 160.

15 Even the most timid man can deliver a bold speech. (Est enim oratio etiam timidissimis audax.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xxvi, sec. 6.

16 I would be loath to cast away my speech, for besides that it is excellently well penned, I have taken great pains to con it.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, l.
184.

SPENSER, EDMUND

18 Old Spenser next, warm'd with poetic rage,
In ancient tales amus'd a barb'rous age.

ADDISON, The Greatest English Poets, l. 17.

The palfrey pace and the glittering grace,
Of Spenser's magical song.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Cloudland.

1 Like Spenser ever in thy Faery Queene, Whose like (for deep conceit) was never seen:

Crown'd mayst thou be unto thy more renown

(As King of Poets) with a Laurel Crown.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, Remembrance of Some English Poets.

Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is such
As, passing all conceit, needs no defence.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, *To His Friend, Master
R. I.* This couplet is also in The Passionate Pilgrim. St. 8.

2 Discouraged, scorn'd, his writings vilified,
Poorly—poor man—he liv'd; poorly—poor man—he died.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, The Purple Island. Canto
iv, st. 19.

3 The nobility of the Spencers has been illustrated and enriched by the trophies of Marlborough, but I exhort them to consider the Faerie Queene as the most precious jewel of their coronet.

EDWARD GIBBON, Memoirs, p. 3.

4 A silver trumpet Spenser blows,
And, as its martial notes to silence flee,
From a virgin chorus flows

A hymn in praise of spotless Chastity.

'Tis still! Wild warblings from the Æolian lyre

Enchantment softly breathe, and tremblingly expire.

KEATS, Ode to Apollo. St. 6.

5 The English Virgil.

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry. No. 5.

6 Here nigh to Chaucer, Spenser, stands thy hearse,

Still nearer standst thou to him in thy verse.

Whilst thou didst live, lived English poetry;

Now thou art dead, it fears that it shall die.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Spenser. (CAMDEN, Reges Regine Nobiles. 1606.)

SPIDER

7 There webs were spread of more than common size,

And half-starved spiders prey'd on half-starved flies.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Prophecy of Famine, l. 327.

8 Much like a subtle spider, which doth sit
In middle of her web, which spreadeth wide:

If aught do touch the utmost thread of it,
She feels it instantly on every side.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, The Immortality of the Soul: Sec. 18, Feeling.

Or almost like a spider, who, confin'd
In her web's centre, shakt with every wind,
Moves in an instant if the buzzing fly
Stirs but a string of her lawn canopy.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
i, day 6. (Sylvester, tr.)

9 A spider sewed at night
Without a light

Upon an arc of white. . . .

His strategy

Was physiognomy.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. ii, No. 27.

The spider as an artist

Has never been employed. . . .

Neglected son of genius,

I take thee by the hand.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. ii, No. 95.

10 "Will you walk into my parlour?" said a Spider to a Fly;

"'Tis the prettiest little parlour that ever you did spy."

MARY HOWITT, The Spider and the Fly.

11 The spider's touch, how exquisitely fine,
Feels at each thread, and lives along the line.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 217.

It is a dangerous grieving of the spirit, when,
instead of drawing ourselves to the spirit, we will labour to draw the Spirit to us.
RICHARD SIBBES, The Fountain Sealed.
The life of any one can by no means be changed after death; an evil life can in no wise be converted into a good life, or an infernal into an angelic life: because every spirit, from head to foot, is of the character of his love, and therefore, of his life; and to convert this life into its opposite, would be to destroy the spirit utterly.
SWEDENBORG, Heaven and Hell, p. 527.

CHRISTOPHER PEARSE CRANCH, Stanzas.
- 14
We spirits have just natures
We had for all the world, when human creatures;
And, therefore, I, that was an actress here,
Play all my tricks in hell, a goblin there.
DRYDEN, Tyrannick Love: Epilogue.
- 15
Aërial spirits, by great Jove design'd
To be on earth the guardians of mankind:
Invisible to mortal eyes they go,
And mark our actions, good or bad, below:
The immortal spies with watchful care preside,
And thrice ten thousand round their charges
glide:
They can reward with glory or with gold,
A power they by Divine permission hold.
HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 164.
Millions of spiritual creatures walk the earth
Unseen, both when we wake, and when we sleep.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 677.

LONGFELLOW, Haunted Houses. St. 6.
So from the world of spirits there descends
A bridge of light, connecting it with this,
O'er whose unsteady floor, that sways and bends,
Wander our thoughts above the dark abyss.
LONGFELLOW, Haunted Houses. St. 10.

1       Spirits when they please
Can either sex assume, or both; so soft
And uncompounded is their essence pure,
Not tied or manac'd with joint or limb,
Nor founded on the brittle strength of bones,
Like cumbrous flesh; but in what shape they choose,
Dilated or condens'd, bright or obscure,
Can execute their aerie purposes,
And works of love or enmity fulfil.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 423.

Spirits that live throughout
Vital in every part, not as frail man
In entrails, heart or head, liver or reins,
Cannot but by annihilating die;
Nor in their liquid texture mortal wound
Receive, no more than can the fluid air:
All heart they live, all head, all eye, all ear,
All intellect, all sense, and as they please,
They limb themselves, and colour, shape or size
Assume, as likes them best, condense or rare.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vi, l. 344.

The sweet season, that bud and bloom forth brings,
With green hath clad the hill, and eke the vale.

HENRY HOWARD, Description of Spring.

3
In the tassel-time of Spring.
R. U. JOHNSON, Before the Blossom.

4
I wonder if the tides of spring
Will always bring me back again
Mute rapture at the simple thing
Of lilacs blooming in the rain.
THOMAS S. JONES, JR., Beyond.

5
The lovely town was white with apple-blooms,
And the great elms o'erhead
Dark shadows wove on their aerial looms,
Shot through with golden thread.
LONGFELLOW, Hawthorne. St. 2.

6
Came the Spring with all its splendor,
All its birds and all its blossoms,
All its flowers, and leaves, and grasses.
LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha. Pt. xxi, l. 109.

Then came the lovely spring with a rush of blossoms and music,
Flooding the earth with flowers, and the air with melodies vernal.
LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. iii, The Theologian's Tale.

7
Every clod feels a stir of might,
An instinct within it that reaches and towers,
And, groping blindly above it for light,
Climbs to a soul in grass and flowers.
J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal: Prelude.

The holy spirit of the Spring
Is working silently.
GEORGE MACDONALD, Songs of the Spring Days. Pt. ii.

8
This wind is called Zephyrus, whose mild
And fruitful birth gets the young Spring with child,
Filling her womb with such delicious heat,
As breeds the blooming rose and violet.
SHACKERLEY MARMION, Cupid and Psyche.

9
Wag the world how it will,

Leaves must be green in spring.
HERMAN MELVILLE, Malvern Hill.

10
O Spring! I know thee. Seek for sweet surprise

In the young children's eyes.
But I have learnt the years, and know the yet
Leaf-folded violet.

ALICE MEYNELL, In Early Spring.

11
Spring rides no horses down the hill,
But come on foot, a goose-girl still.
And all the loveliest things there be
Come simply so, it seems to me.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, The Goose-Girl.

12
In those vernal seasons of the year, when the air is calm and pleasant, it were an injury and sullenness against Nature not to go out and see her riches, and partake in her rejoicing with heaven and earth.

MILTON, Tractate of Education.

13
The Spring returns!
Triumphant through the wider-arched cope
She comes, she comes, unto her tyranny,
And at her coronation are set ope
The prisons of the mind, and man is free!
CHARLES LEONARD MOORE, The Spring Returns.

14
Sound, jocund strains; on pipe and viol sound,
Young voices sing;
Wreath every door with snow-white voices
round,

For lo! 't is Spring!
Winter has passed with its sad funeral train,
And Love revives again.

LEWIS MORRIS, Life-Music.

15
Spring, the sweet Spring, is the pleasant year's king.

THOMAS NASHE, Spring.

16
Gentle Spring! in sunshine clad,
Well dost thou thy power display!
For Winter maketh the light heart sad,
And thou, thou makest the sad heart gay.
CHARLES D'ORLÉANS, Spring. (Longfellow, tr.)

17
It was then perpetual spring. (Ver erat æternum.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 107.

Here is eternal spring. (Hic ver assiduum.)
VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 149.

18
There is no time like Spring,
When life's alive in every thing.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Spring.

19
Never yet was a springtime,
Late though lingered the snow,
That the sap stirred not at the whisper

Of the southwind, sweet and low;
Never yet was a springtime
When the buds forgot to blow.
MARGARET ELIZABETH SANGSTER, Awakening.

1 I sing the first green leaf upon the bough,
The tiny kindling flame of emerald fire,
The stir amid the roots of reeds, and how
The sap will flush the briar.
CLINTON SCOLLARD, Song in March.

2 The vernal sun new life bestows
Even on the meanest flower that blows.
SCOTT, Marmion: Canto i, Introduction, l. 63.

3 When daffodils begin to peer,
With heigh! the doxy over the dale,
Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year;
For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 1.

4 For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth;
the time of the singing of birds is come, and
the voice of the turtle is heard in our land.
Old Testament: Song of Solomon, ii, 11, 12.

5 Fresh Spring, the herald of love's mighty
king,
In whose coat-armour richly are display'd
All sorts of flowers the which on earth do
spring
In goodly colours gloriously array'd.
EDMUND SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet lxx.

So forth issued the Seasons of the year:
First, lusty Spring, all dight in leaves of flowers
That freshly budded and new blooms did bear (In which a thousand birds had built their bowers,

That sweetly sung, to call forth paramours).
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vii, canto vii, st. 28.

6 When the hounds of spring are on winter's traces,

The mother of months in meadow or plain
Fills the shadows and windy places
With lisp of leaves and ripple of rain.
SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

7 Once more the Heavenly Power
Makes all things new,
And domes the red-plough'd hills
With loving blue;
The blackbirds have their wills,
The throstles too.
TENNYSON, Early Spring. St. 1.

8 Dip down upon the northern shore,
O sweet new-year delaying long;
Thou doest expectant Nature wrong;
Delaying long, delay no more.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxxxiii.

Now fades the last long streak of snow,
Now burgeons every maze of quick
About the flowering squares, and thick
By ashen roots the violets blow.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cxv.

And even into my inmost ring
A pleasure I discern'd,
Like those blind motions of the spring,
That show the year is turn'd.
TENNYSON, The Talking Oak, l. 173.

The boyhood of the year.
TENNYSON, Sir Launcelot and Queen Guinevere. St. 3.

9 Come, gentle Spring, ethereal mildness, come;
And from the bosom of yon dropping cloud,
While music wakes around, veiled in a shower
Of shadowing roses, on our plains descend.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 1.

Fair-handed Spring unbosoms every grace—
Throws out the snow-drop and the crocus first.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 529.

10 Spring, with that nameless pathos in the air
Which dwells in all things fair,
Spring, with her golden suns and silver rain,
Is with us once again.
HENRY TIMROD, Spring.

The good-wife oped the window wide,
The good-man spanned his plough;
'Tis time to run, 'tis time to ride,
For Spring is with us now.
CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, Spring.

11 Now the woods are in leaf, now the year is in its greatest beauty. (Nunc frondent sylvæ, nunc formosissimus annus.)
VERGIL, Eclagues. No. iii, l. 57.

In spring heat returns to the bones. (Vere calor redit ossibus.)
VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iii, l. 272.

12 We have not a leaf, yet, large enough to make an apron for a Miss Eve of two years old.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to George Montagu, 6 May, 1770.

13 Again the blackbirds sing; the streams
Wake, laughing, from their winter dreams,
And tremble in the April showers
The tassels of the maple flowers.
J. G. WHITTIER, The Singer. St. 20.

II—Spring and Love

14 When things were as fine as could possibly be
I thought 'twas the spring; but alas it was she.
JOHN BYROM, A Pastoral.

15 One of love's April fools.
CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor. Act i, sc. 1.

16 Men are the devil—they all bring woe.
In winter it's easy to say just "No."

Men are the devil, that's one sure thing,
But what are you going to do in spring?

MARY CAROLYN DAVIES, Men Are the Devil.

A trap's a very useful thing:
Nature in our path sets Spring.
It is a trap to catch us two,
It is planned for me and you.

MARY CAROLYN DAVIES, Traps.

All the veneration of Spring connects itself with love. . . . Even the frog and his mate have a new and gayer coat for this benign occasion.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. ix, p. 178.

Spring! and the buds against the sky;
Heart, forget that you saw
The little brown bird that fluttered by—
The bird with the wisp of straw.

CAROLINE GILTINAN, Spring.

In spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding:
Sweet lovers love the spring.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 3, l. 20

Love, whose month is ever May.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv,
sc. 3, l. 102.

Of temper amorous as the first of May.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. i, l. 2.

He has a hard heart who does not love in May.
(Moult a dur cuer qui en Mai n'aime.)

UNKNOWN, Roman de la Rose.

It is the season now to go
About the country high and low,
Among the lilacs hand in hand,
And two by two in fairy land.

R. L. STEVENSON, Underwoods. No. 4.

Now the hedged meads renew
Rustic odour, smiling hue,
And the clean air shines and twinkles as the world goes wheeling through;
And my heart springs up anew,
Bright and confident and true,
And my old love comes to meet me in the dawning and the dew.

R. L. STEVENSON, My Old Love.

In the spring a livelier iris changes on the bur-nish'd dove;

In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 19.

When Spring is old, and dewy winds
Blow from the south, with odors sweet,
I see my love, in shadowy groves,
Speed down dark aisles on shining feet.

MAURICE THOMPSON, Atalanta's Race.

Love knows no winter; no, no! It is, and remains the sign of spring.

(Die Liebe wintert nicht; Nein, nein! Ist und bleibt Frühlings-Schein.)

LUDWIG TIECK, Herbstlied.

This is the time when bit by bit
The days begin to lengthen sweet
And every minute gained is joy—
And love stirs in the heart of a boy.

KATHERINE TYNAN, Turn o' the Year.

The flowers that bloom in the spring, Tra la,
Have nothing to do with the case.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii.

STAGE

See also Acting; Life: A Play; World: A Stage

I—Stage: Apothegms

No play would I have rather seen. (Nullos his malleum ludos spectasse.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 8, l. 79. Referring to a banquet which a friend was describing.

As good as a play!

CHARLES II, while listening to the debate in Parliament on Lord Ross's Divorce Bill.
(MACAULAY, Essays: The Life of Sir William Temple.)

Drama—what literature does at night.

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN, Testament of a Critic.

Great drama is the reflection of a great doubt in the heart and mind of a great, sad, gay man.

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN, Materia Critica.

The stage was unadorned. (Scena sine arte fuit.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 106.

The play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 457.

The play's the thing.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 633.

A hit, a very palpable hit.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 292.

When my cue comes, call me, and I will answer.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 204.

Where they do agree on the stage, their unanimity is wonderful!

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act ii, sc. 2.

To have degenerated into theatrical arts. (Ad theatrales artes degeneravisse.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xiv, sec. 21.

Come, children, let us shut up the box and the puppets, for our play is played out.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Conclusion.

II—Stage: Its Influence

1 Plays make mankind no better, and no worse.
BYRON, Hints from Horace, l. 370.

2 A moral expression at the close of a lewd play is much like a pious expression in the mouth of a dying man. . . . The doctor comes too late for the disease and the antidote is much too weak for the poison.

JEREMY COLLIER, The Immorality of the English Stage.

3 To me it seems as if when God conceived the world, that was Poetry; He formed it, and that was Sculpture; He colored it, and that was Painting; He peopled it with living beings, and that was the grand, divine, eternal Drama.

CHARLOTTE CUSEMAN. (STEBBINS, Charlotte Cushman.)

4 Keen satire is the business of the stage.

GEORGE FARQUEAR, The Beaux' Stratagem: Prologue, l. 2.

5 There is nothing but heathenism to be learned from plays.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. iii, ch. 11.

6 Life's moving pictures, well-wrought plays, To others' grief attention raise: Here, while the tragic fictions glow, We borrow joy by pitying woe; There gaily comic scenes delight, And hold true mirrors to our sight.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 131.

7 Behind the curtain's mystic fold The glowing future lies unrolled.

BRET HARTE, Address: Opening of the California Theatre, San Francisco, 19 Jan., 1870.

8 In all ages the drama, through its portrayal of the acting and suffering spirit of man, has been more closely allied than any other art to his deeper thoughts concerning his nature and his destiny.

LUDWIG LEWISOHN, The Modern Drama, p. 1.

9 It hath evermore been the notorious badge of prostituted strumpets and the lewdest Harlots, to ramble abroad to Plays, to Play-houses; whither no honest, chaste or sober Girls or Women, but only branded Whores and infamous Adulteresses, did usually resort in ancient times.

WILLIAM PRYNNE, Histrion-Mastix.

That popular Stage-plays are sinful, heathenish, lewd, ungodly Spectacles, and most pernicious Corruptions; condemned in all ages, as intolerable Mischiefs to Churches, to Republics, to the manners, minds and souls of men.

WILLIAM PRYNNE, Histrion-Mastix.

10

I have heard

That guilty creatures sitting at a play
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Been struck so to the soul that presently
They have proclaim'd their malefactions.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 617.

A woman that hath made away her husband,
And sitting to behold a tragedy,
At Lynn, a town in Norfolk,
Acted by players travelling that way,—
Wherein a woman that had murder'd hers
Was ever haunted by her husband's ghost;
The passion written by a feeling hand,
And acted by a good tragedian,—
She was so moved with the sight thereof
As she cried out, "The play was made by her,"
And openly confess'd her husband's murder.

UNKNOWN, A Warning for Fair Women. (An Elizabethan drama sometimes ascribed to Shakespeare.)

III—Stage: Plays Good and Bad

11 The growing drama has outgrown such toys
Of simulated stature, face, and speech:
It also peradventure may outgrow
The simulation of the painted scene,
Boards, actors, prompters, gaslight, and costume,

And take for a worthier stage the soul itself,
Its shifting fancies and celestial lights,
With all its grand orchestral silences
To keep the pauses of its rhythmic sounds.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. v, l. 335.

12 We have the challenge of the mighty line—
God grant us grace to give the countersign.

JOHN DRINKWATER, Lines for the Opening of Birmingham Repertory Theatre.

13 There is a mode in plays as well as clothes.
DRYDEN, Rival Ladies: Prologue.

14 Prologues precede the piece in mournful
verse,

As undertakers walk before the hearse.

DAVID GARRICK, The Apprentice: Prologue.

Prologues, like compliments, are loss of time;
'Tis penning bows and making legs in rhyme.

GARRICK, Prologue to Crisp's Tragedy of Virginia.

If it be true that good wine needs no bush, 'tis true that a good play needs no epilogue.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It: Epilogue, l. 3.

15

If you fashion a fresh character, have it kept to the end as it was in the beginning, consistent with itself. (Personam formare novam, servetur ad imum, qualis ad incepto processerit, et sibi constet.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 126. Of play-writing.

Nor let Medea slaughter her children in the sight of the audience. (Nec pueros coram populo Medea trucidet.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 185.

1 My soul, sit thou a patient looker-on;
Judge not the play before the play is done:
Her plot hath many changes; every day Speaks a new scene; the last act crowns the
play.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Respice Finem. (Emblems.
Bk. i, No. 15.)

The first Act's doubtful, but we say
It is the last commends the Play.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Plaudite.

Act first, this Earth, a stage so gloom'd with woe
You all but sicken at the shifting scenes.
And yet be patient. Our Playwright may show
In some fifth act what this wild Drama means.
TENNYSON, The Play.

ALL THE WORLD'S A STAGE, see under WORLD.

2 Theseus: Is there no play
To ease the anguish of a torturing hour? . . .
Philstrate: A play there is, my lord, some ten words long,

Which is as brief as I have known a play;
But by ten words, my lord, it is too long,
Which makes it tedious; for in all the play
There is not one word apt, one player fitted.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 61.

3 Through all the drama—whether damn'd or
not—
Love gilds the scene, and women guide the plot.

R. B. SHERIDAN, The Rivals: Epilogue, l. 5.

4 Lo, where the Stage, the poor, degraded Stage,
Holds its warped mirror to a gaping age!

CHARLES SPRAGUE, Curiosity, l. 127.

5 What are the plays of to-day? There're either so chock-full of intellect that they send you to sleep,—or they reek of sentiment till you yearn for the smell of a cabbage.

ALFRED SUTRO, The Man in the Stalls.

IV—Stage: Comedy and Tragedy

6 A perfect Tragedy is the noblest production of human nature.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 39.

7 Your true right tragedy is enacted on the stage of a man's soul, and with the man's reason as lone auditor.

BRANCH CABELL, Cream of the Jest, p. 236.

8 A talent for comedy equal to that of the Greeks. (Comica ut æquato virtus polleret honore Cum Græcis.)

GAIUS CÆSAR, referring to Terence. (SUE-TONIUS, Lives: Terence. Sec. 5.)

9 And Tragedy should blush as much to stoop
To the low mimic follies of a farce,
As a grave matron would to dance with girls.
HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 272. (Dillon, tr.)

10 You know the rites to jocund Flora dear,
The festive quips and licence of the rout;
Why on the scene, stern Cato, enter here?
Did you then enter only to go out?

(Nosses jocosæ dulce cum sacrum Floræ
Festosque lusus et licentiam volgi,
Cur in theatrum, Cato severe, venisti?
An ideo tantum veneras, ut exires?)

MARTIAL, Epigrams: Bk. i, Introduction. The reference is to a story told by Valerius
Maximus (ii, x, 8) to the effect that at the Floralia in 55 B. C., Cato left the theatre on finding that his presence checked the licence of the actors.

11 The theatre is no place for painful speculation; it is a place for diverting representation.
H. L. MENCEN, Prejudices. Ser. i, p. 201.

12 Attic tragedies of stateliest and most regal argument.

MILTON, Tractate of Education.

13 A long, exact, and serious comedy;
In ev'ry scene some moral let it teach,
And, if it can, at once both please and preach.
POPE, Epistle to Miss Blount, l. 22.

What dear delight to Britons farce affords!
Ever the taste of mobs, but now of lords.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii,
epis. 1, l. 310.

A comedy is often only a farce—by a deceased dramatist.

ARTHUR WING PINERO.

14 As in comedies, where all the characters find out everything. (Ut in comœdiis Omnia omnes ubi resciscunt.)

TERENCE, Hecyra, l. 866. (Act v, sc. 4.)

Pat he comes like the catastrophe of the old comedy.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 147.

V—Stage: The Audience

15 "Do you come to the play without knowing what it is?" "O, yes, Sir, yes, very frequently. I have no time to read play-bills.
One merely comes to meet one's friends, and show that one's alive."

FANNY BURNET, Evelina. Letter 20.

16 Some very foolish influence rules the pit,
Not always kind to sense, or just to wit.

DRYDEN, Epistles: To Mr. Southorne, l. 3.

There still remains, to mortify a wit,
The many-headed monster of the pit.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii,
epis. 1, l. 304.

1
Like hungry guests, a sitting audience looks:
Plays are like suppers: poets are the cooks.
The founder's you: the table is this place:
The carvers we: the prologue is the grace.
Each act, a course; each scene, a different dish.

FARQUHAR, The Inconstant: Prologue, l. 1.

When first upon the stage a play appears
'Tis not the multitude a poet fears,
Who, from example, praise or damn by rote,
And give their censure as some members vote.
But if in the expecting box or pit
The wretch discerns one true, substantial wit,
Tow'rd his doubtful sight he'll still direct,
Whose very looks can all his faults detect.

ANNE FINCH, COUNTESS OF WINCHILSEA, Arismenes: Prologue, l. 1.

The stage but echoes back the public voice;
The drama's laws, the drama's patrons give,
For we that live to please, must please to live.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Prologue at the Opening of the Drury Lane Theatre, l. 52.

Would you were come to hear, not see a play. . . .

The maker . . . would have you wise,
Much rather by your ears than by your eyes.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News: Prologue.

4
I don't think the audience noticed it.

GEORGE KELLY, The Torch-Bearers. Act ii.

5
Fit audience find, though few.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 31.

6
'Tis ten to one this play can never please
All that are here: some come to take their ease,

And sleep an act or two; . . . others to hear the city

Abused extremely, and to cry "That's witty!"

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII: Epilogue, l. 1.

In other things the knowing artist may
Judge better than the people; but a play,
(Made for delight, and for no other use)

If you approve it not, has no excuse.

EDMUND WALLER, The Maid's Tragedy: Prologue, l. 35.

STARS

11
Flowers of the sky! ye, too, to age must yield,
Frail as your silken sisters of the field!

ERASMUS DARWIN, Economy of Vegetation.

Canto iv.

Silently one by one, in the infinite meadows of heaven,

Blossomed the lovely stars, the forget-me-nots of the angels.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i, sec. 3.

Stars are the Daisies that begem

The blue fields of the sky,

Beheld by all and everywhere,

Bright prototypes on high.

DAVID MACBETH MOIR, The Daisy. St. 5.

Wide are the meadows of night

And daisies are shining there,

Tossing their lovely dew,

Lustrous and fair;

And through these sweet fields go,

Wanderers amid the stars—

Venus, Mercury, Uranus, Neptune,

Saturn, Jupiter, Mars.

WALTER DE LA MARE, The Wanderers.

12
The stars are golden fruit upon a tree
All out of reach.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. ii.

And the sentinel stars set their watch in the sky.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Soldier's Dream. (1805)

The quenchless stars, so eloquently bright,
Untroubled sentries of the shadow'y night.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY, Omnipresence of the Deity. (1828)

15
The stars
That nature hung in Heav'n, and fill'd their lamps

With everlasting oil, to give due light
To the misled and lonely traveller.

MILTON, Comus, l. 197.

And made the stars,
And set them in the firmament of Heav'n
T'illuminate the earth, and rule the day
In their vicissitude, and rule the night.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 348.

Who rounded in his palm these spacious orbs. . .
Numerous as glittering gems of morning dew,
Or sparks from populous cities in a blaze,

And set the bosom of old night on fire?

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 1275.

1 There's husbandry in heaven;
Their candles are all out.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 4.

These blessed candles of the night.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 220.

The burning tapers of the sky.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 89.

2 The stars are mansions built by Nature's hand,
And, haply, there the spirits of the blest

Dwell, clothed in radiance, their immortal vest.

WORDSWORTH, Sonnets. Pt. ii, Sonnet 25.

Brightest seraph, tell

In which of all these shining orbs hath man
His fixed seat, or fixed seat hath none,
But all these shining orbs his choice to dwell.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 667.

3 'Tis Nature's system of divinity,
And every student of the night inspires.
'Tis elder scripture, writ by God's own hand:
Scripture authentic! uncorrupt by man.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 642.

II—Stars: Apothegms

4 There be more stars, God wot, than a pair.

CHAUCER, Parlement of Foules, l. 595.

Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 65.

5 Hast thou a charm to stay the morning-star?

S. T. COLERIDGE, Hymn Before Sun-rise in the Vale of Chamouni, l. 1.

6 And yet more light
Shines out the Julian star,
As moon outglows each lesser light.

(Micat inter omnes

Iulium sidus, velut inter ignes

Luna minores.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 12, l. 47.

Led by the light of the Mæonian star.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 89.

7 And all the spangled host keep watch in squadrons bright.

MILTON, On the Morning of Christ's Nativity, l. 21.

The planets in their stations list'ning stood.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 563.

8 The starry cope Of Heav'n.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 992.

Heaven's ebon vault

Studded with stars unutterably bright.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. iv, l. 4.

9 There is no easy road from the earth to the stars. (Non est ad astra mollis e terris via.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 437.

Through hardship to the stars. (Per aspera ad astra.)

A proverbial phrase probably derived from the quotation from Seneca given above. Motto of the State of Kansas.

Thus is accomplished the journey to the stars. (Sic itur ad astra.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ix, l. 641.

10 He that strives to touch the stars,
Oft stumbles at a straw.

SPENSER, Shepherd's Calendar, July, l. 99.

11 Nothing is fixed, that mortals see or know,
Unless perhaps some stars be so.

SWIFT, Ode: Dr. Wm. Sancroft.

Bright Star! would I were steadfast as thou art!

JOHN KEATS, Last Sonnet.

12 Twinkle, twinkle, little star!
How I wonder what you are,

Up above the world so high,

Like a diamond in the sky!

ANN TAYLOR, The Star.

13 Too low they build, who build beneath the stars.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 215.

Hitch your wagon to a star.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

For full quotation, see under ASPIRATION.

14 Though my soul may set in darkness, it will rise in perfect light;

I have loved the stars too fondly to be fearful of the night.

UNKNOWN, An Old Astronomer to His Pupil. (Galileo) Originally published in Morning Sky Map. Oct., 1920.

We have loved the stars too fondly to be fearful of the night.

Inscription on slab covering the ashes of John and Phoebe Brashear, in the crypt of the observatory at Allegheny, Pa., where they labored together for many years.

III—Stars: Their Beauty

15 The spacious firmament on high,
With all the blue ethereal sky,

And spangled heavens, a shining frame,

Their great Original proclaim.

ADDISON, Hymn. (The Spectator. No. 465.)

In Reason's ear they all rejoice,
And utter forth a glorious voice;
For ever singing as they shine,
"The Hand that made us is divine."

JOSEPH ADDISON, Hymn.

16 And you, ye stars,

Who slowly begin to marshal,
As of old, in the fields of heaven,
Your distant, melancholy lines!
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Empedocles on Etna, l. 276.

1 The stars,
Which stand as thick as dewdrops on the fields
Of heaven.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Heaven.

2 Behind the western bars
The shrouded day retreats,
And unperceived the stars
Steal to their sovran seats.

ROBERT BRIDGES, The Clouds Have Left the Sky.

3 Sky—what a scowl of cloud
Till, near and far,
Ray on ray split the shroud:
Splendid, a star!

ROBERT BROWNING, Two Poets of Croisic, l. 5.

4 The sad and solemn Night
Hath yet her multitude of cheerful fires;
The glorious host of light.

BRYANT, Hymn to the North Star, l. 1.

The number is certainly the cause. The apparent disorder augments the grandeur, for the appearance of care is highly contrary to our idea of magnificence. Besides, the stars lie in such apparent confusion, as makes it impossible on ordinary occasions to reckon them. This gives them the advantage of a sort of infinity.

EDMUND BURKE, On the Sublime and the Beautiful: Magnificence.

5 Every sphere
That gems the starry girdle of the year.
CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 193.

6 There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory.

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 41.

The stars that have most glory, have no rest.
SAMUEL DANIEL, History of the Civil War.
Bk. viii, st. 104.

7 Teach me your mood, O patient stars!
Who climb each night the ancient sky,
Leaving on space no shade, no scars,
No trace of age, no fear to die.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, The Poet.

8 Two things fill the mind with ever new and increasing wonder and awe—the starry heavens above me and the moral law within me.

IMMANUEL KANT, Critique of Pure Reason: Conclusion.

No sight that the human eyes can look upon is more provocative of awe than is the night sky scattered thick with stars.

LEWELYN POWYS, Impassioned Clay, p. 6.

9 But when eve's silent footfall steals
Along the eastern sky,
And one by one to earth reveals
Those purer fires on high.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Fourth Sunday after Trinity.

God be thanked for the Milky Way that runs across the sky.
That's the path that my feet would tread whenever I have to die.

Some folks call it a Silver Sword, and some a Pearly Crown.
But the only thing I think it is, is Main Street, Heaventown.

JOYCE KILMER, Main Street.

The stars come forth to listen
To the music of the sea.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. v, The Inn at Genoa, l. 55.

Then stars arise, and the night is holy.
LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. i, ch. 1.

10 And also there's a little star
So white a virgin's it must be:—
Perhaps the lamp my love in heaven
Hangs out to light the way for me.

THÉOPHILE MARZIALS, Song.

11 But soon, the prospect clearing,
By cloudless starlight on he treads,
And thinks no lamp so cheering
As that light which Heaven sheds.

THOMAS MOORE, I'd Mourn the Hopes.

12 The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks,
They are all fire and every one doth shine,
But there's but one in all doth hold his place.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 63.

Look how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 58.

13 Each separate star
Seems nothing, but a myriad scattered stars
Break up the Night, and make it beautiful.

BAYARD TAYLOR, Lars. Bk. iii, conclusion.

14 When the stars pitch the golden tents
Of their high encampment on the plains of night.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, To a Child Heard Repeating Her Mother's Verses.

With battlements that on their restless fronts
Bore stars.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. ii, l. 844.

15 The twilight hours, like birds flew by,
As lightly and as free;
Ten thousand stars were in the sky,
Ten thousand on the sea.

For every wave with dimpled face
That leap'd upon the air,
Had caught a star in its embrace
And held it trembling there.
AMELIA C. WELBY, Twilight at Sea. St. 4.

I was thinking the day most splendid till I saw what the not-day exhibited;
I was thinking this globe enough till there sprang out so noiseless around me myriads of other globes.
WALT WHITMAN, Night on the Prairies.

1
Though wise men come not, nor angels sing,
Still the stars shine for comforting.
MARGARET WIDDEMER, Stars.

IV—Stars: Their Influence

2
Is there not
A tongue in every star that talks with man,
And woos him to be wise?
ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, *A Summer Evening's
Meditation*, l. 48.

3
No star ever rose
And set, without influence somewhere.
OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto vi, sec.
40.

4
This hairy meteor did announce
The fall of sceptres and of crowns.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 247.

As shaking terrors from his blazing hair,
A sanguine comet gleams through dusky air.
TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered, l. 581. (Hoole, tr.)

The stars shall be rent into threds of light,
And scatter'd like the beards of comets.
JEREMY TAYLOR, Sermons: Christ's Advent to Judgement.

5
Cry out upon the stars for doing
Ill offices, to cross their wooing.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto i, l. 17.

6
Ye stars! which are the poetry of Heaven!
If in your bright leaves we would read the fate
Of men and empires,—'tis to be forgiven,
That in our aspirations to be great,
Our destinies o'erleap their mortal state,
And claim a kindred with you; for ye are
A beauty and a mystery, and create
In us such love and reverence from afar,
That fortune, fame, power, life, have named themselves a star.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 88.

So may we read, and little find them cold:
Not frosty lamps illumining dead space,
Not distant aliens, not senseless Powers.
The fire is in them whereof we are born;
The music of their motion may be ours.
GEORGE MEREDITH, Meditation under Stars.
St. 5.

7
The stars rule men but God rules the stars.
(Astra regunt homines, sed regit astra Deus.) CELLARIUS, Harmonica Macrocosmica: Preface. (1661)

8
Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion?
Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 31.

Canst thou guide Arcturus with his sons?
Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 32.

9
The stars in their courses fought against Sisera.
Old Testament: Judges, v, 20.

10
Thus some, who have the stars survey'd,
Are ignorantly led
To think those glorious lamps were made
To light Tom Fool to bed.
NICHOLAS ROWE, On a Fine Woman Who Had a Dull Husband.

This is the excellent foppery of the world, that,
when we are sick in fortune,—often the surfeit of our own behaviour,—we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity; fools by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachery, by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: an admirable evasion whoremaster of man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star!
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 2, l. 128.

11
When Princes meet, astrologers may mark it
An ominous conjunction, full of boding,
Like that of Mars with Saturn.
SCOTT, Quentin Durward. Ch. 31. Quoted as from "An old play."

12
Eat, speak, and move, under the influence of the most received star; and though the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 56.

The stars above us govern our conditions.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 35.
